SYNOPSIS.

At their home on the frontier between the Browns and Grays Marta Galland and her mother, entertaining Colonel Wester-ling of the Grays, see Captain Lanstron, staff intelligence officer of the Browns, injured by a fall in his aeroplane. Ten years later. Westerling, nominal vice but real chief of staff, reinforces South La Tir, meditates on war, and speculates on spears later. Westsriling, nominal vice but real chief of staff, reinforces South La Tir, meditates on war, and speculates on the comparative ages of himself and Marta, she tells him of her teaching children the follies of war and martial patriotism, begs him to prevent war while he is chief of staff, and predicts that if he makes war against the Browns he will not win. On the march with the 53d of the Browns Private Stransky, aharchist, decries war and played out patriotism and is placed under arrest Colonel Lanstron everhearing, begs him off. Lanstron calls on Marta at her home. He talks with Feller, the gardner. Marta tells Lanstron that she believes Feller to be a spy. Lanstron confesses it is true.

"A man playing deaf; a secret telephone installed on our premises without our consent—this is all I know so far," said Marta, seated opposite Lanstron at one end of the circular seat in the arbor of Mercury.

"Of course, with our 3,000,000 against their 5,000,000, the Grays will take the offensive," he said. "For us, the defensive. La Tir is in an angle. It does not belong in the permanent tactical line of our defenses. Nevertheless, there will be hard fighting here. The Browns will fall back step

"Yet if they should win and Westerling finds that I have been party to this treachery, as I shall be now that I am in the secret, think of the position of my mother and myself!" she continued. "Has that occurred to you, a friend, in making our property, our garden, our neutrality, which is our only defense, a factor in one of your plans without our permission?"

Her eyes, blue-black in appeal and reproach, revealed the depths of a wound as they had on the terrace steps before luncheon, when he had been apprised of a feeling for him by seeing it dead under his blow. The logic of the chief of intelligence withered. He understood how a friendship to her was, indeed, more sacred than patriotic passion. He realized the shame of free of professional influences.

Entente to Demand Craft Be Taken From Black Sea and the Army From Egypt-France Points Out Turkey Hasn't Been Neutral at All.

London.-The grand vizier of Turkey has apologized on behalf of his government for the warlike operations of the Turkish fleet under German commanders in the Black Sea, but it was stated authoritatively that the Porte will have to go much farther than this before the powers of the triple entente will agree to resume friendly relations with the Ottoman government.

It was disclosed in a statement just issued by the French government that Turkey in reply to a note presented by Russia, France and England - on Friday last agreed to recall her fleet from the Black Sea, but refused to dismiss the German officers from her ships and that, as it was believed she could not maintain a passive attitude without doing this, the ambassadors of the etnente powers demanded their passports and left Turkey.

There is every reason to believe that, despite the apology of the grand vizier, which it is understood comes from the peace party in the Turkish cabinet and may not be adhered to by Enver Pasha, the minister of war and his young Turk followers; France, Russia and Great Britain not only will demand reparation for the war Black Sea, but will insist that Turkey's entire fleet, or at any rate the cruisers Goeben, Breslau and Hamidch be put out of commission until after the war, Turkey's security being guaranteed in the meantime.

This would give Russia such superfority in the Black Sea that there would be no danger of Turkish raids. It is suggested also that demobiliza tion of the Turkish army would be demanded which would mean that those troops which have crossed the Egyptian frontier must be withdrawn. However, as the terms of Turkey's apology which apparently was made in London have not been published and must be considered by the entente powers before the apotogy is accepted or refused, there seems to be a long between the Ottoman government and the allies can be resumed.

An added difficulty to the situation is that the ambassadors of the powers have left Constantinople, which will make it troublesome to ascertain whether the whole Turkish cabinet concurs in any agreement reached.

Meanwhile a report comes from Constantinople of the seizure of another Russian steamer and also that Bulgaria, which had been asked to choose the side on which she would fight, had commenced to mobilize her second line troops. "According to a Constantinople telegram reaching here by way of Berlin," says Reuter's Amsterdam correspondent, "the Russian steamer Koraljevo Olga was seized at Constantinople recently. A Turkish crew was put aboard the vessel and the Turkish flag hoisted."

New York .- A few nours after a federal grand jury issued indictments accusing 20 present and former directors and the former general counsel of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad of criminal violation of the Sherman anti-trust law, four of the defendants entered pleas of not guilty before United States Judge Foster and were released under bond.

