ment or two:

"Gath" in Cincinnati Enquirer. The day Mr. Conkling refused to vote on the Louisiana case I called at his room in Washington and said in a mo-take. With that Conkling began to leer, to sneer, to snort and behave like an old vixen about who somebody had remark ed that she was three-score-and-ten and bald. I sat there for one hour at least, and saw this Senator make an exhibition of himself that a young stallion in a cloverfield would have been ashamed of. I thought to myself when that man tumbles he will hit the ground hard. I could readily see why his servitors never give him any advice. He disdained counsel and friendly suggestion, and came to regard any man who, even yearning for his benefit, should whisper word of caution as an impertinent intruder. So he has been torturing himself for years, living in a false atmosphere, circulating lies about other men and really crawling on his belly, though his head was in the air, like a certain kind of snake which is living in the ground, but hissing in the branches.

THE HOUSEHOLD.

lefluence Exerted by Visitors-Managing Boys.

Ehrich's Quarterly. I was visiting an old school-friend a few weeks ago, one whose circumstances have for a long time been rather strait ened. Like many other young wives, though truly refined and cultivated, her home was very plain, her fare simple, and she is keenly alive to what is lacking. During my visit Mrs. Mabie's husband brought home two gentlemen friends to take tea and sleep at the house and I was so struck by the influence these chance guests exerted in the little household that I resolved to make it the theme of a chat.

The first gentleman told us of his rare china, his bric-a brac and latest purchases as to furniture and carpets. There was only the little sitting-room, with its base burner to sit around, and it seemed to make the room close and stuffy to hear of his library and tiled fire-place. He ate little and discoursed of rare dishes at the table. My dear little friend said nothing till "John" had left the next morning, but she then confided to me what a bad effect such a visitor had on her husband. "He feels badly all the time because he cannot give me the luxuries I was accustomed to as a girl, and now he will be glum and moody for days."

Sure enough, wher night came, th-husband's brow was clouded, he apolo, gized for the smallness of the room spoke sharply to the children, and though no reference was made to the guests of the previous evening, we felt his shadow darkening the bright little home. A few evenings later another gentleman came home with John, but, though a stranger to all but his host, he was so genial, so glad to rest in "a real home," so delighted with the supper-"these cookies were just the kind he had when a boy"—they tasted like old times, took such kindly notice of the children, and, in short, was so thoroughly bent on seeing the best of everything, that we all sat up later than usual, and for days his words of appreciation and praise brightened and cheered us. Now, I am sure, this second guest was sincere; I have heard since of his wealth and the luxuries to which he is accustomed; but, just because he enjoys above all else making those about him happy, that man can be happy himself in any home where he may happen to rest for a time. This same friend had an admirable way of managing her boys. I suppose every mother finds that when two or three boys occupy the same room they will romp and "carry on," till at last some one is hurt or all three are quar-reling. To my surprise the Mabie boys were as quiet as mice. At first I said to myself, "this is company behavior," but I was soon an old friend with the children, yet still the morning dressing was a quiet affair and the three boys came down with clean hands and faces, and hair which, if not parted, was at least

"It's a new plan I've tried," explained my friend, "I give them each a penny for every quiet morning, but it any quarreling is heard every boy forfeits his penny, while if any one comes down without having attended to his washing and hair, that one forfeits his penny.' These boys had five cents a week be sides, but each time they forgot to hang up their hats or left their playthings about they forfeited a penny, and if they disputed the point with their mother they forfeited still another. I must say the plan worked admirably, and besides the children had their own pocket-money for kites and marbles. It is amusing and rather alarming to see how thoroughly grown people are weighed and tested by the children of the neighborhood. I was much pleased with a lady who called upon me at the Mabies; we happened to talk of the management of children and from her conversation she seemed full of sympathy and unselfishness toward them.

"You just ought to hear her cail her Jimmy in," said Jack Mabie, "she seems mad to see him having a good time! Well, I'm glad I happened to come to this house when I was a baby, for most all the other mothers pull boys around and forget to say please!"

How Girls Are Made Straight.

