FAITH

The Greatest of all books says that "Faith moveth mountains." One of the essentials of success is faith in ones self. Nothing so stimulates self confidence or promotes good opinion in others, as a good standing at ones bank.

This does not necessarily mean a large account, but rather one that is growing and indicates thrift and good management. Your business and your financial matters are best managed when you consult your banker and gain the benefit of his varied experience.

UNITE TO BEAUTIFY HOMES

Example Set by Women of New Mextco Might Well Be Copied in Almost All the States.

In one of the dry-farming counties In New Mexico the women have shown their interest in improving the surroundings of their ranch homes by making home beautification a project In the county program of work. Through the assistance of the home demonstration agent, co-operating with the United States Department of Agriculture, these women, during 1920, bought, planted and cared for 1,800 rose bushes which were planted in 21 home gardens. The roses include varieties which had never been tried before in that section of the country.

Some of the varieties which made the best growth are Red Radiance, Crimson Queen, Lady Battersea, Madum Cochet, Sunburst, Old Gold. Dorothy Perkins, and Gold of Ophir. The roses were planted in well-fertilized soil and were protected from the winds until growth was well established. In the fall the bushes are protected by turning a small nail keg without a bottom over them and filling in with earth and manure. The beauty and fragrance of these roses tend to weld the people more closely to their ranch homes and thus make for more permament agriculture,

In this connection it is well to remember that there is no section of the country where roses cannot be made to thrive, with care,

Small Town's Many Advantages. The small town rules America, be cause, instead of being a place of hotels, restaurants and amusements, it is a place for normal living-where men walk home to lunch from their place of business and mow their own front lawns and weed their backyard gardens and bid their neighbors across either fence the time of day; where they not only live in today, but remember vesterday and plan for tomorrow: where families and communities retain, cherish and transmit traditions, there beats the heart of America.-Dodge County (Minn.) The building is well constructed of good materials to make it weathertight. It s set on a concrete foundation and has a concrete floor. Along one wall runs a feeding alley, while doors at the floor line permit the hogs to leave their pens when weather conditions are right. The building is set east and west, with windows facing the south. This gives the late winter and early spring sun a chance to give the interior of the house the benefit of its warmth. As the weather gets warmer and the pigs are allowed to run out doors the windows may be opened for better ventilation.

Mrs. Peterson Says She Was Afraid to Eat on Account of Trouble That Followed.

"I weighed just a hundred and three pounds when I began taking Tanlac, but now I weigh a hundred and twenty-two pounds," declared Mrs. Amy Peterson, the wife of a prosperous farmer of Lakeville, Mass., a suburb of New Bedford.

"I had acute indigestion," she said, "and no one knows how I suffered. I had cramping pains in my stomach that were almost unbearable, and I suffered no end of distress from gas bloating. Why, I was actually starving to keep from being in such awful misery, and I lost thirteen pounds in weight. Sometimes I wonder how I lived through it all, and I just thought there was no hope for I was restless night and day and was easily irritated, and some nights I slept so little it didn't seem that I had been to bed at all.

"But now I feel as strong and well as if I had never been sick a day in my life, and I just know Tanlac is best medicine in the world. I haven't a touch of indigestion now, and every time I sit down to the table I can't help but feel thankful to Tanlac. I have a wonderful appetite and have gained back all my lost weight and six pounds besides. I am simply overjoyed to be feeling so well, and I just praise Tanlac everywhere

FINDS A LABELED TURTLE

Kentucky Farmer Picks Up One Upon Which His Neighbor Carved. Initials Years Ago.

Lenoxburg, Ky .- Forty-four years ago J. T. McClanahan, who at that time owned a farm near here, carved his name on the shell of a small land turtle that he had caught. He then liberated the turtle. A few days ago Peter Sheppard, who now owns the adjoining farm, caught a turtle, and upon examining it closely learned that it was the same turtle on which McClanahan had carved his initials forty-four years ago. Recently he found another turtle on which Sheppard's father carved his name, John Sheppard, twenty-eight years ago.

The shells of the turtles had been worn almost smooth, but it still was

THAT'S OUR IDEA in making CAMELS-the Quality Cigarette.

Why, just buy Camels and look at the package! It's the best packing science has devised to keep cigarettes fresh and full flavored for your taste. Heavy paper outside-secure foil wrapping inside and the revenue stamp over the end to seal the package and keep it air-tight.

