City Building Notes.

Hard work is the best antidote for hard luck.

It requires enterprise to secure industrial enterprises.

Men and towns often sidestep a lot of trouble by moving straight ahead.

An educational institution is a staunch pillar in any community. Erect more school houses.

It is the policy of some people when they cannot use a commercial organization to abuse it.

To leave foot prints on the sands of time, one must first perform some feat.

A habit of efficiency is a greater asset than a heritage of genius.

Conservation and reclamation are the watchwords of twentieth century industry.

More hopes would become realizations if the right amount of energy were applied in the proper channels.

Brighten up your town and promote its social, industrial and commercial progress.

To build good streets only to permit them to disintegrate through carelessness is poor business management.

With one idea ahead, and patient concentration and work behind, all difficulties will ultimately be turned into tools of

The newspaper is the mirror of your town, it is there that the progress and condition of your community is reflected to the outside world.

The man who joins a commercial organization for what he can get out of it, instead of what he can put into it, is represented by a cipher with the rim rubbed out.

Support the educational institutions and pay the school tax without kicking. Educate your people and attract the educated. A trained mind is the world's greatest force.

Underground Silo.

The under-ground sile is distinctively a Western type. The Western farmer and live stock man finds it possessed of many interesting and worthy features. It is exceptionally well adapted to those districts having limited rainfall, and in such localities may with impunity, take the place of the silo usually constructed on top of the ground.

No longer an experiment, the under-ground silo has a value that has been fully demonstrated during the past few years. The writer personally knows of several under-ground silos in constant use during the past several years with perfect saisfaction to the owners.

It is not the purpose of this article to speak of the comparative values of under-ground silos. 'Neither do I wish to speak of the relative merits of the silos, except to say that the underground construction will be found to justify all reasonable claims made for it. That the under-ground silo is the plant for the farmer and stockman of limited means, there cannot be the least question. It can be constructed very cheaply, conservatively estimated, I believe, at $1.00 per ton capacity. It may be said with truth and a spirit of fairness, that it does not blow down or dry apart, and can be constructed by the farmer himself. Expensive machinery is not needed in filling the under-ground silo.

This sile is especially well suited to dry sections, but is not such a success in wet ground, or where the water is near the surface. The walls should be even and perpendicular, the depth about twice the diameter, and the size of the hole in proportion to the herd to be fed. A hole that a sixteen feet in diameter and thirty-two feet deep will hold 100 tons of silage which is sufficient to feed from 25 to 30 cows for six months.

The earth wall of the successful under-ground silo should be covered with cement. If the earth wall stands well, without danger of caving, a 1 to 1 inch covering of rich cement plaster on the dirt, will be found sufficient. If there is clanger of the wall caving or not standing well, the cement should be from 2 to 3 inches thick. In the construction of this latter or thicker cement covering, a wooden or metal form is required to hold the plaster in place until it sets. This form need not be over three feet high, which requires that the wall be constructed in sections of three foot each. Under this method the bottom section is made first, and then the form is moved up three feet, and so on, until the top shall be reached.

In order to save necessity for sca.ffolding for the thin or plastered wall, the cement should be applied at the time of digging the silo, beginning at the top and going downward as the excavation progresses. Finally wash or paint the wall with G. A. Addison pure cement and water.

THE OCEANOGRAPHICAL MUSEUM

To understand the exact position of affairs we at the natives of this little kingdom, the Monagasques, are really Italians. They demand a constitutional government, and the dismissal of all French dignitaries and officials, and the closing of the Casino. They point out that all the official posts should not be given to the French, and that the Casino is only a gambling hell that benefits the crown and the French syndicate who run it, and no one else.

The prince is certainly in a predicament. On the one hand, he wishes to satisfy the Casino authorities, and on the other to make terms with his subjects. The Casino syndicate point out to him that they possess his charter granting them permission to run the Casino, which does not expire till the year 1948; and, furthermore, they pay him the princely income of $250,000 a year, making nearly $1,000,000 a year with the bonuses he is entitled to. True, the prince himself never gambles, and devotes a large share of his income to science.

But his subjects say that the money is gained by gambling, and demand reform.

