Vol. 20 MIAMI, Roberts County, TEXAS, Thursday, JUNE 5, 1919. No. 50.

BETTER PROPOSED HIGHWAY

Mr. A. H. Doucette of Pampa, our city Saturday talking highway to our people. Pampa and Pampa propose to promote a highway from Clarendon to Pampa, and from Canadian via Miami, and this road proposition. As Mr. Doucette put the matter, when the money is expended, the Panhandle will get none of it unless they build some designated highways. Pampa is building a bridge across the river north of Allenreed and this highway may come over.

COUNTY CLERK RETURNS FROM FRANCE.

Mr. Craig, Jr., came in Friday of last week from one of those long trips to the Kaiser. Mr. Craig was county clerk of our county until his resignation for the service last July. He resigned and his wife was elected, and elected in the fall.

To the Voters of Gray County

Pampa, Texas, June 3rd, 1919. We understand that there is a report being circulated to the effect that if the county seat should be removed from Le Fers to Pampa, the citizens of Gray County could vote a large amount of bonds immediately for the purpose of building a court house and jail at Pampa notwithstanding that certain citizens of Pampa represented that bonds for a purpose would not be voted for a period of three years. Before the election for the removal of the county seat was ordered a delegation of Pampa citizens, at a meeting held at McLean, pledged themselves not to vote bonds for a period of three years. While the commissioners court of our county could order such an election during a period of three years which could not be prevented by the undersigned, yet, in view of the representations made by the citizens of Pampa and in order that the voters of Gray County may thoroughly understand what we stand for, we, the undersigned voters of Precinct No. 2, Gray County, Texas, hereby pledge our word, our vote and influence to oppose any bond issue which may be proposed within said period of three years for the purpose of building a court house and jail at Pampa. In the event the county seat should be removed to Pampa we further pledge ourselves to provide a suitable building in which to hold court and care for the county records for said period of three years.

THE STATE OF TEXAS

County of Roberts, On May 26, and 27, 1919, The Honorable Commissioners' Court of Roberts County, sat as a Board of Equalization in and for said County, and did then and there receive from Tom Pursley, Tax Assessor of said County, all the renditions offered by him of the property rendered for taxation for the year 1919, and did then and there examine, equalize and approve same with the exception of the following named persons:

Given under my hand and seal of said Court at office in Miami, Texas, this 28th day of May A. D. 1919.

CARD OF THANKS

We wish to sincerely thank our many friends and neighbors for their valuable assistance and kindness shown us during our recent illness and for the many lovely flowers and especially do we desire to thank the thoughtfulness of Ereathas classmates for the lovely Easter flowers. Such kind deeds will long be remembered by us all. May God's richest blessings ever rest upon you.

FOR HER COUNTRY

By STELLA L. COLE.
(Copyright, 1918, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"Hello, Elsie, I was hoping I would see you," said Helen Sands to her friend, Elsie Day, as they met on the street. "We girls are going on a snowshoe hike tomorrow afternoon, and of course we want you to go with us. We are going over through the woods to my camp on W—— pond, have an oyster stew for supper and snowshoe back in the evening."

"Oh, Helen, I'd love to, but I haven't any snowshoes! So I guess I can't go this time."

"Well, I did intend to buy some, but I have changed my mind. I'm sorry not to be able to go, for I know you will have a dandy time, but I really can't."

"You just bet that we are going to have a dandy time! You know what good oyster stews we girls can make, and then the snowshoeing back by moonlight—"

"Oh, Helen, I know it will be just wonderful, and I shall be thinking of you every minute. But now I am in a hurry to get home, so I must say good-by."

Helen Sands and Elsie Day were members of the Local Girls' club, a local organization, the purpose of which was to promote social and outdoor life. Snowshoeing was a feature to be specially taken up this winter, and the party on the morrow was the first of a series planned for the season. The club was for the most part composed of girls of well-to-do families, though a few working girls belonged, Elsie being one of that class. Her position in life made it impossible for her to take part in all the activities, but being a particularly bright and attractive girl, she had become very popular, and her inability to go on the morrow was really a great disappointment to Helen.

"Well, what do you think, girls," said Helen that night, as they were gathered in the clubroom making their final preparations for the party. "Elsie Day isn't going with us tomorrow. Says she hasn't any snowshoes, which I think is funny, for I know that she has been planning on having some for a long time."

"Well, I know, too," spoke up Sadie Reed, "that she has been saving money, a little every week, and she was telling me only the other day that she had enough saved, and that she guessed she would buy the snowshoes soon. She has talked more about snowshoeing and seemed more enthusiastic over it than any other one of us, even those who are veterans at snowshoeing. Perhaps she is getting stung."

"There, there, Sadie," spoke a third girl, "You're getting altogether too personal. If Elsie Day hasn't bought any snowshoes, most likely she has some good reason for it, and it's none of our business what the reason is, either!"

"Well, good, had or indifferent, she hasn't any," replied Helen, "and when I began to tell what a good time we were going to have, she said she was in a hurry to get home, and so rushed off. I really wish she were going tomorrow. It is too bad for her to miss the fun, and we shall miss her, too—she is such jolly good company."

The week of the Red Cross drive had been a busy one and the membership lists were large. Mrs. Sands, Helen's mother, a very popular society lady, always foremost in the activities of the town, was general chairman of the local organization, and on the evening of the closing day of the campaign she sat in her parlor, somewhat tired from the week's labor. "I'm glad it's over," she said to Helen. "I've surely had a busy week, and a hard one, too, it's worth it all just to see the spirit of the people. And what surprised me most was the heartiness with which the laboring class responded. There's Elsie Day, for instance, she took a $5 membership, and that's doing better than many of the wealthy people. She must be earning good money or she couldn't afford to do that, unless, of course, she has made some great sacrifice."

Helen turned abruptly and looked at her mother, her face glowing. "Well, I call that splendid of Elsie," she said. "She is a little brick anyway and always ready to do her part. I wish there were more like her."

The next evening at the club Helen met the girls with a serious face. "Girls," she said, "I know why Elsie Day bought no snowshoes. She has deliberately chosen to go without them so that she could give five dollars to the Red Cross. I'll wager that there isn't a girl among us here who has given that amount, and we wouldn't have had to make any sacrifice either. Now what are we going to do about it?"

"I guess I said more disagreeable things about her than anyone else, so it's up to me to make the first move. I move that this club present Elsie Day with a pair of snowshoes. And I say, girls, let this be a lesson to us. Let us remember that no one truly gives unless the giving is felt. We were a pretty sheepish looking bunch when Helen told us of Elsie's sacrifice. Let's have no reason for being ashamed of ourselves in the future."

Andrew Carnegie's words concerning saving should carry weight. He has tried it and he knows. He says:

"For every dollar you can produce as a result of hard earned savings, midas, in search of a partner, will lend on credit a thousand. It is not capital that men require; it is the man who has proved that he has the business habits that create capital."

When Bayard opened the door Clay swept in like a March gale. He lunged himself at Bayard and clenched his elbows in his hands and roared: "Bayard! Bayard! It's come! We're rich! We're made! Eureka! Uneda! Munitions! Wow! Listen! The other night while I was trawling a job in darkest New Jersey I ran across a little clue, and a little man who told me a little secret. The Germans have been getting ready for this war for years, piling up guns and ammunition for Der Tag. The other countries were caught only half ready. They have stopped the Germans on the Marne, but they've been using their shells at such a rate that the famine is near. Their only hope is to buy supplies of us. They're going to dump enough contracts on this country to furnish about a million dollars to every citizen. Their agents are pussy-footing round to distribute contracts quietly.

"The Bethlehem Steel company has gathered in a big lot of them, and I had a tip that the stock was going to boom; so are a lot of other stocks. I'd sell my right arm for a little cash. But there's no market for detached right arms, so I used mine to sign up a few little contracts for placing contracts, and I've plucked them out and brought them to you." He broke into dance and whirled Bayard off his feet.

Bayard tried to be patient. "That's all very interesting, Clay, but take your delusions down to Bellevue, where they'll put you in the right cell. What can you or I do with ammunition contracts?"

"Accept 'em, you blamed fit! Open up your old shut-up factory and get busy."

"We have no machinery for making ammunition."

"Get it, then, or adapt your machinery! They need millions of each article, for there are millions of men in the field using up what they've got so fast that it's only a matter of weeks before they'll be desperate."

Bayard began to see the scheme—also the obstacles. "But it takes money to make those things. Where will we get the cash for the pay rolls and the raw materials?"

Bayard went aglow with the realization of the opportunity. He began to tremble at the vision of the sudden avalanches of wealth pouring down the bleak mountains of despair. He could hear the roar of the Niagaras of gold.

Daphne and Lella came rushing from concealment. Clay's beatitude was so complete that he forgot his resentment and kissed them both.

