They went first to the gallery of a photographer whose show-case had displayed some strong and veracious prices staggered Daphne and she protested, but he answered dolefully:

"I'd give a thousand dollars for one photograph of my father."

That settled it. After the sitting Daphne and her father proceeded to the station. She stopped at the gate because she had neither a ticket for the train nor a platform pass from the station master.

She watched him dwindling down the long platform. He was a mere manikin when he reached his place and waved to her before he vanished through the magic door of the train.

She waved to him with her handkerchief, and when he was gone she buried her eyes in it. Her partings with her father had marked epochs in her life. She wondered what destiny would do to her between now and the next one. She felt forlorn, afraid for his life on the train, afraid for her soul in the perils before it, and so sorry for him and for herself that she could not help boo-hooing a little.

Destiny did not keep her waiting, for while she was strangling her sobs as best she could she heard a voice over her shoulder. It said:

"Aha, gel, at last I have you in me power."

I refused to call on you again." "I'm awfully sor-ry," she said, and her voice broke.

"Sorry" was a dangerous word for her at that moment, and her sobs were beginning again, when he made a vigorous effort to talk them down.

The crowds in the station were too well preoccupied with their own errands to notice a girl crying, and to the gateman farewell tears were no luxury.

Duane tried the best he could to help her. He was saying: "And now I suppose I've got to miss my train and my

He had not Her street car fares had totaled sixty yet taken the bait for the De Maupascents, her lunches a dollar and a balf; she had worn her costumes at the sleeves and damaged them with a few ink spots, and her shoes were taking on a shabby nap.

It was not encouraging.

At Daphne's left elbow was a large, fat girl whose pen rolle? off large, fat letters. She talked all the time about nothing of importance, laughed and fidgeted and asked questions that had come from anything but a large, fat head.

Her name was Maria Pribik. She was a Bohemian of the second generation; but she was dyed in the wool with New Yorkishness. She was an incessant optimist and kept reminding everybody to "cheer up, goils, the woisst might be woisser yet."

Daphne's luck did not last long. The receivers found that the percentage of inquiries following upon the advertisng and circularizing campaigns was hardly paying the postage. People were either too poor to buy books or too busy with the molten history pouring from the caldrons of Europe. Yesterday's paper was ancient history enough.

The receivers closed down the usiness abruptly on a Saturday and instructed the manager to announce more work at present. Daphne's heart stopped. Here she was again, learning again the dreadful significance of "out of a job"-what the theatrical people called "at liberty."

Miss Pribik looked at Daphne and noted her gloom. "Say, kid, listen here. Whyn't choo come with me? I can land you a job at the Lar de Lucks. Guy name of Goist is the boss and he'll always gimme a job or any lady friend. He's kind of rough, but what's the diff? His money buys fust as much as anybody's. We better beat it over there ahead this bunch."

Daphne murmured her hasty thanks and they left at once. Miss Pribik led the way to a huge building full of "Pants Makers," "Nightshirt Makers," "Waist Makers," and publishers of calendars, favors and subscription books. She asked for Mr. Gerst, saw him, beckoned him over, and hailed him with bravado:

"Well, Mist' Goist, here I am, back to the mines. This is me friend Kip. I want you should give her a job-and Daphne faced Mr. Gerst's inspection without visible flinching, though she was uneasy within. Gerst was a large, flamboyant brute with eyes that seemed less to receive light than to send forth vision. He had an inquisitive and stripping gaze. But Daphne must endure it. After ransacking Daphne with his eyes, he grunted: "You look pretty good to me, kiddo. You can begin Monday."

"Thanks," said Daphne, humbly, "I'm comin', too," said Miss Pribik. "All right," said Gerst. "It's time you did. We'll take some of that beef off you." And he playfully pinched her arm. Adroitly evading his pincers, Miss Pribik led the way out, and Daphne trailed her oustide. Daphne loathed and feared the man already. He stood like a glowering menace in the path ahead of her.

Monday morning at eight Daphne reported for work with the L'Art de Luxe Publishing society, pronounced by its own people (who ought to know) "Lar de Lucks."