If the Monagasques have their way, they will speedily put an end to the agreement existing between the Casino authorities and the prince, on the ground that the contract is invalidated by its immorality, according to the jurisprudence of every civilized country, and also because they argue that no sovereign, be he absolute monarch or constitutional ruler, has the right to turn over the control of his dominions to a public gambling syndicate concern against the wishes of his peo ple, or to sacrifice the good name of the latter and to cover it with world-wide infamy, for the sake of his own selfish personal gain.

The leaders of the revolutionary movement in Monaco are convinced that if once they get rid of the public gaming tables, and of the French element more or less connected with it, which now fattens on the land, Monte Carlo, and, in the entire principality, will become as reputable a winter resort as Cannes, Mentone and other places along the Riviera, and that they will attract visitors who will stay and spend their money in the district, instead of the world's gamblers, who, if they win, carry off their money to squander elsewhere, or, if they loose, benefit no one but the Casino syndicate.

As matters now stand, the prince is pledged to grant his people a constitutional government This has been virtually forced upon him. The people went up to the palace and demanded it, and the three or four score of police in the employ of the syndicate were powerless to stop them. But because the prince has promised reform he has lost favor with the Casino authorities, who are extremely annoyed that he should promise reforms without consulting them and seeing their rights are safeguarded.

The question many people would naturally ask here is: If the Casino at Monte Carlo were closed, how would it affect the Riviera resorts generally? Would they maintain their populand draw those fashionable winter crowds? far as climate, beautiful scenery, and natural at-tractions are concerned, they have little to fear. Nice, Mentone, and Canens have more than treb-led themselves in size during the last Sve years.

DRY GAS WELL AT WORTHAM

Is Free from Salt Water-Mexia Well Most Powerful.

Mexia, Tex.-Interest in the bringing in here of a natural gas well of mammoth producing capacity, great pressure and unmixed product was not at all lessened by the coming in at Wortham, seven miles north of Mexia, of a dry gas well exhibiting considerable promise, according to reports. This Wortham well is said to be free from the salt water that played havoc with a gusher brought in last summer. The well was capped and its real value can not be ascertained yet. Its behavior is said to indicate a strong well.

The great Mexia well is generally regarded here as something extraordinarily good. The claim is not made by experts that it is the largest or most important well extant, but it is said to be something like 60 per cent ahead of the average gas well in other fields in capacity, pressure and in value of its gas in standard B. WILL L. MOORE IS REMOVED.

Wilson Refuses to Accept His Resigna tion, Dismissing Him

Washington .- Prof. Willis L. Moore, chief of the weather bureau since 1895, and an appointee of the Cleveland administration, Wednesday was summarily removed from office by President

His resignation recently had been accepted to take effect July 31, but after an investigation of his alleged efforts to become secretary of agriculture in the present cabinet grave charges of irregularity were preferred and the president withdrew his acceptance of the resignation, dismissing Prof. Moore. Later he referred the subject to the department of justice for inquiry.

Secretary Houston of the agricultural department conferred with the president before the removal of Mr. Moore was announced. The secretary then issued a statement.

"Immediately after the resignation of Prof. Moore of the weather bureau was submitted to the president and accepted by him, charges were filed with the secretary of agriculture by responsible men within the service. These charges were of such a grave nature that the secretary of agriculture called upon the department of justice for an investigation.

"The investigation is still under way, but the facts so far secured and laid before the president were sufficient to warrant him in deciding to withdraw his acceptance of Prof. Moore's resignation and remove him summarily, which has been done. The president has also directed the secretary of agriculture to suspend Charles

T. Burns, an employe of the weather bureau, pending a further investiga-tion of his case, and take such disciplinary measures as he may deem necessary with such other employes of the weather bureau as may be found to have been unduly active in using the public service for private

Prof. Moore issued a statement declaring that the same influence that attempted to "disgrace and remove Dr. Harvey W. Wiley" were responsible for his removal, and branding as 'infamously false" and intimation that he had coerced employes of the weath er bureau in supporting him for the secretaryship or that public money had been expended in his candidacy.