Bayard was frantic to be at work. He resolved to telephone the president of his company at once and lay the matter before him. Lella cannily advised Bayard to grasp the whip hand of the situation and keep it. She began to dance about the room like a Miriam celebrating the passage of the Red sea.

"The first thing we'll do," she said, "will be to get my jewelry out of the pawnshop and the second will be to buy some more. And, oh, the dresses and the hats!"

This asserted a sobering effect on Bayard. "No," he announced. "We've gone through hades once because I gambled away my reserves. This time I'm going to get a big reserve before I spend a cent. I'll never risk another ordeal like the one we've been through. No more fractures of the Thirteenth for me!"

Lella laughed.

Bayard went to the telephone to start the wheels of the factory in motion by summoning the president to council. He paused to ask: "He'll want to know who the foreign agent is you are dealing with? Or are there several? Who shall I say?"

"Wetherell," said Clay.

The great Skoda gun that suddenly one day dropped a monster shell in Dunkirk twenty miles off could hardly have caused more stupefaction than the name of Wetherell detonating in that room.

Daphne snatched her hand from Clay's. Bayard sprang up so sharply that he almost threw Lella forward on her face. Instinctively he caught her by the arm and saved her from falling. But instantly he flung her arm from him in a gush of disgust.

Clay gaped at the tableau in bewilderment. He had not dreamed that any of the three had ever heard of Wetherell. He could not imagine the bitterness the name involved.

"Will some kind friend please tell me what all the excitement is about?"

This was not easy. Who wanted to tell Clay that Lella had just been accused of neglecting her husband and her own duties for the society of this very Wetherell? Lella herself was the one that told him.

"Look here, Bydie," Lella cooed and bled, "don't you think you've done enough? You've shown me that you don't trust me and you've ordered Mr. Wetherell never to come near me again. Isn't that enough without peggaring us all for spite? What else is it but cheap, nasty spite?"

"It's a great deal more than spite," Bayard growled. "Do you think I'll accept favors from a man who has been courting you and got caught at it? I'd rather starve!"

"Well, I wouldn't!" Lella averred. "And I'm not going to starve. And I'm not going to let you commit hari-kari on Wetherell's doorstep just to spite him. I tell you again, once for all, there was nothing wrong in Wetherell's behavior, absolutely nothing. It's outrageous that you should accuse me of such horrible things."

So Bayard was coerced into having his life saved by his enemy. It was one thing, however, to consent to deal with Wetherell, and another to devise a tolerable reconciliation.

"Well," Bayard sighed, "beggars can't be choosers. If I'd saved my money I shouldn't have to take Wetherell's money."

Bayard called up the president of his company at the office. His oration made a huge success. Bayard began to smile to himself, to wink at the spectators, and finally to share in the apparent rapture of his distant ear-to-ear.

The end of the matter was that when Bayard left the telephone he was a new man. He had cunningly raised his chief's hopes to the highest degree, yet withheld the name of the English agent. He explained that he intended to take Lella's advice and use his knowledge as a lever for his own advancement and Clay's.

Clay and Bayard sat down to make figures, and the talk grew too technical for the women to endure. After hearing the first music of Bayard and Clay chanting in hundreds of thousands of dollars Daphne stole out unheeded and went up to her own room.

Mr. Chivvis was sitting by a window in mournful idleness. Mrs. Chivvis was stitching away at her embroidery. She was cheerful—for her. She told Daphne that she had found a market for her needlework; the prices were poor but they were real. She advised Daphne to get to work with her.

Daphne had not the courage to say that her brother and her betrothed were about to become plutocrats. She said only that she was very tired. And there is no more exhausting drain on the nerves than their response to unexpected good news. It is more fatiguing than bad. She was surprised and shocked, too, to find how snobbish she was all of a sudden about the petty earnings of a Chivvis.

CHAPTER XXII.

In those days the United States of America suddenly woke to the fact that they could pull themselves out of bankruptcy by helping the benighted states of Europe into it.

There were sudden geysers of fortune and sudden collapses of failure. As in bonanza times, many were ruined, while the few prospered. But Clay and Bayard seemed to touch nothing that did not turn to gold. Bayard had gained immense prestige with his firm because of the huge orders he brought in. He took all the power that was accorded and grasped for more. His most reckless audacities were rewarded with success. He rode a tidal wave and swam with it so well that all his progress seemed to be due to his own power.

Bayard astonished Duffill with the solution of that old account, and with a cash payment for new gowns in celebration of his new glory. He did not forget his own people. He telegraphed his mother a thousand dollars and almost slew her with amazement. He telegraphed his father simply the price of a railroad ticket to New York and a peremptory summons to take the first train east.

When Daphne heard this she had to sit down to keep from falling down. Bayard resuscitated her with a check for a thousand dollars. It meant nothing more to her than abra-cadabra. The whole incredible alteration was a fairy story to her. She made a faint attempt to refuse the gift, but Bayard forced it back into her palm and closed her fingers on it.

She repaid Bayard with kisses till she lost count and embraces till they both lost breath. Then she borrowed from him enough cash to pay her moss-grown bill with the Chivvises.

Daphne could not wait for the elevator. She ran up several flights of stairs, scratched the door with her pained latchkey and flung herself into Mrs. Chivvis' arms and kissed her—even Mrs. Chivvis. Her apology was the money for the bill. She flaunted before her the check bearing the heavenly legend commanding the Fifth Avenue bank to "pay to Daphne Kip or order one thousand and no hundredths dollars" on penalty of incurring the displeasure of "Bayard Kip."

Mrs. Chivvis handled the parchment with reverence, and permitted her husband to touch it. It might have been one of the golden leaves of the sacred Book of Mormon, and she a sealed wife of Brigham himself.

"What are you planning to do with all this?" she said at length.

"I don't know," said Daphne. "What would you suggest?"

"You were planning to go into business. Why not use this as capital?"

"Fine! What business ought I to start—banking? or battleship building, or what?"

"There's embroidery," said Mrs. Chivvis.

Daphne had to guffaw at that. Mrs. Chivvis did not laugh. "I mean it," she urged; "think it over."

"All right, I'll think it over."

The novelty of being rich lost its savor with Lella, and the monotony of being neglected began to prey upon her damask soul. She and Daphne forgot their mutual grievances for their common grievance.

"That's the trouble with these husbands," Lella grumbled. "When they're in bad luck you can't lose 'em, and when they're in good you can't find 'em."

"It's the same with fiancés," said Daphne.

Daphne had the worst of it, for Lella began to wander again, leaving Daphne to the society of Mrs. Chivvis, who kept urging her to invest her dwindling thousand before it was gone. But in the environs of noisy riches the schemes of Mrs. Chivvis demanded such prolonged labor for such minute profit that Daphne remained cold.

She began to resent Clay's neglect morosely. The few attentions he paid her only insulted her; his mind was so far away and his heart was all for his business. He was dazzled by the fierce white light of success, and he spoke to Daphne in a kind of drowsy hypnosis. And he spoke incessantly of the details of his business, or his gambles. He could not see how deaf she was to the very vulgar fractions of his speculations, or the mad arithmetic of his commissions. She yawned in his face when he grew eloquent on the dynamics of wealth, the higher philosophies of finance. And he never knew. He kissed her good-by as if he were kissing a government bond, safe and quiet and all his own.

After one of Clay's visits Mrs. Chivvis found Daphne in a brown study. Mrs. Chivvis explained her own affairs; and Daphne was so exhausted with the sultry problems of love that Mrs. Chivvis' business gossip was completely refreshing.

"I've been down to the Woman's exchange," she said, "trying to sell some of my needlework. They were very nice about it, but it means a terrible amount of labor for a pittance of money. You have to pay them so much a year for the privilege of putting your things on sale there. Then they don't guarantee to return it in good condition, and they don't guarantee to sell it; or if they do they charge you 20 per cent for their end of it.

"I couldn't see any profit in that, so I went to one of the jobbers. He said my style of work brought good prices in the big stores. But they won't pay him much and he'll pay me less.

"I was thinking— There's money in these things and in all sorts of needle things if you have a little capital."

"That's different," said Daphne. "And I've got some capital now. Do you remember suggesting to me once that we might go into business together—you to furnish the brains and I the money?"

"Oh, I didn't put it that way!" "Anyway, it's true. Well, would you?"

"Land's sake! If you're a mind to furnish the money and the ideas and let me count the pennies, I'd like nothing better."

"Great! What could we go into?" "What would you prefer?"

"Oh, any old business that will keep me busy and make a lot of money."

"My husband says that you can't make a lot of money without putting in a lot. That's one reason he has been kept down so. He never could get ahead. That was what we were saving up for—to get a little capital. And then the war came along—and we had to spend our savings. That same war has made your brother so rich that he could give you a small fortune. I don't believe you could do better than to put that into a business."

"Neither do I!" Daphne cried. "Let's!"

