The SNAPSHOT GUILD ACTIVITY PICTURES

Picnics are full of gaiety, and you'll want your camera ready to record a complete story of the event. Catch your subjects when they're busily absorbed in some activity.

PICTURES of people outdoors, busy with games, sports, or other activities add human interest appeal to any amateur's snapshot collection. Opportunities for such shots exist throughout the summer months, and the weekends offer a specially good range of picture-taking possibilities.

Most of us plan something special at this time—a trip, a day or two at the beach, or a picnic—and this presents a theme around which the day's pictures can be centered.

If you plan a series of snapshots depicting the events of your holiday, your shots will have continuity, and will tell a connected, interesting story. Of course, you can't foresee all the possibilities because many picture chances occur quite unexpectedly. It is helpful, however, to jot down a brief outline covering the high spots.

If you plan a picnic, for example, you'll want a picture of Tom, Dick or Harry as he packs the basket and outfitting accessories in the car. On arriving at the picnic grounds, don't overlook shots of the girls setting the table for lunch—and then a general view of everyone "packing it away."

You'll want a "close-up" of Mary devouring a tasty sandwich. Jack tussling with an obstinate cap on the olive jar, and many others that add human interest to your picture story.

There's a lot of pleasure and genuine satisfaction in making a planned picture record of your outings. Instead of random "pot shots," you will have a well organized, connected picture story. Try the idea and see if it doesn't pay big dividends in better snapshots—the kind you'll be proud to show to your friends and relatives.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON

Lesson for August 17
Lesson subjects and Scripture texts selected and copyrighted by International Council of Religious Education, used by permission.
PETER ENCOURAGES SUFFERING CHRISTIANS
LESSON TEXT—1 Peter 4:12-19; 5:6-11.
GOLDEN TEXT—If any man suffer as a Christian, let him not be ashamed; but let him glorify God on this behalf. —1 Peter 4:16.

"Sweet are the uses of adversity"—so says the poet, and it is true that God is able to make even the sufferings of man a source of blessing and an occasion for joy, "if a man suffer as a Christian" (1 Pet. 4:16). In a world where sorrow and suffering have been heaped high by man's inhumanity to man, it is indeed appropriate that we think of the encouragement which God's Word gives to those who are in distress. There are many helpful Scripture passages on this point, those before us today being from the writings of Peter to the Jews of the dispersion. Scattered abroad and no more under the guiding and protecting hand of Paul, Luke and the others, they were undergoing severe persecution for Christ's sake. Some were apparently disturbed by their trials, and Peter tells them that persecution should bring I. No Surprise (4:12). We ought to expect trials in this world; yes, severe fiery trials. Such things are common to all mankind, and the Christian should not expect to escape. To them, such trials are real tests of their faith, an opportunity to show to the unbelieving world that God is able to deliver those who put their trust in Him! To be forewarned is to be forearmed. "Think it not strange concerning the fiery trial."

II. No Shame (4:13-16). There are two senses in which the Christian is to be unashamed in the midst of suffering. In the first instance, he is not to be ashamed of the trial itself if he bears it for Christ's sake, for he is thus sharing Christ's sufferings. We cannot share in his substitutionary and sacrificial suffering on Calvary, but we can stand with Him who was indeed "a man of sorrows, and acquainted with grief" (Isa. 53:3). In the second place, he is not to do anything which would justify others in making him suffer. It is a disgrace, a shame which injures the cause of Christ, when a believer has to suffer because he has broken the law, or because he is "a busybody (R. V. "meddler") in other men's matters." If you pry into others' affairs, expect to have your fingers stepped on, and don't expect God to deliver you out of it or honor you in that kind of suffering.

III. No Escape (4:17-19). If the righteous find the difficulties and temptations in their way to be like fiery trials, if those who have the blessed presence of Christ to cheer and to guide them find it difficult at times to make their way through sorrow and sadness, what will the unbeliever do? Does he think that he shall escape? Surely not—and there is yet that day ahead when the believer shall enter into eternal peace, where sorrow and suffering shall be no more. Where will the unbeliever be in that day?

IV. No Worry (5:6, 7). "Put care into Christ's bag," said George Herbert. "Treat your cares as you treat your sins. Hand them over to Jesus one by one as they occur, commit them to Him" (F. B. Meyer). He really cares about you—believe it and act upon it. The cure for all worry is right there, but even as it is true that the meek shall "inherit the earth" (Matt. 5:5), so it is true that only the humble are ready to cast their cares on the Lord. "God resisteth the proud, but giveth grace unto the humble. . . . Humble yourselves in the sight of the Lord, and he shall lift you up" (James 4:6, 10).

