SYNOPSIS.

Challis Wrandall is found murdered in a road house near New York. Mrs. Wran-dall is summoned from the city and iden-tifies the body. A young woman who ac-companied Wrandall to the inn and sub-equently disappeared is suspected. Wrandall, it appears had led a gay life and neglected his wife. Mrs. Wrandall starts back for New York in an auto dur-ing a blinding snow storm. On the way she meets a young woman in the road who proves to be the woman who killed Wrandall. Feeling that the girl had done her a service in ridding her of the man who though she loved him deeply, had caused her great sorrow. Mrs. Wrandal determines to shield her and takes her to her own home. Mrs. Wrandal hears the fory of Hetty Castleton's life, except that story of Hetty Castleton's life, except that story of Hetty Castleton's life, except that tory of Hetty Castleton's life, except that bortion that relates to Wrandall. This and the story of the tragedy she forbids he girl ever to tell. She offers Hetty a toome, friendship and security from peril on account of the tragedy. Mrs. Sara Wrandall and Hetty attend the funeral of Challis Wrandall at the home of his parents.

Beside Sara Wrandall, on the small, pink divan, sat a stranger in this somber company: a young woman in black, whose pale face was uncovered. and whose lashes were lifted so rarely that one could not know of the deep. real pain that lay behind them, in her Irish blue eyes.

She had arrived at the house an hour or two before the time set for the ceremony, in company with the widow. True to her resolution, the widow of Challis Wrandall had remained away from the home of his people until the last hour. She had been consulted, to be sure, in regard to the final arrangements, but the meetings had taken place in her own apartment, many blocks distant from the house in lower Fifth avenue. The afternoon before she had received Redmond Wrandall and Leslie, his son. She had not sent for them. They came perfunctorily and not through any sense of obligation. These two at least knew that sympathy was not what she wanted, but peace. Twice during the two trying days, Leslie had come to see her, Vivian telephoned.

'On the occasion of his first visit, Leslie had met the guest in the house. The second time he called, he made it a point to ask Sara all about her. It was he who gently closed the Sara leaned on his arm as she ascended the stairs to the room where the others were waiting. The ashen-faced girl followed.

Mrs. Wrandall, the elder, kissed Sara and drew her down beside her on the couch. To her own surprise, as well as that of the others. Sara broke down and wept bitterly. After all. she was sorry for Challis' mother. It was the human instinct, she could not hold out against it. And the older woman put away the ancient grudge she held against this mortal enemy and dissolved into tears of real compassion

A little later she whispered brokenly in Sara's ear: "My dear, my dear, this has brought us together. I hope you will learn to love me."

Sara caught her breath, but uttered no word. She looked into her motherin-law's eyes, and smiled through her tears. The Wrandalls, looking on in amaze, saw the smile reflected in the face of the older woman. Then it was that Vivian crossed quickly and put her arms about the shoulders of her sister-in-law. Hetty Castleton stood alone and wa vering, just inside the door. No stranger situation could be imagined than the one in which this unfortunate girl found herself at the present moment. She was virtually in the hands of those who would destroy her; she was in the house of those who most deeply were affected by her act on that fatal night. Among them all she stood, facing them, listening to the moans and sobs, and yet her limbs did not give way beneath her.

Some one gently touched her arm. It was Leslie. She shrank back, a fearful look in her eyes. In the semidarkness he failed to note the expression.

"Won't you sit here?" he asked, indicating the little pink divan against the wall. "Forgive me for letting you stand so long."

She looked about her, the wild light still in her eyes. She was like a rat in a trap.

Her lips parted, but the word of thanks did not come forth. A strange, inarticulate sound, almost a gasp. came instead. Pallid as a ghost, she dropped limply to the divan, and dug her fingers into the satiny seat. As if fascinated, she stared over the black heads of the three women immediately in front of her at the fulllength portrait hanging where the light from the hall fell upon it: the portrait of a dashing youth in riding togs.

A moment later Sara Wrandall came over and sat beside her. The girl shivered as with a mighty chill when the warm hand of her friend fell upon hers and enveloped it in a firm clasp. "His mother kissed me," whispered

Sara. "Did you see?" The girl could not reply. She could and howed her head. "Oh, how can you be so merciful to me?'

"Because he was not," said Sara, white-lipped. Hetty glanced at the half-averted face with queer, indescribable expression in her eyes.

