Adulation Pleased Rousseau.

Rousseau, whose bicentenary cele bration occasioned a riot in Paris the other day, created a sensation when he visited England in 1766. "Rousseau and his Armenian dress," wrote Lord Charlemont, "were followed crowds when he first arrived in London and as long as this species of admiration lasted he was contented and happy. Garrick not only gave a supper in his honor, but played two characters specially to please him. Rousseau was highly gratified, but Mrs. Garrick declared that she had never spent a more unpleasant evening in her life, the philosopher being so anxious to display himself, and hanging over the front of the box so much, that she was obliged to hold him by the skirts of his coat to prevent him from falling over into the pit."

Sir Hiram point out that in pro-viding a ship with a "sixth sense," three distinct devices must be combined: one for producing and sending diaphragm tightly drawn over out the necessary sound waves, one for receiving the reflected waves and has invented:

of siren, the disk being rotated at a various sizes. If, for example, the suitable speed by a motor of some object is very small or at a very great kind, preferably an electric motor. I distance from the ship, a very small for communicating with other ships.

"I therefore provide an apparatus which might be considered as an artificial ear. It is provided with a large drum-shaped cylinder, and so arranged that the atmospheric pressure making them audible by ringing bells is always the same on both sides, and another apparatus for recording quite irrespective of any air blast. It the amplitude of the waves. Here is is therefore always able to vibrate his description of the apparatus he freely in response to the waves of the echo, and its vibrations are made to "For producing the vibrations of open and close certain electrical cirwaves I prefer to use a modified form scuits which ring a series of bells of instead of ringing a bell it produces a diagram of the disturbances in the air-that is, when there is no noise except that due to the action of the ship or the sea waves, a wavy line is produced, but whenever the vibrations sent out by the vibrator strike an object and return, the wavy line on the paper becomes very much increased in amplitude, so as to be easily observed, and the distance that the object is from the ship can be measured by the length of the paper strip between the giving off of the vibrations and the receiving of the echo; therefore, the distance can be determined with a considerable degree of nicety, and the size of the object may be determined by the amplitude of the waves that return.

The inventor says that the apparatus for producing the atmospheric vibrations should be placed well forward on the main deck of the ship or in any position where it can be turned about from port to starboard. It should be secured to the deck very firmly, and connected, by means of a three-inch pipe, with a high-pressure boiler. A straightaway valve should be placed in the pipe near the boiler, and some means should be found of preventing the accumulation of water in the pipe leading to to keep it dry, while the number of the apparatus.

Except in foggy or stormy weather, the apparatus would be merely ornamental, of course, until it were used

ANYTHING TO SAVE THE HAT

Lucinda Forced to Smile at Antics of Men Caught in Rain With New Straw Headgear.

"I have nothing to say against men," said Lucinda, "but really it makes me smile to see them in the straw hat season when a shower comes. At such a time you may see a woman in all her finery keeping calmly on her way quite unruffled, while men are darting into open doorways or starting to run, all to protect their precious straw hats from a few drops of rain. And what funny things they do besides!

"Plenty of men when the sprinkle begins take off their hat and carry it sort of carelessly down at their sides, as if they had taken it off just to cool their fevered brow, don't you know, to make themselves more comfortable; but really so that less of the hat's surface may be exposed to the rain. And then you may see a man carrying his hat so tilted that the rain will fall on the under side of the brim and not on the top and crown.

"You may see some men take off their hat and put it quite frankly under their coat and hold that over it men who open out a newspaper and hold that over their bright straw hat is not small.

"The man who holds a newspaper over his hat tries usually to do this with a careless air, as if he didn't care much about it, but thought he might as well give his hat some protection. But sometimes you see a man wrestling with a newspaper desper-

"Here, for instance, was a man who had been standing in a doorway waiting for a car, and who now when he saw his car coming, clapped a newspaper over his hat and ran out into the rain. Heavy business this was, for he had to hold that newspaper on with one hand while he grabbed for the handhold on the side of the car with the other. And after all I know he must have found that his hat had been ruined when he got aboard.