The Hindoo girls are gracefully and exquisitely formed. From their earliest childhood they are accustomed to carry burdens on their heads. The water for family use is always brought by the girls in earthen jars, carefully poised in this way. The exercise is said to strengthen the muscles of the back, while the chest is thrown forward. No crooked backs are seen in Hindostan, Dr. A. Spry says that this exercise of carrying small vessels of water on the head might be advantageously introduced into boarding manufacturer, is used for embroidery.

schools and private families, and that it might entirely supersede the present machinery of dumb bells, backboard, skipping topes, &c. The young ladies ought to be taught to carry the jar as these Hindoo women do, without ever touching it with their hands. The same practice of carrying water leads precisely to the same results in the south of Italy as in India. A Neapolitan female peas-ant will carry on her head a vessel full of water to the very brim over a rough

Sunlight and Free Circulation of Air for Indianapolis Sentinel. Much advice is given regarding the sheltering of stock in cold weather, and such advice is usually followed by farmers taking every precaution possible to prevent suffering among the stock which has been kept over for wintering. But, unfortunately, on some farms the work is performed too well, and that which is a benefit and a blessing in winter is quite objectionable in summer. We discuss and take measures to properly ventilate our dwellings because we know it is unsafe to risk our health and lives in places that are not at times exposed to the circulation of the air and the entering of the sun's rays. As we thus care for ourselves, how important is it for us also to be careful with our stock if we wish to be successful, for they are helpless and dependent.

As winter approaches barns and stables are made as near "air-proof" as they can be. Most of them have a small window, at least, which is sufficient for purposes of ventilation, and it is but sel-dom used, for fear of cold draughts. As the frost seals up all that is injurious to the animal in the cold season, no objec-tion can be made to the farmer endeavoring to make his stock comfortable, but how is it in summer? Once a stable has been put in perfect order, it seldom receives a second repair until the suc-ceeding winter. During the warm months stock suffers very much for want of ventilation and a window or two will not answer. Stables are always in a condition of impurity, be as careful as we may. The strictest cleanliness possible will not avail without sunlight and a free circulation of air. Nearly all the diseases of the eyes of horses are occasioned by ammonia gas in stables, and one-half of the lameness of horses is one-half of the lameness of horses is caused by the strong alkaline substances usual to stalls. The heat in stables is very oppressive, more so than in dwelling houses, and hence cattle and horses become debilitated and unhealthy. Stables are securely locked at night and every precaution taken against thieves, which is a part of the routine in summer as well as in winter but if the doors. as well as in winter, but if the doors were left open at night and the animals allowed perfect freedom, farmers could for themselves notice that horses and cows would all sleep out of doors even if the weather was not very favorable.

With sheep, so necessary is pure air to them that farmers would not think of confining them for a single night, He gives them a shelter open on one side in winter as well as summer; and hogs re-ceive pure air on account of the structure of their pens. But horses and cattle are unnecessarily deprived of free air, not intentionally, for they receive more care than the sheep and hogs, simply because an eld-time custom has ordained that one window, small in size and barred across with rods, will ventilate a barn or stable. Poultry, also, suffer from confinement in close quarters. It does not matter how much range may be allowed them during the day, the precautions taken to guard against weasels and other depredators that close them at night sometimes prove disastrous. On investigating the cause of chicken cholera I have never had any difficulty in tracing it to crowded quarters and pure air. Hog cholera can owe its origin to the same cause, and many forms of distemper in cattle are known to have been caused by lack of free circulation in the stables, even when they appeared to be clean otherwise. It is a subject worthy the consideration of farmers, for stock should be as carefully and tenderly provided for in summer as during the cold months of January, February and March.

A law passed by the Legislature, last winter, makes it a penal offence for persons obtaining a divorce in Kansas to re-marry within six months from the time the divorce is granted.

The New York World recalls 11 as a fact just a little curious, that in this supreme agony of the great and grand old Republican party we do not hear one word about the peril to the Union of a solid South, not one word about the sacredness of the ballot-box, not one word about finances and the tariff, not one word about civil-service reform -not one word, in fact, about any subject except the New York Cus tom House and the machine!

The Supreme Court of Ransas has made another ruling, which many towns throughout the State wou'd do well to heed. It is hold that a city is liable for costs in a o se for violation of its ordinances, when there has been a failure to convict. The question in issue involved the city of Olathe in the payment of a heavy bill of costs, amounting to several hundred dollars, incurred in the prosecution of whisky cases, in which the city failed to convict.

gardless of prohibition, the City Council of that city held a special meeting, June 15, and passed an ordinance licensing saloons. Of course, it don't say that intoxicants may be sold, but modifies it by stipulating soda water, seltzer, Gerdrinks, which, of course, covers the down to whisky. The tax charged dium nature. is $600 per annom, one-half in advance.

