When the clause of the bill was reached appropriating $1,500 for rent of prisons for American convicts in China, Mr. Carpenter said be had sought in vain for constitutional authority to try citizens of the United States for geing account upon constitutional authority to try citizens of the United States for crime, except upon the presentment of the grand jury. We have no right to try men without a judge or jury. If the practice should be kept up, it could only be justified on the the theory that whatever Congress thinks on the whole to be about right is constitutional. He would not be opposed to providing for for-eign courts such as Great Britain, but they should be conducted constitutionally. Stephen C. Foster. London Globe.

The name which heads this article was a very familiar one five and twenty years ago, As the composer of popular songs, in comparison with which those of the present day "are as water unto wine," Stephen C. Foster was known to English-speaking people in every quar-ter of the globe; and even now those who in the past have been moved by the mingled tenderness and picturesqueness of his compositions will, though the stern battle of life has caused his name to vanish from their memories, easily recall the pleasant feeling and associations with which the titles of those compositions are connected. To many people who are now middle-aged it will seem only as if a few days, instead of a quarter of a century, has passed since the strains of "TheOld Folks at Home," and the jubilant strains of "Willie, We Have Missed You," stirred the heart with warm emotions; or since the half-serious, half-comical ditty wherein "Susannah" is requested: not to "ery for Jack," and the sorrowful notes of "Massa's in the Cold, Cold Ground" were favorite lyrics. These, and other songs composed by Foster, which were equally popular, are rarely heard now. Some interesting information, showing how much they were appreciated in the past is, however, furnished by a writer in that excellent magazine, Harper's Monthly, the first European edition of which has been issued for December. This writer tells us that no less than 300,-000 course of it The Old Balks? This writer tells us that no less than 300,-000 copies of "The Old Folks,' were sold; 150,000 of "Willie, We Have Missed You;" 100,000 of "Oh, Susannah!" and 200,000 of another song by Foster, "My Old Kenlucky Home." Besides these works the composer produced the well-known and beautiful quartet entitled, "Come, Where My Love Lies Dreaming;" the characteristic negro ballad of "Old Uncle Ned," who laying down the shov-el and the hoe, took his departure for el and the hoe, took his departure for "the land where the good nigger go;" and "Old Dog Tray;" all of which contributed much to the enjoyment of a number of people, and commanded an enormous sale. Foster's music cannot be considered classical; somehow classical music and popular music are never idehtical; but they are mostly, nevertheless, very gracaful, very tuneful, and, when viewed with the air of recollection, very touching. Their composer is dead; he died in New York in 1864. His remains rest in the green quietness of Al-legbaney Cemetery, Pittsburg, the busy city whose smoke canopy hung over him when he produced most of his songs; and it is very much to be feared that his memory would be entirely faded from our minds had not a magazine writer recalled if in a few appropriate words.

NUMBER 14.

DUBLIN is eminently a garrison town, and the terrors of Boycotting are almost entirely lost in the delight experienced at the return of the guards, which that process has necessitated. The guards are chiefly composed of younger members of the aristocracy, and Dublin rejoices in a live lord. When last quartered there, at the time of the Fenian troubles, the guards gave a fancy ball and several other brilliant fetes. Similar engagements are now hoped for.

THERE is no apparatus for extinguishing fires at Harrison, Arkansas. Several incendiary fires lately alarmed the people, and a proposition to purchase a fire engine was discussed in a public meeting. William Arterberry was arrested on suspicion, not because there was any evidence against him, but for the reason that he had a hand in most of the deviltry in Harrison. One of the speakers said mysteriously that a cheap plan of protecting the village was about to be tried, and he was understood to mean that the prisoner would be lynched. The Sheriff put his charge into a wagon and harriedly set out for a safer place, but a mob waylaid them and prepared for a hanging. Arterberry fought courageously, and his captors, unable to ad-_inst the noose, shot him to death.

