FINE RAINS ASSURE MILLS COUNTY GOOD CROPS OF ALL KINDS

Mills County, as well as a great portion of Texas, has been blessed with fine rains during the past two weeks and crops are looking fine. Last week a rain totaling two inches fell. This week a slow rain of one half an inch fell, softening the ground which the hard rains last week packed.

All crops are progressing nicely, while the cold weather has retarded the growth somewhat. Goldthwaite and Mills county are on the verge of another 1919 bumper crop and, should the prices hold near the present level, money will be plentiful again this fall.

UNIFORM PLANTING DATE FOR COTTON

Some time ago the Mills County Farm Bureau requested all cotton farmers to cooperate with us in fighting the boll weevil and selected a date for planting cotton. These dates were May 1st to 10th. After careful consideration and investigation it has been found that the early cotton is a breeding place for the boll weevil and the late cotton is the feeding ground for them after they have been supplied by the early planter.

Mr. A. M. Faulkinberry states that he had experience which proves this statement. He planted an early patch of cotton, and rain came and prevented him finishing the job for more than three weeks. He then planted the balance of his cotton and found at picking time that his late cotton did not make half as much as the first planting for the reason the weevil which he hated in his early cotton was ready to destroy practically all his late crop, so he is a firm believer of cooperation of all farmers to fight the weevil.

W. C. Stark has the following figures to prove his statements concerning early and late planting of cotton. Cotton planting for the past four years, 1922 to 1925 inclusive. In 1922 I planted cotton April 19-20. After sixty days found the first squares, cost of chopping this cotton was 25c per row. In 1923 I planted from the 16 to 19 of May and thirty-five days after found the first square, and blooms in 43 days from date of planting. Cost of chopping was kept at home. In 1924 I planted 8 to 20 of May, and the last planting was ready for picking first, showing that cotton planted from the first to 20th of May will mature quicker than that planted at an earlier date. In 1925 I planted cotton from the 19th to 23rd of May. Just 33 days after planting I found the first square and 39 days after there were blooms. Cost of chopping was kept at home again. So it pays to plant when the ground is in the right condition and cooperate with your neighbor in fighting the boll weevil. This year I expect to plant from the 10th to the 25th of May, if it becomes good spring weather by that time.—W. C. Stark.

We would appreciate your experience along this line Mr. Cotton farmer. Let us hear from you. Don't forget that another 16,000,000 bale cotton crop means financial ruin for the farmer first, because he must sell this surplus at some old price, but it will be financial ruin for all lines of business also, for they all rest upon the farmer, who is the largest producer of wealth of any class of people. Why not get organized and sell your products in an orderly manner and as there is a demand for it.

Just think it over, Mr. Farmer. What would the cotton market have gone to if the 2,500,000 bales handled by the American Cotton Growers Exchange had been "dumped" on the market at the time when it was on the toboggan. Your imagination ought not to have to be stretched.

IN HONOR OF MISS YVONNE KUYKENDALL

Last Saturday evening, April 10, several of the young people of Goldthwaite and surrounding community were entertained in the home of Mrs. Bina Ward Hornsby, in honor of Miss Kuykendall's eighteenth birthday. After exchanging social chats and several interesting games were played we were ushered in the dining room and served with refreshments. Every one had a most enjoyable time, for both, Miss Bina, and Miss Kuykendall are favorites among the young people on account of their sweet dispositions and never failing smile.

We put it lightly to say, to know them is to love them. After serving refreshments, other games were played until a late hour, when the guests bid them good night, and hoping that Miss Bina again would soon entertain them in her home.—A Guest.

100,000,000 Workers Wanted Quick; Bees Are Needed

To Save Orchards Wenatchee, March 18. — The Wenatchee Valley needs 100,000,000 bees this season according to County Agent A. R. Chase. Efforts are being made to rent hives of them for the season. Orchardists require the use of bees for from four to six weeks. They are turned loose in the orchards and are used for pollination purposes among fruit trees.

Large numbers of wild bees as well as honey bees have been destroyed by spray in recent years. The plan is to bring the hives to Wenatchee, paying rent for their use and then ship them back before spraying begins.

THIEVES STRIP CAR LAST SUNDAY NIGHT

A thief or thieves took the new Chevrolet roadster belonging to C. H. Hester from its parking place under the Christian tabernacle last Sunday night and drove it about 4 miles from town on the Williams Ranch road, where they left it after stripping it of five new casings, storage battery, motor meter, and other accessories. The car was very little damaged otherwise. Several clues are being followed by the officials, but no arrest has yet been made other than that of a man driving through without car numbers, who was placed in jail on suspicion. The new Ford coupe which this man was driving had the same kind of tires which had been on the Chevrolet, and moreover, not the kind of tires Mr. Ford uses to shoe his steeds. Lack of evidence however, compelled the officers to release the man yesterday morning.

This theft, following the robbery of the Highway Garage of about $400.00 worth of casings a couple of weeks ago puts Goldthwaite almost in the class with Chicago, along that line.

REGULAR MEETING OF MILLS COUNTY C. OF C.

Next Monday night will be regular meeting of the Mills county Chamber of Commerce and the presence of the entire membership is urgently desired. Business of importance will be transacted, including the annual election of officers. Other matters of interest will be transacted. If you are a member of the chamber of commerce, be there; if you are not a member, come out and see what the body is doing towards furthering the interests of every citizen in the county.

TO HAVE A SUMMER SCHOOL HERE AGAIN

Superintendent D. A. Newton announces that he will conduct a summer school at the Goldthwaite High School again this year. These schools are for the purpose of helping backward students to finish a grade when they have failed in one or more subjects and for the purpose of giving teaching instructions to teachers. A more extended announcement will appear next week.