The United States of Columbia are being desolated by a great locust plague, and many of the inhabitants are on the verge of starvation. Millions of these locusts are filling the air like great clouds, as they did in Kansas in 1874. It is said they do not resemble the red-legged kind we had here. It is also reported that swarms of locusts have invade various parts of the East and South, and that, in some localities, their singing can be heard above the noise of a passing train of cars.

Garfield was elected by the laboring men of the country, with the promise that their wages would be advanced, and with the conviction that, if Harcock was elected. the manufacturing interests, would subside, and they be thrown out of employment. Isaac W. England, of the New York Sun, long known as a promi nent publisher, was appointed as signee of the estate of Frank Les lie. The estate inventoried $75,000, and was encumbered by debts aggregating $400,000. Mr. England has paid all the debts of the estate and turned over a fortune of $400, 000 to Mrs. Leslie. Millions of dollars passed through Mr. England's hands during his assignee ship, but there was not a dollar's discrepency in the accounts. That is what comes of appointing a man of brains, honesty and industry to such a position; and if there were more such appointments, there would be fewer estates squandered by carelessness and curruption.

"I saw when I was there this remarkable fact. A man who had Lieut.-Colonel, an honorable, gallant, brave soldier, who emancipated a slave upon the coast of North Carolina, carried that slave to Rhode Island, and yet, because that man was not born in the United States, he who had recently been a slave walked up over the houlders of that soldier, and deposited his ballot, when the man who had fought for his emancipation wis not allowed to vote."

The druggists' cases, involving he construction of a portion of the ecent temperance law, were decided by the Supreme Court, last Tuesiay, and the Court held that the grant of power to the Probate Judge to issue permits is valid; the act is not unconstitutional, although it restricts to one class-namely, the druggists-the right to secure permits to sell intoxicating liquors. It also held that the law did not apply to cologne, bay rum, essence of lemon, tincture of gentian or other articles of established name and character found in the United States dispensatory, or other like standard authority, and customarily used Finding that the whisky traffic for medical, toilet and culinary would be carried on in Topeka, re- purposes; and further, as to cortials, bitters and other compounds of the ordinary intoxicating liquor, that whether they are within or without the statute is a question of fact to be settled in each particular case by a jury, the test being that, if the intoxibating liquor remains man mineral water, and other a distinctive force in the compound, it is within the statute, although the whole list, from diluted rain water other ingredients may be of a me-

It is a fact hardly worthy of note that it makes no difference what happens, the name of the COURANT is almost never seen in the Leader; implements; cows; carpenter, maman is so well aware of his weakness as a newspaper man that he tears if he should say aught about this paper, some one who is taking his paper, and who does not know there is any other paper but his on ax months' time, without interpublished nere, would find out that est; or ten per cent. off for cash there are two papers in the county, and might want to change off for tioneer. and this would not be in accordance with the starving out programme the Leader man laid down when this paper was first estab Itshed. Although during the late zette. storm nearly the entire front of this office was blown 14, the Leader did not mention the fact as baving taken place to the Courant office While on this subject we will illus trate it a little further. At one time Mr. R. M. Watson was in partnership with Mr. Morgan in the publication of the Leader, and, being desirous of getting up a newspaper fight between the two papers, he wrote an item calculated to bring about such an effect; but when Mr. Morgan looked over the proof he marked the item out, and told Mr. Watson that would never do, as "it would be advertising the COURANT." Now, when we have come to the conclusion that we can not successfully compete with the Leader without ignoring it entirely we shall, like the Arab, fold our tent and move away.

A YEARNING AFTER THE INFINITE.

"And it's O, for the lanky li-some limbs,
That I tie in cestatic knots;
And it's ah! for the jocund tear that dims,
And the canker-bone that rots!
Aye, it's ah! and oh! and it's la! and lo!
For the liting lily-bud,
And even the worms.

And even the worms, Early English squirms, Send a fire-foam through my blood!