It was reported that several of these named in the indictment would claim immunity on the ground that they appeared as witnesses in the investigation of the New Haven's affairs by the interstate commerce com-

The indictments today were the outcome of a grand jury inquiry which had been in progress for several weeks. Charles S. OF MOTHERHOOD

Enhanced By Perfect Physical Health.

The experience of Motherhood is a trying one to most women and marks distinctly an epoch in their lives. Not one woman in a hundred is prepared or understands how to properly care for her- you?" self. Of course nearly every woman nowadays has medical treatment at such times, but many approach the experience with an organism unfitted for the trial of strength, and when it is over her system has received a shock from which it is hard to recover. Following right upon this comes the nervous strain of caring for the child, and a distinct change in the mother results.

There is nothing more charming than a happy and healthy mother of children, and indeed child-birth under the right conditions need be no hazard to health or beauty. The unexplainable thing is that, with all the evidence of shattered nerves and broken health resulting from an unprepared condition, and with ample time in which to prepare, women will persist in going blindly to the trial.

Every woman at this time should rely upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism.

Answer .- One could not be a Chris tian without a creed. When a person says that he has no creed he usually merely means that he has no writter accept some short statement of wha they consider to be the teachings prepared to change or drop them en tirely should they at any time be found much as the light of divine truth it of the courts. progressive (Proverbs 4:18) no creed 14tf could be expected to last long. The creed of every disciple of Christ is the Bible and whatever other statements of belief he may give assent to must have been proven to his own mind to be founded on this "sure foundation." To gather our ferces around inflexible standards would be an expensive mis take, for the few great truthe which! we have gathered from the rubbish of the many lost centuries ago. Specia features of truth are constantly be oming due. Of these we would be en tirely deprived. God's Word is a great sterehouse of food for hungry pilgrims on the shining pathway. There is milk for babes, and strong meat for those more developed (1 Peter 2:2; Hebrews 5:14); and not only so, but it contains food adapted to the different seasons and conditions; and Jesus said the one faithful in service should bring forth meat in due season" for the house bold of faith-"things new and old" from the storehouse (Luke 12:42; Matthew 13:52). To bring forth "things new," "meat in due season" we will chem. have to progress.

Q.—Since our Lord did not pray for the world would it be proper for Christians to pray for uncorpeople of the world? (O. C. E.)

Answer.-No doubt you are referring to our Lord's words, "I pray not for the world, but for those whom thou hast given me" (John 17:9). Similarly, our prayers and appeals do not need to general, but in the interest of those who have the ear to hear and the heart to respond to the heavenly calling of that now no man can come unto the Son and into the blessed privileges of the present trial except the Father and 1600 lbs. Thes horses are worth draw him. (John 6:44). This does not imply that we are to feel careless respecting the interests of the world in general, who are included in our petition when we pray, "Thy kingdom ome. Thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven." It merely means that some nor how long you intend, the Lord's people, who are aware of the Divine program, know that the heavenly Father has a great blessing in store for the world in general, the great blessing mentioned in the text "He hath appointed a day in the which He will judge the world in righteousness by that man whom He bath ordained"brist the head, and the church His body. When the world's judgment day shall have come it will not be for the purpose of deciding whether or not the people of the world are sinners. That s already decided. By the corrective indements of that period they are to be released from their bondage to sin if they choose to accept the assistance then offered. If we were to fall to pray for the world, in harmony with the model prayer given us by the Lord. it would indicate that we were not in harmony with the Father's purpose: and that we had not yet acquired a proper degree of love. On the other hand, if we were to ask the Lord to give the world their blessings now, or to take them to heaven, we would thus prove ourselves either ignorant of the divine purposes or out of harmony with them. Only in His time and way will He bless them

VIENNA MELANCHOLY AS A SEPULCHER AS WAR GOES ON AND NEWS IS BARRED

(The following story is the first received in the United States telling of actual war conditions in Vienna. It is written by the first American-trained The spirit of patriotism in the Vienna. newspaper woman who has had an oppor ity to see things as they are in Austria.)

By ALICE ROHE.

(United Press Staff Correspondent.) Vienna.-Vienna is a city of lost hope, of gloom, of gray despair.

The once gayest and most beautiful capital of Europe is today the saddest, the most distressed. Silent, hopeless protests against the horrors of war which have turned this wonderful, jo us city into a melancholy sepulcher for the living, permeates every stratum of society.