FARM BUREAU GETS 23.4 PER CENT OF COTTON

Of the Mills county's cotton production last season 23.4 per cent was shipped by members of the Texas Farm Bureau Cotton Association in the county to be marketed cooperatively, according to a statement just made by R. F. McDermott county representative of the Association. Figures are based on deliveries as of April 1 to the cotton cooperative marketing association, he said, compared with the final government ginning figures of March 20th for the county of 8,504 bales.

"On this basis, Mr. McDermott said, "Mills County was one of the leading counties in the State last year in the percentage of production marketed in an orderly manner through the channels of the Farm Bureau."

D. A. NEWTON TO ATTEND ASSOCIATION

Fort Worth, Texas, April 6.—D. A. Newton of the Goldthwaite High School has just enrolled in the State Teachers Association. Enrollment in this organization is the heaviest it has ever been at this time of the year, indicating that a larger percentage of the teachers will support the professional organization in 1926.

These two high officials are in Texas on a speaking tour and strong efforts are being made made to have them at the district meeting of the 17th district, at Breckenridge next Sunday April 18. It is believed that they will be there. If you can use this letter in connection with the cuts it will be appreciated and will help the legion cause. Thank you.

CHARGES INSANE VETS PREYED UPON IN HOT ATTACK IN HOUSE

In a savage attack upon District Commissioner Frederick A. Fenning upon the floor of the House today, Thomas L. Blanton of Texas demanded that the Commissioner be removed from office and sent to the penitentiary.

Blanton declared that if Commissioner Fenning were imprisoned 25 years it would not compensate for the suffering he has caused innocent people.

"If Frederick A. Fenning does not have sense enough to resign," Blanton said, "the President ought to kick him out of office. I believe the President will do so. If the President does not do so, this Congress ought to force his expulsion from office."

"He ought to be in the penitentiary, and if the District Attorney does his duty he will be placed behind the bars."

Representative Blanton's attack was made on the floor under unanimous consent agreement. He closed his attack with a demand that the Rules Committee proceed immediately with investigation of the charges.

During his address Blanton was repeatedly interrupted by outbursts of applause from the floor. The closing of his speech was led by one of the wildest demonstrations that has occurred during the present session of Congress.

YARBOROUGH & HESTER

--The Bank's Opportunity To Serve--

The bank's opportunity to serve goes far beyond the lending of a few hundred dollars to finance a crop or to make needed farm improvements. The merchant in town takes advantage daily of the services of the bank; yet how often the farm customer—to whom these same services are willingly extended—fails to avail himself of the counsel and co-operation of his banker in helping to solve the financial problems of the farm.

Our farm depositors will find it to their advantage to co-operate constantly with this bank, and are invited to do so on every occasion.

A G. C. L. is a GOOD CITIZEN'S LICENSE. If you haven't an auto license, it would be necessary for you to pass a test, proving your qualifications to drive. And so it would be if a law were passed today, demanding every person living in Mills County to immediately take out a GOOD CITIZEN'S LICENSE. Could you pass such a test?

We all think we could, and many could do it actually. How about you? Do you show and observe the fine points of good citizenship

Remember that this county is your county and you as a resident here share in its growth and prosperity, profit from its advantages, and enjoy its comforts, its protection and facilities.

One plain duty of a good citizen is to trade at home. Do all your buying in Mills County, for every dollar you send away to the mail order houses, stays there. But every dollar you spend at home eventually returns to you.

The Judge - A Redeeming Argument - by M.B.

LYNCH DAVIDSON AS WE FIRST SAW HIM IN HIS HOUSTON OFFICE

By Tom P. Cooper, Editor, Tyler American.

There are three principal candidates in the race for governor of Texas. Two of these candidates have been more or less prominent in the public press during the last few days. It is about the Houston candidate and his every day routine affairs that I wish to tell my readers in order that they too may get the same insight into the affairs that have shaped the destiny of Lynch Davidson and that they may cast their influence upon the history of the State of Texas if he is elected to the high office which he aspires.

It is a well known fact that two years ago Lynch Davidson was only eliminated from the second primary by a few thousand votes, having made a most remarkable campaign, in the face of the fact that he was surrounded on all sides by strong and able opponents. Immediately after the results of the first primary election were declared, Mr. Davidson announced that he would be in the race two years from that time, again asking the people for their suffrage. Since that time neither Mr. Davidson or his many friends in all parts of the State have deviated from that decision, nor has the announcement of other candidates for governor called for any material changes in his plans. Therefore, it is not amiss at this particular time to state that Lynch Davidson is in the race to the finish.

The writer was recently called to Houston on business and while in the South Texas metropolis had several hours to spare before train time. I telephoned Mr. Davidson and he invited me up to his office on the twelfth floor of the Second National Bank Building. I had never had the pleasure of meeting Mr. Davidson personally, although I supported him in the first primary two years ago, and could only hazard a guess as to the nature of the man I was going to meet. Naturally a country newspaperman stands just a little bit in awe at the prospect of shaking hands with a millionaire, and though his voice over the phone sounded pleasant enough, I was not sure of the kind of reception I would receive at the hands of one of Texas' most outstanding political and financial figures.

A walk of two or three blocks from the Rice Hotel brought me to the building in which Mr. Davidson had his office. Stepping into a crowded elevator, I was whisked skyward altogether too fast to have time in which to frame a fitting and proper salutation for the governor, but after entering a door on the glass of which appeared the legend, "Lynch Davidson & Company, Wholesale Lumber Dealers," I forgot the phrases I had framed in contemplation of the sight which greeted me. Seated at desks a number of people were scattered about over a large office, typewriters were clicking industriously and all were busily engaged at their respective tasks. A soft voice at my elbow inquired my business and when I told her Mr. Davidson was expecting me, she replied that for the moment he was engaged in his private office, but escorting me to another door labelled "private," she assured me the governor would "not be long," and handed me a copy of the morning paper, telling me just to "make myself at home." The young lady, I soon learned, was Mr. Davidson's private secretary.

