HAWAIIAN SINGERS AND PLAYERS

PLAY NATIVE INSTRUMENTS AND SING SONGS MOST ENTERTAININGLY AFTERNOON SECOND DAY

Hawaiian music is growing more popular every year, and the demand for Hawaiian musical organizations is very great. For more than forty years the Hawaiian government has maintained a military band, and thirty years ago when wholly composed of native musicians, the Royal Hawaiian Band won highest honors among the bands attending a Knight Templars Concave in San Francisco. This popularity has been continually increasing and the Hawaiian music was one of the most attractive features of the Panama-Pacific Exposition during the summer of 1915.

Besides a Philharmonic society, a symphony orchestra and many church choirs, Honolulu has a number of musical organizations. These have developed many wonderful musicians. The voice of the native Hawaiian is sweet and plaintive, and much feeling is expressed in their songs.

The ocean breeze, the bowers and sunshine, the presence of beauty everywhere, have produced an intense love for music among these people and their songs abound in allusions to mountains, rain, seas, ocean and bowers. The melody and sentiment expressed in their songs are best rendered on string instruments, which they use almost exclusively. Besides the ones with which we are most familiar, there are others that may be considered as having originated in Hawaii. The most popular of these are the ukele, steel guitar and the tarapatch, resembling in shape a very small guitar.

The Hawaiian singers and players who are soon to appear on our chautanqua platform, formerly played for ex-Queen Liliuokalani and from that came the name, the Royal Hawaiian Quartet.

Unlike Malmedy, Montjoie aspires to no political role. It rests its claims to fame in the picturesqueness of its situation, and the charm of its medieval buildings bordering its narrow streets. The Roer, here only a shallow stream for three parts of the year, rippling over a stony bottom, flows through the town, and in some places even under the houses! It is swollen in the early spring by the melting snows of the Eifel, but it has scooped out for itself so deep a channel that floods are rare, as it sweeps along with increased volume past Duren and Juliers to join the Meuse in Holland.

In a series of stories written by Jean Pierre Perard, designated the most married man in the world, because he has 23 times led blushing brides to the altar, are many things lluminating to men and women. Two of his stories discuss men and women who make the best husbands and wives. In his own words:

PUT PROFITS INTO DIAMONDS

Many Reasons Why Increased Demand for Precious Stones Invariably Follows Devastating War.

The waste of war, by which many suffer and few reap returns, is always accompanied by a demand for precious This war has differed only from other wars in that the demand was greater. Profiteers in the allied ntries have bought for the purpose of display. Profiteers in enemy countries want diamonds, because they supply the safest way of concealing new ly acquired wealth. MOTHER BEARS.

Daddy told the children as they were about to have their evening story that he had decided he would tell them a great deal about the zoo animals, for he had been studying a good deal with the keepers, learning all about the ways of the animals, and he thought Nick and Nancy would like that they look out for themselves. to hear about them.

So all of us are going to learn more ing the things that Daddy learned made to the zoo with Daddy and somewhen free.

Sometimes, too, they would just watch the animals and by their sounds these things, we shall hear some of the things the animals in the zoo do when they are free, and how differently they live in the zoo.

Sometimes, too, we are going to hear that they do the same things in the zoo as out of the zoo, for so they do!

At any rate everything that Daddy found out to tell his two children, and which I am telling to you, is quite, quite true. The animals tell their own stories by their actions, by their ways. They don't have to talk the talk of children or of grown-ups.

So that all these animal stories, of course, are true, just as they have all they can make; and so as a man grows ways been true and always will be true, for animal stories which weren't true wouldn't be any fun at all.

When we want make-believe stories we have fairy tales and all such delightful things to talk about.

But when you read of one of these animals and of its ways and what it eats, and how it looks after its children you can know that it is quite. quite true, and that I wouldn't want it to be anything else.

For here's a secret, a true, true secret. There is so much that is won- never come to fruition; that some are derful in animal life and in bird life, so much that we can never find the time to half tell about, that we don't need to make-believe about the animals and the birds. They're so much. much more interesting just as they

DADDY'S EVENING MEN CHANGE? NO!

