The More You Use Your Car The More You Need Good Tires

Your car's usefulness is increasing every day.

It is becoming more and more of a real necessity to you-both in your business and home life.

For that very reason you need good tires, now, more than ever.

The out-and-out dependability that created so tremendous a demand for United States Tires in times of war is just as desirable today.

It reduces tire troubles to the vanishing pointmultiplying the usefulness of your car and putting the cost of operation on a real thrift basis.

United States 'Nobby', 'Chain', 'Usco', and 'Plain' are the most popular fabric tires built. They have all the strength and stamina our years of experience have taught us to put into tires.

There is also the United States 'Royal Cord', the finest car built for passenger car use.

Our nearest Sales and Service Depot dealer has exactly the treads you need for your car and the roads you travel.

He will gladly help you pick them out.

FOR BETTER PUBLIC HEALTH

Attention of Rural Communities Drawn to Necessary Steps in That Direction.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Much remains to be done in rural districts, according to the annual report of the secretary of agriculture, to control such pests as mosquitoes and the hookworm, to eliminate the sources of typhoid fever, and, even more, to give the country districts the advantage of modern hospitals, nursing and specialized medical practice. Noting that many agencies, some of them private enterprises with large funds, are working for improvement, the report says that the department of agriculture, through its home demon-DYSPEPSIA GONE stration service, is giving valuable aid, and the public-health service is instration service, is giving valuable aid, creasingly extending its functions.

Common Practice in Some Sections to Turn Lambs Into Cornfields to Clean Up Rows.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.) Sheep are extremely valuable as weed destroyers, and they can be shifted from field to field as crops permit, where they will clean up the fence rows. In some parts of the country it is common practice to turn the lambs, at weaning time, into the cornfields, where they destroy weeds, but do not injure the corn. Where the corn ears stand up fairly high, sheep may be turned in after corn is laid by. They may eat an occasional ear that is down and they will trim up the lower blades of the corn, but they will not "ride" the stalks down as hogs do. The benefit which they thus render is much greater than the damage they do.

Woven wire fence is convenient for confining sheep to specified areas, especially when this area is in corn, since the cornstalks serve very well as posts to which to tie the wire netting. Corner posts should, of course, be more substantial.

Sheep may be used also to destroy weeds in fields that are not planted in crops, along roadways, and in waste places, thus tending to clean up the whole place and reduce the weed seeds that may be blown in or tracked in on cultivated fields. On the ordinary farm sheep are better than goats for

Truly Peculiar Bequest.

Some years ago there died in Montreal a wealthy old Scotsman who had been noted for his shrewdness in business matters. One of the bequests in his long will was a hairbrush that he had used for many years. This hairbrush he gave to his nephew, with the proviso that the said brush should be kept in the family vault two months out of twelve.

During the brush's sojourn in the vault the legatee was not to brush, comb or cut his hair. The acceptance of the brush meant that the nephew was to inherit and enjoy two-thirds of the estate, and we have not the slightest doubt that this fortunate young man willingly became a "shock-headed Peter" in order to fulfill his eccentric uncle's wishes.

ADVANTAGES OF FARM MULE Will Take Better Care of Himself

Than Horse-Also Less Subject to Digestive Disorders.

The mule has certain decided advantages as a work animal. For the man who does not know how or is unwilling to give his horses a reasonable amount of care, the mule is the better animal, because he will take better care of himself than will the horse.

The mule is naturally more able to stand hot weather than is the horse. He will slow down when the work becomes hard and the weather hot, whereas a horse will begin to fret, and thus will be even more likely to become overheated. Hence, a mule is safer in the hands of a careless or incompetent driver.

The mule requires less grain and will readily consume more roughage than will a workhorse doing the same amount of work. The mule is less subject to digestive disorders.

Another important consideration is that a mule does not depreciate in value so much from age and hard usage as does a horse.

PROTECT CATTLE IN WINTER

Beef Steers Should Be Kept in Dry Lot and Provided With Windbreak of Some Kind.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

During the winter beef steers should be kept in a dry lot and provided with a windbreak from the north or given free access to an open shed. In some sections of the South weather conditions alone may not justify open sheds, but when the saving of feed and manure and the protection of pastures from tramping in wet weather are considered such sheds will prove to be profitable investments. Breeding animals may require even more protection during severe weather than an open shed would provide.