London.-The bill aimed at hunger strikes by militant suffragettes was passed in the house of commons. Home Secretary McKenna appealed for urgent action, because, pending the passage of the bill, he felt it his duty to continue forcible feeding, which he was desirous of avoiding. At the same time he refused to accept an amendment prohiibting forcible feeding for the reason that he wished to retain power to resort to this method when, in his opinion, the release of a hunger striker might endanger public interests. The bill provides for the temporary traditional discharge of prisoners whose detention is undesirable on account of their condition of health of marketing in the state department Prisoners discharged in this way should have to return to prison on the expiration of the period stated in their order of release, or would be liable to arrest without a warrant.

One of the striking features in present day home building is the popularity of the square type of houses of the Italian villa style. This has been dubbed by some "dry goods box" architecture, but nevertheless it has gained a wonderful popularity and deserves our approval, because of the simple beauty, economy and convenience of this style of house.

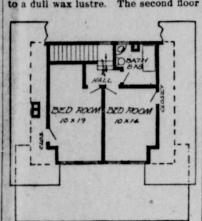

This is a thoroughly modern development in home architecture. marks the other extreme from the elaborate, badly cut up houses covered with fret work and jig-saw ornamentation which were so popular a generation ago.

The accompanying design is a very good example of this new style of home architecture. Its simple, massive lines possess real dignity and beauty and the square outline of the house makes it most economical to build and at the same time permit a very convenient and satisfactory arrangement of the interior.

For a house of this size, 27 feet 6 inches by 23 feet 6 inches, just about the maximum amount of spaciousness is secured by the arrangement shown in the first floor plan. The living room is 12 by 19 feet with the dining room alcove 12 by 14 feet. An open stairway ascending to the second floor occupies the end of the living room The kitchen is just large enough to provide space for the proper culinary activities. Another point to be remembered is that the pipes should be carried in an inside partition wall where ever possible, for there the danger reezing in cold weather is very much diminished.

The exterior of this house is cement plaster on wood lath, a pebble dash finish being used. The second story is paneled off with broad wooden strips and solid wood brackets support the wide extending roof cornice, there being four brackets at each corner. Similar brackets also appear on the porch columns to support the projecting porch cornice.

The exterior of this house may be colored in a number of ways to be very beautiful and effective. One solor scheme that looks very well is cement plaster painted yellow and the exposed timber stained darks THE DIN DING MADE

Somewhat disconcerted to discover that she had apparently made a conquest of this guileless child of Italia, she began to sketch his knee, as more remote from the artillery of his sentimental glances. In a remote corner of the room giggling arose, and she perceived that the smiles of the flirtatious model were taking effect upon some lively girls among the students. They subsided shortly, but the young Italian still continued firing off smiling glances in every direction. At about the center of the class was a German girl, serious to the core, absorbed in her work, and fierce in manner as a female Bismarck. Suddenly she came under the battery of the Italian's miles, and without an instant's hesitation, her voice rang out like a clarion: "You schtop dat schmiling; ve don't vant you to schmile." ure of the model relaxed instantaneously, and he stood straight as an arrow before the class, the impersona tion of offended and wrathful dignity. After an appalling silence, he remarked, in the severest tones: "Ladies I am here before you zimply as ze nodel of ze 'Dancing Fawn;' ze smile goes wiz ze pose.'

It is a fact that a lion's or a tiger's whiskers once taken off will never grow again. These animals shed their hair ordinarily once a year, all except the whiskers. The shedding depends entirely upon the climate, and there is a peculiar connection with it.

Men who have taken wild animals from Asia and Africa to Europe say that they never knew a lion or a tiger or any animal of the cat species go through the Red sea without chang ing coat. They will shed at Suakim and come out with hair fresh and glossy as silk, and yet, going through the Red sea they will shed again. No one has been able to account for it,

DRY FARMING IS EXPLAINED

Means Conservation of Moisture in Throughout Year-Harrowing Will Retain Water.

Eastern people have no adequate dea of what is meant by dry farming They think some sort of magic lurks in arid soil which makes the seed germinate and grow into marvelous yields of grain without the aid of any moisture. Dry farming does no mean farming with no water, but neans the conservation of the water in the soil throughout the year. Despite the hot winds of summer, deep plowing and constant harrowing after every rain will retain the moisture in the soil. I heard an apple grower at a dry farming congress in Cheyenne tell of an experiment he made. He plowed a unit of ground, keeping the mulch secure. The following year he again plowed this ground and also plowed another unit. He continued this for ten years so at the end of that time he had ten units plowed and harrowed, one having been plowed for the full length of time and one but for one year. He then bored with an earth auger to find the depth of moisture in was only a trace of moisture under the mulch, not enough for farming. In the second unit there was a little moishad ten feet of moisture. Therefore it can be seen that dry farming is years and this should be understood method. It requires some capital, but the well-to-do farmer has an opportunity to make a lot of money. Dry farming grain ripens earlier than irrigated land and the dry farmer has an opportunity to make a lot of money. Dry farming grain ripens earlier than irrigated land and the dry farmer has not the trouble or expense of irrigating.