In 1811 Sir Humphery Davy visited the Edgeworths, in Ireland. The following remarks of his anent the two counties. which at the present time are especially the seat of disturbance, have interest: "As a physically gifted race the people of Mayo and Galway are handsomer and of Mayo and Galway are handsomer and more robust than those of any other part vides against discriminations and entitles a of Ireland. The women-some of them -have characters of softness and beauty. There are no manufactures in the county ; little or no agriculture ; little or no law among the tenants, but much litigation among the landlords, who are for the most part resident out of the country. There was only one place in Connaught where I saw an improving tenantry, possessing industry, regular habits, and civilty without fawning ; this was at Ballina. You will, I dare say, guess the reason-there are four or five great and liberal proprietors residing among them, and setting an example of cultivation and good manners."

> A Modern Gretna Green. New York Tribune.

In the town of West Alexander, Pa. twelve miles from the Ohio, and two miles from the West Virginia line, lives a magistrate who is reputed to have married 1,800 couples within two year's and to have built a fine house with his wedding fees. His popularity arises from the fact that the laws of Pennsylvania do not require a marriage license, while those of the two neighboring States do. He will marry a couple without their leaving their carriage, or he will allow them to remain all night and take breakfast with him, charging judiciously for board and lodging. His regular fee for marrying a couple is $3. He sometimes has from three to five couples at a time waiting to be made one, and all in a hurry from fear lest those who pursue will catch up in time to forbid the banns. Sometimes an enraged father or terrible big brother of the bride arrives after the ceremony is over and proceeds to vent his rage on the winds and make dire threatenings, and even offer violence. In an emergency such as the magistrate's son, who is his father's constable, lays the serious charge of disorderly conduct against them. At one time a relative, in pursuit of a bride, was so violent that it became impossible for the constable to when the whole town rose en arrest him, masse and helped to put the offender in jail. The place is popularly known as "Hardscrabble," and when John T. Norris, a detective of Springfield, O., from whom the Cincinnati Gazette gets the facts, inquired the reason, he was told by an inhabitant it was "because it was such a hard scrabble for runaway couples to get there before the parents caught up.

Guilty of Wrong.

Some people have a fashion of contusing excellent remedies with the large mass of "patent imedicines," and in this they are guilty of a wrong. There are some adver-tised remedies fully worth all that is asked for them, and one at least we know of-Hop Bittare. The writer has had occasion to use Bitters. The writer has had occasion to use the Bitters in just such a climate as we have most of the year in Bay City, and has al-ways found them to be first-class and re-liable, doing all that is claimed for them.—

The Art of Advertising.

Concerning Sara Bernhardt's bold methods of advertising herself, Temple-ton, the cyrrespondent of the Hartford Convent Courant, writes from Boston. "She drives out in a superb carriage made for her, which is drawn by four horses. This is her own method of stimulating the personal interest she excites. Barnum himself could hardly be broader in his devices to draw a crowd. On Tuesday she rode with this array to a jeweler's store on Washington street. Mr. Jarrett, who accompanied her, waited upon her into the store. Instantly the store was crowded with people. The throng had followed the coach. They pushed in until the doors were locked against them. Then they pushed against the windows. climbed up to look into them, and the street was as the scene of a mass meeting. The embarrassed jewelers for a few mo-ments knew not what was to become of their treasures. Fortunately the actress made prompt selections, and moved off with her equipage only to carry the crowd with her."

A BORDER RUFFIAN.

Life and Death of a Noted Desperado-A Novel Duel.