"But here was another man, who with the aid of a newspaper was keeping his hat absolutely dry. He had carefully and completely wrapped his hat up in a newspaper, and now here he was with his hat so wrapped and carried under his arm, walking bareheaded down Broadway!

"Really, it does make me smile when I see what men do with their hats when a shower comes."-New York Times

Effectually Aroused.

A large, perspiring individual entered a subway train at one of the uptown stations yesterday afternoon, squeezed himself into a seat between two women and promptly went to sleep. He nodded, he swayed from side to side with every motion of the car, and at last, to the secret delight of every passenger opposite, began slowly but surely to lay his head on the shoulder of one of the young women beside him. At this juncture the unexpected happened. Without even raising her eyes from her paper the young woman reached into her bag with one free hand, drew forth a mall silver vinaigrette of salts and carefully placed it under the sleeper's nose. There was a rumbling sound, followed by a series of sneezes, and the man sat bolt upright, blinking in bewildered fashion, while af e car echoed with laughter.

BOOSTER TRIPS WORTH WHILE

If Actual Financial Benefit Cannot Be Shown, They Still Have a Distinct Value.

There is a difference of opinion among Burlington business men as to the value of so-called booster trips. Close figuring has convinced a number that these trips do not pay. That is, that there is not sufficient new business developed to make up for the time and money expended.

And perhaps that may be true. But there are always things which your mathematical man is apt to overlook. He is of the kind who counts the day wasted that is spent at the fishing club or on the golf grounds. The booster trip has a value, and a much greater one than is generally appreclated. It enables the members of the booster party to get acquainted with some of the actual or prospective customers. It may open the way for future business. But what is much more valuable and important, it makes the members of these parties better acquainted with each other. And, then, it is a day, or a week, ostensibly devoted to business, but partly devoted to pleasure. It is a change from the eternal routine, and few of your mathematical men realize how important, how necessary, an occasional change of this kind is, and how heavy is the cost that those are called upon to pay who never indulge themselves with such a change of program.

Even where there are no direct demonstrable benefits, the trip is of great value, of real benefit, to all who take part therein.-Burlington Hawkeye.

UPLIFT IN LOVE OF NATURE

Cultivation of Ornamental Trees and Plants Marks Always a People of Refinement.

It is an unquestioned fact, certified by all observant travelers of broad experience, that the cultivation of crnamental trees and plants has an uplifting and ennobling influence on all mankind. No matter in what quarter of the earth you are traveling, you will invariably meet with the best recep-tion at that domicile where the greatest love of nature is manifest, through the cultivation or presence of plants and flowers.

Aside from the orchard sections, it is a rare occurrence, in any state, to note in rural districts a farmyard where any intelligent or orderly attempt has been made to beautify grounds, and in small towns decorated, tidy premises are equally rare. Dooryards in the outskirts of cities are often just as unkempt. In places of lawns, flowers, trees and shrubs we find broken-down wagons, farm implements and machinery about an uninted house scarcely fit for a stabl and not infrequently stock runs loose about the house

This disagreeable phase of life is pictured merely to ask if good, cheerful, intelligent citizens of high standard may be reared amid such surroundings. Can you expect culture and refinement in young men and women coming from such so-called homes? And the pathos of it all is that they are not to be held accountable for their uncouthness, for, given a fair chance, most of them would develop into men and women of many graces and accomplishments.-Ex-

Street Paving.

Macadam roads, long the standard paving construction for highways, bave had their day; the automobile has made it necessary to adapt pavements to a new traffic. Prof. Arthur H. Blanchard of Columbia notes in Engineering News that the vardage of new bituminous pavements, constructed by "penetration" methods, creased in eight states from 25,200 in 1908 to 8,680,900 in 1911, and, of bituminous concrete pavements, from 4,400 yards in 1908 to 508,100 in 1911. Of the surfaces for macadam pavements already laid, Professor Blanchard says:

"That more permanent forms of construction are favored by our state commission is clearly shown by the marked decrease in use of light oils for surface treatment of roads, and the decided increase in the surface treatment of roads with heavy asphalted cements."