Some people claim that the summer fallowing of land is done to hold enough of the summer's moisture to start the crop that fall. This is true, but the summer fallowing does more than that. It has been proven time and again that moisture is carried over from one year to another by summer fallowing. See that the summer fallowing is done well and you need bave no fear of the dry weather in most sections of Montana.

ONE SECRET OF DRY FARMING

By Conserving Rainfall Farmers Enabled to Raise Crop of Wheat Every Other Year.

When rain falls it does not actually soak into the earth, but bores its way in, forming tiny tubes. These There is no such assumption in Gertubes are so small that it would be impossible to insert a hair in one of takes it as a matter of course that them without bursting its walls. many things must be done by the Sometimes the tubes are bored down to a depth of four or five feet.

When the surface dries, the water evaporates from the tubes just as it are the best assets of the and stirs the ground after each rain. he breaks the tops of the tubes, and convenience and cheapness. Berlin the water will stand in them for months. In this way the farmers of the west, on the semi-arid lands, store the rainfall one year, and raise a crop of wheat every other yearthere being sufficient water in two years, but not enough in one, to raise Handling Horses.

A safe rule to follow in handling horses is never to trust them too far. It is never safe to leave a horse without tying and it is good practice to carry a strong rope halter for tying and using it every time the horse is left standing.

GOOD TREES FOR THE CITY

Suitable Shade Producers Are of Four General Classes-How to Plant Correctly.

Shade trees suitable for street plantng come under four general classes: The columnar, such as the Lombardy popular, Irish juniper and red cedar; the cone-shaped, such as the sugar maple, sweet gum, white pine; *the vase-formed, or spreading head, as the American elm and silver maple; the round-headed form, such as the Carolina popular and horse chestnut. The redbud or Judas tree, the magnolias and similar varieties are excellent for use on lawns or city squares, but not suitable for street planting on the various units of ground, with the account of their small size and habit result that in the first year unit there of growth. It is best to select trees from nurseries in the fall, so that their form can be fully determined, and this is also a good season for transplantture, but hardly enough to maintain a ing, for the roots can then become crop. The third year unit had quite a established in new quarters before little moisture and the ten-year unit frost. The trees should be well pruned, and after the ground is frozen a mulch of leaves about six inches sometimes uncertain for the first few deep (held in place by brances, but which allow aeration of ground) by anyone contemplating using that should be put on. This will furnish heat, and, by putting it on after the first frosts, will prevent the mice from building nests in, or nibbling the roots. The vase-formed trees, which arch gracefully over the street, and of which the elm is so perfect a type, are quite generally conceded to give the best effect. The American elm is pre-eminently the street tree of the older towns of the east and middle west, and rightly so, as it it both rugged and graceful. It grows with uniformity, yet without monotony, shows great individuality without departing from type, developing in age what might almost be called personality .-Arthur Hay in the Craftsman.

GOOD LESSON FROM GERMANY

Cities There Have Demonstrated That Commerce Is Ruled by Convenlence and Cheapness.

Thought in America is obsessed with the idea that the laws of commerce are like the laws of nature. We assume that they cannot be controlled or aided by man. Too Generous With Free Lunch. Laying a birthday feast on the free Innch counter, a deal chef in the employ of "Ike" Hirschorn, a New York hotelkeeper, committeed an amusing error the other day, and incidentally lost his job. It was the hotel proprietor's birthday. "Ike" invited all of the best people to a dinner in his honor. Geese, chickens, lobsters and all of the delicacies of the season were ordered in unlimited quantities. It was a fine layout that "Ike" inspected. "Put it all on the table upstairs," he said to his chef. Hazenpflug. The chef, being deaf, did not comprehend the order and in five minutes the layout was on the free lunch counter. The news spread quickly that 'Hirschorn had turned philanthropist and it was all over in a minute. Before "Ike" could get to the scene the elaborate birthday dinner had vanished. In Setting Out Trees.