Little Rock Cor, Chicago Times. Little Rock Cor, Chicago Times. There died a few days since at Peach Orchard, Clay county, Arkansas, a man who was by all odds the most daring desperado that ever lived. He was known and dreaded all over the South-western border, where the news of his death will be heard with satisfaction. His name was E. A. Gray, but he was familiarly known as "Kete" Gray. His deeds would fill a volume, and his his-tory is full of romance and mystery. He was born in Tennessee, where his pa-rents, wealthy and respectable people, are yet living. At an early age he de-veloped wayward propensities, and many there were who sagely predicted that he would "fetch up on the gallows." When only 18 he fell in love with the daughter of a Baptist deacon, by the name of Mary Wells, a gentle, lovely, flaxen-haired, blue-eyed girl, who loved him in return. But her father was ob-durate, "Mary shouldn't wed the young Little Rock Cor. Chicago Times, durate. "Mary shouldn't wed the young ruffian," he said. Coercion was resorted to, but locks and bars failed to change the young lady's fancy. She remained true to her first and only love. The trouble which it brought her, however, the knowledge that it had estranged her from her parents, wore upon her, and she gradually faded away. Yet she would not consent to give him up. Perhaps the dream was sweet to her even in affliction; at any rate she hugged love's chains more tighty than ever. But the color faded from her cheeks; her eyes shone with an unhealthy lustre; her on lot its classifier and mathematical the her step lost its elasticity; and without a murmur she went to the grave, dying, the neighbors affirm of a broken heart. Perhaps had she lived and become Gray's wife her influence might have saved him, for after her death he grew utterl. reckless. Yet his grief at her loss was profound. We were shown an obscure paper published in the neigh-borhood at the time of the occurrence, and it noticed a few stanzas Gray had written on her death. One passage read thus:

Can I forget those haleyon days Ere my guiding star had fled? Or the poignant pain which smote my heart

When they told me thou wert dead ? -showing that there were traces of poetic genius mingled with his wayward nature. After this event, however, he went from bad to worse. His parents made every effort to save him, but, at last, even they were compelled to turn their backs on him and leave him to his fate. Wherever he went he stirred up strife; wherever he went he left the stains of blood. At last the country in the neighborhood of his old home became too hot to hold him. He had shot and dangerously wounded s score of men, and carried his life in hi hands. In addition, warrants were out for his arrest, hence he decided to seek other fields, and so came to Arkansas. He inaugurated his advent into the State with the murder of Fayette Fletcher, at Walnut Ridge. His victim was respecta-ble and highly connected, and the murder was unprovoked and decidedly cold-blooded. It created the most intense excitement, not only in the neighborhook, but also all over the common-wealth. It was thought that Gray would hang; but, to the surprise of him. everyone, he succeeded in cheating the gallows, and after a brief term of im-prisonment was set free. But public opinion still ran high against hum, and ed another. he fled from the State, going to the In-dian Territory. Amid the wild and lawless people that dwelt along the border he was in his element. Here he was joined by another ruffian by the name of "Camanche Bill," who was al-most as bad as himself. Together they inaugurated a carnival of blood and set the law at defiance, openly boasted that there was not an officer in the Territory who dared lay a finger upon them. While dividing some plunder the two men quarreled, and each swore that he would have the other's life. The dispute was settled by an agreemont to fight a duel. Arming themselves with derringers, they measured off the ground upon a lonely spot on the prairie, and stood facinging each other just as the sun disappeared beneath the western horizon and the shadows of night fell slowly upon the landscape. When the word "fire" was pronounced Gray sent a bullet crashing through the brain of Camanche Bill, and he fell on the earth and died without a struggle and without a word. Gray had escaped without a scratch. Fearing the vengeance of the friends of the man he had slain, he fled friends of the man he had slain, he fied from the spot, and he never halted un-til in Arkansas, miles away from the scene of the tragedy. Perhaps the thought of the rigid, blood-stained face lying prone on the prairie acted as a stimulus and forced him to put all possible distance between that ghastly object and himself. Be this as it may, it is ject and himself. Be this as it may, it is $\frac{N0.1}{N0.2}$ certain that it did not change him. In $\frac{N0.2}{N0.3}$ Little River county he was arrested, but Little River county he was arrested, but while in the court room, and while his preliminary examination was in pro-gress, he snatched a pistol from one *n*f his captors, shot and dangerously wound-de the Sheriff, jumped through a win-dow and escaped, though the town was full of people. Heavy rewards were of-fered, yet none of them secured his re-menture Hams Lard eapture. In an affray with a man named Alexander Chenoweth at Peach Orchard, in Clay county, he met his doom, as he was The could be brought to trial and punished for his many crimes. Gray punished for his many crimes. Gray told them that he never meant to die with his boots on. "You are getting bet-ter, Gray," said the doctor, noticing what he thought a favorable change in his condition. "Doctor," he responded "I wasn't born to be hung like a thicf!" With these words he turned his face to the wall, and soul and body parted. pounds.