When I asked her if Mr. Davidson had many callers, she answered in the affirmative, and I soon found out that her answer was correct. I learned to my surprise, however, that very few of these calls were of a political nature. An atmosphere of business seemed to permeate the length and breadth of the entire suite of offices occupied by Lynch Davidson & Company. The click of typewriters and adding machines could be heard on all sides and the old fashioned air of secrecy which I had always associated with the headquarters of the gubernatorial candidate was entirely lacking. Callers and employees alike had their minds strictly on the business at hand and every thing moved along like clockwork, without the least friction or delay, showing that business was being transacted in the least time and in such volume as to be entirely incomprehensible to one used to the less hustling activities of a country newspaper office. But I knew it all shall that's where Mr. Davidson "shines." Lack of system has put many thriving and otherwise substantial business enterprises on the rocks. So it dawned upon me, sitting there in Lynch Davidson's office, it was by hard work, close application to business, and SYSTEM, that the one time young country sheep-herder had step by step climbed the ladder of success until he was now chief executive of this powerful smooth working business machine. Unconsciously I contrasted this scene with the cumbersome, unwieldy machine we call State Government and wondered if the latter, too, could not be made to function as smoothly under the guiding hand of Lynch Davidson.

While thus absorbed, I suddenly became aware of another's presence. Standing there before me was the man whom I had asked a few minutes of him time. With a smile on his face, and in a most pleasant voice, he spoke. It was like meeting an old time friend from the very start of our conversation, and I half expected him to ask me how were the folks and if business was good with me. Lynch is one of those kind of fellows and one just can't but feel at home around him. When I told him that my visit was purely of a personal nature,—that I had other business in Houston and while waiting for my train became obsessed with the desire to see and talk with him,—he seemed to dismiss all else from his mind but that which pertained to my individual welfare. He insisted upon taking me for a drive over the city and pressed upon me an invitation to be with him in his home. But being convinced that my visit was of short duration and that I was going to take the next train home, he was not long in getting down to cases. By cases I mean politics and his race for governor. Knowing that I had supported him in his last campaign, and having the assurance that I was for him in his present one, he felt no hesitancy in delving into the political situation pertaining to his candidacy, and for two hours or more, while attending also to his routine office work, he went over with me and explained in minute detail matters that were nearest his heart and soul concerning and looking to the best interests and welfare of the people of Texas. When I saw Mr. Davidson in this intimate "close up" and heard him tell of the many beneficial things he can do for Texas as its governor, I then got a true insight into the real reason why a man, more than twice a millionaire, would be willing to sacrifice his time and money in serving his state. Lynch Davidson is not an idealist; his financial rating decries that. He is an honest-to-goodness, successful business man who is anxious to apply successful business methods to the functions of the State government, and he knows it will

One of the... out Lynch David... ed the greatne... that he knew... only in Smith... parts of Texas... moderate means... their respective... Without the least effort... brance, he would ask... and so was getting along, and... and so was neither a banker... a big lawyer, but ranked among the common herd. However, after I had come to know Lynch better, and after realizing that he, himself, had come up from the common herd, I readily understood why it was that his thoughts were of the common people—people who earn their living by the sweat of their brow. To illustrate: He is the head of a number of lumber companies in Houston and South Texas, as well as other parts of the state. These companies build homes and sell them on long time to people unable to own a home by any other means. To these people he is known as a just and reasonable man, and none hesitate to go to him with their troubles, knowing that he is always the friend of the poor man.

Mr. Davidson showed me many telegrams (stacks of them to be exact) of encouraging nature and letter after letter, some of them written by the trembling hands of aged mothers wishing him God speed in his undertaking and assuring him of their loyal support. I was reminded then that Lynch Davidson enjoys a greater heritage in the loyalty of his friends than could possibly accrue to him through office holding—even the highest within the gift of the people of Texas.

Notwithstanding his talk and demeanor smacked not the least of egotism—and that from one who has every right to feel just a little proud of himself,—plain as an old shoe, yet wearing the polish of a true Southern gentleman, Lynch Davidson made a lasting impression upon me. That impression is if he is elected governor, he will be the servant of all the people and not pressed under the thumb of a favored few. He will not only give Texas a business administration, but will give Texas an honest administration—for one has only to look Lynch Davidson squarely in the eye to become convinced that he is inherently honest; an honesty instilled into him by a Christian home and a hand that led rightly along the perilous path of boyhood.

LETTER FROM L. F. COWAN
Editor Eagle:

We trust that none of the friends or readers of your paper are such strong believers in ghosts as to think that those uncanny spirits ever return to earth and meddle with mundane affairs. Otherwise they would doubt the authenticity of these lines.

Many, many, very many times, in the nearly thirty years that have elapsed since we left Goldthwaite, have we longed to hear a word from the good people of that town, and from the boys and girls men and women, many of them were—with whom we worked so joyously in the schoolroom. Even to this day, permit us to say, we have never seen the industry, ability and high ideals of that school equaled. To name the pupils of outstanding would be, virtually to call the entire roll. Nor would we omit from the roll of honor those teachers who labored with us with such loyalty, industry, zeal and perseverance.

In all these years, only four times have we met any of our former Texas pupils. The last meeting, and enjoyable beyond words, was with one who is now a successful teacher in the Dallas schools. It seems that we remember every feature and event connected with the town and school at the time we were there. The white rocks the trimly built chimneys, the scragly shinnery, the schoolhouse with its few trees in the yard and the roads and trails running on either side of the building, the fields of cotton and the children working in them, the hum of the gins, the knock and rattle of the windmills and the heat—O yes! we remember the heat—but you would be surprised. Mr. Editor, to know that it snowed in Denver today. "This a privilege to live in Colorado."