This firm was engaged in the pe culiarly Anglo-Saxon business of grazing the censorship as closely as possible. It printed everything that it dared to print under the whimsically the authorities it turned the white side of a banner of culture claiming to put in the hands of the people the noblest works of foreign genius and defying any but an impure mind to other side of the banner was purple telung to it. the afternoon went in an endless re- prurient innuendo that the books were purgation. Vice has its hypocritical cant no less than religion.

One day, toward the end of her first week, she was startled to find before her a card bearing the legend "Duane, Thomas." His address was given, and sant. Daphne pondered his card and his taste. She was shaken from her pensive mood by the sudden commotion of all the women. All eyes had seen the minute and the hour hands in conjunction at XII. Names were left off in the middle; pens fell from poised hands.

Daphne found herself alone. She was glad of the quiet and the solitude, while it lasted-which was not long, for Gerst came back unexpectedly early.

His eye met Daphne's. He started toward her, and then, seeing that she glanced away, went on to his desk. He stood there manifestly irresolute a moment. He glanced at Daphne again, at the fire escapes, at the empty room. Then he went to the first of the tables and with labored carelessness inspected the work of the absentee. He drifted along the aisle toward Daphne, throwing her now and then an interrogative smile that filled her with a fierce anxiety.

She knew his reputation. She had seen his vulgar scuffles with some of the girls, had heard his odious words. She was convinced that he was about to pay her the horrible compliment of his attention.

Her heart began to flutter with fear and wrath. She felt that if he spoke to her she would scream: if he put his hand on her shoulder or her chair she would kill him, with a pair of scissors or the knife with which she scraped off blots. . . . No, she must not kill him. But she would have to strike him on the mouth.

But that meant instant dismissal at the very least. He might smash his fist into her face or her breast or knock her to the floor with the back of his hand. She had seen too much of life recently to cherish longer the pretty myth that the poor are good to the poor. She had seen how shabby women fared with street car conductors and subway guards. She had seen her own prestige dwindle as her clothes lost freshness.

But the violence of Gerst's resentment would be a detail. The horror was the mere thought of his touch. She rose quickly and tried to reach the fire escape. That was the solution-to join the crowd. But Gerst filled the aisle. She sidled past two tables into the next aisle. He laughed and sidled across to the same aisle. She tried to hasten by. He put his arms out and snickered: "What's the rush, girlie? Nobody hollered 'Fire!' " "Let me pass, please," she mumbled. "Wait ta minute, wait ta minute, What 'd you say if I was to ast you to go to a show tanight, huh? What'd you say?"

"Thank you. I have another- I couldn't." "S'mother eve, then? Or to a dance, huh?"

"Thank you, I'm afraid I can't." "Why not? Come on! Why not? Ain't I got class enough for you?"

"Oh yes, but- Please, let me by." He stared at her, and his hands twitched, and his lips. His eyes ran over her face and her bosom as if she were a forbidden text. She was trying to remember what Duane had told her about the way to quell a man. With great difficulty and in all trepidation she parroted her old formula.

"Mr. Gerst, you don't have to flirt with me. I don't expect it, and I don't like it, so please let me go." He stared at her, trying to understand her amazing foreign language. Then he sniffed with amused unbelief, dropped his hands, and stood aside. Daphne could hardly believe her eyes. The charm had worked the third time! She darted forward to get away before the spell was broken. As she passed him-whether he suddenly changed his mind or had only pretended to acquiesce-he enveloped her in his arms.

She almost swooned in the onset of fear and the suffocation of his embrace. Then she fought him, striking scratching, writhing. He crowded her against the nearest table and tried to reach her lips across her left elbow. Her outflung right hand struck against an inkwell, recognized it as a weapon of a sort, and, clutching it, swept it up and emptied it into his face. His satyric leer vanished in a black splash. His hands went to his drenched eyes. Daphne, released. dropped the inkwell and fled to the ocker-room while he stamped about. howling like the blinded Cyclops. Daphne did not stay to taunt him nor to demand her wages. She caught a glimpse of faces at the fire-escape windows, but, hugging her hat and coat, she made good her escape. She knew what she was escaping from, but not what to.