CHAPTER XXIII.

Daphne was going to be independent, but she was still all woman when it came to the selection of her special trade. She would be a business woman, but she would do a woman's business.

There were ever so many dainties and exquisites that she wanted to hang in her shop. She was going to have a window! With her name on it! That would be more fun than a limousine with crest on door.

"My Husband Says That You Can't Make a Lot of Money Without Putting in a Lot."

Gradually her scheme enlarged. She would devote her shop to the whole mechanism of the boudoir. "Boudoirwear" was the word that pleased her.

It was in human nature that the partners should quarrel over a name for the baby before the baby was born. They spoke of themselves as "The Firm."

Finally Daphne, claiming the majority of the power, voted in bloc for "Boudoirwear," and claimed the victory. Mrs. Chivvis surrendered with the amendment that "Miss Kip" should be at one side, "Mrs. Chivvis" at the other. She bribed the assembly by promising that a cousin of hers, a young artist living in the Washington Mews, should paint a pretty signboard on a swinging shingle. After many designs had been composed and destroyed they agreed on this legend:

BOUDOIRWEAR
Everything for the Boudoir.
Exquisite Things for Brides.
MISS KIP. MRS. CHIVVIS.

The cousin painted it well and illuminated it with elaborate initials and an allegorical figure of a young lady in Cubist neglect. It had the traditional charm of a tavern board. In fact, their shop was to be a tavern for women in search of sartorial refreshment.

Troubles mustered about them as weeds shove up in a garden faster than they can be plucked out. Expenses undreamed of materialized in swarms. Everything was delayed except the demands for their money. The petty-cash box, like a sort of perverted fairy purse, emptied itself as fast as it was filled.

The petty cash was the least of their dismay. The grand cash was the main problem. They had stitched their fingers full of holes and piled up reams of fabrics, but the total was pathetically tiny.

One thing was instantly demonstrated. They must give up their plan or go into debt. Indeed, they already were in debt.

"We've got to take the plunge," said Daphne. "I'd rather die than go on paying a year's rent for an empty shop."

"I know," Mrs. Chivvis fretted, gnawing her thin lips, "but it's a risk. You'd better ask your brother."

"No!" Daphne stormed. "I'm going to win out on my own. Poor Bayard is too busy to be bothered with my troubles. He doesn't know I have any. And Lella is so busy with her social business that she never asks me what I'm up to."

"But what are we to do?" Mrs. Chivvis wailed. "We can't go on with our stock, and you have no money left, and I hadn't any to start with."

"There's only one thing to do," Daphne answered, with a sphinxlike solemnity. "Buy on credit. It's a case of nothing venture, nothing gain; nothing purchase, nothing sell; nothing borrow, nothing pay. The only way to get out of debt is to go in deeper—like getting a fish hook out of your thumb."

Mrs. Chivvis suffered herself to be persuaded. They visited the wholesalers and the jobbers and were well received, having paid cash before—and, thanks to Mr. Chivvis' suggestion, having been astute enough to demand discount for cash.

And now the motortrucks and the delivery wagons and the cyclecars and the messenger boys began to pour stock into the little shop. It was pleasant not to have to pay for things, though the tips were reaching alarming proportions, and the bundle of bills for future settlement grew and grew.

Mrs. Chivvis made a list of their debts and tried to show it to Daphne, but she stopped her eyes and ears and forbade any discussion that would quench her spirit.

In the swirl of her tasks Daphne almost forgot Clay Winburn. She was too busy to care much. She had no time to mourn. Clay was only one among a myriad regrets, and his affairs could wait. Her business needs could not.

Clay did not come near her. He spent a lot of money trying to get her off his mind. He got a good deal on his conscience, but not Daphne off his mind. He longed for her especially, too, because there came a sudden disaster to his schemes. He was not so rich as he had been. Indeed, he could not be sure that he was rich at all. Any day might smother him with bankruptcy. This fear kept him from Daphne, too.

The bouncing munition stocks that were known as "war babies" had abruptly fallen into a decline. The submarine that torpedoed the Lusitania shattered Wall Street's joy, threw the dread of war into the United States, and set every one to questioning the problem of revenge and its cost.

The slump in the market came at the most unfortunate moment for Bayard and Clay. Any moment of slump, indeed, would have come most untimely for their ventures.

"Kip and Chivvis" were making a picnic window of the shop. Behind the soap-veiled windows they laughed and debated on arrangements and price tags and show cards.

Mr. Chivvis, still out of a job, acted as maid of all work and stevedore, and grew so useful that they had to put him out. And at last the moment arrived when they declared the shop open, "raised the curtain," as Daphne said.

She waited with a stage-fright she had not felt in Reben's theater. There was no lack of temperament in her manner now. But there was no audience, either.

At night Kip and Chivvis locked their doors and went home, discouraged beyond words and dimly weary in the legs, also in the smile-muscles which had been kept at an expectant tension all day long.

Occasional purchases were made, but unimportant. Kip and Chivvis tried to learn what interested people and what did not. They realized that they had far too much of certain things and far too little of others. They attempted to sell the deadwood by marking it down; but it would not move.

"What do the women care for prices?" Daphne railed. "They are spending some man's money, anyway. They pretend that it's to please him, but they know and we know that it's because they hate each other."

One day a great lady who could hardly squeeze through the door creaked into the shop and spilled herself into a startled little chair like a load of coal. Daphne felt that she was about to die on her hands or ask for an ambulance, but she asked instead for an embroidered breakfast gown from the window.

Mrs. Chivvis fetched it and the old ogress clutched it from her, holding it up to her nose as if to sniff it, but really to see it.

"That's it! That's what I've been looking for!" she wheezed. "Have you got much of this sort of thing?" "Oh yes."

"Agh, that's good! My daughter is marrying in some haste—a young imbecile who's going over to France to run an ambulance. I'm Mrs. Romilly."

Mrs. Chivvis waited unperturbed for further identification. Daphne had never heard of Mrs. Romilly, either, but she gasped as if she had been saying her prayers at the shrine of Romilly from childhood and now had been visited by the patron saint, whom she had recognized at once, of course.

"Oh yes, of course."

Mrs. Romilly was conching on; "I've been to several shops, and I was almost in despair until I saw your sign. If you could do a few things in rather a hurry I fancy I could give you a large-ish order. And if the things were at all successful, I could throw quite a little trade your way. You're rather new, aren't you?"

Daphne asserted that the firm was quite new. She brought forward an order pad and stood at attention.

Mrs. Romilly had trussed up a large family of children and several poor relations. She knew what she wanted and what she ought to pay for it and when it should be done. Daphne took down her orders as if the little room were the mere vestibule to an enormous sweatshop where hundreds of sempsters would seize the job and complete it in a jiffy.

DEHORNING OF CATTLE URGED

Use of Caustic, Clippers and Saw to Prevent Growth and Remove Horns is Favored.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Dehorning makes an animal more easily handled.

It renders the animal less dangerous to attendants.

It prevents the goring of other cattle in the feeding lot or in transit to market.

It adds uniformity to the appearance of cattle and thereby adds to their value.

Methods of dehorning cattle have been the subject of unusually interesting demonstrations held by cattle specialists of the United States department of agriculture co-operating with other extension forces. The demonstrators showed how to remove horns with clippers and saws, and with the use of caustic soda and caustic potash to prevent the growth of horns on cattle. Dehorning chutes, for holding cattle while being dehorned, were also constructed by the demonstrators, who emphasized the importance of using them instead of resorting to such practices as throwing the animals with ropes, tying them to fences or similar methods which are unsatisfactory. In a number of cases farmers were permitted to dehorn one or two animals to become familiar with the operation.

The method of dehorning depends in each case upon the age of the cattle, specialists of the department say. Demonstrations with young calves showed how the growth of horns can be prevented by properly applying caustic soda or caustic potash. Older calves and other cattle were dehorned either with the saw or clippers. While clippers remove the horn more quickly and with less pain to the animal, the saw has the advantage of not crushing the horn, especially in the case of old animals whose horns are hard and brittle. Neither does the saw cause as much bleeding, since by severing the blood vessels it causes a clot of blood to form quickly.

NO PLACE FOR SCRUB STOCK

Animal is Wasteful of Feed and Owner's Labor—Pure-Breds Are Worth More to Keep.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Scrub live stock is no longer fit for perpetuation in the United States. A scrub is wasteful of feed and wasteful of its owner's labor. The scrub animal has served its purpose as a connecting link between the old obsolete method of farming and new progressive methods. Thousands of farmers in this country already have discarded scrub stock and are better off because of that decision. Pure-breds are worth more to keep and are worth more to sell. The scrub animal has been useful as a connecting link, but our aim from now on should be to make the scrub extinct and to make it the missing link so far as live stock is concerned. That cannot be done immediately, but it is the goal toward which we should work.