Of Course, With Advancing Years He Admits Some of the Enthusiasms May Be Lost, but There's Reason for That.

"An older friend of mine once said to me," said Mr. Goslington, "that men preserve their ideals until they are somewhere around fifty, but after

"Not having yet reached that more or less mature age myself, I can't say and more about the zoo animals, hear- what I shall be when I get there. Maybe I shall get hardened, too, and when he listened to the stories the take a like cynical view; but I don't keepers had to tell. We are going to think so now. Anyway, it is my obhear of some of the trips the children servation as far as I've got that most men are generous in spirit and that times how Daddy left them alone with men carry through life, in the main, the keeper and the keeper told them the characteristics with which they stories of the ways of the animals start. The man endowed with a generous heart stays generous to the end of his days. We certainly do meet some hard old men, but I have known and actions they would tell their own young men who were hard and close stories. So we are going to hear all fisted; and I should rather attribute the seeming closeness of some men as they grow older not to tight-wadness but to the development of a habit of discrimination.

"What my friend meant to say to me was that while men start in life with the natural enthusiasms of youth; while they then espouse all good causes and give generously of their time and money, yet as they grow older they discover that most of the innumerable enterprises started for the betterment of mankind are never carried to completion, and that there's a lot of sham in the world and that really most people are out for what older, when he comes to be fifty or thereabouts, he says to himself. 'What's the use; why should I waste my time and money?' And looking at things in that light from that on he leaves reform and that sort of thing to the younger set, while for himself he looks out for No. 1.

"Now what I find is that as men become more experienced in life they do discover that not all causes are worthy of support; that some, fine as they may seem to be, are visionary and can managed wastefully and so do not appeal to a man who likes to see money used to the greatest advantage. And I find that men come to consider more and more the sponsors of projects put forth with an appeal for money; but men do not lack generosity-far from it. It is true that some men as they bird stories and fairy stories and grow older do grow harder and look out for themselves alone; but this is

"Having encountered frauds rather than the enterprise in which unlock? I never saw any doors of they were engaged, whatever measure any gates."-Indianapolis News. of merit that might contain, men do, as they grow older, grow more canny; but the man with a generous streak in him in his youth, which the vast majority of men have, holds it as long as he lives, and it can be reached by the right appeal.

"So I don't quite agree with my older friend's views; and it makes me smile to recall that once when I stood in need of wise counsel and had called on him he took time to talk to me and tell me what I needed to know, and he lent me money besides. He thought he was a tough, wise old bird, but he didn't know himself as well as he thought he did. He was born with a sound heart, and despite the fact that he was now well past fifty, he was still running true to form."

Have you ever stopped to reason why it is that so many products that are extensively advertised, all at once drop out of sight and are soon forgotten? The reason is plain—the article did not fulfill the promises of the manufacturer. This applies more particularly to a medicine. A medicinal preparation that has real curative value almost sells itself, as like an endless chain system the remedy is recommended by those who have been benefited, to those who are in need of it.

A prominent druggist says "Take for example Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root, a preparation I have sold for many years and never hesitate to recommend, for in almost every case it shows excellent results, as many of my customers testify. No other kidney remedy has so large a sale."

According to sworn statements and verified testimony of thousands who have used the preparation, the success of Dr. Kilmer's Swamp-Root is due to the fact, so many people claim, that it fulfills almost every wish in overcoming kidney, liver and bladder ailments; corrects urinary troubles and neutralizes the uric acid which causes rheumatism.

Germany Counted on Allies Confused Weights and Measures

The lack of standard in weights and measures among the Allies gave Germany a great advantage in the waging of world-war, acording to the messages received from prominent manufacturers of the United States by the World Trade Club of San Francisco. One of them, a large manufacturer of material used for making war munitions, President F. O. Wells of the Greenfield, Mass. Tap, Die, Machine Tool company goes so far as to declare war if the United States and Britannia had been standardized with their allies in the vital matter of weights and measures.

The World Trade Club, representing 500 leading San Francisco manufacturing merchants, is promoting a campaign for the world wide adoption of meter-liter-gram, the units of the metric system of weights and measures, now in use by practically all nations of the world except the United States and Great Britain.