Describing the results of horticultural investigations at the Woburn experimental fruit farm, Spencer M. Pickering controverted some old no tions as to the transplanting of trees from the nursery to the fruit ground. It made little or no difference, he said, to the future welfare of the tree whether the ends of the old roots were trimmed or left jagged and torn; nor did it matter whether they were carefully spread out instead of being huddled into the hole prepared for them. Experiments had shown that it was the new rootlets which were to be formed and not the old ones on which the future life of the tree depended .-London Mail.

Calumet Ends "Bad Luck"

Remember when you were a Youngster, what a trial baking day was? If Mother was lucky every thing went fine-but if she had "bad luck" her cakes and her pies and her bread were failures. Her success in bakeing seemed to depend almost altogether on "luck."

Nowadays there's no such thing as "baking luck". At least, not in the kitchens of the up to date cooks. Simply because Calumet Baking Powder has smashed that old time idea. It has made baking sure of success. It has made inexperenced cooks able to bake perfectly and day after day it is saving hundreds of dollars worth of time and materials by doing away with costly failures.

Calumet Baking Powder is the purest baking powder made-and o'clock every 1st and 3rd Sundays; guaranteed not only to be pure, but Sunday School at 10 every Sunday; to stay pure in the can and in the bakeing. Calumet has twice been officially judged the best baking Business meeting Wed. n'ght after powder made-receiving the highest awards at the World's Pure PRESBYTERIAN CHURCH-Bible School Food Expositions in Chicago (1907)

PASSING OF PARLOR CARPET

Modern Methods of Living Turn to the Rug as the More Sanitary.

Modern methods of living are asserting themselves more and more very day. For some peculiar reason man always has assumed the prerogative 7 p. m. Bib'e lesson every first of supplying what he considered the untilitarian portions of the home, and to woman has been delegated its ornamentation, but in the last few years ideas have been changing in this regard and women have become not only the largest buyers, but the finest judges of the necessities, as well as the luxuries of everyday existence.

Only a few years ago the height of womanly ambition in household decoration or idea was a Brussels carpet in the "best room," a floor covering that was often put over a cushion of straw and left to gather dampness, dust and germs, sometimes for years, in the unused parlor. Anyone who has been around at spring cleaning and caught a view of the dirt which bas sifted through the carpet was certainly ap palled at the sight. For many years this floor covering was considered the acme of elegance, and the woman in comfortable circumstances who would have had the temerity to substitute hardwood floors and rugs for the old fashioned carpet would have been con sidered as decidedly eccentric and en travagant.

SYNOPSIS

Bill Cannon, the bonanza king, and his daughter, Rose, who had passed up Mrs. Cornelius Ryan's ball at San Francisco to accompany her father, arrive at Antelope. Dominick Ryan calls on his mother to beg a ball invitation for his wife, and is refused. The determined oid lady refuses to recognize her daughter-in-law. Dominick had been trapped into a marriage with Bernice Iverson, a stenographer, several years his senior. She squanders his money, they have frequent quarrels, and he slips away. Cannon and his daughter are snowed in at Antelope. Dominick Ryan is rescued from storm in unconscious condition and brought to Antelope hotel. Antelope is cut off by storm, Rose Cannon nurses Dominick back to life. Two weeks later Bernice discovers in a paper where husband is and writes letter trying to smooth over difficulties between them. Dominick at last is able to join fellow snowbound prisoners in hotel parlor. He loses temper over talk of Buford, an actor. After three weeks, end of imprisonment is seen. Telegrams and mail arrive. Dominick gets letter from wife. Tells Rose he doesn't love wife, and never did. Stormbound people begin to depart. CHAPTER X .- (Continued.)