FEEDING SILAGE TO HORSES

Limited Quantity May Be Given if Care is Exercised—Cannot Consume Large Amount.

Silage may be fed to horses in limited quantity if care is exercised, but horse cannot consume the large quantities of roughage used by the steer or cow, and the amount of silage given to horses on full feed must be very limited.

LIVE STOCK NOTES

More beef cattle might be raised profitably on many farms.

Heavy feeding does not always prove proportionate gains.

Cornmeal, boiled potatoes and buttermilk make a splendid ration for the growing pigs.

The first requisites in raising stock is a good feeder, let us say, a judicious feeder, and a well-bred calf.

Graceful Evening Wraps

An evening wrap, to be worn with a variety of evening dresses, may be in a color, but cannot exceed, and rarely equals, a wrap of black satin for elegance and good style. Therefore the evening wrap of black satin is a perennial that comes to bloom in each new season; an institution in the wardrobe.

There are some new weaves in silk, very soft and rich, that have a luster as high as that of satin, and they are competing with it for favor in evening wraps. There is not much choice between them, as they are very much alike in appearance. The new fabrics have the advantage of novelty, while satin has a wonderful record behind it, but whatever the fabric, the styles in wraps made from them are the same.

This season's evening wraps are long and ample, capelike affairs that narrow at the ankles and are as wide as the body. To fulfill their destiny they must be sumptuous looking and graceful. Many of the new models have voluminous collars and some of them have short sleeves.

A beautiful example of the black satin wrap appears in the illustration. It is a loose, short cape with a shawl collar, to which the body of the wrap is joined by an embroidered band. The band is narrow with figures in brilliant colors that remind one of jewels. The same colors are used in the large embroidered disks that adorn the wrap at each side of the front. Even a very youthful bride will be regal looking in a wrap of this kind, especially if she wears a crest of plumes in her hair like Guinevere of old.

Pretty and Practical Negligees

When negligees come up for consideration in the bride's trousseau it is hard to be in the least degree practical. There is so much latitude for this most intimate dress that designers can give free rein to fancy and let it play with the ancient fabrics, the flimsiest laces, crepes and nets, the gayest ribbons and all the lovely little silks and satin flounces that lure them to extravagances. They indulge in many caprices and draw inspiration from all quarters of the world. But there are negligees that are practical as well as pretty and two of them are shown in the picture above.

One of these is a simple, graceful garment, which is very much like the regulation Japanese kimono. But it follows the lines of the figure more closely and has sleeves that are set in, with a point at the top and all seams outlined with a narrow fancy braid. The length of the figure is not broken by a wide sash, as in the Japanese garment, but a narrow girde of satin defines the waistline. This negligee is made of bright-colored satin and cannot be improved upon for a lounging robe.

The negligee at the right of the picture has a plaited skirt which is made either of a thin silk or of crepe georgette, and a coat, in which crepe and plain and printed silks are all combined in a novel way. It has an effect of angel sleeves made by extending the crepe, which forms the short front of the coat, into floating draperies at the back. A silk cord, sometimes put on in loops and sometimes straight, finishes the edges of the crepe and three strands of this cord, are prettily arranged about the neck.

Rhinestone Rage is With Us.

An evening gown of monotone red satin is trimmed with narrow bands of pale blue velvet spangled with small rhinestones that glitter lights in red and white and purple. These bands tell the story of the rhinestone rage in garishing dinner gowns, theater party gowns and wraps—and even the toilets for demure afternoon teas.

Colored Hose in Demand.

Owing to the number of different colors in the new lines of woman's shoes, the demand for colored silk hosiery has been greatly increased.

HOME TOWN HELPS

REFUGE FROM SUDDEN STORM

Easily Constructed Shelter Which Should Have Place on Every Public Picnic Ground.

There is not much pleasure to be had in the woods if no shelter is near when rain threatens at any minute. Many picnics are broken up by showers which last but a few minutes, simply because there is no way to protect the food or to keep dry until the squall passes over, writes C. L. Moller, Fargo, N. D., in Popular Mechanics Magazine. A shelter, such as illustrated, will take the discomfort out of walks and picnics, and will induce people to tempt the weather more often, since they know that protection is within easy reach.

A dead tree, the trunk of which is still quite sound, makes an excellent start for such a shelter. It should be cut off about ten feet from the ground, care being taken to make the saw cuts as even as possible. It may be necessary to erect scaffolding to make this cut properly. After the cut surface is worked smooth, eight rafters are fitted into the top of the trunk. The rafters are 12 feet long, four of them being two by four inch timber, and four, four by four inches. They are supported at the outer end by four by four inch posts, driven into the ground and extending eight feet above it. The four by four inch rafters should be fitted into the log first, the two by four inch being added later. Upon this framework, which forms an octagonal, umbrella-shaped structure, seven-eighths inch boards are nailed to form the roof. This may be covered with shingles or some roofing material.

For greater comfort, a seat built around the trunk may be added, and other seats may be built near it. The whole structure should be finished in a dark, neutral brown, with just a touch of white trimming. If the roof is stained a moss-green, the color scheme will be in harmony during all seasons of the year, with the prevailing colors throughout the surrounding woods.

BUILD TO SUIT HOUSEWIFE

Designers Appreciate Importance of House Construction From the Standpoint of the Women.

The average citizen, supported by the women of his household, is demanding improved home building and this will, of course, influence all future building operations. From now on consideration of the housing question must be primarily from the point of view of the housewife. Consequently, labor-saving devices will be increasingly stressed. Landlords have learned that it can be just as profitable to own well-kept properties as it is to own dilapidated tenements, or vacant lots filled with rubbish or billboards.

The United States Housing corporation, however, has not adopted any Utopian building scheme. It has simply recognized that the efficiency of the workman is seriously depreciated if he and his family must live in unsanitary dwellings. It has been proved that if he is to work to his best capacity he must be not only well housed, but housed adequately and comfortably within reasonable distance from his workshop and at a rental he will be able to pay.

Industrial housing is a comparatively new proposition in America. It is an old one in England, and in many ways it has been adequately solved. The problem there is now largely dealt with from the woman's angle.

Need for City Planning.

The need of city planning and the pushing of public work is greater today than ever before, said Walter D. Moody, managing director of the Chicago plan commission, in an interview with a representative of the Christian Science Monitor. Not only is this true because public work needs to be done to aid in the solution of the labor problem, continued Mr. Moody, but the cities in the United States have grown so rapidly in the last twenty years and the problems of city life are so complex that the new conditions cannot be coped with for the well-being of the people in them without a definite city plan to work to. The problems of parks, better housing, sanitation, simple means for recreation, and facilitation of traffic and the relief of traffic congestion, must be given special attention.

The KITCHEN CABINET

We have a choice, a glorious opportunity. We can take the great, bruised and broken world in our arms as though it were a sick child and mother it back to health again, or we can trade upon its weakness and grow fat upon its need.

COMMON FOODS.

It is the common foods which we serve oftentimes and which should be served in as attractive form as possible. The real genius of a cook is shown in the manner she serves and the attention she gives to the commonplace things.

If the meal as planned (main dish, salad and dessert) does not seem to be sufficiently nourishing, precede it with a hot soup. A thick vegetable puree served with crackers is a meal in itself. If croutons or bread is served the food value is even higher.

Our economical dinners which we are trying to serve to conserve both food and money, must meet the requirements of the family by being hearty and satisfying as well as good to look at.

A few spoonfuls of leftover oatmeal may be stirred into the morning griddle cakes, or muffins, or it may be fried and served with a bit of bacon, making a most tasty breakfast dish. Save time by cooking enough oatmeal for several meals. It may be reheated, adding boiling water and tastes as well as if freshly cooked.

Split Pea Soup.—Soak two cupsful of dried peas over night, drain and cover with two quarts of water, cook slowly with one small chopped onion, three stalks of celery, a few sprigs of parsley, one carrot. Cook two slices of salt pork ten minutes then add to the pea mixture. Add two tablespoonfuls each of flour and butter, and when well cooked add two cupsful of milk; combine with the vegetables and cook five minutes.

Coconut Bread Pudding.—Soak a pint of bread crumbs in a pint of milk, add three tablespoonfuls of coconut and another pint of milk. Sweeten with four tablespoonfuls of sugar, add one-third of a cupful of raisins, a pinch of salt and three beaten eggs. Flavor with lemon rind and pour into a baking dish. Set in hot water and bake slowly until the custard is set.

Three things to wish for—health, friends and a loving spirit. There are three things really worth while—be good, do good and always smile.

GOOD THINGS FROM MILK.

When cornmeal can be procured freshly ground, the dishes made from it will be so superior in flavor that one will ever care for the denatured cornmeal in common use. It will not keep long because of the germ, which quickly turns rancid, but with a small mill one may grind it as one needs the meal.