I mouned to my soul, 'Be thou drenche in flatoe! And the lightning's fork blazed blue;
But it's O, for the shape that shirks in sham
From the flue that toots 'too-toot!'
Aye, it's wee is me! and it's miserce! For the Chippendale cometh not, And the pimples spread

Till the pose is red,

And the daffodil's forgot. "Then a priceless repture jerked my arms, And I carolled, 'Ye Gods, begin!': And the world was crank with the Cruscan charms,

O, her Botticellian chin!
Aye, it's 'Lack-a-day!' and it's 'Well-a-way!
For that green too gaunt for earth;
And the thrill divine
Which kinked my spine,
To a symphony gave birth!

O, Eros the last new 'Morris' was there
To allure snapp'd souls to crime;
And I clung to the dado in dank despair;
And had O, such a weird old time!
But it's now 'Heigh-ho' and it's 'Utter Woe,
For the froth of her kisses fled,

And a drouthy fire Scorches up the mire Where she lay her 'Burne Jones' head; For the crescent, moon clanked through the clouds, Like an armed myrmidon; And the lilies (in crewels), on the pale gray shrouds, Mocked the flowers which flaunt the sun! And the viol-de-gamba (with muted strings) My soul with desire did glut;

As I slid away,
Like a splash of spray,

SHINING IN SOCIETY.

"Have you heard the news, aunt Jane?" "What news, my dear?" said the somewhat elderly lady, smiling at her pretty niece. "That May Crawford has refused Horace Firth,"

"A very sensible refusal!"

"How can you say so? Wby, the girls are wild about Horace Firth. He is so handsome, so agreeable, and moves in the very best society. I think, for my part, she's a fool!"

"A very sensible refusal," repeated aunt Jane, decidedly. "There's an old proverb, my child, 'handsome is as handsome does,' and measured by that test. Horace Firth is anything but a de-no habits of industry, immense personal vanity, and great selfishness. I pity the girl that maries him." "I suppose you think that stupid bore.

Charley Nismes, whom you're always talking up, would make a better husband," answered the niece, pettishly.

"A thousand times better. Mr. Aismes is shy, which makes him often awkward in society, but among his intimates he is the best of company. You have never allowed yourself, my dear, to be-come acquainted with him. You took a dislike to him the first evening you saw him, because, as you said, he 'looked as solemn as an owl.' You prefer a frivolous fool, like Horace Firth. Ah! my child, it is sterling merit in a husband, not showiness and selfishness, that makes a wife happy. When your parag on Horace, marries, if ever he does marry, he'll keep his fine speeches and gay manners for the world, while his wife will the corner, he edges toward the door, and his mamma orders him to stand in the corner, he edges toward the door,

"But Charley, I suppose will be a lov-er to the last," interrupted the girl, sarcastically. "Marriage will transform the bear into a Prince Charming."

"You may sneer and laugh, my child, but many a true word is spoken in jest. That is just the transformation that will take place. Men, like Charles Nismes, love but few, but those they love in-tensely. You may envy the woman who

"I envy the wife of that awkward fellow, with his tace like a meeting-house, and manners that are almost boorish?" And she laughed. "It's a capital joke."

Pretty Hetty Powers had some excellent traits, but she was willful, and she liked society too much. Home-du-ties, or even home-interests, had no charms for her. Her aunt, who acted as a mother to her, for her own mother was dead, had tried vainly to correct this fault. She sighed now, and dropped the conversation.

A few weeks passed. Horace Firth, rejected by M:ss Crawford, began to pay contrassiduously to Hetty Powers, The gossips said, that having failed to win the richest girl in the village, he was now trying his luck with the next wealthiest one. But Hetty would not believe this. "The malicious old cats," she said, speaking to her confidants. "they want him for their own daughters It is sheer envy. Besides, there's not a word of truth in the story about May Crawford. He never proposed for her, he never was in love with her—I have it from his own mouth. She suits better such slow-coaches as Charley Nismes. Though what he, or any one else, can see to admire in her, I can't understand."
"They do say that May and Mr. Nismes are engaged, really engaged," said one of the listeners. "It so, her money will be a great help to the young lawyer, at least at the start."