V. No Wavering (5:8-11). "Steady, perfected and established in Christ, strengthened by His grace, sure of the eternal call, and with the eye of faith on the glory to come, such is the man who is able and ready to successfully meet the devil when, like a roaring lion, he seeks to disturb and devour God's people. Satan is busy in our day. Dr. Wilbur M. Smith says: "It is admitted everywhere by outstanding Christian leaders, in every sphere of life today, that there has never been a time, at least in our generation, when the temptations of Satan have been so fierce, so frequent, so constant, as just now. What Satan wants to do is to destroy the testimony of God's people, to take them out of places of power and influence for the gospel, to rob them of that joy, and victory, and power, by which, through their labors, others will be brought to confess the Lord Jesus Christ. Christian people today who are conscious of being fiercely assailed by evil ought not to be alarmed, but should realize that this experience of theirs is general, everywhere, of true believers, and that there is sufficient grace for every need in such dreadful times as these."

Burial services were held here Thursday for Edd Haddock of Lometa, who formerly lived here with the Parker family. Mrs. Lee Hill of Rogers and Mrs. Carl Darden and two daughters of Belton attended burial Thursday and spent the afternoon with relatives. Mrs. Clyde Clary had her mother, of Fort Worth, as her guest the past week. Mrs. Dorothy Jean Soules Edwards of Clyde visited homefolks last week. And while here she received her parchment slip from Howard Payne, honoring her with a well-earned degree. Mr. and Mrs. Hobart Trimble have returned from a honeymoon trip to the Gulf Coast. Incidentally, they rid themselves of the dust of the earth in the frothy white caps while in Galveston. They reported the tides rather rough. Mrs. Trimble is our very capable primary teacher, and after those salt-saving solution dips in the Gulf, she'll be able to tackle any child problem that may present itself during the coming school year. School starts here Sept. 8, and schools beginning so early in the season, some part of an education will surely be earned by the sweat of the brow. Mrs. Dave Thompson returned home last week from a two-weeks visit with relatives at Ranger. The party at Clark Miller's Saturday night, given in honor of Misses Cornelous of Comanche, was enjoyed by everyone. Mr. and Mrs. Jude Miles and little son returned to their home Monday after spending two weeks with her parents. Travis Griffin and family spent Sunday with Grandmother Covington. Jim Hall and wife of Troup visited relatives here during the week-end. Misses Jewel and Martha Wilkey and Eugene Dyas and Carl Covington spent Sunday in Lampasas attending a family gathering. Charley Berry and wife spent several days this week at Lake Brownwood attending the Henson reunion. Olney Kelley has bought a car. Be ready, girls, for a ride. Miss Nina Verser is putting a new roof on her house.

Shoulders To The Wheel
The banks of this country are doing a mighty important job on behalf of national defense Secretary of the Treasury Morgenthau recently testified to that in a radio speech. Discussing the sale of Defense Bonds, the secretary said: "I should like to tell the bankers of America that I appreciate what they have done. The results could not possibly have been so successful if the bankers had not put their shoulders to the wheel."
The bankers are doing everything possible to promote the sale of these bonds—without a dime of profit to themselves—because they know that it is necessary for the public to meet as large a portion as possible of the cost of defense if ruinous inflation, debt, and taxation are to be avoided.

Co-operating For Common Good
If you were the producer of a commodity, how would you like the full sales co-operation of retail groups operating 1,600 stores, located in 2,500 municipalities, which serve about 26,000,000 consumers a day—and which have around 180 miles of store windows in which to display your goods?
That is the kind of co-operation which the non-food chain store industry gave cotton during National Cotton Week. On top of that, thousands of food chains participated, along with a large number of independent stores.

Cotton was given this tremendous assistance because it has been a "distressed" crop—a crop in which supply has been out-running demand, bringing with it the threat of ruin to thousands of producers. On various occasions, other distressed crops—apples, beef, bowl, canned goods, nut, dairy products, and so on down the list—have been promoted in precisely the same manner. In every case, as farm organizations involved have testified, the drives have been successful. In every case sales have been far ahead of normal.