Royal Cord'

The campaign has brought many responses of support from men like Wm. G. McAdoo, David Starr Jordan, Nicholas Murray Butler, Expresident Eliot of Harvard, Henry Van Dyke, Judge E. H. Gary, John Hays Hammond, Wm. C. Redfield, Theodore N. Vail, Otto H. Kahn, George W. Perkins, Dr. Charles H. Mayo, The Lord Mayor of Manchester and many more.

RULES FOR FAILURE

Printing "Rules for Success" as prepared by successful men and women has been a specialty with certain magazines for some time. The reverse of this is found in "Rules for Failure" as prepared by a prisoner in Ohio State Penitentiary and is printed in the Ohio State Penintentiary News. He gives the following seven rules, which he claims will guarantee a "successful failure;"

1 Believe that everything is right that you are not caught at.

2 Be careless of responsibilities let George do it. 3 Fly into passion on slight pretext-lose your self control. 4 Always think of GET, never about give.

5 Look gloomy; never see good in other people. 6 Regard every man who differs from you as a knocker. 7 Never induldge in self-analysis; you may learn your faults and that you havent enough sand to cure them. These are good rules for attaining the HIGHEST PERFECTION OF FAILURE. But if you are anxious to be successful in life, DON'T FOL-LOW THE RULES FOR FAILURE. Start right and at once by BEING THRIFTY. Thrift leads to FINAN-C'AL SUCCESS. When you put your money in War Saving Stamps regularly, when you buy what you really need and want, buy it so you get full value and treat it as if it had the value of money, you follow the first great rules for financial success.

Expert City Planning. The first essential in advancing city planning everywhere is to get a definite plan, then make it known in order to get the necessary legislation and financial support to put it through. Cities should make a plan and develop it piecemeal. That is, it should be like a building with a solid foundation with five or six stories on it, but solid enough to carry 20 stories. The plan should be complete, but need not all be presented at once, nor should the efforts in carrying it out be sporadic or haphazard. An authority recently urged the securing of expert talent to direct city planning for the interest of all, and not for a class of citizens.

The records assert that Mr. Lilly knows the range country so well and the canyons and coves, while he is able to pick out the most advantageous spots to lie in ambush awaiting the approach of prowling beasts. Born of a good family enjoying prosperity, Lilly in his teens responded to the call of the wild and became a freelance hunter. Loaded with a 60-pound pack, he broke his way through the Louisiana canebrakes in search of game, from bears to wildcats. As a rule, every time his rifle cracked some animal dropped, and his fame as a sure shot has spread throughout Louisiana, Tex-Arizona, New Mexico and porthern Mexico. He was one of the guides selected to accompany the late Colonel Roosevelt in his hunt in Louisiana which made the "Teddy Bear" famous. His circle of friends among western ranchers is extensive and appreciative.

On the accepted basis that a wolf kills $1,000 worth of stock a year, a bear and mountain lion $500 each, and that a coyote and bobcat each do $50 ing work. worth of damage, Lilly has saved the western stockmen a substantial amount. Altogether these predatory animal hunters have killed 70,713 such beasts in the last three years. The direct saving thereby is estimated at nearly $5,500,000 a year to the stockmen of the Rocky Mountain section. Synopsis.—Thomas K. Barnes, wealthy young New Yorker, on a walking trip in New England near the Canadian border, is given a lift in an automobile a mysterious and attractive girl bound for a house called Green Fancy. At Hart's tavern s finds a stranded troupe "barn-storming" actors, of which Lyndon Rushcroft is the star and "Miss Thackeray" the ding tady. They are doing otel work for their board. He learns Green Fancy is a house of mystery. That night two mounted men leave the tavern der odd circumstances. One is brought back dving. Barnes es under suspicion. He stays to help clear up the mystery. O'Dowd of Green Fancy says that that place of mystery is not concerned in any way. Barnes gets into the Green Fancy grounds and sees the mysterious girl. She gives him the cut direct and O'Dowd politely ejects him from the grounds. Enter another man of mystery, Mr. Sprouse, "book agent."