Cornmeal Cooked in Milk.—Scald four cupsful of milk and gradually sift in three-fourths of a cupful of cornmeal, one and one-half teaspoonfuls of salt, stirring until well mixed. Cover and cook in a double boiler one hour. Serve as a dessert with cream, or with milk as a full meal.

Buttermilk Sherbet.—Dissolve three-fourths of a cupful of sugar in three cupsful of buttermilk, add three-fourths of a cupful of grated pineapple and the juice of two lemons. Freeze as usual.

Buttermilk Jelly.—Dissolve two tablespoonfuls of granulated gelatin in cold water, then set over steam until entirely melted; add the juice of two oranges, the juice of a lemon, and then add three cupsful of buttermilk which has been mixed with three-fourths of a cupful of sugar. Let stand until firm.

Grape Juice Bavarian.—Mix one and one-half tablespoonfuls of gelatin with two tablespoonfuls of water and half a cupful of grape juice. Dissolve one-half cupful of sugar in one cupful of boiling water; bring to the boiling point and pour onto the gelatin mixture. Add three tablespoonfuls of lemon juice; let cool and slightly thicken, then fold in three-fourths of a cupful of sour cream, whipped.

Nellie Maxwell

Acquired Hauteur. "Women are quick to learn," remarked the head waiter of a fashionable restaurant. "How's that, Henri?" "I can point out half a dozen wives of war millionaires who have never been inside of a place like this until a year or two ago, but now they are as lofty and as hard to please as if they had been dining here all their lives."—Birmingham Age-Herald.

Helpful Charlie.

Little 4-year-old Charlie was missing one day. His mother going in search of him finally found him in the library sprinkling a valuable book that was on the table. "Why, my boy, what are you doing spoiling that nice book of dad's?" "I was just wetting it for him because he said it was too awfully dry," he replied.

DADDY'S EVENING FAIRY TALE

By MARY GRAHAM BONNER

SPRING TURKEYS.

"Hello, my children," said Father Turkey, one bright spring day.

"Hello, dad," said the little turkeys.

"You're spring turkeys, aren't you?" asked their father.

"I suppose we are," said one of the turkeys. "It's fine to be any sort of a turkey in this nice world where we get such good things to eat."

"You must be careful not to get your feet wet, you know," said Father Turkey.

"Yes," said the little turkeys, "mother was telling us to be very careful not to get our feet wet for the first four weeks of our lives, for if we do we will never be strong or well turkeys, and if we're careful—well, we will be strong and well turkeys."

The little turkey drew a long breath, for he had said all that without stopping.

Father Turkey laughed and said: "Well, anyway, you know just what you should do. Your mother teaches you well."

"Why did you ask us if we were spring turkeys, dad?" asked the little turkeys. "Didn't you know whether we were or not?"

"Yes, I knew," said their father, "but I wondered if you had heard of the autumn and of Thanksgiving."

"No, mother hasn't told us about Thanksgiving," said the little turkeys.

"Is Thanksgiving something to eat, daddy?"

"No," gobbled Father Turkey. "Thanksgiving is something which eats us. That is we are supposed to be good food for Thanksgiving and for Christmas, too."

"We are going to be eaten?" asked the little turkeys, in frightened voices. "Cheer up, little turkeys," said Father Turkey. "It sounds quite dreadful to you now, but it won't when I explain it to you. And it is best for me to explain it to you than for some one else who doesn't know and understand the whole thing."

"You see," said Father Turkey. "Thanksgiving day is a day when they give thanks for all the fine things they have in this world. When some people came over to this country years and years ago they set aside a day upon which to give thanks for their safe arrival in this land."

"Well, it's a day which is kept year after year after year, and in order to celebrate it in great style they have turkeys to eat. It's a great honor they pay us. And they also have turkeys for Christmas which is a day still greater than Thanksgiving day."

"And more than the compliment that they pay us is the fact that we're fed so well and given so much to eat before Thanksgiving day that we never have to hunt for our food; and we are given all the goodies we want, and we are made fat in the most delightful fashion."

"To be sure, all of us aren't eaten, but it doesn't matter whether we are or not, for we don't know it when we are, and we do know all about the delightful days beforehand, when we eat and eat and eat and gobble and gobble and gobble."

"When your mother was looking after you I kept watch all the time to see that no harm came to you. I warned her whenever danger was near."

"I will teach you how to roost in the trees, and I will teach you how to put your heads under your wings."

"But probably your mother has already taught you these two things. So I will just have a good time with you and chat with you and gobble with you."

"You're a fine father," said the little turkeys.

"But you can still call yourselves spring turkeys," said their father, "because it is still spring, and it will be a long time before Thanksgiving day, and the following holiday, Christmas, and the snow and the cold weather."

"Yes, you're spring turkeys, you're father's own nice spring turkeys, and it will only be one more week before you can walk wherever you want, for you will be four weeks old, and after the first four weeks little turkeys don't have to be so careful."

And the spring turkeys gobbled and said that life sounded and seemed very pleasant.

That's True.

The teacher had been telling her class about the rhinoceros family. "Now, name some things," she said, "that are very dangerous to get near to and that have horns." "Motor cars!" promptly answered Johnny.

"Don't Get Your Feet Wet."

"No," gobbled Father Turkey.

"You're a Fine Father."

"You're a Fine Father."

Miami has not had her Spring clean up day. Of course we can just let it go a few days longer and the weeds will have the tin cans covered up so nicely that they will hide the rubbish and will also make a nice shady home for the breeding of flies and sickness.

Some of the Chautauqua programs were unsatisfactory with our people. There is one condition here that few towns can boast of: entertainments must be of a strict first-class or else they are not accepted in Clarendon. —Clarendon News.

Clarendon is no exception as you think they are Mr. News man. The people of Clarendon are no better reared or appreciate any higher class programs than any other town in the Panhandle of Texas or the State of Arkansas or Indiana. People are the same all over our good old United States. We know just as much about entertainment, are just as well read and versed in topics of the day, appreciate high-class entertainment just as well in the Panhandle of Texas as they do in the State of New York. A program that will please us will please Chicago audiences, and one that won't please Philadelphia won't get by in the Panhandle. News-papers, magazines, books, motion pictures and talking machines give a wide range of education to those seeking it, and it matters not where they live.

We often wonder why a man will continue, after trying for twenty years and makes a failure out of getting a living without work. But after a few men had still rather loaf and half live than work just a few hours daily. The good book gave man his first order to earn his bread by the sweat of his brow, and yet, even tho' a single statement in the book has never been proven wrong, you can't convince some loafers that the only way to make a living is to work for it.

The Chief Linotype expert (????) spent Monday in Hereford looking over a linotype for our big brother of Claude. The Claude News is to have a new linotype and a new news press in the next few weeks, which two items are very essential to the modern newspaper. There are now less than a half dozen Panhandle newspapers without a typesetting machine.

The women of Texas can vote in Primary elections, even though they are not allowed to vote in all elections. The primaries of Texas usually tell the tale on the election of officers anyhow, so why should they worry.

It is due time for the housewife, storekeeper, store clerk, lawyers, doctors, nurses, housemaids, hotel keepers, street sweepers, professional men, traveling salesmen, farmers and ranchmen, bankers, bakers and barbers to begin to SWAT THE FLY. Swat him for the sake of your own self, for your neighbors and for the sake of humanity.

There must soon come a halt. People are getting entirely too money mad. About ninety-nine percent of the people are interested in absolutely nothing if there is not money in it. Yes, direct returns to their own pocket too. Why, bless your soul and will also make a nice shady home for the breeding of flies and sickness. There must soon come a halt. Some of the Chautauqua programs were unsatisfactory with our people. There is one condition here that few towns can boast of: entertainments must be of a strict first-class or else they are not accepted in Clarendon. —Clarendon News.

Clarendon is no exception as you think they are Mr. News man. The people of Clarendon are no better reared or appreciate any higher class programs than any other town in the Panhandle of Texas or the State of Arkansas or Indiana. People are the same all over our good old United States. We know just as much about entertainment, are just as well read and versed in topics of the day, appreciate high-class entertainment just as well in the Panhandle of Texas as they do in the State of New York. A program that will please us will please Chicago audiences, and one that won't please Philadelphia won't get by in the Panhandle. News-papers, magazines, books, motion pictures and talking machines give a wide range of education to those seeking it, and it matters not where they live.

We often wonder why a man will continue, after trying for twenty years and makes a failure out of getting a living without work. But after a few men had still rather loaf and half live than work just a few hours daily. The good book gave man his first order to earn his bread by the sweat of his brow, and yet, even tho' a single statement in the book has never been proven wrong, you can't convince some loafers that the only way to make a living is to work for it.

The Chief Linotype expert (????) spent Monday in Hereford looking over a linotype for our big brother of Claude. The Claude News is to have a new linotype and a new news press in the next few weeks, which two items are very essential to the modern newspaper. There are now less than a half dozen Panhandle newspapers without a typesetting machine.