And note this! There's nothing flashy about the Camel package. No extra wrappings that do not improve the smoke. Not a cent of needless expense that must come out of the quality of the tobacco.

Camels wonderful and exclusive Quality wins on merit alone.

Because, men smoke Camels who want the. taste and fragrance of the finest tobaccos, expertly blended. Men smoke Camels for Camels smooth, refreshing mildness and their freedom from cigaretty aftertaste.

LEGION OFFICER KNOWS NAVY

Edward Spafford, Chairman of Committee on Naval Affairs, Has Climbed the Ladder.

Edward Elwell Spafford, newly appointed chairman of the American Legion's commit tee on naval affairs, knows the United States navy on land and on sea as few other men do. Born in Springfield, Vt., Mr. Spafford was educated in the public schools. He received an appointment to the United States the ship Washington, he became gunnery officer; at that time he was the youngest officer in the navy to hold this position. While the Washington was lying off Cape Hatteras a sailor was washed overboard in a heavy sea. Risking his life in the waves, Mr. Spafford plunged overboard and succeeded in rescuing the seaman. His bravery was recognized in a letter of commendation from the secretary of the navy. He rose to the rank of lieutenant commander.

In 1914 Mr. Spafford resigned from the navy to study law at Columbia university.

With the start of the war Mr. Spafford offered his services to his country and he was made a lieutenant commander in the navy reserve corps. He served for a time as a member of the board of inspection and survey, which was in charge of the selection of ships to be purchased by the government. He directed the fitting out of the first 25 110-foot submarine chasers built for distance service and established a submarine chaser hase at New London, Conn.

When the American navy became active in the Straits of Otranto, Mr. Spafford was sent to establish a submarine chaser base at Corfu, Greece, and later became chief of staff of that station. He was in charge of all Sylvester, who operations and was on the first Amer- likes the walking ican submarine chasel stroyed an enemy ship after locating it by the process of sound contact.

When the Austrians surrendered two battleships and two destroyers to the United States, Lieutenant Commander of 181/2 miles a Spafford took them over. Later, he investigated the situation along the Dalmatian coast and made a special report on Flume to the American peace delegation at Parls. He received the Distinguished Service Medal. Mr. Spa. Tord is a member of Manhattan naval post of the American Legion in New York city.

SAYS NO MAN HER SUPERIOR

Bright-Eyed Sergeant and Vice Commander of Post Bluffed Mr. Silver-Eagles.

Sergeant Minnie Arthur of the United States marine corps was on duty in a recruiting office in Indianapolis, Ind., during the war. The major in charge was nervous; a colonel from Washington was coming to in spect: everyone brushed up rules of military conduct. In walked the austere colonel. Sergeant Arthur remained working at her desk. Silvereagles walked over to her desk and frowned. "Um-ever get up when an olicer comes in the room, sergeant?" he growled.

"Yes, sir, sometimes," Miss Three Stripes replied. "Um-and I suppose you salute your superiors, too, eh?

Sergeant Arthur smiled sweetlyand then her eyes snapped.

"Sir, I've never seen a man yet who was my superior!"

And the colonel passed it off with out a reprimand.

Miss Arthur, now vice-commander of

During the war Mr. Deegan was attached to the staff of Gen. George W. Goethals and was assigned to inspect the army bases along the Atlantic coast and inland army depots, He was discharged a major in 1919.

nia's highway system. The federal bureau reports that only 12.5 per cent of California's highway concrete is inferior.

California's concrete pavement is practically all four inches thick. The use of this thin slab, which came in for so much condemnation in the first report, made it possible to give a large part of the state good highway service at a reasonable cost. The design was determined nearly ten years before the heavy traffic came, so that, neasured by results, the California commission's work appears to have been a success. Seventy per cent of he defective pavement occurs on clay and adobe soils, but a large mileage of he same thin pavement on these aderse soils still remains in good condi-

The bureau found the four-inch slab nadequate (the commission itself has chandoned it in favor of a five-inch reinfaced concrete design) and advises that experimental sections be nade on the unfavorable soils. It also finds that the three-eighths-inch arpet coat, famous in California, does not give a service commensurate with

Of interest in all parts of the counry is the bureau's finding that there s nothing presented by the entire California study which indicates that concrete is not a successful pavement. Simple, satisfactory methods for classfying the conditions of concrete roads have been developed from this study which will be found invaluable n classifying roads in other states.

CONSTRUCTION OF GOOD ROAD

Careful Design and Best of Workmanship Required, Especially for the Foundation.