Of course we know that children of twenty-five years ago are men and women in middle life today; but to us they are yet children, and, in our mind's eye, we see them as such. We know, too, that those same pupils are scattered to the four winds, but we surmise that some of them yet read the Eagle. But to them, one and all, we address a few questions and comments of those years in the long ago. We wonder why Charley Welch was called the "Old Man." Do you remember the snow-ball fight between Ella House and Luther Garrett? It was not exactly a prize fight, but it was good-humored and extremely interesting. Do you remember that Mollie Ashley led the march at the first entertainment we had? We hear the voice of Hugh Watson yet, declaiming at a contest, and, in that voice, he had a fortune if he used it properly. Maud Driskill is still reciting "The Oregon", and we still hear Bill McCormick laughing at Allie Humphreys reciting "Mrs. Smart learns to Skate". Me was supposed to help squeelch any unnecessary noise that might arise during the entertainment, but his laughing made more noise than any other four people in the house. We wonder whether Tessie Humphries still knows her history and if Amos Meador and Harry Allen are good in mathematics. We yet hear Frankie Applewhite reciting "Laska", and Kate Baker's hair looks as beautiful in her picture as it did when she first gave us the photo. Wonder if that hair is bobbed? We feel sure that a certain class still knows that Ta ta is the name (?) of the cape at the southern extremity of Greenland. A thousand times have we sung the lines in which Minor Simms sang to Lucia Talbott, "O, Sofy, go back to your uncle, there's a little dear." What unspeakable joy it would be to get the crowd together again and sing and sing as we did then:

"Now the schoolhouse on the hill is closed,
And school will be no more," etc.

But our remarks are growing too long. We would like to go on and name scores more of those boys and girls and what they did. We shall carry a memory of them to our grave. No teacher ever had a finer school of physical and intellectual giants. But in connection with that school we want to pay our respects to the trustees, John Driskill, Jim Rahl and Bill Hudson we think was his name. No teacher ever had a better board and few had as good.

Always and everywhere, we are all indebted to our friends, in great parts at least, for any success we may achieve. We should like so much to mention some names of our dear friends of that time, but, lest we should inadvertently omit some of most highly cherished memory, we wish to salute them all with this message: Not one of you but has, on one occasion or another, stolen into our thoughts and has been a most welcome visitor there. In our imaginations, at least, wife and I have often visited you and have welcomed you to our fireside as well. Such pleasant diversions shall continue with us, but meanwhile we cherish the thought, though ever so lightly, that some day we shall visit our beloved Texas, and then we shall see you face to face.

THE INTERSCHOLASTIC LEAGUE MEET

The Mills Interscholastic League meet for the year 1926 is now a thing of history, yet, I desire to say a few things with reference to it. In the first place, I wish to thank everyone who had a part in the financing of the meet. If it had not been for the help and council of the liberal-minded and progressive citizenship in Goldthwaite and throughout the county, it would not have been possible to have staged the wonderful meet we had.

The Interscholastic League organization is the greatest institution of its kind in the United States. It not only covers every branch of school athletics but it also contains every phase of literary expansion. This organization contains hundreds of high schools. They may be numbered from Brownsville to Texarkana; from Beaumont to Dalhart; and from El Paso to Nacogdoches. Not only are there many high schools represented in the League, but, on the other hand, there are hundreds nay, thousands of village schools, even down to the smallest hamlet. Even the little one-teacher, with its eight grade and music pupils, has a place in this great organization of schools. In fact, no institution in America will be found to be more democratic and progressive.

The League has as its donor and perpetuator one of the greatest universities in the New World. It would not be possible to form and perpetuate such an organization were it not sponsored by a high class university, represented by a progressive, enthusiastic, and enlightened bunch of men.

Notwithstanding the fact that there are hundreds of schools throughout the state in the league; that it is the greatest organization of its kind in America; that it is sponsored by one of the leading universities in America; and that it has as its state directors men of ability and sterling character, I shall venture to say, that without the cooperation, encouragement, and untiring assistance of those in the various communities, who are interested in education and the building of high morals and a substantial citizenship, that the results of the League's workings would be as sounding brass, or a tinkling cymbal. In my opinion, therefore, most good is obtained in the county meets. Especially is this true in our progressive little county.

It has been the earnest desire of each member of the Committee to faithfully, cheerfully, and impartially serve every school in the county that was interested in the work. Perhaps, some mistakes have been made, which is characteristically human, yet, I am sure if they were any, they were not wilfully malicious errors, for, in my opinion, every one connected with the Mills County Interscholastic League, either officially or otherwise was anxious to "put it over" in great fashion. Personally, I am well pleased with the results, even though my school made only a fair showing.

I shall not be satisfied to close this article without making some mention of the splendid sportsmanship displayed by the contestants. Not one harsh or abusive word or phrase did I hear on the athletic field. Every contestant was kind and courteous, all seemed to be good losers as well as good winners. Each one who won a medal should look at it, not with an envious eye or a selfish pride, but with a view of gaining a broader vision, a loftier enthusiasm, an a stronger desire for the higher and the nobler things of this life. To those who were eliminated, I would say, the glory lies not in the winning of medals and trophies but in the effort; hence double your efforts and glory in the trial that you have made.

"42 PARTY"

In spite of the inclement weather last Friday night Mesdames D. A. Newton and D. G. Barnett entertained a number of their friends with a '42 party of distinctive charm at the pretty home of the former on South Parker Street.