In the three Southwestern States of Arizona, California, and New Mexico the adobe house is a native dwelling which is both practical and inexpensive. Since adobe construction is effective in keeping out heat, this type of house is well adapted to the arid regions of the Southwest. Since climate determines suitability, however, the Federal Housing Administration insures mortgages on this type of construction only when located in one of the three specified States. This adobe house is located in New Mexico and represents a combination of the traditional and the new. Valued at $3,670, the property was financed with a mortgage of $3,300 insured by the Federal Housing Administration. Monthly payments on a 25-year mortgage of this amount total approximately $19, exclusive of taxes and hazard insurance. The cost of a similar property will vary in other Southwestern localities.

Regional Federal Administration

By GEORGE C. HESTER

The political history of the past ten years reveals one marked and emphatic trend in our national government. It is the rapid increase of federal functions and activities that have come as a result of the vast regulatory and emergency acts of Congress.

This growth of governmental paternalism and supervision has been evident for several decades, but the New Deal policies of the past eight years have pyramided federal powers and activities beyond anything ever imagined in the old days of the simple economy. Now with the international emergency and the defense program, Washington again is witnessing a veritable floodtide in the ever-expanding range of governmental functions.

One apparent aspect of the trend today is the jammed and crowded conditions in Washington, D. C. For several years now the national capitol has been taxed to capacity to take care of the rapid increase in governmental agencies and their additional employees. This writer served two years in that city back in the days when the first New Deal was just getting under way. The city then was over-crowded. Since then the governmental employees in the District have been increased more than fifty per cent and now approach nearly 200,000.

Added to these are the vast hordes of wire-pullers, contract seekers, contact men, advisors, wanted or unwanted, and so on in an almost endless variety.

Room space is at a premium and living costs are the highest in the country, all of which means impaired efficiency for government workers generally and extra costs for the government.

To relieve the traffic jams the transit company has arranged staggering hours for the government employees to come and leave their work, some 75,000 coming at 9 a. m. and remainder spread from 7:15 to 9:15 a. m.

Another tendency is to shift more and more of the governmental workers to nearby cities, such as Baltimore and Philadelphia. The Agricultural Department has also pioneered in the movement by shifting thousands of its employees to field offices during the past few years. The Budget Bureau also has requested funds to build governmental offices at Beltsville, Maryland, to which thousands of employees would be transferred.

The whole problem again brings to mind a proposed plan that has been under discussion for several years. It is the suggestion that regional sub-capitols be established at a dozen or more appropriate points throughout the country. Numerous administrative agencies, such as those pertaining to agriculture, farm credit, social security, electric power, public works and many others now have their regional offices scattered throughout the country. But there has been no co-ordination among them. Their districts vary endlessly and each agency sets up its own offices, usually independent of all others.

Why not have sub-capitols appropriately located with federal buildings to house in one place these numerous field agencies? The savings in rentals in overhead alone would be enormous. With the well-integrated regional offices, more and more of the services of a regional nature could be shifted to them, thus relieving the almost unbearable conditions in Washington. It would bring government nearer to the people and give such employees much better living conditions. Why continue to build the vast governmental buildings in one of the most crowded and congested areas of this earth, the down-town district of Washington? The governmental buildings in Washington today already exceed in floor space those occupied by the combined capitol of London, Paris and Berlin before the war. Some appropriate decentralization would be a most wholesome trend. At least it merits our consideration in view of the almost insufferable conditions now developing in the Washington orgy.

A Pledge For Young America

THE GRAPHIC ARTS ASSOCIATION of Grand Rapids, Michigan, has produced a patriotic booklet which is being distributed without cost to youth of the community. A colored educational movie also has been prepared, showing the development and printing of the booklet. In the booklet appears the following "Pledge For Young America," which you might like to pass along to some youngsters you know: Pass us the torch America. . . We will hold it high. We will meet the challenge of the future, wearing the full armor of Americanism. We will express our Americanism not only in the outward symbols of flags, salutes and cheers but with the inward spirit of sincere devotion; not only in the calm assertion of rights but in the glad assumption of duties; not only in science, invention and skyscrapers but in ideals, principles and character; not in narrow partisanship but in splendid co-operation. We will fortify our minds against the mental-bombs of doubt, fear, defeatism and vicious propaganda. We will arm our minds with the sword of truth concerning all that America means to Americans. With the help of God we will build and defend, on this continent, a strong citadel for the preservation of the American Way of Life.—The Silver Lining.

