ROCK SPRINGS—
By MRS. EULA NICKOLS

We extend sympathy to J. F. Davis in the going away of his cousin, Albert Stevenson, who drowned in the lake at Brownwood last week; also to Mrs. Brooking in the going away of her husband. It was your loss but heaven's gain.

Rev. Leslie Sparkman delivered two fine sermons Sunday and Sunday night.

Sunday was a sad day for 22 fathers and mothers who had to say good-bye to their sons who left for the army camps some place.

My grandson, who has been in Hawaii, was on his way back to California last week. I don't know whether that is good or bad news. I wouldn't feel too safe in California.

W. A. Daniel took a bicycle to his home last week. We suppose he is planning on saving car tires or his wife one. Or it could be his daughter who is in school at Stephenville. She will be home this summer.

Miss Janette Roberts from Winters spent Sunday with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Roberts. She spent Sunday night with her Grandmother Nickols.

Sunday those who dined in Woodie Traylor's home were Bro. Sparkman and family, Mr. and Mrs. Pierce, Mrs. Ellis Robertson and Annett Renfro.

Nat McGirk and wife from town were out Sunday afternoon looking after their stock on the Nickols farm.

W. M. Keen and wife visited in the Daniel home Saturday afternoon.

J. F. Davis and wife attended his cousin's funeral in Brownwood Thursday.

Mrs. W. A. Daniel spent a few days with her father, Will Denard in Big Valley last week.

Mrs. J. M. Ballard visited Mrs. Minnie Ballard in Waco the last two weeks.

Mrs. Ellis Robertson spent a few days with her daughter, Mrs. Woodie Traylor, this week.

Oscar Gatlin spent Saturday night and Sunday in Brownwood. Miss Kathleen Cockrum spent a few days with her parents.

James Nickols and Gordon Salters are helping to build C. H. Black's house on his mother's farm in Scallorn.

J. T. Stark visited in the Salters home Sunday night.

I dined with my son, Glenn, and wife Monday in town. I helped to cut material in the Red Cross room all day.

JONES VALLEY
By MRS. GEORGE BROOKS

Della Jane Hiller spent the week-end with Vera Mae Bell.

George Brooks spent Saturday night with his family. He returned to Bastrop Sunday afternoon.

Raymond Wilcox visited Horace Brooks Saturday night.

Robert Roberts visited Mason Barcroft Saturday night.

Mr. Petty of Evant visited the E. D. Ferguson home Sunday.

Ina Bea Hale of Naruna visited her parents, Mr. and Mrs. H. Hale, this week-end. She returned to Naruna Sunday afternoon.

We had a grand day Sunday. Sunday school and church at regular morning hour, after which the entire congregation went to the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. P. Barcroft. Each family carried a well-filled lunch basket, and Mr. and Mrs. Barcroft finished off the meal with huge platters of fish. Besides our regular community, we had as visitors Mr. and Mrs. Geo. Ashby, Jay Ashby, Will Ashby of Goldthwaite, Ina Bea Hale of Naruna, Mr. Petty of Evant, Bro. G. A. Nalley and family of Brownwood. We spent the afternoon visiting with each other and had regular services of B. Y. P. U. Sunday evening.

Most folks out this way are wondering if they are going to move, plant a crop, or WHAT? Mostly what. We hope it will all be settled soon so we will know what to do.

Anna Jean Hale and Truman Ferguson took supper Sunday with Elva Faye and Sydney Brooks.

Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Berry visited Mr. and Mrs. O. B. Bell Saturday night.

I have just received a quantity of Corborated Creosote Base. Base wood preserver and disinfectant. Guarantee to kill blue bugs, lice and all insects.—W. T. Keese Feed Store.

Mr. and Mrs. Carl Kauh, Mr. and Mrs. W. P. Woody, and Mrs. Chas. Frizzelle visited with Mrs. David Clements and little son Bill at the Temple hospital Sunday afternoon.

Air-Maid Nylon Hose.—Hudson Bros.

Remember April the third will be workers meeting in the Baptist church in Goldthwaite. There will be a good program I am sure.

ESKIMO WOMEN IN ALASKA SEW ARMY FUR CLOTHING

In the far north, in little native villages along the Alaska coastline, hundreds of Eskimo women and children are doing their part to win the war.

Soldiers on duty in that region must be furnished with warm clothing, and the War Department, through the Quartermaster Corps, has just arranged to buy an additional 5,000 pairs of mukluks, (skin boots), as well as parkas (fur outer garments), and fur pants, caps and mittens.

To meet the demand for these garments, Eskimo men hunt polar bears, wolves and seals and slaughter reindeer. The skins of these animals are taken to Nome and sold to the Skin Sewers Association, a co-operative group of native women and one man who manufacture the garments.

Founded more than a year ago by a group of about 25 native women, the co-operative has expanded until now it utilizes the services of more than 300 women, many of whom are aided by their children.

Tanning the skins and cutting the garments are done at the Nome headquarters, and the work is sent out to the native villages for completion. There the native women sew the boots and garments, using reindeer sinews for thread.

The bottom section of the boot is usually made from the skin of Oogruh, or big seal, while the upper portion is of reindeer skin. In making the boot, it is necessary to crimp the upper edges where the reindeer and seal skin leathers connect. This is done with the teeth, the women and children chewing the tough leather. The parka is usually made of reindeer fawn skin with the fur outside, while wolf hide or polar bear skin is used for trimming.

After the work has been finished in the native villages, the boots and garments are returned to Nome for inspection before being turned over to the Quartermaster Corps for distribution to the troops. All the work is done by hand, and although it cannot be done speedily, it is precise and thorough. The completed articles have proved to be exceptionally warm, well-fitting and long lasting.

The co-operative, which has been of great financial benefit to the natives, was set up under the guidance of the Bureau of Indian Affairs, Alaska Division, Department of the Interior.

A chartered corporation, the co-operative made equipment valued at $89,000 last year.

PORTABLE ROASTERS KEEP ARMY IN FRESH COFFEE

The American soldier drinks an average of four cups of coffee a day, and to assure troops overseas an adequate supply of the fresh-roasted bean, a new type portable roaster has been adopted, the War Department announces. Each roaster can supply the coffee requirements of a full division.

Installed on gasoline-operated vehicles, the roasters operate efficiently with almost any kind of fuel. Gasoline, coal, charcoal, or tropical hardwood may be used, according to the Quartermaster Corps. Taking up little cargo space, the roasters can be unpacked, set up, charged with fuel and placed in operation in a few minutes.

The official army ration of coffee is 45 pounds per man per year. Since each pound makes approximately 40 cups, this means the soldier drinks about 1,800 cups of coffee a year. The Quartermaster Corps has arranged for a supply of 146,000,000 pounds of green coffee this year. When this is roasted it will shrink to about 123,000,000 pounds.