Every element of a modern road rejuires careful design and the best of workmanship. The foundation es pecially must be deep and substantial, a loose knot. Arrange in rows or triand for this it would seem that the angles and dredge the tenderloins with usual layer of crushed stone is entirely nadequate and unsuited. Underdrain- frying pan turning often to keep fromng is also very important, but usually laid out on theory rather than a cotideration of actual conditions that vary every few yards. The surface is vitally important, for it should be ab solutely smooth, as any initial irregularity forms a starting point for tisintegration under the trip hammer plows of a heavy truck wheel.

At a result of long experiments the ennsylvania state highway depart nent has found the "1-2-3-mix" highvay surface extremely satisfactory on main traveled roads. THERAPEUTIC VALUE OF FRUITS.

The healthfulness of fruit is so well known that, while we may not care to support the claims of those who believe we should subsist entirely on fruits and vegetables, we are willing to credit them with great virtue. It is interesting, too, to know what is said about them. Lemon juice is used to bleach and soften the skin; mixed with buttermitk it is said to dispel freckles. Lemon juice applied to bites and stings of insects will relieve at once. As a mouth wash, lemon juice in a glass of water dissolves the tartar on the teeth and sweetens the breath. Oranges, while rich in sugar and water, have salts of high value, while the flavor of the pulp is especially attractive. Oranges act upon the bowels. Taken at night they are especially good. A glass of orange juice can be taken by the most delicate stomach and is especially recommended for biliousness

Grape fruit is said to contain a substance similar to quinine; this may be due to its bitter flavor. This fruit has been recommended in case of grippe, and is said to cure that tired feeling which is called spring fever. Those who know say that the proper way to treat grapefruit for a medicine is to put it, seeds, skin and all, through the meat grinder, cover with boiling water and let the mixture stand until cold. Strain and take in small doses three times a day. Those who like quinine will probably enjoy this.

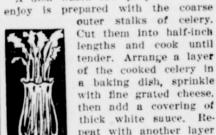

Apples are called an ideal nerve fruit, are taxative, hold valuable salts such as sodium and iron.

Peaches are also rich in iron and mey are highly recommended for anaemic people.

Cherries stimulate the gastric juices (the acid kind), and are laxative. Plums are good but best as prunes, Figs are also high in nutritive value and are considered nature's best

Add two slices of onion, five of carrot, two sprigs of parsley, a quarter of a bay leaf, a slice of green pepper and half a chili pepper; cook until all are softened, drain off the fat, add one-fourth cupful of vinegar and let simmer on the back part of the stove until the vinegar is reduced to half. To the fat add enough butter to make four tablespoonfuls, add the same amount of flour and cook until smooth, then add a cupful and one-half of brown stock, the vegetables and the vinegar, boil once, strain over one-half cupful of sultana raisins cooked in boiling water until tender, add three tablespoonfuls of currant jelly and the same of orange juice,

Lemon Catchup.-Mix a tablespoonful of grated horseradish with the grated rind of four lemons, add three teaspoonfuls of salt, the juice of the lemons, two tablespoonfuls each of mustard seed and celery seed, four cloves and a dash of red pepper. thirteenth little brown caterpillar. "And later on we will become Blue Swallowtail Butterflies," said the fourteenth little brown caterpillar.

These fourteen little brown caterpillars were all nibbling at a big leaf.

"We'll Stay Here.

Soon they would go off by themselves each one looking out for himself and paying no attention to his sisters and brothers, for these fourteen little brown caterpillars were sisters and brothers.

said the eighth little brown caterpil-"And then we shall fly about and drink honey," said the ninth little brown caterpillar.

"And people will forget that we were caterpillars and will say. "'Look at those beautiful butterflies with their blue markings," added the tenth little brown caterpillar. "We will pretend not to hear them but it will please us," said the eleventh little brown caterpillar.

"Of course it will please us," said the twelfth little brown caterpillar. "We will eat and grow strong so we will be very beautiful," said the thirteenth little brown caterpillar. "And eat too because it is so pleasant to eat," said the fourteenth little brown caterpillar as he took an extra large nibble at their leaf dining-room. So they ate until they were a little bigger and then they went off, each one alone, to look for more food and adventures.