WORLD EVENTS
World events seem to be moving in more satisfactory fashion these days. One cannot help hoping that sometime before long we may read that people who once thought that war was the only way to bring about satisfactory solutions to world difficulties may have reached the conclusion that there are possibilities of mutual co-operation. Acceptance of the fact that we are dependent upon each other, not only as individuals but as nations, for our well-being and that the ultimate solution of world problems will require a willingness to agree to this precept, seems the first step forward toward a peaceful world.

In these closing days of the International Student Service institute in Eastport, Maine, the question of the way to make democracy meet not only our own needs, but world needs, has been discussed by Dr. Eagleton and the students. Much interest and real thinking on the problem, I hope, will result.

I have, of course, spent a very short time with this group of young people and I have nothing whatsoever to do with the running of the institute. But one finds oneself receiving certain impressions. I have found first that after five weeks of hard work there is no real lessening of interest in the study of what democracy means and of how, as individuals, we can function to make democracy meet the needs of all the people.

FINE LEADERSHIP
Dr. Neilson has made a deep impression on all of us. Perhaps the students who have been under his direction at Smith college will understand what I mean when I say that these young men and women have sensed the benediction of his presence. It is character that really gets across to other people and there has been a recognition of the fineness and the gentleness of a human being who has lived up to his ideals and used his abilities to the utmost. Example is far better than precept.

In addition, I think Mr. Joseph Lash, who has really done the day-by-day management of detail and curriculum on which hangs much of the success of an undertaking such as this, has gained the respect and the affectionate co-operation of all the young people under his care in a way which is only possible when there is realization of a fine spirit. People grow through experiences, if they meet life honestly and courageously. This is how character is built and young people recognize this ability to grow in those with whom they come in contact.

YOUNG PEOPLE
I wonder if any of you read an article in a recent issue of the magazine, This Week, on the attitude of young people towards the difficulties of the present day? It voiced so well the feeling of many men who resent one of the questions which certain groups of young people are apt to put before their elders—namely:

"We are ready to defend democracy if we know what democracy really means to us. Our generation, to a very great extent, has grown up under dark skies with sometimes scant food, rather little schooling and no recreation. When we were supposedly ready to strike out for ourselves and look for an opportunity to work, as we had been told Americans should do, we found nothing available."

The article points out that in many ways the pioneer days were just as hard, that Henry Ford and Thomas Edison worked long hours for scant pay and, therefore, though it may be difficult, still if you have the will to succeed you will succeed.

I think there is a great deal to be said for that point of view. There are a good many young people who believe they are entitled to work at the things they wish to do, and not just at anything which comes to hand. When they find young people who, when they find themselves in an ungenial occupation, are not able to put the best they have into that occupation or use spare time to develop, through reading or other contacts, their real interests.

Even when this has been acknowledged, one still has to face the fact that youth has been a part of the whole situation which denies people willing and able to work an opportunity to do so. There is no use discussing whether it is harder for the head of a family or an 18-year-old boy to be without a job. Both have a right to believe there is something wrong with a civilization which cannot find ways of providing work, when all around them they see the need for their skills and their professions.

MAINE'S THINKING
Maine is so remote that many the affairs of vital interest to other people in the country may mean little here. But the Battle of the Atlantic is very close to these people. They see the ships being built. They have known men of the navy and they understand the life and the risks of the sea which are simply augmented in times of war. Airports are being built in Maine, so the people are alive to the possibilities of air attack, as those living farther away from the sea cannot possibly be.

INDUSTRY AND DEFENSE

National And International Problems Are Inseparable

(Industrial News Review)
In wars, as in horse races, the long shot occasionally upsets the dope and comes through for a win. Some of the experts are now cautiously hazarding the guess that this may prove true of the Russians.

When the German-Russian war began, the bulk of the military authorities reluctantly agreed that Hitler was probably right when he said that it would be over in six weeks. Those six weeks and more have now passed, and the Russians, instead of retreating in confusion, are said to be planning gigantic counterattacks. The Germans have not taken any areas of major importance. The Red air force, which, according to German claims, was almost totally destroyed in the early days of the fighting, is still very much in evidence and is giving excellent support to the Soviet land forces. The Red mechanized equipment, which was supposed to be second-rate, has, according to some reporters who have seen it in action, actually proven equal to and even superior to the German. Most important of all, the morale of the Russian people—military and civilian alike—seems to have proven far more staunch than anyone expected.