UNCOOKED FOOD LATEST FAD

Advocates of Idea Say Nature Should Be Allowed to Do What Cooking Is Necessary.

Going back to first principles, the latest food fad is uncooked or sun CNE DOLLAR PER YEAR IN ADVANCE cooked food. The advocates of this idea say that "before the use of fire primitive man took his sustenance as birds and wild animals still do, and there is evidence that he had better teeth, a harder body and was exempt from many of the ailments from which people suffer today." Therefore they urge that nature should be allowed to do whatever cooking is necessary.

"In all nature," say these people, "every animal but man finds food ready prepared. Then why should human beings boil and roast and fry and in the end be worse off than those that eat raw food? In fact we have eaten some kinds of uncooked food for years, and so the step to a complete diet is not great.

SYNOPSIS.

Enid Maitland, a frank, free and unspoiled young Phailadelphia girl, is taken to the Colorado mountains by her uncle. Robert Maitland. James Armatrong, Maitland's protege, falls in love with her. His persistent wooing thrills the girl, but she hesitates, and Armstrong goes east on business without a definite answer. Enid hears the story of a mining engineer, Newbold, whose wife fell off a clift and was so seriously hurt that he was compelled to shoot her to prevent her being eaten by wolves while he went for help. Kirkby, the old guide who tells the story, gives Enid a package of letters and at Kirkby's request keeps them. While bathing in mountain stream Enid is attacked by a bear, which is mysteriously shot. A storm adds to the girl's terror. A sudden deluge transforms brook into raging torrent, which sweeps Enid into gorge, where she is rescued by a thountain hermit after a thrilling experience. Campers in great confusion upon discoving Enids' absence when the storm breaks. Maitland and Old Kirkby go in bearch of the girl. Enid discovers that her ankle is sprained and that she is unable to walk. Her mysterious rescuer carries her to his camp. Enid goes to sleep in the strange man's bunk. Miner cooks breakfast for Enid, after which they go on tour of inspection. The hermit tells Enid of his unsuccessful attempt to find the Maitland campers. He admits that he is also from Philadelphia. The hermit falls in love with Enid. The man comes to a realization of his love for her, but naturally in that strange solitude the relations of the girl and her rescuer become unnatural and strained. The stranger tells of a wife he had who is dead, and says he has sworn to ever cherish her more wife the stranger to he would be wife to have been James Armstrong. Newbolid decides to start to his wife's memory, and Enid is tempted to tell him of the letters in her possession. Armstrong. Accompanied by Plant for Average Home Need Not Be Elaborate or Extensive to Be Convenient.

(By PROF. E. S. KEENE, Dean of Engineering, North Dakota Agricultural neering. College.)

An adequate and well arranged water supply system contributes to the comfort and well being of the family to a greater measure than any other form of household convenience. Such a system not only lightens the burden of household drudgery, but adds immeasurably to the contentment of those who enjoy its service. When there is added to the convenience of such a plant that of a system of sewage disposal, the equipment of the suburban or country residence becomes as complete as can be obtained where city water supply and sewer service is available. That plants of this kind are in general use is a matter of common knowledge, and that they are successful in service is attested by the number of companies engaged in their manufacture.

A water supply plant for the average home need not be elaborate or expensive in order to be convenient. The water may be taken from any suitable source of supply, and the plant may be made to suit the available conditions, no matter what they may be.

The system is simple in construc tion, not at all difficult to operate, and contains all of the essentials necessary to the demands of the average

The source of supply is a rain water cistern sunk below the level of the basement floor, the top of which extends above the level of the floor. The water is pumped from the cistern by a common tank pump and forced into the pressure tank, where it furnishes a supply of water as desired. The tank is an upright cylinder made perfectly tight and constructed to withstand the necessary pressure required to perform its service. It may be galvanized as a precaution against rust, but this is not absolutely necessary.