I have seen a procession of 4,000 mothers, whose husbands have died in Galicia, carrying in their arms their fatherless babes. They filed past the great cold palace of the ministry of war. It was their mute appeal for peace.

I have seen a procession of little children, plaintive and futile emissaries of life, silently protesting against needless death.

Dazed by War Horrors.

I have seen trains arriving, every one crowded to suffocation with the wounded and dying. From the midst of these maimed and mutilated, sickened and suffering men, I have seen uncomprehending soldiers, dazed by the horrors of war, crazed with joy at being home again, dragged from their companions and placed under arrest. Their crime?-Why, they cried out in the delirium of excitement their curses against the Russians who had brought such terrible defeat to the Austrian armies. For no news must be whispered by the wounded or the fugitive which reflects the truth of Austrian disasters.

And above these visual pictures of the melancholy Vienna of today, I have sensed the touch of those gray wings of dread which cast their shadow over the town-the soiled, the sordid, the horrible wings of cholera. I have felt with the people, stalking beside this hideous enemy, the plague she said, "the scenes were awful. We were herded like animals and were treated worse than we treat our dogs. I was days in securing a place in the trains because I had no money. There was a police officer on the train, and he demanded our passports, such money as we had, and when we could show neither he refused for days to let us go on."

"When we arrived at the frontier."

The natural impulse of these fugitives here is to speak of the evil days which have befallen them, of their losses and the carnage-and they cannot understand why they are arrested

Moves Citizens to Despair. The sight of automobiles carrying wounded soldiers past the brilliant Hof theater, past the opera, past the gothic splendor of St. Stephens, where formerly gay cars sped on, bent on pleasure, is one that moves the Viennese to despair.

I talked to one of these wounded soldiers as the car in which he was being carried was stopped in front of the Burg theater for repairs. He told me in whispers, while the guards were busy with the car, of the frightful ravages made by the Russians and the Servians upon the Austrians.

"They have buried our dead in heaps," he said, tears coursing down his face. "They were killed like sheep driven to a slaughter yard. The Russian artillery has done unbelievable things. The Russians waste their ing stream of innocent sufferers,

The spirit of patriotism in the Viennese runs to its highest flood when these wounded men are being conveyed through the streets.

Show Captured Arms.

Before the palace of the minister of war, beside the monument of Maria Theresa and of Prince Schwarzenberg, the cannons and arms captured from the Russians are on view. They are insignificant arms, but the people do not tire of caressing them. The meager signs of Austrian success are like gleams of hope in a leaden sky of despair.

And patrolling the streets one sees increasing in number daily nondescript army uniforms. Every color and sort of ancient regalia has been brought forth from old storehouses.

In the hour when war and its horrors are keeping a pall over Vienna the sight of religious processions, headed by priests praying for Divine aid, brings out in relief the picture of faith. The churches are constantly filled with women and children, praying for husbands and fathers and brothers who may never return. In the time of sorrow too great to endure alone the people are throwing themselves more and more upon the bosom of the church, which has offered them consolation so many times

Rich Are Accused.

While the devout are filling the churches and the wounded are filling the hospitals, while the wretched fugitives are bringing with them famine from Galicia, accusations and protests are rising above the murniurs of distress, against the rich.

On different subscription lists opened daily for the Red Cross the sight of unbelievably small sums given by members of the nobility and by millionaires has brought forth waves of indignation. A feudal prince who is among the richest men in Europe has subscribed 20 crowns ($4). Everywhere one hears criticism of the aristocracy, of the high nobility and their avarice. This selfishness, say the people, is traditional, but the public believed that in an hour like this even the tightened purses of the nobility would open. It has been suggested that a list be published, giving the names of the nobility, of the rich who have been guilty of avarice, and who have added to the general public depression. Emperor Francis Joseph does not conceal his indignation these grasping members of the nobility.

HESSIAN PRINCE SHOT IN BACK, SAY ALLIES

By HAROLD ASHTON. (International News Service.)

Calais.-Hospitals, both in the field and at the base, are full of work just now, for the fighting that is going on is flerce and reckless.