On the Saturday morning she went out betimes. Inquiry at the railway office told her that the train which connected with the branch line to all Berny's bravery of silver and glass Rocky Bar did not reach the city till six in the evening. She ordered a dinmustered for its adornment. The ner of the choicest viands and spent a soup that Dominick especially liked, part of the morning passing from stall to stall in the market on Powell Street spying about for dainties that might add a last elaborating touch to the lengthy menu. The afternoon was dedicated to the solemn rites of massaging, manicuring, and hair-waving at a beauty doctor's. On an ordinary occasion these unwonted exertions in the pursuit of good looks would have or disliked. When she was annoyed tired her, but to-day she was keyed to a pitch where she did not notice small outside discomforts. Long before six she was dressed, and when she was in a more friendly and sitting before the mirror in her room she laid on the last perfecting touches with a short stick of hard red substance and a circular piece of mossy-looking white stuff, which she rubbed with a rotary motion round and round her face. Her artificially-reddened talking on in a breathless, lively way hair waved back from her forehead in glossy ripples; her face, all lines and asking questions of his trip, his accident, and the condition of his feet, hollows rubbed from it, looked fresh and youthful. With the subdued light as though there were no mortifying falling on her through the silk and recollections connected with the cause paper lamp shades, she looked a very of his sudden departure. Her only pretty woman, the darkness of her indication of embarrassment was a long, brilliant eyes thrown into higher tendency to avoid anything like a morelief by the whiteness of her pow- ment of silence and to fly from one

She was tremulously nervous. Every sound caused her to start and move to that part of the parlor whence she could look down the long passageway to the stair-head. Large bunches of greenery were massed here in the angles of the hall and stood in the corners of the sitting room. Bowls filled with violets and roses were set on the table and mantelpiece, and the scent of these flowers, sweet and delicate, mingled with the crude, powerful perfume that the passed from his personal wanderings woman's draperies exhaled with every movement. At intervals she ran into her bedroom, seized the little, round, soft wad of white and rubbed it over her face with a quick concentric movement, drawing her upper lip down as she did so, which gave to her countenance with its anxious eyes an exceedingly comical expression.

It was nearly seven o'clock when the bell rang. With a last hasty look in the glass, she ran down the passageway to the stair-head. It was at Perley's, and awarding to any but necessary to descend a few steps to a turn on the stairs from whence the lever that opened the door could be It was part of the natural perversity worked. look interested. "What did he act?" emotional voice, "is that you?" It was certainly not an enthusiastic greeting. A sensitive woman would and east as far as Denver. The poor have been shriveled by it, but Berny was not sensitive. She had realized from the start that she would probably have to combat the lingering surliness left by the quarrel. As Dominick ascended, her air of smiling welcome was marked by a bland cheery unconsciousness of any past unpleasantness. She was not, however, as onscious as she looked. She noted his heaviness of demeanor, the tired expression of his lifted face. He came up the stairs slowly, not yet being completely recovered, and it added to suggestion of reluctance, of diffiand spiritless approach, that seemed to encompass him in an unseen yet distinctly-felt aura.

As he rose on a level with her, she tretched out her hands and, laying haps it might have been some actor I'd seen play. I'd like to know an on his shoulders, drew him toward her and kissed him. The oldness of his cheek, damp with the

I thought if he got to know you intimately and liked you, as he probably would"she glanced at him with a coquettish smile, but his face was bent over his plate-"why, then, something might come of it, something in a business way." She again looked at him, quickly, with sidelong investigation, to see how he took the remark. She did not want to irritate him by alluding to his enall means, anyway on this night of reconciliation.

It would be so useful for you to get solid with a man like Bill Cannon," she concluded with something of timidity in her manner.

Despite her caution, Dominick seemed annoyed. He frowned and eyes. He was evidently angry still, gave his head an impatient jerk. "Oh, there was nothing of that kind," he said hurriedly. "We were just snowed in at the same hotel. There was no question of intimacy or friendship about it, any more than there was between Judge Washburne and me, or even the actor.

Berny was exceedingly disappointed. Had the occasion been a less momentous one she would have expressed herself freely. In her mind she thought it was "just like Dominick" to have such an opportunity and let it go. A slight color deepened the artificial rose of her cheeks and for a moment she had to exert some con trol to maintain the silence that was She picked daintily at her food while she wrestled with her irritation. Dominick showed no desire to resume the conversation, and a silence of some minutes' duration rested over them, until she broke it by saying with a resolute cheerfulness of tone:

"Rose Cannon was there, too, the paper said. I suppose you got to know her quite well?