The pipe which conveys the water from the pump enters the tank near the bottom, and as the water enters contained air is compressed into the decreasing space above its surface. The pressure developed by the compressed air furnishes the force by which the water is driven out of the tank and through the distributing pipes as the supply is demanded. If the air of the tank when empty of water is compressed until it occupies onehalf of its original volume, then the pressure will be twice the original pressure, which in this case will be about 15 pounds to the square inch. The higher the water rises in the tank the greater will be the pressure developed. This may be as high as 125 pounds to the square inch if occasion requires, but 40 pounds pressure is generally sufficient for all the requirements usually demanded in a house

The plant is relatively inexpensive simple to operate and gives the house a supply of water that furnishes every necessary convenience. Modifications may be made to suit any condition or size, location or source of water sup-

MANY BENEFITS FROM SHEEP

No Kind of Live Stock That Can Be Handled More Advantageously With Dry Farming.

ten when a lover (By W. F. STEVENS, Live Stock Commissioner of Alberta.)
There is no kind of live stock that can be handled as advantageously in connection with extensive grain growing in a dry-farming country as can

d. but not in the ho must pay the This is due to one fundamental fact —the large number of weeds that sheep will eat. Of the 300 grasses and weeds known in Canada, sheep will eat 260. Horses and cattle will est only about one-fourth that number.

The most serious problem confront ing the average grain farmer in Western Canada today is the weed problem. While the weed problem can be handled by proper cultivation, this cultivation can be greatly facilitated by keeping the right kind of animals on the land, and in addition to solving food, the kind that the weed problem the productiveness of the soil will also be maintained.

th of the digestive Anything that will destroy weeds is worthy of the farmer's attention; anything that will maintain the fertility of the land demands his attention. Sheep will do both, and are therefore entitled to the attention of every grain grower in a dry-farming country.

Overhead Irrigation.

Many gardeners using cold frames for the forcing of early summer crops have found the overhead system of irrigation very practical. Instead of placing the pipes several feet above the frames they are usually placed very close to the frames and in some instances on the inside of the side boards. This method of irrigation reatly reduces the cost of watering and secures more equal distribution of the water than usually occurs by hand watering. When using this system it is always better to water thoroughly and then refrain from applying more water until it is actually needed.

Profit Lies in Seed Bed

There are few farms on which additional labor expended in preparing the seed bed would not yield hand. some returns. It costs about 15 cents per acre to harrow land and about 38 per acre to harrow land and about secents per acre to disk land. For one dollar land can be double disked and harrowed twice. One bushel of wheat or barley, two bushels of corn, or one helf bushel of flax, increase per sere will pay for this extra labor.

WATER SUPPLY ON DRY FARM MEANING OF "AT HALF MAST"

At First Universal Symbol Was Token of Submission and Respect For Enemy.

Perhaps you have noticed that whenever a prominent person dies, especially if he is connected with the government, the flags on public buildings are hoisted only part of the way ap, remarks the Toronto Mail and Express. This is called "half mast." Did you ever stop to think what connec tion there could be between a flag that was not properly hoisted and the death of a great man? ' Ever since flags were used in war it has been the custom to have the flag of the superior or conquering nation above that of the inferior or vanquish When an army found itself hopelessly beaten it hauled its flag down far enough for the flag of the victors to be placed above it on the same pole. This was a token not only of submission, but of respect.

In those days when a famous soldier died flags were lowered out of respect to his memory. The custom long ago passed from purely mili-tary usage to public life of all kinds, the flag flying at half mast being a sign that the dead man was worthy of universal respect. The space left above it is for the flag of the great conqueorr of all-the angel of death.

Wathena Kan .- "My child's scalp trouble became so bad that I was ashamed to have anyone see him. His head had a solid scab on it. He also had a terrible breaking out on his face developed into sores when he scratched, which he did almost constantly. Baby would almost scratch himself raw.