His second lew of the house increased his wonder and admiration. If O'Down had not actually located it among the trees for him he would have been at a loss to discover it, although it was immediately in front of him and in direct line of vision.

De Soto was seen approaching through the green sea, his head apearing and disappearing intermitin the billows formed by the lating underbrush. He shook is with Barnes a moment later. "I'm glad you had the sense to

CHAPTER IX.

The First Wayfarer, the Second Wayfarer and the Spirit of Chivalry

The wide green door, set far back in a recess not unlike a klosk, was opened by a man servant who might easily have been mistaken for a waiter from Delmonico's or Sherry's.

"Say to Mrs. Collier, Nicholas, that Mr. Barnes is here for dinner," said De Soto. "I will make the cocktails this evening."

Much to Barnes' surprise-and disappointment-the interior of the house failed to sustain the bewildering effect produced by the exterior. The entrance hall and the living room into which he was conducted by the two men were singularly like others that he had seen. The latter, for example. was of ordinary dimensions, furnished with a thought for comfort rather than elegance or even good taste. The couches and chairs were low and deep and comfortable, as if intended for men only, and they were covered with rich, gay materials; the hangings at the windows were of deep blue and gold; the walls an unobtrusive cream color, almost literally thatched with etchings.

The stairs were thickly carpeted. At the top his guide turned to the left and led the way down a long corridor. They passed at least four doors before O'Dowd stopped and threw open the fifth on that side of the hall. There were still two more doors beyond.

"Suggests a hotel, doesn't it?" said the Irishman, standing aside for uickly. It remained for the man at Barnes to enter. "All of the sleeping apartments are on this floor, and the re're wasting time with all this baths and boudoirs and what not. The garret is above, and that's where we deposit our family skeletons, intern our grievances, store our stock of spitefulness and hide all the little devils that must come sneaking up from the city with us whether we will or no. Dabson," addressing the man who had quietly entered the room through the door behind them, "do Mr. Barnes, will ye, and fetch e from Mr. De Soto's room when you've finished. I leave you to Dabson's tender mercies. The saints preserve us! Look at the man's boots! Dabson, get out your brush and dauber first of all. He's been floundering in a bog." The toyial Irishman retired, leaving Barnes to be "done" by the silent, swift-moving valet. Dabson was young and vigorous and exceedingly well trained. He made short work of "doing" the visitor; barely fifteen minutes elapsed before O'Dowd's return.

Presently they went downstairs together. Lamps had been lighted, many crackled in the cavernous fireplace at the end of the living room and grouped about its cheerful, grateful blaze were the ladies of Green Fancy.

The girl of his thoughts was there, standing slightly aloof from the others, but evidently amused by the tale with which De Soto was regaling them. She was smiling; Barnes saw the sapphire lights sparkling in her eyes and experienced a sensation that was wofully akin to confusion.

But everything went off quite natuturn responded with one faintly suggestive of tolerance, although it certainly would have been recorded by a less sensitive person than Barnes as "ripping."

In reply to his perfunctory "delighted, I'm sure, etc.," she said quite clearly: "Oh, now I remember. I was sure I had seen you before, Mr. Barnes. You are the magic gentleman who sprang like a mushroom out of the earth early yesterday afternoon."

mushroom that is gobbled up by the predatory glutton."

He had thrilled at the sound of her voice. It was the low, deliberate voice of the woman of the crossroads, and, as before, he caught the almost imperceptible accent. The red gleam from the blazing logs fell upon her shining hair; it glistened like gold. She wore a simple evening gown of white, softened over the shoulders and neck with a fall of rare valenciennes lace. There was no jewelry-not even a ring on her slender, tapering fingers. Mrs. Collier, the hostess, was an elderly, heavy-featured woman, decidedly overdressed. Mrs. Van Dyke, her daughter, was a woman of thirty, tall, dark and handsome in a bold, dashing sort of way. The lackadaisical gentleman with the mustache turned out to be her husband.

"My brother is unable to be with us tonight, Mr. Barnes," explained Mrs. Collier. "Mr. O'Dowd may have told you that he is an invalid. Quite rarely is he well enough to leave his room. He has begged me to present his apologies and regrets to you. Another time, perhaps, you will give him the pleasure he is missing tonight."