STOCK

DEPLETION OF RANGE GRASS

Injury Caused by Premature Grazing and Lack of Utilization of Forage Crop.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Range depletion is due in a large measure to premature grazing and to lack of uniform utilization of the forage crop, investigations now being carried on at the Great Basin experiment station by grazing specialists in the forest service of the United States Department of Agriculture show. These experiments, which have been conducted over a four-year period, have been for the purpose of ascertaining just how certain range bunch grasses are affected by different systems of grazing.

It was found that the yield of violet wheat grass when removed by cutting once in a season, at the time the seed crop matured, was four and twotenths times as large as when it was removed four times in a season and three and eight-tenths times as large as when herbage was removed twice in the season.

Native brome grass, on the other hand, yielded six times as much when harvested twice during the season. but the yield from one cutting was three and three -tenths times as much as when it was removed four times. This means in range revegetation that the grass native there must be taken into consideration and a system of grazing used that is suitable to it.

The experiments also showed the striking difference in water content in herbage as the season advances. In the leafage of the violet wheat grass harvested once in a season, just before seed maturity, the water content averaged 41 per cent. Plants grazed twice, late in the season, contained an average moisture content of 51 per cent, while plants cropped four times in a season contained an average of 79 per cent of water. Early in the spring the young leafage may contain as much as 85 per cent of water. This is sometimes the cause of many live stock losses in the early spring. The green feed is sparse and contains so small an amount of food substance that it is necessary for an animal to travel great distances to gather daily approximately 85 pounds of succulent leafage, which is an equivalent to 16 pounds of dry hay.

When the difference in yield and nutrutive value of the forage, in favor of the less-frequently grazed areas, is taken into account, it is clear that frequent cropping is an extravagant and wasteful practice. Furthermore, about 85 per cent of a bunch-grass cover harvested four times in a season is killed out at the end of the third year, thus subjecting the soil to varying degrees of depletion through

CHAPTER XV-Continued. -13-

"But you said you had forgotten her

"So I have-her married name. And what's more, I mean to keep on forgetting it."

There was no mistake about the boss' frown this time.

"That won't do, Upton," he said, kind of warningly.

"It will do well enough for the present. I'd marry her tomorrow, Graham, if she were free, and there were no other obstacles. Unhappily, there are two-besides the small legal difficulty; she doesn't care for my money -having a little of her own; and she happens to be in love with the other fellow."

I guess the boss was remembering what Mrs. Shella had told him in that' confidence before the back-parlor fire, about its being all off between her and Collingwood, for he said: "I think you ere mistaken as to that last."

"No. I'm not mistaken. But that's neither here nor there. Neither you nor I can send Collingwood to the penitentiary-that's a cinch. Wherefore, I'm advising you to quit, walk out, jump the job."

At that the boss took a fresh brace, righting his swing chair with a snap. "You know very little about me, Upton, If you think I'm going to throw up my hands now, when the real pinch has come. I have a scheme-if it could only be worked. But it can't be worked on a rising market. By some trick or other, the Dunton people are boosting the stock again. It went up three points yesterday."

Mr. Van Britt grinned. "They're discounting the effect of this little potitical deal-which will at least rope your reform scheme down, if it doesn't do anything else. What you need is a good, old-fashioned cataclysm of some sort; something that would fairly knock the tar out of P. S. L. securitles and send them skittering down the tobeggan slide in spite of anything Uncle Breckenridge could do to stop them: down to where they could be safely and profitably picked up by the dear public. Unfortunately, those things don't happen outside of the story books. If they did, if the earthquake should happen along our way just now, I don't know but I'd be disloval enough to get on, and help it shake things up a bit." After Mr. Van Britt had gone, the boss put in the remainder of the day like a workingman, skipping the noon the work drive was extra heavy. Meanwhile, as you'd suppose, rumor was plentifully busy, on the railroad, and

By noon it was well understood that there had been a radical change in the management of C. S. & W., and that there was going to be a general strike in answer to the slashing cut in wages. I slipped up-town to get a bite, and I heard some of the talk. It was pretty straight, most of itwhich shows how useless it is to try to keep any business secrets, nowa-

For example: the three men at my able in the Bullard grill-room-they didn't know me or who I was-knew that a council of war had been called in the railroad headquarters, and that Ripley had been pulled in by wire from Lesterburg, and that we were rushing along hurriedly to provide storage room for the wheat shippers n case of a tie-up, and that we were arranging to distribute rallroad company coal in case the tie-up should bring on a fuel famine-knew all these things and talked about them.