The attractive living rooms were made very beautiful by a profusion of blue bonnets and all accessories, for the game carried out the spring time motif of flowers and gay birds.

32 guests played their best to reach the lead table where they met Mrs. J. H. Randolph and Mr. Floyd Ligon and were sent foot to try it all over again.

Miss Agnes Newton assisted throughout the evening in hostess duties and the serving of a delicious two-course luncheon to the following guests: Messers and Mesdames J. H. Randolph, W. E. Miller, Claude Dickerson, L. E. Miller, Floyd Ligon, C. C. Eacott, J. V. Cockrum, R. E. Clements, Edward Geeslin, and Misses Whatley and Inman.

Plate favors were corsage and bougainviers of blue bonnets and each guest was quite sincere in their expression of thanks for a most pleasant way to spend a rainy evening.—A Guest.

Neither Darkness Nor Storms Stop Them

People must have telephone service. Their plans and mode of living make it an essential service. This company knows that its service must be kept up at times.

When storms and floods and winds threaten to interrupt the service is when the men whose duty it is to keep the service going have to do most of their work. But the public service men who are charged with this duty to the people are capable and willing. They are always on the job. It is their day's work to face storms so that storms can not injure nor inconvenience the rest of us. For the service of the telephone must be continuous.

To Those Who Judge Quality by Price

The quality of Ford cars cannot be judged by the prices at which they are sold—because Ford prices are made possible by conditions that are absolutely unique in the automotive industry.

From mine to market the Ford car is the work of a single organization. The Company owns and operates the mines and forests that furnish the raw materials for its products. This material is carried over Ford transportation routes, fabricated in Ford mills, manufactured in Ford plants—and the finished product is sold to the public through Ford dealers.

The following statement, previously made in an advertising message, is repeated because of its significance to the public:

"If any other manufacturer endeavored to produce a car similar to the Ford, according to the high standards of quality in material and workmanship used by the Ford Motor Company and with the same tried and proved design, it would be impossible to offer it at anything like Ford prices. And it is well to note that even with less costly design they have not met Ford prices."

D. 1926., the same being the 3rd. day of May A. D. 1926., then and there to answer a petition filed in said Court on the 24th. day of March, A. D. 1926 in a suit, numbered on the docket of said Court No. 2084, wherein Mrs. Irene Reeves is Plaintiff, and Homer H. New Way to Stop
Night Coughing

Simple Method Brings Quick Relief

For almost instant relief from hacking, irritating, sleep-robbing night coughing there is a very simple treatment which, often with a single dose, stops all irritation and permits sound sleep the whole night through.

This treatment is based on the prescription known as Dr. King's New Discovery for Coughs. You simply take one teaspoonful at bed-time and hold it in the throat for 15 or 20 seconds before swallowing it. The prescription has a double action. It not only soothes and heals soreness and irritation, but it quickly removes the phlegm and congestion which are the real cause of night coughing. People who have not slept well for nights are often surprised how quickly this simple method checks coughing and banishes the entire cough condition completely.

Dr. King's New Discovery is for coughs, chest colds, sore throat, hoarseness, bronchitis, spasmodic croup, etc. Fine for children as well as grown-ups—no harmful drugs. Economical, too, as the dose is only one teaspoonful. At all good druggists. Ask for

CHEVROLET

Recognizing the intense interest of the motorist in details of automobile construction which are ordinarily visible during building processes, the Chevrolet Motor Company has prepared a coach with both body and chassis cut completely in two.

Real "inside information" regarding the improved features of the new Chevrolet is obtained by a glance at the new cut-away model. Contrary to the practice of the old-time merchant who used to 'put the best apples on top' this model exemplifies the policy of the motor car industry in seeking to give as full information as possible to the non-technical motorist who insists on knowing what is underneath the surface.

The interior of the motor and chassis are laid bare in every detail and every feature of the body, upholstery, seat construction, top, windshield and floor have been cut through, presenting a complete picture of materials and methods used in building the car. How durability and comfort are built into the modern automobile are graphically shown.

Cylinder walls and housings covering various moving parts have been cut open permitting a full view of the new light skeleton pistons, the improved lubrication system, advanced rocker arm mechanism and added cooling surface afforded by the new cylinder head construction.

The standard Fisher coach body has been ingeniously dissected, exposing the strong construction and artistic fittings of the closed car. Body-building, an art for centuries demanding the highest degree of artisanship since the early days when craftsmen gloried in the title "Coach-builder for the King" is here exemplified in the minutest detail of modern perfection. Ingenuity of the builder is shown to have kept pace with the latest advances in chassis engineering.

The cut-away model is to be shipped to various dealers for display throughout the country.

ALL OUT OF SORTS?

So Was This Goldthwaite Woman Who Tells Her Experience

All too often women accept their pain and aches as natural to their sex. They fail to realize that weak kidneys are often to blame for that backache, those headaches, dizzy spell and that tired, depressed feeling. Thousands have found new health and strength by helping the weakened kidneys with Doan's Pills—a stimulant diuretic. This Goldthwaite case is one of many:

Mrs. N. B. Allen says: "I was so bad off with kidney trouble, I couldn't get out of bed without help; the pains I endured were severe. I had headaches and dizzy spells when everything turned black in front of me. My kidneys acted irregularly and my hands and feet swelled twice their size. After using Doan's pills, from Clement's Drug Store, I was entirely cured."

Fiber Helmet under Cap Protects Jockeys

Worn under the regular cap, a fiber helmet for jockeys is intended to protect the head in case of accidents. It is flexible enough to fit tightly without binding and does not interfere with the vision of the outer cap to shield the eyes. It can also be used by building workers and others to protect them from falling objects.