De Soto's cocktails came in. Miss Cameron did not take one. O'Dowd proposed a toast.

"To the rascals who went gunning for the other rascals. But for them we should be short at least one member of this agreeable company."

It was rather startling. Barnes' glass stopped half way to his lips. An instant later he drained it. He ac cepted the toast as a compliment from the whilom Irishman, and not as a tribute to the prowess of those mysterious marksmen.

The table in the spacious dining room was one of those long, narrow Italian boards, unmistakably antique and equally rare. Sixteen or eighteen people could have been seated without crowding, and when the seven took their places wide intervals separated them. No effort had been made by the hostess to bring her guests close together, as might have been done by using one end or the center of the table. The serving plates were of silver. Especially beautiful were the long-stemmed water goblets and the graceful champagne glasses. They were blue and white and of a design and quality no longer obtainable except at great cost. The esthetic Barnes was not slow to appreciate the rarity of the glassware and the chaste beauty of the serving plates. The man Nicholas was evidently the butler, despite his Seventh avenue manner. He was assisted in serving by two stalwart and amazingly clumsy footmen, of similar ilk and nationality On seeing these additional men servants Barnes began figuratively to count on his fingers the retainers he had so far encountered on the place. Already he had seen six, all of them powerful, rugged fellows. It struck him as extraordinary, and in a way significant, that there should be so many men at Green Fancy.

Much to his disappointment he was not placed near Miss Cameron at table. Indeed she was seated as far away from him as possible. There was a place set between him and De Soto. for symmetry's sake, Barnes concluded. In this he was mistaken; they had barely seated themselves when Mrs. Collier remarked:

"Mr. Curtis' secretary usually joins us here for coffee. He has bis dinner with my brother, and then, poor man, comes in for a brief period of relaxation. When my brother is in one of his bad spells poor, Mr. Loeb doesn't have much time to himself."

Loeb, the private secretary, came in for coffee. He was a tall, spare man of thirty, pallidly handsome, with dark, studious eyes and features of an unmistakably Hebraic cast, as his name might have foretold. His teeth were marvelously white and his slow smile attractive. More than once during the hour that Loeb spent with them Barnes formed and dismissed a stubborn ever-recurring opinion that the man was not a Jew. Certainly he was not an American Jew. His voice, his manner of speech, his every action stamped him as one born and bred in a land far from Broadway and its counterparts. If a Jew he was of the east as it is measured from Rome-the Jew of the carnal Orient. And as the evening wore on there come to Barnes the singular fancy that this man was the master and not not put the ridiculous idea out of his nity for detached conversation with Miss Cameron. He had listened to her bright retorts to O'Dowd's sallies, and marveled at the ease and composure with which she met the witty Irishman on even terms Not until the very close of the evening, and when he had resigned himself to hopelessness, did the opportunity come for him to speak with her alone. She caught his eye, and, to his amazement, made a slight movement "And frightened you," he said; of her head, unobserved by the others "whereupon you vanished like the but curiously imperative to him. While he was trying to invent a pretext for drawing her apart from the others she calmly ordered Van Dyke to relinquish his place on the couch beside her to Barnes.

"Come and sit beside me, Mr. Barnes," she called out gayly. "I will not bite you or scratch you or harm you in any way. Ask Mr. O'Dowd. and he will tell you that I am quite docile. I don't bite, do I, Mr. O'Dowd?"

"You do," said O'Dowd promptly. "You do more than that. You devour, Bedad I have to look in a mirror to convince meself that you haven't swallowed me whole. That's another way of telling you, Barnes, that she'll absorb you entirely."

For a few minutes she chided him for his unseemly aversion. He was beginning to think that he had been mistaken in her motive, and that after all she was merely satisfying her vanity. Suddenly, and as she smiled into his eyes, she said, lowering her voice slightly:

"Do not appear surprised at anything I may say to you. Smile as if we were uttering the silliest nonsense. So much depends upon it, Mr. Barnes."

Barnes, "bound forever," makes suggestions to the girl that promise excitement.