Agriculturists on This Side o Water Are Called on to Save World From Starvation-Wei ern Canada's Great Opportunity.

Considerable discussion is t place in the papers as to the ar of money that the United States have to pay for its guarantee of price of wheat for 1919. The in tions at present are that the tree will not be affected. Instead of v going down the outlook now is th will go considerably above the ent guarantee. It is not only the ion of a man of the experience of Hoover that gives weight to thi sumption, but we have the glaring that there will be more mouths to for this year, and the next year o than there were in 1918, and the q tity of food will be little, if greater.

The assumption is based on the that Germany, Austria and Pol and others of the fighting nations, able to secure food enough in the two or three years, and still unabl supply it within themselves, will quire to be fed. The food can now taken to them. For some time the diers will require to be fed; Italy have its demands. There will be ditional shipping, some of which be needed for requirements of In but it will also make ocean trans easier. Mr. Hoover says there will be surplus from the 1918 crop to ca over into 1919. Even under nort conditions this would be a sufficien precarious situation, for there na rally never is any possible guarant that one or more of the great whe producing countries in Europe n not experience a crop failure. Une present conditions, however, such la of surplus is distinctly dangerous, f the very European nations upon whi that continent could normally rely t the great bulk of its wheat, that is say Russia, Bulgaria, Serbia and Ro mania, will for obvious reasons be u able to supply their own demands the coming year. In addition to th Mr. Hoover points out that famine India will call for a substantial pr portion of the Australian surplus, a that, moreover, a considerable part the Australian supply, which for la that country, has spoiled.

And the demand is by no me only for wheat. Mr. Hoover e mated that he would be able to fu nish Germany 180,000 tons of gra during the month of April. But it asserted that the German stocks of kinds of grain and of potatoes a vegetables will surely be exhaust before June.

Mr. Hoover has also expressed belief that it is questionable wheth under the circumstances food enou can be supplied to tide Germany ov until the next harvest.

It is quite clear from all this th the world is going to depend m than ever upon this continent to ke the wolf from the door until the w devastated and anarchy-ridden cou tries in Europe can once again fe themselves. Already we read of protests of British soldiers occupying Germany against allowing Germany women and children to perish of sta vation as they are beginning to do. these conditions prevail in German what must be the state of affairs els where in Europe among nations which have fought with us during the la four years?

To sum up, it may be stated w confidence that the demand for eve product of the farm will be unprec dented, and that the agriculturist w receive the highest prices on reco for all that he has to sell.

The duty of Canada, therefore, is keep up its work of assisting in st plying the need. It can do so. It has the land available at low prices; t market is there; railroad facilities a good, the climate and the soil produ the best wheat in the world. Weste Canada offers the opportunity and th unceasing flow of farmers into the country indicates the fact that advan tage is being taken of it.-Advertise

OBSTACLES MET BY AGENTS

Extension Workers Exercise Patience and Tact in Overcoming Much Resistance.

(Prepared by the United States Depart-ment of Agriculture.) In boys' and girls' club work prejudice and preconceived opinion, founded on lack of knowledge or misrepresentation, are two obstacles that county agents and demonstrators meet every day. To surmount them is not the easiest task; to convert opposition into hearty support is an achievement calling for unusual patience and tact. That both of these virtues are possessed in large measure by, a majority of the extension workers may be adduced from the reports constantly coming to that bureau. A farmer in Maryland had no use for "book farming." He upbraided his son, a member of a boys' club, for following the agent's instructions in seedcorn selection. He called the test for 100 per cent germination "foolishness," and walked off in utter disgust. The boy, encouraged by his instructor, kept at it, demonstrated the proposition, grew the selected seed, and got a typical high-grade crop, a decided contrast to dad's. That settled it. The "fool-enthusiast. At the very outset a woman demonstrator in a northern county of Texas village girl, anxious to become a mem- New York Sun. ber of a boys and girls' club. Today that little girl is the leading member of a club. During the past season her garden was such a success that she will have a bigger one this year, and the co-operation of her parents. And, according to them, "any time that agent comes this way she'll find welcome on the door."

