A SIMULATED RESCUE was made from enemy territory during the U. S. Army's operation "Gallant Hand' last week. The resuce took place on the Robert Burdette ranch about three miles south of Goldthwaite. A downed pilot, Maj. Ralph Wilson of the 67th Tactical Reconnaissance Wing at Bergstrom AFB, Austin, Tex., immediately started calling for the CH-53 "Super Jolly Green Giant" helicopter rescue team on his emergency radio. Within minutes the aircraft lifted off to search for the downer pilot. The pilot in the meantime, kept transmitting on the radio's emergency frequencies to make contact. He was spotted within minutes by the chopper and the crew started rescus operations. A contingent of Goldthwaite persons was on hand to witness the exciting procedures of the rescue, which took place just north of San Saba Peak. The resuce was a part of the largest Army maneuver to be staged in several years.

These may cause it to craze. When crazed, chipped or cracked, the porous body will absorb liquids and darken. This type of tableware is available in a wide range of price and