CONVENIENT FOOD FOR HOGS

Give as Near Balanced Ration as Possible-Alfalfa Hay Will Add Comfort to Sows.

If the hog is to be comfortable and profitable you must provide food "convenient" for him; convenient not in the sense of handy, although that is desirable, but "suitable," as nearly as possible a balanced ration. You will add to the comfort of the brood sows that you are keeping over winter if you will give them plenty of alfalfa hay, which they can take out of the rack as sheep would.

CLAY'S ORGY OF SPENDING GETS HIM INTO AN EMBAR-RASSING SITUATION.

After a whirlwind courtship they be-Clay buys an engagement ring on credit and returns to New York. Daphne agrees to an early marriage, and after extracting from her money-worried father what she regards as a sufficient sum of money for the purpose she goes to New York with her mother to buy her trousseau.

Clay made it as easy for his new slave as he could.

Daphne was afraid to speak. She saw that Clay was sick with wrath, and she did not know him well enough to be sure how he would take her interference in his thoughts. She trudged along in utter shame.

The worst of her shame was that she was so ashamed of it. Why should she care whether a waiter smiled or frowned? But she did care, infinitely. Daphne could not pump up any enthusiasm for the scenery. Her lover took no advantage of the serial of arbors and the embracing bowers. He never kissed her, not once. Daphne ceased to be sorry for Clay and felt sorry for her neglected self. Then she grew angry at herself. Then at him.

"That's terrible!" Daphne sighed. "To think how much I have cost you !" "Well, I wanted to give you a good time on your little visit," said Clay, "and it's only two days till my next salary day."

Her heart sank. Her guess was right. His bank account was dry. It had gurgled out in amusing her. She felt that there was something here that would take a bit of thinking about -when she had rested enough to think.

The taxicab swung into Fifty-ninth street and drew up to the curb. Clay helped Daphne out and said to the chauffeur, "Wait !"

He said it with just the tone he had used when he said to the waiter, 'Check !"

When Clay had kissed her his seventeenth farewell and was wondering how he could tear himself away from her without bleeding to death, Daphne pressed the bell.

Instead of her drowsy mother opening the door half an inch and fleeing in her curl-papers, Bayard himself appeared in his bathrobe and pajamas. "Bayard!" Daphne gasped as she sprang for him. "What on earth brought you home so soon?"

"Money gave out," he laughed. "Hello, Clay," he said as he put forth his hand. "Mother tells me

Opportunities of Western Canada Becoming Known.

Fertile Soil on Which Can Be Produced Record Crops Offered to Settlers at Prices Attractive to Farm Seekers.

In the early months of 1919 there was a demand for farm lands in Western Canada, the greatest that has ever been in the history of the country. This despite the fact that farm lands have increased in price, as the value of the farm product has increased and the virility and productive value of Western Canada farm lands have come more and more into evidence. Farming there is no longer an experiment. Good crops can be grown in all localities, some probably a little more favorable than others, but on the whole a good-more than good-general average. Land elsewhere on the continent is used for the developing of one hundred and twenty dollar steers, thirty-five dollar hogs, two dollar and twenty cent wheat and eighty-five cent oats, and its price is anywhere from one hundred and fifty to three hundred dollars an acre. Western Canada land sells at from twenty to forty dollars an acre, and the farm cultivating it gets one hundred and twenty-five dollars for his steer, thirtyfive dollars for his hog, two dollars and twenty cents for his wheat, and eighty-five cents for his oats. And h can grow corn, too, but Western Can ada is saying no more about it that North Dakota did fifteen years ago when it was an experiment there, and see what North Dakota is doing to day. The prediction is that in less than a decade corn will be grown suc cessfully in all parts of Western Canada. It is, therefore, easy to account for the increased demand for West ern Canada lands. "Certainly, sir."

He led the way, beckoning waiters and omnibuses and snapping his fingers.

Clay ordered a supper as chastely perfect as a sonnet. It showed that he had both native ability and education in the art of ordering a meal. He impressed even the head waiter, and that is a triumph. That was Clav's purpose. Also he wanted to preserve his self-respect and the waiter's attention in the face of the supper that was being ordered at the next table. That was well ordered, too, but it was not a sonnet: it was a rhapsody. It was ordered by a man whose guests had not yet arrived. When Clay had dispatched his waiter he whispered to Daphne:

"See that fellow. That's Thomas Varick Duane, one of the wellestknown bachelors in New York. He was crazy about Leila." "Not Bayard's Lella !"