Ten Thousand Kinds of Fish Are Found in Ocean

About 10,000 species of fish are known to science including some that walk and climb trees, and others that make vocal sounds. In South America, is a kind of catfish that grows like a dog, the sound being distinguishable a hundred feet distant. The mud skippers, found at the mouths of African and Asiatic rivers, walk about when the tides recede. With the aid of their fins and tail, they can hop for three feet and more when pursued. The tree-climbing variety of perch has a water-storage organ on either side of its head, to keep its gills moist when it travels on land. There are species of fish that carry their eggs in their heads and "shoot" or "angle" for their prey. The migratory habits of other kinds are widely different. Eels and salmon, for instance, are known to travel enormous distances to and from their breeding grounds.

Good Rheostats Are Necessary for Best Radio Reception

The rheostat is an important piece of radio apparatus. It opposes the flow of electricity to the filaments of the tubes while the set is in operation. Without a rheostat, the filaments would soon be damaged beyond repair, because too much current would pass through and cause the thin thorium coating to disintegrate and flake off. This commonly occurs when rheostats are turned too far, and is the principal reason for tubes going dead.

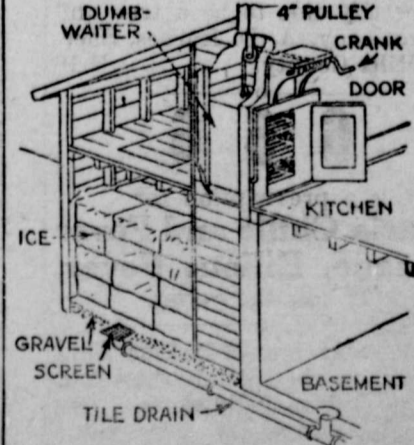

In opposing the flow of current, the wire becomes warm, even hot if the tubes require considerable current. As the temperature rises, it causes the wire to expand. If the wire becomes hot enough to char the insulation on which it is wound, it becomes loose, adjacent coils touch each other, and the rheostat loses its smooth operation.

See that the wiping arm makes good contact on the resistance at all times. When turned to the extreme left, the wiping arm should leave the wire and come to rest on the insulated strip, breaking the circuit. Always select the proper type of rheostat for the kind of tube used and do not attempt to put too many tubes on one rheostat. When buying a rheostat, select one that is simple and compact. See that the winding is not defective, and that no part is missing. Many of the newer types are of the one-hole mounting variety, requiring only one hole in the panel.

A Farm Ice House That Saves Ice and Work

In the ordinary farm ice house, the ice must be covered with straw or sawdust to insulate it against heat. However, this protective covering must be mottled every day or two during summer when ice is taken out, to say nothing of the work of carrying the ice to the kitchen and the usual ice-box troubles. These objections are overcome by providing a combination ice house and refrigerator, as shown in the illustration.

The ice house, in this case, is built right against the outside kitchen wall and is as deep as the basement. The roof extends above the ground just enough to permit one to put the ice in or take it out, a small door being provided for this purpose. The bottom of the ice pit is covered with a layer of gravel, and a drain is provided to carry off the water, a screen being fitted over the drain to prevent any gravel from getting in. A floor is built on the same level as the kitchen floor, and if desired a small door may be provided in the wall to permit entrance from the kitchen. A trapdoor is, of course, provided in the floor and is kept closed to keep the warm air from getting into the pit. A layer of heavy tar paper over this floor covers all the cracks and furnishes additional insulation. The refrigerator is simply an ordinary dumbwaiter which can be lowered into the ice pit. This opens into the kitchen and the lift is raised by means of a crank or counterweight. The usual dumb-waiter construction is used. This method provides a lower temperature for the food than can be obtained in any refrigerator, and, besides, it is very saving of ice. It has been found that a saving of approximately one-third of the ice is made.

Rev. E. A. Hunter
Roadside Parking

Only two of the 46 who answered my questionnaire failed to unconditionally and unequivocally condemn road side parking under any and all circumstances.

One writes: "It is a personal matter but do not usually approve."

Another suggests that we should "be slow to criticize."

All the rest are positively opposed.

One boy writes: "Roadside parking should not be tolerated. I would feel that I had violated the trust the girl's parents had in me if I parked in some lonely spot, even if the girl permitted me to do so. A real gentleman has too much respect for a real lady to park with her by the road."

A girl says: "I think roadside parking demoralizing, and very dangerous especially for young girls who think they are in love."

"I do not think those who respect themselves will park along the side of the road," writes another.

"Roadside parking is conducive to fondling and kissing and should be prohibited," writes another girl. And she suggests that if parents would furnish some amusements and social recreation in the home that it would put a stop to much roadside parking. Let parents sit up and take notice.

A fine fellow adds: "Roadside parking leads to things I know are wrong."

"If you have any respect for the girl you are with you will not park on the roadside," declares still another.

"Damnable," is the description another gives this practice.

It does your heart good to know that there are so many fine young folk who feel as indicated by the quotations given about this very questionable practice which has become so prevalent of late. Surely mother's advice and teacher's warning have not been in vain with these young people.

I want to endorse and emphasize what these students have said about this habit. Parking on the roadside, and especially at night, even if it does not lead to anything more improper, will raise a question in the minds of many as to your moral character. Can you by such a habit afford to raise such a question in the mind of the public either about yourself or your companion? There are doubtless some young people who park along the roadside without any evil intentions and without thinking of what may be thought or said about such conduct. There are others who openly defy what folk may think or say of them, declaring, "It is nobody's business but my own." But I differ with you. You have no right to disgrace or dishonor the good name you inherited, or to wreck your character, or to besmirch the good name or character of another. Paul says: "Let no man lay a tumbling block or occasion to fall in his brother's (or sister's or friend's) way." And God will certainly hold responsible the individual who does.