Germany has not lost the Russian war. It would not come as a great surprise if Hitler's forces yet succeeded in taking Moscow, Leningrad and other key cities. But these would be hollow victories unless, at the same time, Hitler was able to destroy Russian military power. So long as substantial Red armies remain in existence and fighting, Hitler will not be safe no matter how much Russian territory he succeeds in conquering. On top of that, Russian civilians have shown an almost suicidal fervor in destroying areas which have been evacuated, and in sniping at German troops. The Russians are fighting a total war in total fashion now, and they have demonstrated surprising courage.

Best of all, from the British-American point of view, is the apparent fact that Germany is suffering terrible losses. On Aug. 2, the Russians claimed that 1,500,000 Reich troops had been killed, wounded or captured. That may represent a big exaggeration—neither the Russian nor the German propaganda ministries can be depended upon for the whole truth. But, even if a third or half that many German troops have been incapacitated, it is a severe reverse to Hitler. The first divisions sent into Russia were the cream of the German crop—the tough veterans of the Polish, French and Low Countries campaigns. No nation can create soldiers on that quality overnight. That may explain reports to the effect that the reserves Germany has lately sent into Russia have proven inferior in quality to the men who preceded them.

It also seems unquestioned that Germany has lost vast quantities of aircraft and mechanical equipment—and has consumed immense amounts of oil, that most precious of war materials. Russian bombers have been invading the Rumanian oil fields, and may have done considerable damage. And in the meantime, Britain has been carrying on a determined, big-scale air raid against the Continent.

At the beginning, British spokesmen had little to say of Russian chances. They were frankly skeptical. Now they are saying that the Russians have actually stopped the Germans, and that there is no possibility of the campaign ending before the winter rains set in. If that is true, Germany will be in for a war of position—and that is precisely what Hitler cannot afford. In addition, Britain gets stronger as Germany gets weaker. This war isn't over yet—but not since it started has the outlook been so good for the Allies.

In time, news of the German reverses and losses is bound to seep through to the German people, no matter how much money Dr. Goebbels puts out through press and radio. Then, think some, German morale will start to crack. It is a fact that in the last World War, Germany went to pieces in a matter of a few months, and the main reason for that was the collapse of morale at home. Will it happen again?

State Department Health Notes

"The average person, if considering the question at all likely will conclude that the white-collar worker lacks hazards such as surround the man or woman in industry. Accident prevention campaigns, which have been directed toward making factories and plants safer places in which to operate, have given rise to this popular notion. Nevertheless, the fact remains that those in offices also are confronted with hazards which are no less real simply because they are somewhat intangible and often insidious in their effects," states Dr. George W. Cox, State Health officer.

"A prominent health educator recently topped his list of office hazards with the swivel chair. He indicated that in its virtue lies its vice. Being comfortable, the office worker either by choice or a measure of necessity remains in it. Thus its harm is not of itself, but in the physical inaction for which it is responsible, coupled with bad posture due to undisciplined sitting.

"Again the male office worker, despite his comparative physical

Lometa

Last Wednesday Judge Lewis, Commissioners Smith and Eubank carried a pickup load of old aluminum to Austin for concentration with other collections.

Work is going forward, apparently satisfactorily, on the 267 miles of rural electric lines out of Lometa. It is hard to tell just when the job will be completed.

Work continues on the preparatory work of building Lometa's new $127,000 school building. Practically all the east wing of the old building has been torn away, and dirt will be broken for the foundation of the new building early next week.

for MODERN living

In the early days, medicine show quacks sold crude oil for a dollar a bottle as a cure for all human ills.

Today hundreds of essentials for modern living are made from oil. It supplies heat for the home. It provides power for the Nation's machinery and transportation. It lubricates the gears of industry. It furnishes fuel for your car. It has shortened distances to make our Nation one big community.

America is safer today because of petroleum. The oil-man's initiative and enterprise have made available to the United States the world's largest supply of petroleum.

In all this, Texas plays a leading part. Last year we supplied 36 per cent of all the Nation's oil, and now have over half of the Nation's oil reserves.

You and every American live more comfortably and safely today because of Texas petroleum.

OIL PIONEERS' REUNION AT SPINDLETOP ANNIVERSARY AT BEAUMONT OCT. 9

A reunion of oil pioneers will be held as part of the fortieth anniversary celebration of Spindletop, famous old oil field, during the Texas Mid-Continent Oil and Gas Association's convention at Beaumont Oct. 9, 10, and 11.