If Leslie Wrandall could have looked in upon them at that moment, or at any time during the half an hour that followed, he would have known who was the slayer of his brother, but it is doubtful if he could have had the heart to denounce her to the world. When they were ready to leave the her nerves to a most surprising extent, a condition unmistakably due to the influence of the older woman.

"I can trust myself now, Mrs. Wrandall," said Hetty steadily as they hesitated for an instant before turning the knob of the door.

"Then I shall ask you to open the door," said Sara, drawing back. Without a word or a look. Hetty opened the door and permitted the other to pass out before her. Then she followed, closing it gently, even deliberately, but not without a swift Brandon Booth was of an old Philadelphia family: an old and wealthy the fastidious Wrandalls. Leslie's mother was charmed with him because she was also the mother of Vivian. The fact that he went in for por-

That was his lookout, not hers; if he elected to that sort of give herself away," said he. thing, all well and good. He could afford to be eccentric; there remained, in the perspective he scorned, the bulk of a huge fortune to offset whatever tivate. Some day, in spite of himself, she contended serenely, he would be very, very rich. What could be more desirable than fame, family and fortune all heaped together and thrust upon one exceedingly interesting and handsome young man? He had been the pupil of celebrated draftsmen and painters in Europe, and had exhibited a sincerity of purpose that was surprising, all things con-

His studio in New York was not a fashionable resting place. It was a workshop. You could have tea there, of course, and you were sure to meet people you knew and liked, but it was quite as much of a workshop as any you could mention. He was not a dabbler in art, not a mere dauber of pigments: he was an artist.

Booth was thirty-perhaps a year or two older; tall, dark and good looking. The air of the thoroughbred marked him. He did not affect locse, flowing cravats and baggy trousers, nor was he careless about his fingernails. He was simply the ordinary, every-day sort of chap, you would meet in Fifth avenue during parade hours, and you would take a second look at him because of his face and you know. I think her mother was a manner but not on account of his dress. Some of his ancestors came over ahead of the Mayflower, but he did not gloat.

Leslie Wrandall was his closest friend and harshest critic. It didn't really matter to Booth what Leslie said of his paintings: he quite understood that he didn't know anything about them. "When does Mrs. Wrandall return?" asked the painter, after a long period of silence spent in contemplation of the gleaming pavement beyond the club's window. "That's queer," said Leslie, looking "I was thinking of Sara myself. She sails next week. I've had a letter asking me to open her house in glance over her shoulder into the the country. Her place is about two depths of the room they were leaving. miles from father's. It hasn't been

"I look forward to meeting her, old man."

"I was with her for a few weeks this winter. In Nice, you know. Vivian stayed on for a week, but mother had to get to the baths. 'Gad, I believe she hated to go. Sara's got a most adorable girl staying with her. A daughter of Colonel Castleton, and she's connected in some way with the Murgatroyds-old Lord Murgatroyd, niece of the old boy. Anyhow, mother and Vivian have taken a great fancy to her. That's proof of the pudding." "I think Vivian mentioned a companion of some sort."

"You wouldn't exactly call her a companion," said Leslie. "She's got money to burn, I take it. Quite keeps up with Sara in making it fly, and that's saying a good deal for her resources. I think it's a pose on her part, this calling herself a companion. An English joke, eh? As a matter of fact, she's an old friend of Sara's and my brother's too. Knew them in England. Most delightful girl. Oh, I say, old man, she's the one for you to paint." Leslie waxed enthusiastic. "A type, a positive type. Never saw such eyes in all my life. Dammit, they haunt you. There was great sur prise among the Mexicans who had gathered there that the prisonerr were not released. They had been accustomed to seeing the victor always release prisoners and then im press them all into his army.

Chief of Police Captured. Chief of Police Antonio Villa Vincencio was taken prisoner by the Americans shortly after they had occupied the main plaza of the city. It was suggested to him that he continue in his official capacity to direct the city's protective system. He took the question under advisement. Had the frightened mayor made up his mind to accede to Admiral Fletcher's suggestion, which was made through Consul Canada, the Mexicans might have been spared the humiliation of being forced from their positions and undoubtedly a number of lives would not have been sacrificed.