One more instance, the three covering some of the important phases of agent work in the South: The colored farmers of a certain county in a far Southern state used to pay no attention to crop rotation or diversification. They grew the same crops in the same fields, only such produce as suited their particular whim. Nor did they see any necessity for home sanitation. They didn't know anything about the necessity for either, and cared less. As for the county agent, he was an intruder. They have different ideas today. Not only do they grow the right crops, but also they take pride in the appearance of their fields and buildings. There is a friendly rivalry among them now, and the one-time intruding agent is besought to set them right in all their problems. Thus opposition can be overcome today more than ever through the proper approach, the stick-to-it attitude, and the tact of the county and field agents and demonstrators of the extension service.

A. Brashears in the

Here on the banks of Cataract creek. which flows northward to cascade into the torrents of the Grand Canyon, these aborigines and their forebears have lived for ten centuries with seldom a glimpse of the territory lying beyond the canyon top. The chief of the tribe counts the visits of the white man on the fingers of one hand. Anthropologists have poked into the utmost corners of the earth, from pole to pole; have studied and classified the various tribes of Indians for years, while in some remarkable manner the Havasupai, living within our very borders, have escaped notice. These Indians-there now are only 175 in the tribe-constitute the only purely aboriginal and primitive community in the United States today. They have lived like hermits. The customs and machines, the social advances of the outside world have failed to penetrate the fastness of their realm. Not Easy to Visit Them.

To reach their home, a 50-mile ride over a waterless tract is necessary. When the brink of the chasm is reached the drop of 3,000 feet has to be made mostly on foot along a hardly perceptible trail. Only a small part of the hazardous twelve-mile descent can be made mounted. One must literally cling to the walls of the canyon. In no place is the trail wider than three feet and the animals rub their sides raw through scraping along the side of the canyon. In one place the two walls come together and form a corner. Here it is necessary to make a 500-foot drop by zigzagging from wall to wall. This is the most perilous section of the journey for the trail is nothing more than a series of steps. The animals must tump from one to the other. As the men on foot must walk in front their lives are constantly endangered. Should a pack animal miss its footing the man in front would be knocked to oblivion. Today the Havasupai subsist on a marvelously cultivated tract two and one-quarter miles long and about onequarter of a mile wide. They depend chiefly on agriculture for their support, but in former days they descended far south down their valley in quest of deer, antelope and bear. The camps are situated along the east side of the creek, which irrigates the land so well that enough food is harvested off this small section of one and one-half square miles to supply them from season to season.

Some of Their Customs.

Mr. Spier classifies the tribe as "intermediary," since their culture embraces traits peculiar to the four adjacent tribes of the southwest area. "In general characteristics," he said, "they lean more toward the Pueblos of northern Mexico. The custom that prevalls among the Pueblos-that of the men and women working together in the field-also exists among the Supal. "The men also make clothing out of buckskin, a domestic trait characteristic of the Pueblos. The influence of the other adjacent tribes, while slight, may be seen in the construction of various types of huts and tepees. The Havasupai build four different types. There is a log and mud hut common if he owns a large or small flock, will among the Navajos; the conical thatched tepee built to a great extent among the Mohaves and the square thatched but of the Plateau Indians. "Among the American Indians," he continued, "the nomadic and warlike higher social development."

HE recent discovery by scien- | traits predominate, but the Havasupai tists of a lost tribe of Ameri- are unique in this respect. They are peaceably inclined and happy in the contemplation of their own works. Expert Corn Growers.

The Havasupai live in camps during the summer months along the creek :n the midst of their farms. They are expert in raising corn crops. The deep canyon bed, irrigated by the cataract, is an oasis in the arid desert which surrounds the canyon. Corn, beans, squash and fruit are raised in abundance and the peaches are especially delicious, according to Mr. Spier. The nearby mountains abound in sheep, deer, antelope and wild turkeys, so there is no lack of fresh meat.