They were facts, as far as they ent-these things. The boss hadn't een idle during the forenoon, and he kept up the drive straight through to quitting time. Word was brought in during the afternoon by Tarbell that the Hatch people were wiring the Kansas City and Omaha employment agencies and placing hurry orders for trike-breakers. The boss' answer to this was a peremptory wire to our assenger agents at both points to make no rate concessions whatever, of eny kind, for the transportation of aborers under contract. It was a shrewd little knock. Labor of that kind is mighty hard to move unless It can get free transportation or a low rate of fare, and I could see that Mr. Norcross was hoping to keep the strikebreakers away.

When six o'clock came, the boss sked May to stay and keep the office en while I could go down-stairs and my dinner in the station restaurant, ind he went off up-town-to the club, suppose. After I'd had my bite, I May go. Everything was moving ill right, so far as anybody could see. Ve had five extra fuel trains loading t the company's chutes at Coalville, and the dispatcher was instructed to ork them out on the line during the hight, distributing them to the towns hat had reported shortages. They ere not to be turned over to the reglar coal yards; they were to be sideacked and held for emergencies.

Mr. Norcross came back about eight lock, and I gave him my report of w things were going on the line. little later Mr. Cantrell dropped in, tr was a quiet talk about the

I had a lot of filing and indexing to do, and I kept at work while they were talking, wondering all the time if the boss would venture to tell the editor about the depth of that "last ditch." He didn't. I guess he thought he wouldn't until he had to. It was pretty nearly nine o'clock when the editor went away, and Mr. Norcross was just saying to me that he guessed we'd better knock off for the night, when we both heard a step in May's room. A second later the door was pushed open and a man came in, making for the nearest chair and flinging himself into it as if he'd reached the limit. It was Collingwood. He was chewing on a dead cigar and his face was like the face | married woman ought to be got."

of a corpse. But he was sober. Naturally, I supposed he had come to make trouble with the boss on Mrs. Sheila's account, and I quietly edged open the drawer of my desk where I kept Fred May's automatic, so as and you know that she is as far to be ready. He didn't waste much above suspicion as the angels in

Mr. Norcross cut straight through to the bottom of that little complication at a single stroke.

"But you've got to keep hands off, just the same; at Kendrick's, and in this other business, too. If you don't. there is going to be blocd on the moon! Get me?"

The boss never batted an eye. "I'm taking it for granted that you are sober, Mr. Collingwood," he said. "If you are, you must surely know that threats are about the poorest possible weapons you can use just now."

"It's a plant from start to finish gritted the man in the chair. "I haven't done a d-d thing more than to cash a few checks for-for expenses, and turn the money over to Bullock. Now funcheon as he sometimes did when | Hatch tells me that I was working with a spotter-his spotter-and that he can send me up for bribery. It's a lie. I don't know what Bullock did with the money, and I don't want to

> "But you had orders to give it to him when he required it, didn't you?" Mr. Norcross cut in.

"That's none of your business. I want you to choke this man Hatch off of me!"

The boss had picked up his paperknife. "I don't know why you should come to me for help," he said. "You have been hand-in-glove with these conspirators ever since you came out here. Two days ago you knew that they had set a trap for my special train on the Strathcona branch—a trap that was meant to kill me."

It was a random shot, and I knew that Mr. Norcross was just guessing at where it might land when he fired it. But it went home; oh, you bet it went home!

"D-n you!" gurgled the bounder, half starting to his feet. "Why shouldn't I want to see you killed? Haven't you done enough to me?"

"No!" the word was slammed at him like a bullet. And then: "As I told you in the beginning, we won't go into any phase of it that involves Mrs. Collingwood. Get back into your own boat. Are you trying to tell me now that Hatch is threatening you?"

There was silence for a little time. It was an awful muddle, with bloody murder sticking out of it on every side. "If you have come here with the idea that I can force Hatch's hand, you are very much misled," said the boss at the close of the electric pause. And then: "Has he made it appear to you that he was merely trying to help you avenge your own fancied wrongs?" "He said I ought to get you; that heaven. Let that part of it go. Hatch was merely using you for his own ends. If he could persuade you to be merely that much gained in the business fight. You haven't done it thus far, and now he is using your check-cashing excursion as a club with which he proposes to brain the entire railroad management, your uncle included, if we interfere with his plans."

Collingwood scowled up at the ceilcorner of his mouth to the other.

"So that's the way of it, is it?" he commented. "He was working for his own pocket all the time, and Uncle Breck stands pat and slips him the ace he was needing to make his hand a winner. Between you and me. Norcross, I believe this d-d piker needs killing a few times, himself."