When Admiral Fletcher directed that battalions of bluejackets and marines be landed from Rear Admiral Badger's ships before dawn and be drawn up in the plaza before the railroad station, thence to proceed to take the entire town, he acted only after warning and after 15 shells from the Prairie's three-inch guns had been thrown into the steel framework of the new market, which faces Market place. A persistent but scattered fire came from rifles in the market during all the early hours of the morning, and Admiral Badger's men landed to the accompaniment of rifle bullets over their heads.

Uniforms Dyed With Rust, When the rush started Admiral Badger's bluejackets, clad in orange colored clothing, made for them on the trip down by dyeing white uniforms with iron rust, moved in close column formation up the water front, past of the streets leading from the the market and across the front of the naval college, a long, three story structure built of adobe and having a tile roof. The column moved steadily forward until the first company had passed beyond the college and the remainder were covering the whole front close against the wall. Suddenly a spatter of rifle firing broke out. Flashes from the rifles were plainly visible in the upper windown of the college and along the roofs. The jackies stood their ground pluckily. Some of them huddled close to the wall to avoid the rain of steeljacketed bullets from above, while others dashed across a small open space directly in front of the building. ### NOT SO MUCH TO BE PITIED

Visiting Englishmen Wasted Sympathy on Man of Millions Who Was Out for Exercise.

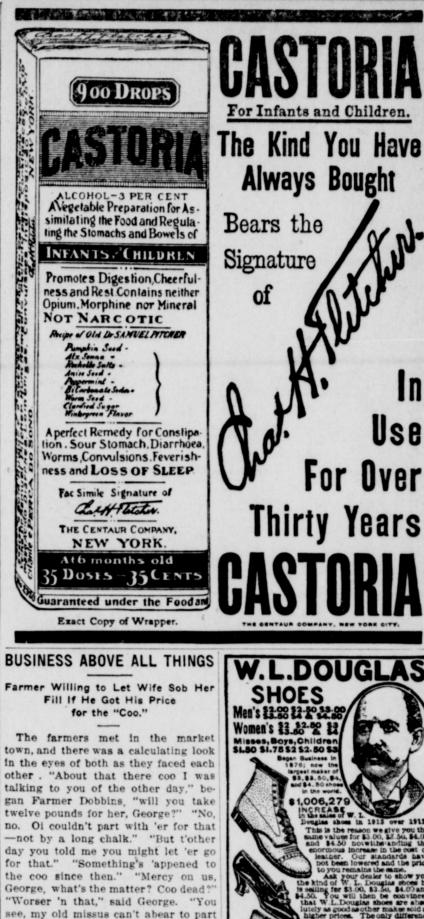

James Stillman once received a group of British financiers in his imposing New York office and entertained them at luncheon in the Metropolitan club. Afterward he excused himself, saying that he had important business. "But you can use my big French motor," he said, pointing to a splendid $15,000 machine that stood outside. They accepted his invitation and started off.

A few hours later the Britons were speeding down a hill on the Hudson river drive. Suddenly they spied a lone cyclist toiling up the incline. He was pumping hard, but making progress. As they neared him one of the Britishers said:

Men in Front Undaunted.

The jackies in front held their places, however, and the Prairie sent shell after shell from her three-inch hattery into the windows of the college; huge columns of red dust leaned upward as each shot went home. The Chester also joined in, and with a roar her six-inch shells tore great gaps in the roof of the college. Far to the right of the harbor the mine ship San Francisco opened with her five-inch guns, and, taking the front of the college, shot out window after window. planting the shells with the precision of target practise.

After 15 minutes of firing the Prairie and the San Francisco ceased and the column of jackies formed again out in pimples first and then seemed and pushed ahead, deploying around the front of the college. A few shots were directed at them, but none came from the college. The Chester continued hurling shells into any building in which snipers lurked and also far out into the suburbs.

The jackies went ahead without faltering, spreading out through the waterfront sections, seizing the highest buildings and organizing squads of guards at street intersections.

The fire along the front gradually slackened and then died out, but the Chester sent a few shots into the hills before ceasing. The Hancock, with 700 marines on board, and the 'battleship Michigan arrived too late to participate in the fighting.

Wounded and prisoners were taken aboard the Prairie until the arrival of the Solace, about noon.

Vera Cruz Thoroughly Cowed. Conditions in Vera Cruz began to take on a normal aspect Thursday. Some of the restaurants were opened and a considerable part of the native population began to appear in the streets inspecting the damage done. There were no expressions of good will for the Americans, but there was no apparent antagonism. The Mexicans here seem thoroughly cowed and appear to accept with passiveness the presence of the foreign forces.