J. Cooke Wilson, general convention chairman, has named a special Old Timers' Celebration Committee to invite back for the reunion those who played a part in the early days of Spindletop. Not only will the pioneers take part in the dedication of the Spindletop monument to be erected on the site of the Lucas gusher, but also special honor will be paid them in the convention program, Mr. Wilson said.

"Due to the large number of oil leaders of today who went into the oil business at Spindletop, we expect the biggest reunion of petroleum pioneers ever held in Texas," Mr. Wilson said. "Several special features for their entertainment while at Beaumont are now being planned."

TEXAS AND THE OIL INDUSTRY

Did you know that Texas has over half of the nation's oil reserve? Last year we supplied 26 per cent of all the nation's oil. We are brought closer together, we make more rapid speed over our roads, we are one large neighborhood, all because of it.

The great industries of the nation would stop because of lack of power, many of our modern conveniences would no longer be available were it not for our natural resource of oil. We can never overestimate the value of it.

YOUR BOY AND MINE

Who is your boy? Who is my boy? Answer: They are very much what we make them.

That Boy In Your Home

That boy in your home is your first concern. He is worth all the time you can give him. He is worth all you have or will ever have. Lands and cattle, stocks and bonds, have but small value as compared with the value of your boy.

What Can We Do For Our Boys?

Mills County needs a Boys' and Dads' Club. They have them in other counties and towns. Why not have a Club here?

What Good Will The Club Do?

There is no way to measure the good the Club will do. Listen to this: What good will a good fence do about your ranch? Why fence your ranch at all? A club for our boys will mean to them and their lives just what a good fence means to you and your ranch.

ARE YOU INTERESTED?

A boys' club is worth the time and money that it will cost any man or any town or county. Peace officers tell us that boys' and dads' clubs are worth more than one can believe. Boys who belong to these clubs are seldom in trouble. They grow up to be fine men in whatever line of work you may find them engaged.

Yes, your boy and mine. I have been thinking of them and what we might do to help our boys. What do you THINK?

W. H. MARSHALL, Pastor Methodist Church.

CHEMICAL BUILDING BLOCKS FROM AIR, WATER, AND COAL

In laboratories such as this, large sums of money are spent annually on research directed to the synthesis of useful new products from nature's chemical building blocks.

By DR. JAS. K. HUNT, E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Company

WE have heard a lot in recent months about the use of air, water, and coal in the manufacture of new chemical products—for example, "Lucite" methacrylate plastic, and nylon from which is made tough, durable bristles as well as strong, elastic yarn for fine hosiery.

To some people this sounds like magic. Others may think that coal, air and water are simply put into one end of a vessel, while out of the other end comes nylon yarn or the crystal-clear "Lucite." But magic has no part in the process. Nor are the chemical transformations simple. They commonly require costly and elaborate equipment, with rigid control at every step by highly-trained technicians.

The chemist has found through years of study that coal is not merely something to be burned to create heat, but rather a veritable storehouse of chemicals. He has learned that air is not merely something to breathe, but a mixture of useful gases—chiefly oxygen and nitrogen. The chemist also has shown that water is more than a liquid to drink or to swim in. Rather, it is a chemical compound which may be split into two colorless gases, oxygen, the same as found in the air, and hydrogen, the lightest gas known.

Tireless research has demonstrated that literally thousands of products can be made from nitrogen, hydrogen, and oxygen—in combination with one another, or with the chemical elements and compounds derived from some other of nature's raw materials.

Under pressures as high as 12,000 pounds per square inch, hydrogen and nitrogen combine to form ammonia. It, in turn, is used in making a variety of chemical products. Ammonia plus air plus water give nitric acid, essential to many industrial activities. Oxygen, sulfur, and water give the sulfuric acid needed in oil refining, and by the fertilizer and steel industries. Other combinations of these chemical building blocks enter into the manufacture of dyes, fertilizers, insecticides, automobile anti-freeze, "Dacron" nitrocellulose lacquers, "Fabrikoid" pyroxilin-coated fabrics, dynamite, smokeless powder and synthetic rubber. Still other combinations give perfumes rivaling those from Araby, and drugs for the prevention and cure of disease, not to mention bristles more durable than those from Oriental pigs or textile fibers stronger and more elastic than nature's own.