It does not matter what people think for the questioning and suspicioning of one's character has often hurt almost, if not, as much as the truth.

The combined opinion of the young people already quoted that no young person who respects himself, or his parents, or his companion, or her parents, as he ought to, will park along the roadside, is the opinion of multitudes of good men and women, and with it I most heartily agree. And this is just as applicable to the girl as to the boy.

Familiarities

We have suggested here by these young people themselves, I think, the solution of this problem, namely the attitude of the young woman towards her company. Women and girls very largely fix the standards. Men for the most part obey them. If girls are modest, womanly and reserved, they will be treated with respect and reverence. If she wears a "Hands off" atmosphere men will honor and exalt her. They know she will make it hard for a transgressor. If she conducts herself with a "my baby" manner somebody will want to pet her before she goes far. Which do you prefer, petting or honor? You can be friendly and jovial and winsome without being familiar.

"Most boys will stay in their places if the girl stays in hers," says one girl.

"Most boys will conduct themselves in a manly way when associated with modest girls," asserts another.

boy of questionable character or reputation for the sake of adventure. "I would never have gone with him but once but I was eager to know whether he would make a flapper out of me or whether I could influence him," writes a fine girl I know personally. This young woman won out in this adventure, having a strong influence for good upon the young man in question, but it is never wise to play with fire. Another such lark might result in moral injury or heavy personal loss.

Some fine, clean, reputable boy may be planning to change his attention with you with the desire for wholesome friendship and possible romance. But he sees you in company with a boy of questionable character and reputation just once and it is all off. He'll say, "If that's the kind of a girl she is I'll seek companionship and romance somewhere else."

When a man gets ready to marry he wants a steady girl of good reputation and a steady girl of good reputation will surely want only a steady man of good reputation. If you allow yourself to fall in love with and marry a man who for years has been sowing his wild oats, remember this, you will help him to gather the harvest. "Whatever a man soweth that shall he also reap" says the Scripture. And unfortunately so often others must reap with him.

Fondling and Kissing
Promiscuous fondling and kissing is condemned, without an exception I think, by all the students who answered my questionnaire. Some took modified positions however.

One girl condemning this familiarly writes, "In the first place it is down right silly. Second, it is uncalled for. Third, it creates unnecessary emotions. Fourth, it causes boys and girls not to appreciate each other."

Fondling and kissing should not be indulged in by young people," writes another, "unless they are engaged, and then it should be limited."

Another adds, "Fondling and kissing will lead to more evil."

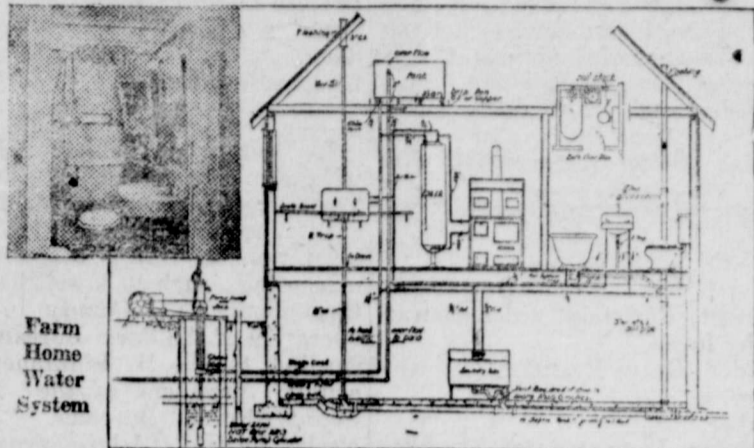

"No, and they will not, if they are the right kind of people, and have had the right kind of training at home," declares another positively.

The young people are certainly right in condemning promiscuous fondling and kissing. "It will lead to more evil." "It creates unnecessary emotions."

It does not pay to be soft, easy and free. You surely cheapen yourself with all right thinking people, old and young, when you are. No boy ever has the respect and admiration for a girl who lets every Tom, Dick and Harry fondle and kiss her that he does for one who does not. And young people should not forget the future. Some day you are going to have a home and children of your own. Imagine yourself fifteen years from now, in company with your husband and children, walking down the street of your home town and meeting some rake of a man who in your girlhood was supposedly an admirer of yours. You permitted him to pet and fondle you. You thought it was all right. He dressed well, danced, flirted, and gambled. He spent his money on you freely, he sent you flowers and candy. Today he is a failure, a moral reprobate, and without social standing. You would not want to introduce him to your husband and children as a girlhood friend. He repels you, nauseates you, you can't bear him. And as you recall his fondling and petting the blush of shame grows hot on your cheek. Or imagine living in a town where you had a half dozen such acquaintances. You could never appear in public or on the streets without their presence filling you with a burning sense of shame almost overwhelming. And yet your imaginings are the terrible realities of thousands.

The boy who today, with no regard for the future, dances with you, fondles and kisses you, and feeds you on chocolates bought with his dad's money, who tempts you to drink and smoke, and to disrespect and disregard the ideals and admonitions of your parents may be good (?) company, and game, but the chances are thousands of times greater that he will be a rake tomorrow than Governor or President, or even an honorable, respectable, achieving citizen. Let me urge you then to visualize your future and ponder well your steps. Think twice before you bestow your favors lest out of distant years some such ghostly, horrible reality stalk in upon your presence to rebuke you of

"Let the Water Do the Running"

CHICAGO—"Cheer the Country Water Do the Running" That is the new battle cry of the extension workers of the agricultural engineering departments of the state colleges of agriculture in a nation-wide drive launched to install running water in the farm home, says the Research Department of the National Association of Farm Equipment Manufacturers. At the recent National Farm Equipment Conference here, agricultural engineers and sanitary experts from all sections of the country discussed these problems.