The women of Texas can vote in Primary elections, even though they are not allowed to vote in all elections. The primaries of Texas usually tell the tale on the election of officers anyhow, so why should they worry.

It is due time for the housewife, storekeeper, store clerk, lawyers, doctors, nurses, housemaids, hotel keepers, street sweepers, professional men, traveling salesmen, farmers and ranchmen, bankers, bakers and barbers to begin to SWAT THE FLY. ### The Doctor Away From Home When Most Needed.

People are often very much disappointed to find that their family physician is away from home when they most need his services. Diseases like pain in the stomach and bowels, colic and diarrhoea require prompt treatment, and have in many instances proven fatal before medicine could be procured or a physician summoned. The right way is to keep at hand a bottle of Chamberlain's Colic and Diarrhoea Remedy. No physician can prescribe a better medicine for these diseases. By having it in the house you escape much pain and suffering and all risk. Buy it now; it may save life.

Chronic Constipation.

Perhaps you have never thought of it, but this disorder is due to a lack of moisture in the residual matter of the food. If you will drink an abundance of water, eat raw fruits and take lots of outdoor exercises, you may be able eventually to overcome it entirely. In the meantime use the most mild and gentle laxatives. Strong and harsh cathartics take too much water out of the system and make a bad matter worse. Chamberlain's Tablets are easy and pleasant to take, and most agreeable in effect. Give them a trial.

NOTICE We do not carry anybody over thirty days on account. Please pay your blacksmith bill on the first of every month.

The Mission of Swift & Company

Swift & Company has become one of the large businesses of the world through continuing to meet the growing needs of a nation and a world.

Society has a right to ask how the increasing responsibilities and opportunities for usefulness which go with such growth are being used by the men who direct its affairs—and the men have the right to answer:

- To promote the production of live stock and perishables and increase the food supply;
- To reach more people with more and better meat;
- To make a fair competitive profit, in order to reimburse the 25,000 shareholders for the use of their capital, and to provide for the future development of the business;
- To reduce to a minimum the costs of preparing and distributing meat and to divide the benefits of efficiency with producer and consumer;
- To live and let live, winning greater business only through greater usefulness, with injury to nothing but incompetency, inefficiency and waste; to deal justly, fairly, and frankly with all mankind.

These are the purposes and motives of the men who direct the policies and practices of Swift & Company.

BRAZIL OUR BIG SISTER

Residence Section of Rio.

BRAZIL, our sister in South America, is destined to hold a very prominent place in our affections during the approaching years, and many likable and admirable qualities and characteristics of her ingenious people are little understood and even less appreciated by the vast majority of North Americans, a writer in the Brooklyn Eagle observes.

Of all the Latin-American republics on the great South American continent Brazil alone has positively and actively cast her lot with ours. She alone of all the South American republics actually declared war against Germany. This step was taken not only on account of grievous or belligerent acts committed against the people of Brazil by Germany, but also because the people of Brazil, like ourselves, had declared themselves definitely and permanently opposed in principle to German practices and atrocities, and so Brazil distinctly stands with us as a champion of humanity and, therefore, our complete ally, materially and spiritually. Brazilian tradition has also considered the United States as her best friend among all the nations, and now we are allies, and in the constructive future that awaits us after the war the United States of Brazil and the United States of America will inevitably assume the leadership of the western world.

It should be, in the meantime, not only the pleasure but the duty of every North American to learn all he can of this new comrade who is to share our destiny; of his personality and his temperament at work and at play. It will surprise many of us when we realize that we are not by any means flattered by comparison.

Brazilian Innately Courteous.
When an American first sets foot on Brazilian soil he is immediately impressed by the Brazilian's innate courtesy, evidenced on every side among all classes of people without regard to "race, color or previous condition of servitude." Possibly one of the most conspicuous examples of this, at least one that is especially noticeable to a North American, is experienced in the use of public conveyances. In a tram car or an omnibus one is absolutely astounded when he sees persons already seated making way for a newcomer at a great personal inconvenience, and again when the courtesy is acknowledged by the action of the new arrival in tipping his hat and in a friendly smile of good fellowship, instead of the kick and scowl which are too frequently manifested in the street cars of our own large cities. Such incidents are not exceptions, but a rule, and extreme consideration is shown on all occasions. It soon becomes contagious, and once acquired or regenerated, one's good nature cannot long be curtailed, and it is no time before the stranger becomes fondly attached to his affable Brazilian host.

One cannot wander about the streets and shops even for a day before he remarks that nearly every one he meets can converse not only in Portuguese, the native language, but usually also in English or French. It is the exception in a Brazilian family of even moderate circumstances when the members cannot speak well and correctly two or three languages. How many Americans of one's acquaintance can intelligently and freely converse in any other tongue than his native "American"?

Then, too, the Brazilian shows much greater familiarity with and appreciation of the arts and literature of other nations than does his North American neighbor. The Brazilian truly recognizes and estimates good art, whether in music, literature, painting or sculpture, and the recitals, concerts and exhibitions are always well attended and conspicuous to North Americans because of the large inclusion of the poorer people in attendance on such occasions. Possibly the best evidence of this may be observed in the character of the audiences assembled at the moderate priced opera houses.

Opera Instead of Burlesque.
Opera in Brazil is a national institution. Even the mediocre companies are well supported and during the season, which lasts for many weeks, all opera houses are crowded. As in Italy, one may see and hear an excellent performance for a trivial entrance fee. There are many of these lower priced opera houses in all the larger cities and they are patronized by the same class of people that in the United States throng the vaudeville and burlesque theaters. In the galleries one sees the most unfortunate specimens of humanity; many are barefooted and ill clad, but all seek diversion or distraction by listening to the plaintive overtures of Verdi or Mascagni. And such applause! A home run made by Benny Kauf with the bases full would not cause such a demonstration as a well rendered aria from "La Tosca" or "Aida" by a visiting Spanish or Italian prima donna.

Whether it is this aesthetic character or an inherent delicacy, a pronounced gentility is noted in the personality of the Brazilian. Highly sensitive and sympathetic by nature, he is also extremely generous and considerate, and we should cultivate most assiduously the personal regard of these most delightful people who are now offering us their national friendship.

The Brazilian already sincerely admires and likes the North American, and, unfortunately, this feeling toward us is not evidenced by the people of any other Latin-American nation, at least not to such an extent as is true in Brazil. This may partially be explained by the recollection that in Brazil our national policies and motives have never been misunderstood nor impugned, but, on the contrary, Brazil has in the past frequently championed our cause in Latin America when such action was exceedingly unpopular.

Clever in Mechanics.
In a people possessed to a marked degree of such deep sympathy and fine emotions as are the Brazilians one might not expect to find mechanical genius as another national attribute. Yet not only is the Brazilian unusually clever in mechanical arts and sciences, but he is extremely quickwitted, learns easily and is swift to improve upon any contrivance in its adaption to local conditions.

During the last four years many successful manufacturing industries have been established in Brazil, many of which require practical skill and especially trained operators, and these have readily been found among Brazilians. The municipality of Sao Paulo holds an annual industrial exhibition, to which are admitted only articles manufactured by the "Paulistas," as the people of the city of Sao Paulo are known throughout Brazil. The local products include various types of machinery, articles of iron and steel, brass and copper; textiles, including cotton, woollens and even a very superior quality of silk; clothing for both men and women; haberdashery, shoes, hats, gloves, trunks, leather goods and a vast number of other creations requiring highly skilled operators and intricate machinery, all of which demonstrates the remarkable versatility of the Brazilians.

Spurious Stradivari.
In the 64 years that Stradivari worked for himself he finished 2,000 violins, and left a number unfinished that were later turned out by his sons. If you would take a count of all the Americans who have violins bearing the great workman's name, and do a little figuring, you will discover that Mr. Stradivari and all his relations, in order to put out all the fiddles bearing his name, must have had a fiddle foundry covering many acres, running day and night for more years than Stradivari lived. The varnish would have been made by the thousands of gallons. The violin would have started at one end of an endless belt, commencing with the neck, and come out at the delivery room all complete with the exception of the squeak.

The Right One.
"I think Solomon should have pointed to the chicken rather than the ant as a model of industry." "Why so?" "Because the chicken always comes up to the scratch when it is a question of making a living."

America's Immortals

Most striking instances of gallantry for which the Distinguished Service Cross has been awarded

Among the thousands of American soldiers who were awarded the Distinguished Service Cross for conspicuous bravery on the field of battle in France, there were a few whose feats were of such an unusual character as to stand out above the others. General Pershing's staff has selected a number of these most notable cases of bravery on the part of the fighting Americans, and a few of them are given below. They present only a few of the thousands of acts of heroism that are given recognition in the official records of the war department.

OSCAR F. MILLER,
Major, 361st Infantry.