"Yes. That's really why Bayard got married so quick. He was afraid Tom Duane would steal her. Nice enough fellow, but too much money!"

Daphne looked at the big man, and caught him looking at her with a favorable appraisal. She stared him down with a cold self-possession of the American girl who will neither flirt nor flinch. Duane yielded and turned his eyes to Clay, recognized him, and nodded.

"Hello, Wimburn! H'ah ya?" "Feeling fairly snappy," said Clay.

Duane showed a willingness to come over and be presented, but Clay kept him off with a look like a pair of pushing hands.

Duane loitered about, waiting for his guests. He looked lonely. Daphne felt a mixture of charity and snobbery in her heart. She whispered to Clay:

"Invite the poor fellow over here till his guests come. I'm dying to be able to tell the people at home that I met the great Duane."

Again Clay shook his head.

The sight of Leila's anguish over the breakfast obsequies of the honeymoon chilled Daphne's hope of marriage bliss like a frost ravening among peach blossoms.

Great Industry May Be Born as Result of Experiments Being Made.

Decrease of Supply of Petroleum and Products and Ever Increasing Demand Makes Substitution Necessary for Years.

Salt Lake City, Utah .- Oil shale must be looked to, probably for years to come, to supply increasing demands for and lessened supply of petroleum and its products. Salt Lake City seems to be the natural center for experinentation and exploitation of an industry which is not yet born in this country, although manufacture of oil from shale has been conducted on a commercial basis in Scotland for 60 years. In Colorado, Utah and Nevada, east, west and south of Salt Lake City, are shale deposits of unknown magnitude. and of richness surpassing that of his old and none too clean blue jump- shales known elsewhere. Oil shale is a common and general term for sev-

He landed two men in ail and lost his tail feathers, all beause he insisted on speaking German. Dominico Garerane, Italian, and Mathew Grasseponie, French, were unting near the Rathbone residence. suddenly they heard a stream of disoyal German, such as "Hoch!" 'Raus!" and "Gott mit uns!" issuing rom a bush. Garerane and Grasseoonie looked at each other. Then by a ommon impulse they clutched their hotguns and advanced on Pluto.

There was a roar of artillery. Pluto and his tail feathers parted company. a game warden, J. L. Bundock, who was in the vicinity, rushed to the spot. He found two indignant hunters, a denuded parrot babbling German and some tame pheasants. The hunters said they were after Pluto, but the warden looked askance at the pheasints and brought the men to the city. The parrot, according to Mrs. Rathbone, was the gift of a German sea captain and learned the language while on a sailing vessel.

reduction will be necessary in the utilization of these various forms of gum-containing rock. A greater part of all experimentation by competent persons in the United States has oc curred in the chemical laboratory of the University of Utah, in Salt Lake City. Here Dr. W. D. Bonner, consulting chemist to the bureau of mines, department of the interior, in charge of laboratory investigation, is the authority. Dr. Quinn is his assistant. A fact which has been widely heralded, but which is pronounced of no importance by the chemists, is that a small shale reduction plant was built at the university about a year ago. It is not used now, nor did its use ever have any special significance. To be even more plain, the fact of this small retort having been built at the university was seized upon by some promoters of "shale oil" companies and considerable advertising matter has been circulated regarding an "industry" which does not exist. The proper method of reduction (destructive distillation is the chemical term) of oil shales of the United States has not been determined. #### THE SPOT THAT GOD LOVES BEST

The west begins where the east leaves off, And no man knows the spot The starting-point of the sunny south Is the place where the north is not ;

We call it east where the welcome sun First tints the rosy skies: We call it west where the shadows fade When the evening twilight dies;

We call it north where the snowdrifts pile, When the wintry blizzards blow; We call it south where the organe blooms And the sweet magnolias grow;

We will travel east, we will wander west To the north or south we'll roam; If we're still in sight of the Stars and Stripes The spot is home, sweet home.

For the starry banner shall float aloft From the calm Pacific shores To the rugged rocks of the far-off shores, Where the broad Altantic roars.

There is no north and there is no south, And we know no east, no west, For any oldplace in he U. S. A. Is the spot that God loves best.