"I don't know. I saw a good deal of There was only one sitting-room and we all sat there. She was there with the others."

'What's she like?" said Berny, her curiosity on the subject of this spoiled child of fortune overcoming her recent annovance.

"You've seen her," he answered, 'you know what she looks like"

"I've never seen her to know wh she was. I suppose I've passed her on the streets and at the theaters. Is she cordial and pleasant, or does she give herself airs because she's Bill Cannon's daughter?"

Dominick moved his feet under the turned to the front of the flat, where

"I'm very sorry, but I haven't an dea about any of her clothes. I think they were always dark, mostly black or brown."

"Did you notice," almost pleadingly, 'what she wore when she went out? Mrs. Whiting, the forelady at Hazel's millinery, says she imported a set of sables, muff, wrap and hat, for her this autumn. Hazel says it was just the finest thing of its kind you ever laid your eyes on. Did she have them up there?"

"I couldn't possibly tell you. I don't know what sables are. I saw her once with a fur cap on, but I think it belonged to Willoughby, an Englishman who was staying there, and used to have his cap hanging on the pegs in the hall. It's quite useless asking me these questions. I don't know any thing about the subject. Did you wind the clock while I was away?"

He looked at the clock, a possession of his own, given him in the days when his mother and sister delighted to ornament his rooms with costly gifts and in which he had never before evinced the slightest interest.

"Of course, I wound it," Berny said with an air of hurt protest. "Haven't I wound it regularly for nearly three

This brought the subject of Rose Cannon to an end and she was not alluded to again during the dinner. The conversation reverted to such happen ings in the city as Berny thought might interest her husband, and it seemed to her that he was more pleased to sit and listen to her chat er of her sisters, the bank, the theaters, and the shops, than to dilate any further on his adventures in the snow-bound Sierra.

The conversation "I don't see that it is," she said languished, became spasmodic, and finally died away. Berny, leaning back on the cushions, tried several times to revive it, but her husband from among the spread sheets of the evening press answered her with the inarticulate sounds of mental preoccupation, and sometimes with no sound at all, till she abandoned the attempt and leaned back under the canopy in a silence that was not by any means the somnolent quietude of after-dinner

> The clock hands were pointing to half-past nine when a ring at the bell was followed by the appearance of the Chinaman at the door, stating that the expressman had come with Mr. Ryan's valises. Dominick threw down his papers and left the room. As Berny sat silent, she could hear the expressman's gruff deep voice in the hall and the thuds of the valises as he thumped them down at the stair-head. Dominick answered him and there were a few more remarks, followed by the retreating sound of the man's heavy feet on the stairs and the bang of the hall door. She sat looking at the clock, waiting for her husband to return, and then as he did not come and the hall seemed singularly quiet she leaned forward and sent an exploring glance down its dim length. Dominick was not there, but a square of light fell out from an open doorway of his room. "Dominick," she called, "what are you doing?" He came to the door of the room in his shirtsleeves, a tall figure looking lean and powerful in this closer-fitting and lighter garb. "I'm unpacking my things, and then

I'm going to bed."

"Oh!" she answered with a falling inflection, leaning forward, with her elbows planted on her knees, craning her neck to see more plainly down the narrow passageway. "It's only halfpast nine; why do you want to go to bed so early?" "I'm tired, and it will take me some time to get these things put away." "Can I help you?" she asked without moving.

"No, thanks. There's nothing much to bother about. Good night, Berny," and he stepped back into the room and shut the door.

Berny sat as he had left her for a space, and then drew back upon the divan and leaned against the mound of pillows. She made the movement charily and slowly, her face set in a rigidity of thought to which her body seemed fixed and obedient. She sat thus for an hour without moving, her eyes staring before her, two straight lines folded in the skin between her brows.