In winter the tribe takes to the ledges and caves on the mountain side high above the danger levels. Cataract creek always overflows during the rainy season and inundates the land. "Here," said Mr. Spier, "I found some most interesting caves, unquestionably carved out of the walls by a prehistoric race. I found some fragmentary pottery in various places which supported my theory. "These caves," he continued, "serve as excellent shelters, and here each family builds its storehouse for preserving its grain and meat. These are onstructed out of mud, baked hard and then sealed."

Native Turkish Bath.

The chief diversion among the males is to foregather about the various sweat lodges to gossip and discuss affairs of the tribe. The sweat lodge is their Turkish bath. A bed of straw is laid down and a covering placed containing red-hot rocks are places .... side and water is then poured over them, producing a cloud of steam. The covering holds the steam inside and as soon as the sweating process is deemed to have progressed sufficiently the bather jumps out for a "shock" in the icy waters of the cataract. As each man finishes his bath he joins the circle, all in breechclouts, for the discussion of tribal affairs. The women do not devote all of their afternoons to domestic pursuits. They have a passion for gambling, Mr. Spier says, and for several hours after the day's toil in the fields they congregate and play at dice. The game is somewhat like the American game of craps, although four dice are used, fashioned out of goat's horn. Today one never finds American Indians using anything but matches to light their fires. The Havasupai still use primitive fire drills. Up to 1910 the stone knife was used exclusively. Lately some modern implements have filtered in through the government agent. They have some horses and a small number of cattle with which they are having splendid success.

No Marriage Ceremony. Marriage in the canyon is without ceremony. The bride's consent having been won in the orthodox fashion the couple merely live together without further ado. The brave must make payment, however, to the bride's parents, and the customary form is to give his service in the fields of his "in-laws" until the first child has been born. This method of payment is strictly enforced. There is no divorce recognized among the Havasupai.

Of the two chiefs Mr. Spier said: They have absolutely no prerogatives in the matter of power over the tribe. The tribe as a whole works well together and the members feel a certain definite social consciousness. It is the business of the chiefs to act as mediators when matters need adjustment, but whatever laws exist are enforced through public opinion. The chiefs are charged with advising the young women and instructing the youths growing into manhood. There is no capital punishment, and instead of the death penalty for murder the offend ing party must make a payment in land or goods. 'egitimacy does not exist among them. Every child that is born has a recognized father and no odium attaches to offspring, as happens so frequently among people of

PLANT MORE CHERRY TREES

Good Reasons for Urging Increased Cultivation of Useful and Pretty Bearers of Fruit.

Although in at least two states Pennsylvania and Ohio, there are more than 1,000,000 cherry trees and nearly as many in several other states, the commercial interests are relatively small compared with several other fruits in which the number of trees is considerably less.

In the south the summers are too long and hot, as a rule, for cherries to do well, and they do their best at the higher altitudes.

In their endurance of low temperatures sour cherries compare favorably with apples. Sweet cherries are less hardy than sour sorts. Their endurance of cold corresponds more nearly to that of the peach. Cherries are sensitive to a poorly drained soil. Clay soils, extremely retentive of moisture, give the poorest results, and the lighter, better drained soils the best. Soils that dry out excessively are also unsatisfactory. Moderately productive soils give better results than those which represent either extreme in fertility. Cherries blossom comparatively early, the sweet sorts earlier in most cases than the sour varieties; therefore sites that are subject to spring frosts during the usual blossoming period should be avoided.

highest in the center. This will soon pack down into a hard surface that will always be dry.

Many Factors in Tree Planting. In places the trees along the roadside form screens so as to break up the long stretches of views and allow openings here and there which frame and make more attractive the roadside scenery. Again, certain varieties of trees are more suitable for highway planting than others, according to the use to which they will be put. The factor of planting for the protection afforded the pavement through shade during the hot summer months, thereby adding many years to its life, and the assistance given by the proper planting of shrubs and trees in keeping the drifting snow from the roadside during the winter season should be likewise considered.

Business and Residential Streets. Keeping business off residential streets means keeping it on business streets. Haphazard development hurts business property as much as it does residence property. The sporadic store invading quiet home streets not only demoralizes residential values: in decentralizing the shopping district it also disintegrates business values.

AN AWAKENING By JULIA A. ROBINSON.