Major Miller received the Distinguished Service Cross for conspicuous gallantry in action near Gesnes, France, September 28, 1918. After two days of intense physical and mental strain during which Major Miller had led his battalion in the front line of the advance, through the forest of Argonne, the enemy was met in a prepared position south of Gesnes. Though almost exhausted, he energetically reorganized his battalion and ordered an attack. Upon reaching open ground, the advancing line began to waver in the face of machine gun fire from the front and flanks and direct artillery fire. Personally leading his command group forward between his front line companies, Major Miller inspired his men by his personal courage and they again pressed on toward the hostile position. As this officer led the renewed attack he was shot in the right leg, but he nevertheless staggered forward at the head of his command. Soon afterward he was again shot in the right arm, but he continued the charge, personally cheering his troops on through the heavy machine gun fire. Just before the objective was reached he received a wound in the abdomen, which forced him to the ground, but he continued to urge his men on, telling them to push on to the next ridge and leave him where he lay. He died from his wounds a few days later. Major Miller's widow lives at 1727 West Fifty-first street, Los Angeles, Cal.

HENRY G. COSTON,
Private, Company, H, 15th Infantry.

Conspicuous gallantry resulting in wounds which caused his death won the Distinguished Service Cross for Private Coston. Near Bois de Conseqvoye, France, October 8, 1918, when the advance of his platoon had been held up by machine gun fire, and a request was made for an automatic rifle team to charge the nest, Private Coston was the first to volunteer. Going forward with his team under terrific fire of enemy artillery, machine guns and trench mortars, Private Coston continued to advance after all his comrades had become casualties and he himself had received serious wounds. He operated his gun until he collapsed, but his act resulted in the capture of about 100 prisoners and several machine guns. He died shortly after from the effects of his wounds. Private Coston's widow lives at 615 Mason avenue, Cape Charles, Va.

JESSE N. FUNK,
Private, First Class, Co. L, 354th Infantry.

Private Funk received the Distinguished Service Cross for conspicuous gallantry in action near Bois de Bantheville, France, October 31, 1918. Learning that two daylight patrols had been caught out in No Man's Land and were unable to return, Private Funk and another stretcher bearer, upon their own initiative, made two trips five hundred yards beyond our lines, under constant machine gun fire and rescued two wounded officers. His father, Martin Funk, lives in Callan, Colo.

JOSEPH A. BUFFALO,
Private, Company F, 258th Infantry.

Private Buffalo, who lives with his mother, Mrs. Pearl E. Buffalo, at Boxby, Okla., was decorated for extraordinary heroism in action near Peyeen-Have, France, September 12, 1918. Although he was seriously wounded early in the fight throughout the day, leading small parties of men against machine gun emplacements, killing two of the enemy himself and refusing to be evacuated until late at night, unable to fight further.

CLIFFORD E. MELLEN,
Private, Company A, 104th Infantry.

Disregard of his own safety in an effort to save his comrades won the Distinguished Service Cross for Private Mellen. The act was performed in the Bois Haumont, France, October 15, 1918. Private Mellen, an officer, and eight other soldiers, were surrounded by the enemy in a shell hole, into which an enemy grenade was thrown, landing directly in the midst of the group. Disregarding his own safety, this soldier seized the grenade and attempted to throw it out, but it exploded in his hand just as he succeeded in getting it above the level of the ground. His prompt action saved the lives of the men in the shell hole, but he was severely wounded. Private Mellen lives with his mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Mellen, 28 Worcester street, Worcester, Mass.

PARKER C. DUNN,
Private, First Class, 1st Battalion, 312th Infantry.

Private Dunn (deceased) was decorated for conspicuous gallantry in action near Grande-Pre, France, October 23, 1918. When his battalion commander found it necessary to send a message to a company in the attacking line and hesitated to order a runner to make the trip because of the extreme danger involved, Private Dunn, a member of the intelligence section, volunteered for the mission. After advancing but a short distance across a field swept by artillery and machine gun fire he was wounded a second time. Still undaunted, he persistently attempted to carry out his mission until he was killed by a machine gun bullet before reaching the advanced line. He lived in Albany, N. Y.

ALEXANDER R. SKINKER,
Captain, 138th Infantry.

Capt. Alexander R. Skinker (deceased) was decorated for conspicuous gallantry in action at Cheppy, France, September 23, 1918. Unwilling to sacrifice his men when his company was held up by terrific machine gun fire from iron pill boxes in the Hindenburg line, Captain Skinker personally led an automatic rifleman and a carrier in an attack on the machine guns. The carrier was killed instantly, but Captain Skinker continued the ammunition and continued through an opening in the barbed wire, feeding the automatic rifle until he was killed, too. His widow lives at 640 Elmwood avenue, St. Louis, Mo.

PATRICK GARRITY,
Private, Company C, 354th Infantry.

Private Garrity was decorated for conspicuous bravery in action near Remonville, France, November 1, 1918. When his company was advancing across an open field an enemy machine gun opened fire upon it from the left front. Private Garrity and two other soldiers being on that flank of the company, immediately advanced upon it. His two comrades were shot down, but Private Garrity advanced alone at a run; and with his bayonet drove the three Germans from their guns into a near-by dugout, capturing them and the gun. Private Garrity's home address is 3741 Kenmore avenue, Chicago, Ill.

ROBERT L. BLACKWELL,
Private, Co. K, 119th Infantry.

Robert L. Blackwell (deceased) was decorated for conspicuous gallantry in action near St. Souplet, France, October 11, 1918. When his platoon was almost surrounded by the enemy and his platoon commander asked for volunteers to carry a message calling for reinforcements, Private Blackwell volunteered for this mission, well knowing the extreme danger connected with it. In attempting to get through the heavy shell and machine gun fire this gallant soldier was killed. The address of his father is James B. Blackwell, R. F. D. No. 2, Hindles, N. C.

CLAYTON K. SLACK,
Private, Company D, 124th M. G. B.

Private Slack received the Distinguished Service Cross for conspicuous intrepidity in action near Conseqvoye, France, October 8, 1918. Observing German soldiers under cover fifty yards away on the left flank, Private Slack, upon his own initiative, rushed them with his rifle, and single-handedly captured ten prisoners and two heavy machine guns, thus saving his company and neighboring organizations from heavy casualties. His home is with his mother, Mrs. Jennie Mae Slack, Lampton, Wis.

HOWARD E. MADSEN,
Sergeant, Co. D, 115th Infantry.

Sergeant Madsen was decorated for conspicuous gallantry in action at Bois-de-Conseqvoye, France, October 22, 1918. When the platoon which he was commanding was held up by an enemy machine gun nest, Sergeant Madsen, taking an armful of grenades, advanced alone over ground swept by machine gun fire, put the machine gun out of action, routed the enemy and permitted the platoon to advance without casualties. "His mother, Mrs. Mary V. Madsen, lives in Baltimore, Md.

Chicken on a Jag.
A chicken owned by a woman living near Jeffersonville, Ind., "got on a jag" a day or two ago but it was the owner's fault, the chicken might plead. She had some whisky put away, used on physician's prescription for her heart. The chicken was sick and she diagnosed the case as heart trouble so thought she would try the same remedy. She gave it "the tiniest drop," but the chicken did not need much. Neighbors say they are satisfied the chicken was cured, but it immediately began a furious war dance, exemplified the different steps of all the different redskin tribes, passed from these to the waltz, two-step, one-step and other dances not yet invented, and according to the faithful narrator tried to sing "The Star-Spangled Banner," but this is probably an exaggeration, even if not actually untrue.

WHEN BUYING ASPIRIN ALWAYS SAY "BAYER"

Ask for "Bayer Tablets of Aspirin" in a Bayer package—marked with "Bayer Cross."

Don't buy Aspirin tablets in a pill box. Insist on getting the Bayer package with the safety "Bayer Cross" on both package and on tablets. No other way!

You must say "Bayer." Never ask for merely Aspirin tablets. The name "Bayer" means you are getting the genuine "Bayer Tablets of Aspirin," proven safe by millions of people.

Beware of counterfeits! Only recently a Brooklyn manufacturer was sent to the penitentiary for flooding the country with talcum powder tablets, which he claimed to be Aspirin.

Danger in Abbreviation.
Even the school nurse has her fun. In a talk before the central philanthropic council the other day, Miss Helen R. Stewart of the board of health told of one little boy who, after he had been examined by the nurse, went to the teacher in tears, complaining that the nurse called him names!

When the teacher expressed her surprise, the boy sought to prove his case by handing her the card the nurse had given to him as her record of the examination.

"Look at that!" he cried.
"Poor nut," read the card.
"Poor nutrition," explained the teacher, finally sending the child away with a better opinion of the nurse.—Dallas News.