The boss sat back in his swing chair and I could just imagine that he was trying to get some sort of proper angle on this young fellow who, in addition to his other scoundrelisms, big and a taxi and go spinning off up-town, little, had wrecked the life of Sheila | There was another jolt waiting for Macrae. I knew what he was thinking. He had a theory that no man that was ever born was either all angel or all devil, and he was hunting for the redeeming streak in this one.

When you looked right hard at the haggard face you could see something sort of half-appealing in it; something to make you think that perhaps, away back yonder before the spoiling began, there used to be a man; never a strong man, I guess, but one that might have been generous and free-hearted, maybe. I got a fleeting little glimpse of that back-number man when he turned suddenly and said: "One night a few weeks ago when I was full up, Hatch got hold of me and told me you were out at the Kendrick place with Sheila. He made me believe that I ought to go out there and kill you, and I started to do it. Do you know why I didn't do it?"

"No," said the chief, mighty quietly. "Well, I'll tell you. One night last spring up at the Bullard you slammed me one in the face and dragged me off to my room to keep me from making a bigger ass of myself than I'd already made. I haven't forgotten that. In all these crooked years, nobody else has even taken the trouble to chuck me decently out of sight and give me a chance to brace. Drunk as I was, I remembered it that night when I was climbing up to a window in the major's house and trying to get a shot at vou.'

Mr. Norcross shook his head, more than half sympathetically, I thought. "Let that part of it go and tell me about this other trouble," he said. "How badly are you tangled up in this political business?"

"I've given it to you straight on the bribing proposition. Uncle Breck used me as a money carrier because-well, maybe it was because he couldn't trust Bullock. I didn't know definitely what Bullock was doing with the checks I cashed for him, though I supposed, of course, it was something that wouldn't stand daylight. It was only a side issue with me. I was coming out here anyway. I knew Sheila had made up her mind-God knows she's had cause enough; but I had a crazy notion that I'd like to be on the same side of the earth with her again for just a little while. Then this-" he trailed off in a babble of maledictions poured out upon the man who had trapped him and used him.

The boss straightened himself in his chair, but he still was speaking gently

"You are not asking my advice, and I don't owe you anything, personally. Mr. Collingwood. But I'll say to you what I might say to a better man in like circumstances. You have done all the harm you can, but, as I see it. there doesn't seem to be any need of your staying here to suffer the consequences. Why don't you go back to New York, taking your wife with you, "He's played me for a come-on. He if she will go?"

teeth-baring grimace. "Sheila made her wedding journey with me once, when she was just eighteen. The next time she rides with me it will be at my funeral. Oh, I've earned it, and I'm not kicking. And about this other thing: I can't duck. You know what Hatch is holding me for. He told me just a little while ago that if I stepped aboard of a train, I'd be arrested before the train could pull out."

Collingwood's smile was a mere

It was a handsome little precaution on the part of the chief of the grafters. If a fight should be precipitatedif the boss should try to checkmate the C. S. & W. gobble-the arrest and indictment of President Dunton's nephew would serve bully good and well as a dramatic bit of side play to keep the newspapers from printing too much about the other thing.

"If you really want to go, I think it can be arranged in some way, in spite of Hatch and his bluffing," Mr. Norcross put in quietly. "So far as our railroad troubles are concerned it will neither help nor hinder for you to stay on here, now."

As if the helpful suggestion had been a lighted match to fire a hidden mine of rage, Collingwood sprang to his feet with his dull eyes ablaze.

"No, by God!" he swore. "I'm going to make him come across with those affidavit papers first! You wait right here, Norcross. You think I'm all cur, but I'll show you. There isn't much left of me but hound dog, but even a hound dog will bite if you kick him hard enough. Lend me a gun, if you've got one and I'll-

"Hold on-none of that!" the boss broke in sternly, jumping out of his chair to enforce the command. But before he could make the grabbing move the corridor door slammed noisily and the madman was gone.

CHAPTER XVI

The Deserter

Mr. Norcross chased out and tried to overtake Collingwood, going as far as the foot of the stairs. I went, too, but got only far enough to meet the boss coming up again. There was nothing doing. The station policeman had seen the crazy rounder jump into us when we got back to the office. While we were both out, Mr. Van Britt had blown in from his room at the foot of the hall and we found him lounging comfortably in the chair that Collingwood had just vacated.