THE REPORT OF THE PROPERTY OF THE PARTY OF T

Sally came down to breakfast at 11 o'clock. That was her usual time. She was fond of lying abed mornings-what did it matter? Why rise early? There was nothing to do before night; just sitting around, going down town shopping, or to the park. Sally yawned. "The coffee's cold,"

"I'm sorry, miss," answered Jane. "I tried to keep it hot. Is the omelet all right?' "I don't care for omelet, take it

She pushed back her plate, rose and went into the drawing room, where her mother, in an easy chair, perused the latest novel, and her sister gazed aimlessly into the street.

"I thought you were never coming," fretted Maude, turning to her sister. "Well, I'm here, but I wish I'd stayed abed. It's stupid sitting round waiting for something to happen."

"I've been up half an hour," Maude boasted. "What's on for tonight?" "It's the dance at Kate Osborne's, a great affair, but I'm getting bored with

"Oh, I remember. I shall wear my . pink gauze. There! I forgot to order slippers. Mamma, will you phone for my slippers?"

Her mother did not look up from her story, but answered absently: "Don't bother me. What a chatter you make!

Do be quiet." Sally had but recently graduated

"I shall stay where I am," declared Sally from the comfort of her cushions; "you can go if you wish."

"You're always selfish!" retorted Maude. "You know papa won't let me go alone."

Hazel Gordon was president of the young people's Red Cross club. She had organized a circle of girls, and they were working enthusiasticallyknitting, sewing, folding surgical dressings, taking work home, doing their utmost for the soldiers at war. To them life meant helping others. Life was earnest; they had a purpose.

"Can't we get some new members?" asked Hazel. They were gathered in her cozy parlor, sewing, their voices

"There's Maude and Sally Stimson; if we could only get them," suggested OFFICE IN CHRISTOPHER BUILDING Ida Black; "but I wouldn't dare ask them.

"Why not?" asked Hazel, her eyes flashing.

"They've got too much money," said wouldn't think they could work," added Nina Baker. "If 'twas "But, for the soldiers!" flashed Ha-"We need them, and they need

"You won't get them." predicted Agnes Snow, "They'd feel above us, and they never work."

"It's time they did," asserted Hazel. "We'll see." Hazel did get them. She called at the Stimson mansion, walked lightly up the marble steps and rang the bell, and her heart did not falter. In glowing words she explained her mission. "We're working for the soldiers," she enthused, "doing the little that we can to help, and we need you. Will you join us? We'd so love to have you with us!" "Why, I never sewed in my life," confessed Sally. "I don't know how, and I can't knit.'

"I'll teach you." smiled Hazel; 'you'll find it quite easy, and we have good times, too." Sally became interested. It was a new idea to be needed. "It'll be something to do-I for one will join. What do you say, Maude?"

Maude, though the elder, was led by her stronger sister, and agreed to go "fun of the thing." These girls had never thought before there was need for their help in the world. Great was the astonishment at the club when Hazel appeared with the new members, and they gave them a Sally soon learned By knowing the cause, a disease and worked till never felt before. She was good and knew I could do so much.' "I pricked my fingers," laughed Sally; "but we'll soon learn. Those girls must have thought us green work for the soldiers. They even gave up dances and the theaters that they might have more time for work; besides, something bigger had come into their lives and thoughts.

Even the mother noticed the differ ence in her daughters. "You're knitting all the time, just like my grandmother," she said.

"Isn't it better than doing nothing, mamma?" asked the sensible Sally. "I never was so happy in my life! I'm always going to work for somebody else, and not live a selfish life any

FIRM FOUNDATION FOR ROADS

Aim to Distribute Pressure Due to Wheels Concentrated on Surface-Look to Future.

(Prepared by the United States Depart-ment of Agriculture.)