"It's what he marries her for, I've no doubt," retorted Miss Hetty, Sharply. "Still water, they say, runs deep. I always told aunt Jane that Charley Nismes was sly, and she'll believe me now, But aunt Jane did not believe it. "Go

But aunt Jane did not believe it. "Go your own way, my child," she said, when she found that Hetty was bent on marrying Horace Firth. "I cannot prevent you from making what I believe to be a terrible mistake. But you shall not be unjust to Mr. Nismes. No mercenary motives influence him. He is to noble for that. You might, perhaps, have won him, if you had cared, for he knew you long before he knew May, and I am sure admired you at first. But you have chosen your path, my dear, and all I can do is to hope for the best. God bless do is to hope for the best God bless you, at any rate, my darling!"

Helty was married. Aunt Jane's prognostications were not long in being verified. At first, indeed, everything seemed sunshine to the young bride. If a cough disturbs your rest take Piso's Numerous parties were given in her honor, at all of which her husband shone pre-eminent, the handsomest, gayest, most admired man in the room. But when this season of festivity was over, Hetty found quite a different state of Hetty found quite a different state of things. Horace was incapable of a quiet, domestic ife. He could not live without excitement. He began to spend his evenings again with the gay young men of his bachelor days. He played cards, drank freely, lost money, and came hon e out of humor. In vain Hetty strove to win him to better courses. Too late she realized what her aunt had forewarned her about. As a last resort, she tried to persuade him to engage in some business. persuade him to engage in some business. thinking that the employment would wean him from his idle associates. She even made over her little fortune tohim, in order to furnish the capital to begin with. But it was of no avail. In less than three years every penny of it was lost, or gambled away, and her husband was more worthless than ever. Very different was the married experience of Mary Crawford. Mr. Nismes had won the heart of the heiress by his culture and intelligence, and he kept it by his nobleness of soul and his devo-tion. If ever a man loved, it was Char-ley Nismes. Not a wish of his wife's but he anticipated it. If he could have got millions, he would have poured them into her lap. As it was, he won fame, and with that he surrounded her, as with a halo—for he soon made his mark in his profession. He was chosen to the led to the inquiry.

"Yes! I know him," said the member of Congress. "His name is Horace Firth. You say he had sunk to a common vagabond. Poor fellow! I had heard that his wife had gone home, with her children, to her aunt, to be supported. But I did not think he had come to this. Let him have a decent burial, I will pay for it myself, and see him 'aid in his last home."

That was the end of the handsome, gay, young fellow, who thought nothing was like shining in society.

A Relic of the War. Birmingham Age.

A bombshell, doubtless fired by the Federals during the late uneasiness at proverb, my child, 'handsome is as handsome does,' and measured by that test, Horace Firth is anything but a desirable match. He shines in society, no doubt; but that is his only merit. He has no profession, and very little money; no habits of industry, immense personal in our forests, when it struck a still harder substance, which broke its teeth and suddenly stopped its progress. Upon examination they found buried in the stock to the depth of at least eight inches a large percussion bombshell which, according to the calculations of those fa-miliar with the growth of timber had been there sixteen or seventeen years, and the tree had grown over it until there was but a slight sear left. Fortunately the saw struck the shell, whick still contained its load, so as to cause no explosion.

HOLMAN'S PAD CURES

Without Medicine, Land Absorption, THE ONLY TRUE MALARIAL ANTIDOTE.

DR. HOLMAN'S PAD is no guess-work remed yno feeble imitative experiment-no purloined hodge podge of some other inventor's ideas; it is the original and only genuine and curative Pad, the only remedy that has an honestlyacquired right to use the title-worl "Pad" in onnection with a tratment for chronic diseases of the Stomach, Liver and Spleen. By a recently perfected improvement Dr. Hol. MAN has greatly increased the scope of the Pad's usefulness, and appreciab y augmented its ac-live curative power.

This great improvement gives Holman's Pad (with its Adjuvants) such complete and unfailing control over the most persistent and unyielding forms of Chronic Disease of the Stomach and Liver, as well as Malarial Blood-Poisoning, as to amply justify the emi-neut Professor Loomis' high enermium: "It's nearer a Universal Panacea than anything in Medicine." The success of HOLMAN'S PADS has inspired unitators who offer Pads similar in form and sdor to the genuine HOLMAN PAD. Beware of these Bogus and Imitation Pads, gotten up to sell on the reputation of the GENUINE ROLMAN PAD.

Each Genuine Holman Pad bears the Private Revenue Stamp of the HOLMAN PAD COMPANY with the above Trade-Mark printed