tor were not sufficient for his members and not satisfied with these, they have set up a sort of graven image, so to speak of Barber, which is placed above the pulpit of his principal church. The image itself is a work of the crudest art, made of white and black cotton cloth, stuffed with straw and pained with charcoal. To an unbiased critic it looks more like a scare-crow set up to frighten hawks than anything else, but a devout member informed the writer it was a very striking likeness of the deceased. We marvelled somewhat at the strange thing with an another brother of this church, and asked him its object. He gave us to understand it was a remem brances of the beloved deceased, and said: "Although Brudder Barber is gone, we still has de shapes of him wid us."

some big stories about the amount of turkey consumed, the conversation grad-ually drifted to the comparative size of the chests of the parties present. Fi-nally some one proposed that they meas-ure chests. A tape line was accordingly procured and the measuring commenced. Each party swelled his chest to its great est capacity, and the measuring contin-ued with an abundance of mirth and good humor. At last Gent took the line, passed it around the chest of M. Quinn, and was apparently greatly pleased with the result. To express his satisfaction he placed his hands on either side of Quinn's head and commenced rubbing his ears. He had drawn his hands across the ears only twice when he was frightened nearly out of his wits by see-ing a bright flame shoot quickly upward, reaching nearly to the ceiling. The friction caused by rubbing the ears seemed to have caused the spark which ignited the hair, and the blaze sprang up he had been the involuntary tool used to bring about Quinn's destruction by fire. The reader can imagine what his feeling would be were he to simply place his hands on a friend's ear, and instantly he should find the friend's head in flames. Gent sprang back, threw up his hands and ejaculated : "My God, what is it ?"

"My God, what is it?" And still the flames rolled on. Gent's face turned pale, and the other gentlemen in the party made room for the human flambeau, who as he hastily paced the room, reminded one forcibly of the Circassian beauty with the red porcupine hair. Some of the inmates of the room yelled "Fire! fire!" and others of a more religious turn of mind comof a more religious turn of mind commenced praying. It seems that Quinn is a baker of bread, and while at work frequently has occa-sioy to look in the ovens, which are dark. When doing so he merely strikes a match. In order to have the matches handy, he has acquired a habit of carry ing a handful back of his ears. Using ears for a matchsafe is a new idea and should be patented. However the matches being stored away in the suburbs of Quinn's ears, they were ignited by coming in contact wirh Gent's hands, which were made rough by honest toil. The hair was oily, and what followed was nothing more nor less than an oil fire.

Two Tall Deer Storles.

Placer (Cal.) Herald.

One of the old citizens of Gold Run was riding along the other day when his little dog started up a big buck deer. The little dog barked, and the deer stood and looked at him. While the two were in this attitude the old citizen stepped up behind the buck, caught him by the hind leg and actually succeeded in stab-bing him to death with a pocket-knife before he could get away. The buck weighed one hundred and twenty-five

Dr. John Bull's SMITH'S TONIC SYRUI FOR THE CURE OF FEVER AND AGUE

Chills and Fever

Chills and Fever The proprietor of this celebrated medica, justly claims for it a superiority over all reme-dies ever offered to the public for the SAFE. CERTAIN and PERMANENT cuts of Ague and Fever, or Chills and Fever, whether of short or long standing. He refers to the entire Westeru and Southern conntry to bear him testimony to the truth of the assertion that in no case what ever will it fail to cure if the directions are strictly followed and carried out. In a great many fases a single dose has been sufficient for a cure, and whole families have been cyred b, a single bottle, with a perfect restoration of the genera heakh. It is however prudent, and in every case more certain to cure, if its use is continued in smaller doses for a week or two after the di-ease has been checked, more especially in diffi-cult and long-standing cases. Usually this medi-cine will not require any aid to keep the bowel-ing good order. Should the patient, however, re-quire a cathartie medicine, a single dose p BULTS VEGETABLE FAMILT PILLS with be sufficient.