The purposes of a foundation are to aid in distributing the pressure due to wheel loads concentrated on the road surface, so that the intensity of pressure on the subgrade will not exceed a safe unit-bearing power, and also to prevent, if possible, the crust of the road from being disturbed by the upward pressure of the subgrade due to the action of frost, ground water, or other disturbing influence. In the case of a pavement consisting of comparatively small blocks, such as vitrified brick, bonded to each other very slightly or not at all, an entire wheel load might be concentrated on only a few square inches of foundation, in which case it would be necessary for the foundation to take care of practically the entire distribution of the load. On the other hand, a monolithic pavement, in which the individual units are well bonded together, might distribute the wheel loads to obviate all necessity tion, and if adequate drainage were

The heaviest vehicle that ordinarily has passed over a public highway heretofore is the 15-ton traction engine. Such engines are so designed that the rear axle carries about twothirds of the total weight, which arrangement gives a concentrated pressure on the road surface of about five tons under each rear wheel. The use of much heavier equipment is in sight, however, and unless some regulations be passed to prohibit it, the occurrence of ten-ton, or even heavier motortrucks, may become common on highways adjacent to large cities or between large centers that are only a few miles apart.

In assuming the maximum wheel load for any particular road a reasonable allowance should be made for future increase. Since motortrucks have come into use there has been a constant tendency to increase both their rates of speed and the loads they carry, and it is probable that this tendency will continue, Furthermore, many roads not now subjected to motortruck traffic will attract such traffic after they are improved, and this possibility always should be considered. Increase in the volume of traffic also may be an important factor

AERIAL SERVICE FOR PASSEN GERS, MAIL AND MERCHANDISE.

BIRDMEN MEET NEXT MONTH

Big Convention of Pan-American Aeronauts Will Stimulate Eelistments in the U. S. Air Service.

Atlantic City, New Jersey, will be the Mecca for a large gathering of American men, and representatives of foreign countries, who will be attracted by the first Pan-American Aeronautics Convention, which meets there in May.

Captain Charles J. Glidden, of the U. S. Air Service, Military Aeronautics, now stationed in the administrative department of the United States Flying School, Southerfield, Georgia

"The Pan - American Aeronautics Convention and exhibition to be held at Atlantic City during the month of May will bring to the attention of the American people the wonderful progress of aviation. The work of aircraft during the war establishes its practicability for commercial uses and insures the creation in this country of who took my nuts. You like to get a complete aerial service, connecting nuts and keep them so when you are all cities and towns for the transportation of persons, mail and merchandise.

"Before the close of 1920 I confidently predict this service will be in full operation, with extensions to all countries on this hemisphere. In the United States trunk lines will be established across the country which will place every city and town within six hours from some twenty-four distributing points. Once created and in operation our extensive coast line could be put under complete protection from any possible invasion. Thousands of college trained aviators in and out of the service are now waiting to join in the operation of an serial

"The government calls for fifteen thousand men to enlist in air service for one or three years' time. This is bound to receive a quick response, as here is an opportunity for men to be immediately assigned to duty in the service and of the number who enlist those who pass certain examinations will be given flying and ballcon piloting instruction. This liberal offer is equivalent to a one or three years' college course in aeronautics, and one may become expert in all branches of aviation, and if qualified a non-commissioned or even a commissioned officer. In addition to regular pay, clothing, quarters and rations, extra pay begins with instructions to operate the aircraft. As the number of men wanted is limited to fifteen thousand for the entire country, quick applica tion to the nearest recruiting officer will be necessary before the privilege is withdrawn.

"Everybody directly and indirectly interested in aviation should attend the Atlantic City convention and exhibition in order to keep abreast with the times and become familiar with the development of aircraft for defense and commercial uses and witness the demonstrations of the world's greatest airplane aviators, who will fly, and balloon pilots sail to the Atlantic air port from all over the country."

The great enemy of youthfulness is the drying-up process, and this is why we should not only keep as much as possible with the young, but should enter into their joys, their plays, with zest and enthusiasm. We should romp and play with them, interest ourselves in the things that delight them, instead of pushing children away from us and restraining them all the time, regarding them as a nuisance and a Afghan Origin. Afghan historians date their people's beginnings to King Saul and refer to them as Children of Israel, a theory that may have gained popular acceptance because of the Afghan's Semitic appearance, but it is not generally credited by ethnologists. Afghan literature is rich in poetry, mostly war epics and love lyrics. All but the mountain kafirs are Mohammedan, and they cling to a pagan belief in which are blended faint suggestions of old mythologies and ancient religions .- National Geographic Society.