So he was still angry, angry and un forgiving. That was the way she read his behavior. The coldness that he exhaled-that penetrated even her unsensitive outer shell-she took to be the coldness of unappeased indignation. He had never before been just like this. There was a something of acquired forbearance and pattence about him-a cultivated thing, not a spontaneous outward indication of an inner condition of being-which was new to her observation. He was not and for a moment he paused, ke sulky or cross; he was simply withdrawn from her and trying to hide it under a manner of careful, guarded It was different from any civility. state she had yet seen him in, but it never crossed her mind that it might be caused by the influence of another

He was still angry-that was what Berny thought; and sitting on the divan under the canopy with its fiercelypoised lances she meditated on the subject. His winning back was far from accomplished. He was not as 'easy" as she had always thought. A feeling of respect for him entered into her musings, a feeling that was novel. for in her regard for her husband there had previously been a careless. slighting tolerance which was not far removed from contempt. But if he had pride enough to keep her thus coldly at arm's length, to withstand her attempts at forgiveness and reconciliation, he was more of a man than she thought, and she had a harder task to handle than she had guessed. She did not melt into anything like self-pity at the futility of her efforts, which, had Dominick known of them, would have seemed to him extremely pathetic. That they had not succeeded gave her a new impetus of force and purpose, made her think, and scheme with a hard, cool resolution. To "make up" and gain ascendency over Dominick, independent and proudly indifferent, was much more worth while than to bully Dominick, patient, enduring and ruled by a sense of duty.

CHAPTER XI.

The Gods in the Machine. On the second Sunday after their re turn from Antelope, Bill Cannon resolved to dedicate the afternoon to paying calls. This, at least, was what he told his daughter at luncheon as he, she, and Gene sat over the end of the meal. To pay calls was not one of the Bonanza King's customs, and in answer to Rose's query as to whom he was going to honor thus, he responded that he thought he'd "start in with Delia Ryan."

Rose made no comment on this in-telligence. The sharp glance he cast at her discovered no suggestion of con-sciousness in the peach-like placidity of her face. It gratified him to see her thus unsuspecting, and in the mellow-ing warmth of his satisfaction he turned and addressed a polite query to Gene as to how he intended spending the afternoon. Gene and Rose, it appeared, were going to the park to hear the band. Gene loved a good band, Filipinos Heed the Signal and Give the "Devil Machine" Plenty of Road.

Manila may now be said to be up-tothe-minute in things metropolitan. The latest adjunct to its activities calling attention to progress in this direction was the recent appearance upon the streets of a motor car washed in mud and powdered with the fine dust of various grades of colors produced between here and Baguio. It had made a new record between the summer capital and Manila.

The machine was stripped to a condition almost immodest, fenders and top were superfluous to requirements more and more the attention of eastern and no windshield protected the driver's face against the hot winds that blow at midday across the plain.

The friendliest feeling exists for the motor car. The barrios become a chorus of children with the ready "hello," even the dogs and chickens get the inspiration.

It may be due to the machine's being a stranger in this new section, but it is a fact that pedestrians and people in vehicles do respect the warning signal and give plenty of road .-Manila Bulletin.

But people have died from the results of seasickness and the list of those who have been driven to suicide by neuralgia would be a startling one. Now comes Dr. Rudolph Matas of New Orleans with a statement that neuralgia may be cured by injections of acohol into the nerve ganglions at the base of the skull. This gratifying discovery justifies the hope that the triumphant progress of medical science will presently enable our physicians to alleviate headaches and colds.

Artist Accepted Destitution in Prefer ence to Sale of His Precious Works of Art

Destitute in a house full of mastereces, penniless and unknown, an old man who began life as a chimney sweep and eventually became a sculpor, has died in a sordid lodging at Ivry, a Paris suburb. "Father Fraissard," as he was familiarly known, was orn in Savoy and as a boy was employed as a sweep. Later he was apprenticed to a mason in Paris. His genius manifested itself and he became a sculptor. If he had consented to sell his works of art he would have been a rich man, but he would not part with them and died destitute. His two humble rooms were full of examoles of exquisite workmanship. One, table in black marble, has on it a chess board in African onyx, and half a dozen cups and glasses, all beautifully carved. M. Fraissard was cight years in executing this piece of work. But his greatest triumph took him twenty-two years to finish. It is a black marble table, inlaid with squares of lighter colored marble, and is covered with the accessories of various games. In the center is a chessboard; to the right and left are cards arranged in the shape of a fan. In the orners are dominoes and the cigars and cigarettes of the players, with several gold and silver coins. The manecessary to write his impressions of terials used are porphyry, agate, onyx, the United States. malachite and lapis lazuli, and the combination of rich tones-red, black, orange, white and azure blue-produces a delightful effect.