Pierson, N. Dakota .- "The eczema started on my scalp. It finally went on to the back of my neck, then on to my back, arms and chest. It broke to run together in some places, making a sore about the size of a dime. At times the itching and burning were so intense that it seemed unbearable. The more I scratched it the worse it became, and there would be a slight discharge from it, especially on my scalp, so as to make my hair matted and sticky close to the scalp. The hair was dry, lifeless and thin. My hair was falling so terribly that I had begun to despair of ever finding re-

Navy and Army Hold Vera Cruz --Soldiers at Border Ready to Advance.

INSULT AND INJURY STILL

Mexicans Destroy Property, Riot, Hold Refugee Americans Prisoners, Trample Stars and Stripes-In Many Cities They Threaten to Kill.

Washington, D. C .- There are two serious obstacles to peace between the United States and Mexico. One is the positive elimination of Huerta from Mexican politics, which President Wilson demands. The other is the continued heaping of insult and injury upon Americans marconed in the southern republic and the destruction of their property.

When the ambassadors to Washington from Brazil, Chile and Argentina approached President Wilson and Secretary Bryan with offers to Calientes and imprisoned in the smel-

Washington. - Secretary Danies and President Wilson are beginning to feel easy on one score, at least. Re fugees-2,500 of them-have reached American ports from points in Mexico, and more are on their way home.

One of the gravest of the president's fears was that hundreds of Americans-mostly women and children-would be murdered by bands of rioters, looters and Huertistas, before they could get out of the chaotic country.

Of course, many Americans have been unable to get out of Mexico, but many of these have been able to find temporary protection, at least, in foreign embassies and consulates.

The French cruiser Conde, the British cruiser Lancaster and the German ets have been especially active in aidpicking up refugees at points along the coast within 200 miles of Vera Cruz harbor.

"Hard, Fit and Clean."

Galveston .- Richard Harding Davis, famous novelist and war correspondent, described the American soldiers as they embarked for Vera Cruz, thus: "Their physical condition is splendid. They look hard, fit, clean, like athletes balancing at the scratch for the starter. They are prepared to fightand fight like the devil. They weren't when the Spanish-American war began.'

American Women Were Brave.

Vera Cruz .- Most of the Americans quartered in the Hotel Deligencia on the main plaza are now aboard the refugee ship Esperanza, but many stories of heroism of the women during the fighting are told by the officers in command. The American woliams of Mississippi has asked Mr. Wilson for a volunteer lieutenancy commission for his son, Robert Webb Williams.

Foreign Warships Helped.

Washington .- Rear Admiral Mayo has sent this report to the navy department from Tampico:

"By courtesy of the captains of the German and British cruisers, there are now on board our ships about 1,200 American refugees. More are expected. Merchant ships are taking en on board.

War Correspondent Describes Mexican Dictator as a Man of Iron Will.

public, Though Not Military Genius-Willing to Take Gambler's

Desperate Chance.

By N. C. ADOSSIDES, War Correspondent in Mexico and Student of Conditions There. During my stay in Mexico Victoriano Huerta was the head of Madero's federal army, and so exceedingly hostile to the representatives of the press was he that he issued orders for the arrest of many and used means at his command to hamper the efforts of others.

One correspondent, Gerald Brandon, was imprisoned and sentenced to death, but was released.

At Torreon, where I first met him, the commander-in-chief's quarters at the Hotel Francia were two doors away from my room; I dined at his table and, unwelcome guest that I was, found him exceedingly suave and polite.

I saw him so intoxicated that officers had to assist him to his apartments, and sober, reticent and frigid, I saw him in the brotherly embrace of Pancho Villa, praising him for his fidelity.

I once asked a highly educated Mexican officer if Huerta were a really able military man. "Do you know," he answered me, "the French proverb, 'Dans le royaume des aveugles le borgne est le roi?' (In the kingdom of the blind the one-eyed man is the king). Well," he continued, "we have no great strategist nor great military genius in Mexico. Victoriano Huerta is, however, the best officer in our army; he is a man of great tenacity and strength of character, and he possesses the qualifications necessary to a successful dictator."

Something Like Diaz.