Mystical Numbers.

Poor puss is as notoriously hard to kill as a weasel, which no doubt gave rise to the popular attribution of nine lives to her. Shakespeare knew of the saying, as witness this dialogue from Romeo and Juliet: "What wouldst thou have with me?" Good king of cats, nothing but one of your nine lives." Nine was an old mystical number-five and three were the othersthree represents a perfect unity; twice three is the perfect dual; thrice three is the perfect plural," says Brewer's Dictionary of Phrase and Fable.

Her pretty brown o per cent instead of nine which eyes flashed and a deep and burning o mas been the regular rate flush spread over her pretty cheeks. SEE, PHONE OR WRITE HIM There were signs in her face and manner of ungovernable temper and irritability, somewhat overcast by a shadow of offended pride.

Evidently something had gone wrong with the spirit of K-, But for Lucy vain society would have sat until doomsday trying to invent a new fad, a new sport or an original style of formality. For Lucy was the clever originator in K- of everything clever, of everything the "vogue," and, if people had looked to the sensibleness of things instead of to the belle Lucy, everything preposterous. But yet Lucy was Lucy, born Lucy and no other, the impetuous, self-willed impulsive. daughter of her mother.

The latter sat unseen by the girl in a silk plush easy chair, nose glasses held slightly aloof and book in hand, her lips slightly parted, as she watched the proceedings, not altogether strange to her. The hat came off with a sharp jerk, and its delicate little frame, given a terrific jab with a hatpin, was slammed forcibly onto the library table. Mrs. Knowlton rustled the leaves of her book slightly, enough to show her presence. Lucy started at the unexpected break of silence, and seeing it was her mother, gave a little frown as if vexed. "Mother." she exploded, "I am tired of doing this little bit of Red Cross work! What are a few bandages? I am going to France as soon as Hannah can pack-tomor-

The next morning was an unpleasant one for the beginning of a long trip. The wind blew in great gusts along

Lucy, after bidding a solemn goodby to her mother, hastened down the steps with a bold, determined air and raised her umbrella. "Ugh! Such horrid weather! But I will soon be away from it-yes, away from everything in this old city. She says I cannot be a Red Cross nurse; well, I will be an ambulance driver, then."

As she murmured to herself she recklessly splashed into puddles, and unaware of it, her stockings and skipt were much spotted with mud. "I'll show them my license if they say anything, and-"

There was a high, wild scream Lucy, in her attempt to keep up her umbrella against the gale, had been rushing along, umbrella forward, and had bumped into somebody's stomach. "I beg pardon!" the girl exclaimed she stepped hurriedly aside.

Her words ended in a little gasp. Then her head went up and she started confusedly to turn and hurry. Her arm, however, was held as in a vise.

"Well, I say, girlie, that was a pretty little jab you just gave me. I thought for a minute some German had me stuck for sure," a low, deep voice said pleasantly, and a pair of laughing eyes looked down into hers.

"I cannot stop one minute. I have to eatch that train, and I-I am going away from here." Lucy breathlessly faltered as she tried to wriggle from his grasp. But he pulled her gently toward a near-by shelter. This was an old but small structure, built years ago, to protect people waiting for cars from the rain and snow. One half was for this purpose and the other half was inhabited by the timekeeper.

"I say, you're a bit obstinate today, little one," laughed Chester Price, as he gently pushed her inside the shel-

"Oh, why did she tell?" whimpered the girl.

"You hate me, don't you, Lucy? Tell me you hate me," he whispered playfully

There was no answer. Lucy's head fingers played nervously with the end

"I did not mean to be cross with you yesterday, sweetheart. I am sorry if I offended you. Will you forgive me?"

Forgive me? Lucy raised her head quickly. "Forgive you? Oh, Chester! I thought you dld not love me; I-" she burst into tears and wept on his breast.

"I do love you, girl," he said, "with all my heart I love you," and their lips met in a kiss. "There never was such