Troops upon entering a small village, held strenuously for several days by the Prussians, came upon the body of Prince Max of Hesse. He had been dead three days. The body had been stripped of everything but the tunic and socks and was marked with five revolver wounds made from behind. The tale is whispered that he was the victim of his own soldiers. A rough coffin of real boards was made for the boy-he was little more than that-and then for three long days the body lay in an outbuilding of a small farmhouse. The body now has been sent into the German lines. Continual night fighting has been going on. The nights have been desperately cold, but the men and horses of the allies have a splendid supply of blankets and good, hot food is turned out smoking from the traveling field kitchens.

Troops Have Plenty

The troops have more than enough of coffee, jam galore and cigarettes by the tens of thousands. Their spirit is excellent, their health good, their hearts high and they are still singing. They are looking forward cheerfully enough to a tempestuous Christmas day in the trenches.

Calais is taking it all placidly enough. The city is filled with Belgian refugees wandering at will anywhere, anyhow, sleeping under the stars, amid stable litter in byways, in filthy back streets, on steamboats and on fishing boats.

In the harbor, where hundreds and hundreds of fishing boats from all along the coast lie thick as their own packed fish after a spell of great hauling, there is a living population almost equal to the population of the town at normal times.

Whole families are herding in an intolerable atmosphere. There are families in rags and tatters with all their cherished household goods, while clustering around them are families of the well-to-do, fat and well-fed. with furs to warm them and jewels to decorate them.

Waiting for Boats.

Every day hundreds of them are marshaled off to the quay, where they wait in long, dreary, patient lines, in rain or shine, for an English boat to carry them away.

We are murdering one another as hard as we can and in the wake of it all comes this pitiable, heartbreakammunition as though it were free as I crouching submissively to the lash.

The school children of California are saving up their pennies to pay for the monument to the pioneer mother which is to be executed by Charles Gradfley for the Panama-Pacific exposition. The woman's board of the exposition suggested that such a statue be erected and the children were the first to respond, sending in an avalanche of pennies. The central figure is that of the pioneer mother dressed in a homespun gown and at her knees are two sturdy little children.

MARTIAL AND MILITARY LAW

Regulations Are by No Means Identical, as London Magazine Has Pointed Out.

By an order in council Great Britain has been placed under a modified form of martial law, which, however, must not be confounded with military

Martial law may be defined, London Tit-Bits says, as that military rule or authority which exists in time of war, and is conferred by the laws of war, in relation to persons and things within the scope of active military operations, and which extinguishes or suspends, for the time being, civil rights so far as this may be necessary for the purpose of war. In other words, it is the application of military government to persons and property within its scope. Military law, on the other hand, is a body of rules and ordinances prescribed for the government of the military state considered as a distinct community. The object of the recent order in council is to give the military authorities extensive powers over individuals and their property. Buildings may be destroyed, lands and roads may be occupied, inhabitants may be required to leave given areas as necessity dictates. People may not trespass on railways or loiter about bridges. It is an offense to publish information as to the movement of troops, while the spreading of reports calculated to cause disaffection or alarm may bring the offender into grave trouble.

Lived With Eight Bullets in Him.

Reports indicate that it sometimes takes a lot to kill a modern soldier. Sergeant Fougere of France received eight bullet wounds, a broken arm and other injuries, and although shot in the calf, thigh and ankle, escaped being captured by Germans, and limped ten miles to his regiment. Another French soldier received six bullet and three bayonet wounds, and is recovering. The French war office estimates ches in least to do so. only two men are killed out of every inches in length, and has a large 100 hit. The penetration is so clean one soldier did not know he had been hit for three hours, and another bullet went clean through two soldiers and lodged in a cavalryman's saddle.

Taken From "lowa Hemestead" Farm paper Of Jund18, Durability of wooden Silos

"In May 1893 I erected a wooden stave silo in the place of a stone silo which was giving poor results. The stone seemed to cause a great spoiling of silage. The next year I put another stave silo and the two silos are standing to day, and are in good condition. They have been filled every year and in some cases have been carried over for summer silage. This makes the stave silos TWENTY and Twenty One years old. The hoops have been tightened only once during all this time and there has not been any need for replacing staves or any parts. I see no reason why these silos should not last 15 or 20 years longer. The cement base of these siles bave been acted on by the acid untill they are weak and chalky. I find the latic acid whether in buttermilk or silage worke on cement. For this reason we find it necessary to replace the cement floors in our daries every few years',

The above by T. L. Hecker of the Minnesota Experiment station will interest not only to those who have stave siles but to these who are conetmplating building in the near future. For further information see