"I thought maybe you'd turn up again pretty soon, since you'd left the doors all open," was the way he started out. Then: "Sit down, Graham; I want to talk a few lines."

Mr. Norcross took his own chair and twirled it to face the general superintendent. "Say it," he commanded

Mr. Van Britt hooked his thumbs in his armholes.

"I've just been figuring a bit on the general outlook: you have a decently efficient operating outfit here, what with Perkins and Brant and Conway handling the three divisions as selfcontained units. You don't need a general superintendent any more than a monkey needs two tails."

"What are you driving at?" was the curt demand.

"Well, suppose we say retrenchment, for one thing. As I size it up, you might just as well be saving my salary. It would buy a good many new crossties in the course of a year."

"That's all bunk, and you know it," snapped the boss. "The organization as it stands hasn't a single stick of dead wood in it. You know very well that a railroad the size of the Short Line can't run without an individual head of the operating department." Mr. Van Britt laughed a little at

"If you should get some one of these new efficiency experts out here he would probably tell you that you could cut your staff right in two in the

I could see that the boss was getting mighty nearly impatient. "You are merely turning handsprings around the edges of the thing you have come to say, Upton," he barked out. "Come to the point, can't you? What have you got up your sleeve?"

"Nothing that I could make you understand in a month of Sundays. I'm sore on my job and I want to

"Nonsense! You don't mean that?" "Yes, I do. I'm tired of wearing the brass cottar of a soulless corporation. What's the use, anyway? I found a bunch of dividend checks from my bank at home in the mail to-day, and I can't spend it out here; can't even tip the servants at the hotel without everlastingly demoralizing them. I'm like the little boy who wanted to go out in the garden and eat worms."

The boss was frowning thoughtfully. "You're not giving me a show, Upon," he protested. "Can't you blow the froth off and let me see what's in the bottom of the stein?"

"Pledge you my word, it's all froth. Graham. I want to climb up on the mesa behind the shops and take a loot to let us get a glimpse of what I time and saw the first sacta"

"Pull it down out of the future and put it in the present, and you've got it," said Mr. Van Britt, "I have resigned. I wrote it out on a piece of paper and dropped it into your mail regarding the change of ownership box as I came through the outer office. It's signed, sealed, and delivered. You'll give me a testimonial, or something of that sort, 'To Whom It May Concern,' won't you? I've been obedient and faithful and honest and efficient, and all that, haven't I?"

"I'd like to know where you got your liquor, Upton. That is the most charitable construction I can put upon all this. Why, man alive! you're quitting me in the thick of the toughest fight the grafters have put up!"

"Yes, I know; but a man's got only one life to live, and I've always had a sneaking sympathy for the high private in the front rank who didn't want to stand up and get himself shot full of holes. I'm running, and if you should ask me why, I'd tell you what the retreating soldier told Stonewall Jackson; he said he was running only because he couldn't fly." Once more the boss grew silently thoughtful. Out of the digging mental inquiry he brought this:

"Has this sudden notion of yours auything to do with Sheila Macrae, Upton?"

"Pledge you my word again. I met Sheila on the street today and promised her that I wouldn't so much as tip my hat to her while Collingwood is on this side of the Missouri river." "But if you quit, you'll go east yourself, won't you?"

"Maybe, after a while. For the time being. I'd like to loaf on you for a week or so and watch the wheels go around without my having to prod them. It's running in my mind that this newest phase of the C. S. & W. business is going to stir up a mighty pretty shindy, and I had a foolish notion that I'd like to stick around and look on-as an innocent bystander."

"The innocent bystander usually gets shot in the leg." the boss ripped out, with the brittlest kind of humor. And then: "I suppose I shall have to let you do what you want to-and let you pick your own time for giving me the real reason. But you're crippling me most savagely, Upton-and at a time when I am least able to stand it." Mr. Van Britt got up and edged his way toward the door.

"It's a good reason, Graham; and some time-say when we are walking through the pearly gates of the New Jerusalem together-maybe I'll tell you about it. If I were really a good scrapper, I'd stay and help you fight it out with Hatch; but you know the old saying-capital is always cowardly; and my present credit at the Portal City National is pretty well up to a quarter of a million, thanks to the dividends I deposited today. Goodnight. I'll see you in the morning-if by that time you haven't decided to cut me cold."