Illustrations above is shown a bath-room scene from the University of Illinois exhibit at many of the district fairs as seen by thousands of farmers. The drawing is an illustration from a recent issue of the bulletin issued by Prof. Lehmann, department at the University of Illinois. A series of demonstrations to cover every county in Illinois in the next few years has been launched under the personal supervision of Prof. Frank Hanson. Farmers are shown how simple the standard installations are. Gas stoves, windmills, hydraulic rams, pitcher pumps, pressure systems, etc., are shown on trucks. Only on a farm in ten in the U. S. have even the simplest systems been installed in the home.

WASHINGTON NOT A PROFANE MAN

George Washington's good name and character have been attacked from time to time by some of his enemies with sinister motives; they have accused him of being dissipated, impetuous and given to profanity.

A letter has recently been published which shows how groundless are these vilifying charges. This letter was written February 28, 1832, by Park Holland, of Petersham, Mass., to his nephew, Major Jones Holland. Park Holland served in various capacities in Washington's army, one of them being as paymaster. The body of the letter reads as follows:

"In the spring of 1781, I think it was, our troops marched down to White Plains and formed an encampment, and while there, we were amused by an order that was said to come from General Heath. But as we all knew Washington's abhorrence of the sin of profanity, we knew well where it originated.

"Our parade ground was cleared with much difficulty. The order was: 'The first one who is heard to utter an oath shall dig up by the roots one of the pitch-pine stumps.'

"Not long after a soldier was seen sweating and toiling away at one, exclaiming it was paying too dear; it should be the last stump he would dig.

Speaking of Washington's dislike of profane habits reminds me of a scene at his own table, where we (twenty or more the officers) were invited to dine with him. His habit was usually to take a single glass of wine after dinner and retire, leaving us to ourselves, as he at this time of care and anxiety rarely made any conversation except on business.

"We had finished our dinner and Washington had taken his wine in his hand, when a young officer from New Hampshire, at the end of the table, who had been in the habit of using profane language, being so much engaged, forgot where he was and swore an oath, when he heard a rap on the table by Washington, who set down his untasted wine, arose, and said:

"Gentlemen, when I invited you here, it was my intention to invite gentlemen only. I am sorry to add, I have been mistaken," and left the room.

"Dead silence reigned for some time, which was broken by the officer himself calling us all to witness that the oath he had uttered should be his last, adding he would rather have been shot through the heart than have deserved the reproof from Washington.

"Such was our love and reverence for this great and good man that the most profane left off the habit, and it was done away with among us before the close of the war."

That General Washington swore at General Lee for having ordered a retreat when victory seemed certain, was also denied by the officers who accompanied Washington on that occasion. Historians frequently record alleged scandals that have absolutely no foundation in fact. Unfortunately, a lie will run ten times around the earth while truth is putting on her boots. Nevertheless, "Truth, though slow to earth, shall hers; But Error, wounded, writhes in pain, And dies amid his worshippers." —Liberty.

On Friday evening, April 2, Mrs. S. P. Sullivan took her Sunday School class to the Lake for a picnic. Mrs. Sullivan always knows what we like, and with the aid of Mrs. Bigham and Mrs. Fairman she had a most interesting program arranged.

The supper consisted of eggs, sliced bacon, salmon, sausage, and onions. We had a generous amount of good strong coffee and lemonade to drink. When supper was almost a thing of the past, Mrs. Sullivan passed some delicious cookies and doughnuts around. With supper over the games were at once started.

The first game was a 'rabbit race,' then the 'three-legged race' following this was 'taking a trip' last but not least was 'brother I'm bobbed.' The games caused much merriment and were enjoyed by all. Then every one was given a chance to tell jokes which proved that some were gifted in this line. Some of the men busied themselves in corn popping. By this time the lights began to flicker, and we knew that the time had arrived for us to go home. We are indeed glad to be in Mrs. Sullivan's class and hope that she will continue her good work.—Reporter.

"BROTHER JOSIAH"

On Thursday night, April 22, the senior class of Goldthwaite High School will present "Brother Josiah," a comedy farce in three acts. The antics of Josiah disgrace his city brother and astonish "the sphere in which we move." How long has it been since you have seen a real country break-down? You used to enjoy it, didn't you? Come and see how Brother Josiah and Aunt Jemima can jig. You have quarrels with your wife at home that you don't enjoy but you always laugh at the other fellow when his wife fusses at him. So come and hear Mrs. Armstrong blame her husband for all the shameful actions of his brother. Do you aspire to do the 'Charleston?' You should come and see Ben, the country hick, taking lessons from a society girl.

Instructors and senior students in agriculture economics of the Texas Agricultural and Mechanical College are giving major consideration to cotton cooperative marketing, such as is well known throughout Mills County in the operation of the Farm Bureau, according to W. H. Linkinhogger county president of the Mills County Farm Bureau. "Last week," he said, "A large group of students and instructors spent several days at the headquarters of the Texas Farm Bureau Cotton Association in a study of the movement and the various services rendered the membership. These students have already had three years of agricultural administration, and are now specializing upon cotton cooperative marketing and accounting."

MRS. PETSICK DEAD

"Grandma" Petsick, 76 years of age, died at the family home at Caradan last Monday. Death resulted from an attack of the influenza, following an illness of nearly a year. The remains were laid to rest in the Odd Fellow's cemetery here Tuesday afternoon at 3 o'clock, Rev. R. R. Cumbie conducting the services.

Mrs. Petsick was the mother of a large family, most of all whom live in Mills county, and attended the funeral. She was a member of the Baptist church and has led an upright Christian life. The Eagle joins the many friends of the bereaved ones in offering them the greatest measure of sympathy in this sad hour.