Von Tirpitz a Pauper.
The Tribune de Geneve is informed that Grand Admiral von Tirpitz is staying at Wildegg, Switzerland, as the guest of Lieut.-Colonel Wille, son of the former commander-in-chief of the Swiss army.

Tirpitz has lost all his fortune. His son is a clerk in a bank at Zurich, and his daughter is a governess in a Zurich family.
To avoid paying the German war tax of 1913 Tirpitz invested his money in Italian securities, with the result that he is now penniless. What a patriot!

FORTY YEARS A DRUGGIST He Endorses PERUNA

Read this from Mr. L. A. Richardson of Marine, Illinois:

"I have been engaged in the retail drug business here for the past forty years. During this time I have seen many patent medicines come into use, flourish for one or two years and then gradually disappear. There are very few of these remedies that possess enough real merit to insure them long life. Peruna has always been a good seller with us, with a marked increase from year to year. The change in the formula some years ago, by the addition of the slightly laxative properties, has made it a reliable remedy for constipation and for colds. If taken hourly in tablespoonful doses by adults it will break up the worst cold in two or three days' time. I take pleasure in urging my brother druggists to recommend it for these two ailments."

ROAD BUILDING

DRAINAGE FOR GOOD ROADS

Essential Feature of an Improved Highway—Another Requisite is Firm Foundation.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

An essential feature of an improved road is adequate drainage. Thorough drainage is so necessary that it is practically impossible to maintain a satisfactory road unless it be given proper attention. Another prime requirement wherever a hard surface road is to be constructed is a firm and unyielding foundation. As the quality of the soil has an important influence on the proper method of drainage and the type of foundation to be employed, much care and study must be devoted to the nature, type, and character of the soils in the section through which it is proposed to build a road.

The most important primary soils are classified as gravel, sand, and clay, but often many of the secondary or mixed soils, because of their more general occurrence in connection with road-building operations, are equally important. Such types as loam, marl, gumbo, and hardpan are representative of this order.

In the design of a road the drainage structures are planned to take care of water under three general conditions—rain that falls on a road surface or grade; rain that falls on contiguous land and flows in accumulated volume toward the road; and ground water from an immediate source. To meet these conditions use is found for special structures, including longitudinal side ditches, usually parallel, or approximately parallel to the center line; intercepting ditches to accommodate water whose approach so close to the roadway as the side ditches is likely to cause injury; lateral ditches or culverts to conduct accumulated water away from or under the road; and subdrains. In order to plan intelligently a system of drainage for any particular road, it is necessary to con-

THIN PEOPLE SHOULD TAKE PHOSPHATE

Nothing Like Plain Bitro-Phosphate to Put on Firm, Healthy Flesh and to Increase Strength, Vigor and Nerve Force.

Judging from the countless preparations and treatments which are continually being advertised for the purpose of making thin people fleshy, developing arms, neck and bust, and replacing ugly hollows and angles by the soft curved lines of health and beauty, there are evidently thousands of men and women who keenly feel their excessive thinness.

Thinness and weakness are usually due to starved nerves. Our bodies need more phosphate than is contained in modern foods. Physicians claim there is nothing that will supply this deficiency so well as the organic phosphate known among druggists as bitro-phosphate, which is inexpensive and is sold by most all druggists under a guarantee of satisfaction or money back. By feeding the nerves directly and by supplying the body cells with the necessary phosphoric food elements, bitro-phosphate quickly produces a welcome transformation in the appearance; the increase in weight frequently being astonishing.

This increase in weight also carries with it a general improvement in the health. Nervousness, sleeplessness and lack of energy, which nearly always accompany excessive thinness, soon disappear, dull eyes become bright, and pale cheeks glow with the bloom of perfect health.

CUTION.—Although bitro-phosphate is unsurpassed for relieving nervousness, sleeplessness and general weakness, it should not, owing to its remarkable flesh-growing properties, be used by anyone who does not desire to put on flesh.

YIELD BIG CROPS

Grain Seeds From Western Canada Do Well in Ohio.

Demand for Them Is Bound to Add Value to the Land of Our Northern Neighbor, Now to Be Had Cheap.

A large area of the land in several counties in Ohio prepared for spring seeding will be seeded with Marquis wheat—a spring variety. This wheat is imported from Western Canada. It was about three years ago that the first of this seed was imported into the States, and the result, watched each succeeding year, proved that Ohio soil and spring seeding was a success. The demand for the seed has now become so great that one of the largest seed houses in the state, that has been purchasing from Western Canada farmers and importing it, has decided to purchase a large block of land in that country for the purpose of growing the grain themselves. They will devote a considerable portion of their Western Canada holdings to growing oats, barley and rye. Their action is a strong endorsement of the product. For some time past a considerable quantity of seed oats has also been imported. The prolific yield reported was what probably gave an impetus to the introduction of wheat.

It was found, though, after a couple of years the quality of the oats, as well as the yield, began to deteriorate when grown seed was used, making it necessary for fresh importations every couple of years. It is possible that the same experience may follow the growing of Western Canada wheat. In fact it is quite probable, and the Ohio farmer will find it necessary to import every two years.

With the success that has followed the Ohio farmers' experiments with this imported seed it is possible other states now growing winter wheat will begin growing spring wheat. It may therefore be taken for granted that Western Canada, in addition to its ability to produce hundreds of millions of bushels of wheat possessing the greatest percentage of gluten of any wheat in the world, will shortly be called upon to provide the seed that will be grown on the additional acres in the United States that may be devoted to spring wheat.

It is a well-established fact that the further north any product of the farm can be brought to a state of maturity, the more vigorous it becomes. This has been proven in the grains that have been produced in Western Canada; it has been shown in the development of its horses, its cattle, its sheep and its hogs; also in its people. The neighbor to the north really has a splendid future before him, and many years will not have passed before the lands that are selling today at much less than their producing value will bring prices more commensurate with their true worth than they do today. Think of lands that yield in their operation a profit of from fifteen to twenty-five dollars an acre a year selling at figures less than $40 an acre. It does not require a mathematician to figure the percentage of profit. It is unfair to these lands to ask them to continue these profits for long. So it is safe to make the prediction that in a very few years they will place themselves on a parity with other lands that today produce less and sell for much more.—Advertisement.

THE MOST DANGEROUS OF ALL DISEASES

No organs of the human body are so important to health and long life as the kidneys. When they slow up and commence to lag in their duties, look out! Danger is in sight.

Find out what the trouble is—without delay. Whenever you feel nervous, weak, dizzy, suffer from sleeplessness, or have pains in the back, wake up at once. Your kidneys need help. These are signs to warn you that your kidneys are not performing their functions properly. They are only half doing their work and are allowing impurities to accumulate and be converted into uric acid and other poisons, which are causing you distress and will destroy you unless they are driven from your system.

The Flow of Meat

Two-thirds of the live stock in the United States has to be raised in the West.

One-half of the consumers of meat live in the East.

In other words, most of the live stock is one or two thousand miles distant from most of the people who need it in the form of food.

Fifty years ago, when live stock was raised close to every consuming center, the country butcher could handle the job after a fashion.

But the job got too big.

Now millions of animals have to be moved hundreds of miles to millions of people. Somewhere on the way they have to be turned into meat.

The packers solved the problem. They set up plants where the "live haul" and the "meat haul" were in the right balance. They built up distributing systems—refrigerator cars, refrigerating plants, branch houses. They saved time, money and meat everywhere. The stockraiser benefited in better markets and higher prices; the consumer, in better meat and lower prices.

As the country grew, the packers had to grow, or break down. Because of its present size and efficiency, Swift & Company is able to perform its part in this service at a fraction of a cent per pound profit.

Water Drains Readily From This Type of Highway.

Consider not only the local character of the soil composing the roadbed, but also the topography of the adjacent land, the amount and rate of rainfall and the availability of material suitable for use in constructing drains.

Surface drainage systems for roads consist of side ditches along the road, paved gutters (which are a development of side ditches and replace them) open intercepting ditches constructed to prevent water from reaching the road, and lateral or relief ditches to carry off the water which collects in the side ditches or in the intercepting ditches. Culverts and inclosed drains which are constructed for the purpose of removing storm water from the side ditches or gutters, are essentially a part of the surface drainage system and are not to be confused with subdrains which serve an entirely different purpose.

Where the grade of a road is so steep that the ordinary earth side ditches cannot be maintained satisfactorily at a reasonable cost, or where earth side ditches would be insanitary or appear unsightly, it is customary to provide paved gutters for removing the surplus water.

Drop inlets and catch basins are used to conduct water from side ditches or gutters into underground drains or culverts. On country roads they are used most frequently on side hill locations where the water collecting in the upper side ditch or gutter can be removed from the road at intervals by means of a culvert across to the lower side. Drop inlets usually are sufficient, and catch basins seldom are used in country road work, except where it is especially desirable to prevent the silt and other foreign material carried by the water from getting into the underground drainage structure.