Huerta is much the same type as Porfirio Diaz, more Indian than Spanish in blood, appearance and traits. Educated in the military academy of at his back, he advanced slowly to the foremost rank of Madero's revolushone, undoubtedly, for he could in-

"The better class of Mexicansthose whose haciendas and property have been torn from them by the robbers-welcome intervention. It is only the peons, or the poor working people, who are fighting, and they are so ignorant that they do not know who they are fighting for. The Mericans won't stand up and fight. They are treacherous, deceptive and sneaky. They are all cowards-and their word is no good."

Routes to Mexico City.

Washington .- If invasion of Mexico should be ordered, it is believed Mexico City again will be the chief goal of the American troops, as in the former war with Mexico, and Vera Cruz will be the starting point.

There are two routes from Vera Cruz to Mexico City. One is the Jalapa route, taken by General Scott in his advance in the former war. The other is the Orizaba route, used by the French when Maximilian invaded Mexico.

The Jalapa route has a narrowgauge railroad from Vera Cruz to Mexico City. The distance is approximately 300 miles. The Orizab. route has a standard-gauge railroad and is 280 miles long. There is only a small force of federals in Vera Cruz today, under General Maas.

The Mexican army hardly would be able to withstand the march of the Americans from Vera Cruz to Mexico City by either route, according to high military officials here. The largest number of men Huerta could handle would be about 30,000.

The march probably would be featured by a number of engagements, each one marking a further advance by the Americans.

Old Fortress Not Touched.

In the fighting at Vera Cruz, in the de Uloa, an ancient stone fortress, flew the Mexican flag throughout the attack. Captain Stickney of the Prairie sent word to the commandant of San Juan de Uloa that he would blow him to pieces with the Prairie's guns if he opened fire against the Americans, but that otherwise he would not Chapultepec and having no influence be disturbed. The commandant replied that he would answer with his cannon if fired on, but that he would tionary army. In that capacity he not begin hostilities. spire his forces with confidence and

Animal Idiosyncracies.

Many are the idiosyncracies of animals. Some horses are afraid of a dog, some of a bit of paper, some of a bear, some of a car. I have known two mules to shy at a big yelcenter of the inner harbor San Juan low cucumber on a fence, and a cow we formerly owned could not endure to see any man's hat removed.

The oldest trick recorded of a riding animal is that of Balaam's ass, who tried to crush its rider's foot against the wall. Biting, pawing and bolting are also described in the Scriptures. A balky team figures in Esop and Chauser. That the horses of the Saracens used to shy is shown by the traditional inquiry, "If they thought King Richard was in that bush?" This same balking, or jibbing, in all its varieties is one of most aggravating of vices .-- From "A Farmer's Note Book," by C. E. Phelps.

mediate the troubles between this country and Mexico and bring peace without further loss of American life and invasion of Mexican territory, both feared such action would be useless.

President Wilson considered the matter a long time. Finally he accepted the good offices of these South American representatives, not because he thought they could bring about peace between this country and Huerta, but because he believed we should strengthen Pan-American solidarity and trust by accepting the offer, and should take the opportunity to show the world that the United States was not making war simply for more territory.

So he told the ambassadors to go ahead. "I know of no peace plan that will be acceptable, however," he said, "which does not provide that Huerta shall give up Mexican politics and get out of the country." Then he showed the ambassadors that continued acts of violence by Mexicans against Americans who shell near them. Occupants of all three boats then hurried back to the water front, where they hoisted their flags in their respective boats, and there was no more firing.

"No Desire for Conquest."

New York .- William Bayard Hale President Wilson's unofficial investigator of affairs in Mexico, has contribtutionalists, but Mexicans defending uted to the World's Work an article upholding the president's Mexican policy and pointing out an important development in the character of American diplomacy. This, he explains, is an interpretation of the Monroe doctrine that establishes the suzerainty of the United States only as an effective source of moral inspiration over the nations of Central America and the West Indies.

"Our Moral Empire in America" is the title of the article. Discussing the both Victoriano Huerta and Zapata, | possibility of intervention in Mexico (the article was written before the fleet was ordered to Tampico), Dr. Hale says:

"An American army would have no physical difficulty in getting back out of Mexico; nobody would use it up before it got away; the difficulty would be that greed and a false sense of national honor would do their utmost to keep us there permanently in occupation."

If armed intervention should be forced upon the government, he continues: "I predict that our forces will be ordered home just as soon as constitutional order has been restored, and that, so far as the power and influence state of Morales, which is controlled of President Wilson can bring it to pass, nothing in the nature of an indemnity, either in money or land, will