I kept right busy over the indexes after Mr. Van Britt went away, just to give the boss a little chance to catch up with himself. He sure was catching it hot and heavy on all sides. All we needed now was for President Dunton to come smashing in with one more good jolt and it would be all over but the obsequies, the monument and the epitaph. At least, that is the way it looked to me. It was along about ten o'clock when the boss closed his desk with a bang and said we'd better saw it off for the night. I walked up-town with him and as we were passing the Bullard he turned in to ask the night clerk if Collingwood was in his room. The answer was nix; that the young New what good does the money do me? | Yorker hadn't been seen since dinner, On the way out we saw Mr. Van Britt at the telegraph alcove. He was handing in a thick bunch of telegrams for transmission, and he rather pointedly turned the sheaf face down upon the marble slab when we came along, as much as to say "it's none of your business what I'm doing." It struck me as sort of curious that he should have so much wire correspondence when he claimed to be taking a rest, and why he was so careful

CHAPTER XVII

The Beginning of the End

However much the Hatch people may have wanted to avoid publicity and policies in the Storage & Warehouse reorganization, the prompt announcement of a general strike of the employees was enough to make every newspaper in the state sit up and take

We had the Mountaineer at the breakfast-table in the club grill-room on the morning of the day when the strike was advertised to go into effect. There was a news story, with big headlines in red ink, and also as editorial. Cantrell didn't say anything against the railroad company. His comments were those of an observer who wished to be straight-forward and fair to all concerned, but his editorial did not spare the silly local stockholders whose swapping and selling had made the coup possible.

Cantrell, himself, mild-eyed and look ing as if he'd got out of bed about three hours too early, drifted into the grill-room and took a seat at our table before we were through.

"I wanted to be decent about it Norcross," he said, forestalling anything that the boss might be going to say about the editorial in the Mountaineer. "I'm trying to believe that the men higher up in your railroad councils haven't fathered this Hatch scheme of consolidation-which is more than some of the other pencalpushers will do for you, I'm afraid. Thanks to your publicity measures, everybody believes that you still hold the whip-hand over the combination with your ground leases. I'm not asking what you propose to do; I am merely taking it for granted that you are going to stick to your policy, and hoping that you will come and tell me about it when you are ready to talk."

"I shall do just that," the boss promised; and I guess he would have been glad to let the matter drop at this, only Cantrell wouldn't.

"I lost three good hours' sleep this morning on the chance of catching you here at table," the editor went on. "A little whisper leaked in over the wires last night, or, rather, early this morning, that set me to thinking. You haven't been having any trouble with your own employees lately, have you. Norcross?"

"Not a bit in the world. Why?" "There is some little excitement, with the public taking a hand in it. There were indignation meetings held last night in a number of the towns along your lines, and resolutions were passed protesting against the action of the new combination in cutting wages, and asserting that public sentiment would be with the C. S. & W. employees if they are forced to carry out their threat of striking at noon today. The whisper that I spoke of intimated that the protest might extend to the railroad employees."

"There's nothing in it," said the bost decisively. "I suppose you mean in the way of a sympathetic strike, and that is entirely improbable. I imagine very few of the C. S. & W. employees belong to any of the labor unions." "A strike on the railroad would his cuse and we slid out. When we reached the office we found Mr. Van Britt on hand, reading the morning paper.

"You don't get around as early ac you might," was the little millionaire's comment when the boss walked in and opened up his desk. "I've been waiting nearly a half-hour for you to show up. Seen the papers?" The boss nodded.

"I don't mean the strike business; I mean the market quotations." "No; I didn't look at them."

"They are interesting. P. S. L. Common went up another three points yesterday. It closed at 38 and a fraction. You know what that means Graham. It means that Uncle Breckenridge and his crowd are already joyfully discounting your coming resignation. Somebody has given them & wire tip that you are as good as down and out, and unless a miracle of some sort can be pulled off, I guess the tip is a straight one. Strong as he is Chadwick can't carry you alone."

"Drop it," snapped the boss irritably. And then: "Have you come to tell me that you have reconsidered that fool letter you wrote me last night?" "Not in a million years," returned the escaped captive airily. "I am here this morning as a paying patron of the Pioneer Short Line. I want to hire a special train to go-well, anywhere I please on your jerkwater railroad. The Eight-Fifteen will do, with

Buck Chandler to run it." "Pshaw! take your own car and any crew you please. We are not selling transportation to you." "Yes, you are; I'm going to pay for that train, and what's more, I want your written receipt for the money. I need it in my business. Then, Chandler should happen to get gay and dump me into the ditch somewhere, I can sue you for damages."