"I had used several different kinds of salve, none of them helping in the least bit, when I saw the Cuticura advertisement in the paper and it made me think of the good results my sister had when she used it for her children. I had only used Cuticura Soap and Ointment about two weeks before I noticed that the sores were almost entirely gone, and it must have been a month or six weeks he was troubled before I began the treatment. He would get easy when I would put the Cuticura Ointment on him. Cuticura Soap and Ointment completely cured him and he has a clear complexion now." (Signed) Mrs. W. H. Hughes, Dec. 31, 1911.

Robert Browning's Will. Diligent search is being made at Florence, Italy, for the will of Robert Browning, son of the famous poet, but so far it has not been found. The fact that there apparently is no will is causing considerable gossip, as the property, of which there is a good deal, both in Asolo and Florence, will pass to his wife, who was Miss Coddington of New York and from whom he lived apart for years, owing to incompatibility of temper. Browning's property in Florence cluded Cass Guidi, where he spent his childhood days. When his mother dled the property passed out of the family, and was acquired by him a

A winning lottery ticket of $100,-000, in connection with the Nobles Bank was recently presented for payment at the State Bank in St. Petersburg, and it now transpires that the owner is an eight-year-old orphan, an inmate of the Orphanage at Pskoff. The lottery ticket was her sole possession. Her relatives have hitherto done nothing for the child, but when the news of her good fortune became known they were one and all eager to adopt her. The authorities have placed her in the charge of an arch-priest, a distant connection of her father.

The Love in Fiction and Life. A periodical devoted to the drama pleads for plays based on some emotion other than love. The difficulty in producing such plays is that every play must have a hero, and in making a hero the playwright, as well as his audience, almost inevitably adopts the view expressed 2,000 years ago by a scribbler of the dead wall of Pompeii: "He who has never loved a woman is not a gentleman."

Cuba Market for Canada Stone. Cuba imports most of its stone from Motor Care and Mosquitoes.

Mosquitoes, flies and gnats of every description are said to be more numerous in Paris this year than ever before. It has become a veritable invasion. The explanation usually given is that the swallows are much fewer this summer, and also that the ubiquitous sparrow is notably on the decrease. Nobody can find a reason for the desertion of the swallows, but the reason of the scarcity of sparrows is not far to seek. The enemy is mechanical traction, which is supplanting the use of the horse. Before long, horses will practically have disappeared in Paris, and when their nosebags go there will disappear one of the principal staples of food for the Paris "pierrot," who is taking wing for the country in search of the grains of oats and barley once so plentiful on the boulevards and avenues

German Farmer Good Business Man. Under a seemingly generous offer of hospitality, a North German farmer has managed to include a good stroke of business for himself. In a Hanover paper recently appeared an advertisement that from fifteen to twenty women and girls (not under twelve years of age) who needed recuperation could have free board and lodging on a country estate. But in exchange they would be required to pick peas from eight to ten hours daily. Industrious pickers might also be paid cash for their labor.

FORTY YEARS AGO almost every mother thought her child must have PAREGORIC or laudanum to make it sleep. These drugs will produce sleep, and A FEW DROPS TOO MANY will produce the SLEEP FROM WHICH THERE IS NO WAKING. Many are the children who have been killed or whose health has been ruined for life by paregoric, laudanum and morphine, each of which is a narcotic product of opium. Druggists are prohibited from selling either of the narcotics named to children at all, or to anybody without labelling them "poison." The definition of "narcotic" is: "A medicine which relieves pain and produces sleep, but which in poisonous doses produces stupor, coma, convulsions and death." The taste and smell of medicines containing opium are disguised, and sold under the names of "Drops," "Cordials," "Soothing Syrups," etc. You should not permit any medicine to be given to your children without you or your physician know of what it is composed. Dr. C. H. Glidden, of St. Paul, Minn., says: "My experience as a practitioner with your Castoria has been highly satisfactory, and I consider it an excellent remedy for the young."

Dr. H. D. Benner, of Philadelphia, Pa., says: "I have used your Castoria as a purgative in the cases of children for years past with the most happy effect, and fully endorse it as a safe remedy."
