SHEEP INDUSTRY PROFITABLE

Necessary to Well-Balanced Agricul. ture and Pays Well if Herds Are Handled Right.

In this country the sheep industry has had frequent ups and downs, and recently it has been very much depressed, but it is an industry necessary to a well-balanced agriculture and usually it pays fairly good returns when flocks are properly handled. Wool is a staple commodity and mutten is a regular part of our diet, though it is much less used than beef or pork. Conditions in many parts of the United States are excellent for sheep raising and there can be little doubt that within a relatively short time the sheep will be more profitable than during the past Present conditions of depression are abnormal, just as the period of unusual prosperity was abnormal. There is a surplus of wool on hand in the country now, but it is being used up faster than it is being replaced by production on American farms. Even now mutton and lamb are in sufficient demand so that, in connection with wool, sheep raising is a good business. In the farming areas more attention is paid to mutton making; the range men have given more attention to wool, but now depend more on the returns for lamb and mutton than they have in the past.

-12-Meanwhile Cherry, in the sick flutter of spirits that had become familiar a breath. to her of late, kept her dentist appointment, and at noon looked at a dushed and lovely vision in the dentist's mirror.

She went out into the blazing street; It was one of the hot noontides of the year. At two o'clock a wild wind would spring up and send papers and dust flying, but just now the heat was dry and clear and still.

She was carrying a parasol and she opened it now and walked slowly toward Geary street. She could not even frame in her thoughts the utter blankpess of the feeling that swept over her at missing an opportunity to see Peter. She turned and went slowly up past the big shop windows that reflected the burning Plaza, and so came to the cool, great doorway of the St. Francis. Inside was tempered light and much noiseless coming and going. Cherry's heart beat madly with termeeting and parting.

Cherry drifted into the big, deepcarpeted waiting room; there were other women there, sunk into the big leather chairs, watching the doors and glancing at the clock. When a man came hastily in the door, one woman in a panic. What were they doing? rose, there was a significant smile, a murmured greeting, before the two peared?-how much had their atti- you!" vanished.

In a luxurious chair Cherry waited, Peter certainly would not come in until half-past twelve, perhaps not then. Suddenly, with a spring of her heart against her ribs, she saw Peter's dark bend with its touches of iron gray.

Groomed and brushed scrupulously as always, with the little limp, yet as always dignified and erect, he came to stand before her, and she stood up, little confused, she followed him to look an inconspicuous table in a corner of the dining room. Then the dreamlike unreality and beauty of their hours tegether began again.

For answer he looked at her thoughtfully a minute before his own face lighted with a bright smile.

CHAPTER XIV.

"You and I must go away!" said Peter. "I can't stand it. I love you. love you so dearly, Cherry. I can't think of anything else any more. It's like a fever-it's like a sickness. I'm never happy, any more, unless my arms are about you. Will you let me ake you somewhere, where we can be happy together?"

Cherry turned her confident, childish face toward him; her lashes glittered, but she smiled.

"But the injury is done to Alix now," Cherry said, slowly. "Now it is too late to go back! You and I couldn't-we couldn't deceive Alix here, Peter," Cherry added, and as she turned to him he saw her thin white blouse move suddenly with the quick rising of her heart. "That-that would be too horrible! But I could take this love of ours away, leave everything else behind, simply-simply recognize," stammered Cherry, her lips beginning to tremble, "that it is bigger than ourselves, that we can't help it, Peter. I'd fight it if I could," she added, piteously, "I'd go away if I didn't know that no power on earth could keep me

"I believe that even Alix will understand," Peter said after awhile, "She oves you and me better than any one else in the world; she is not only everything that is generous, but she isn't selfish, she is the busiest and the most sensible person I ever knew. "There will be no coming back, Cherry."

"Oh, I know that!" "There can't ever be-there mustn't be-you've thought of that?" he said, uncertainly. In the curious, unreal light that flooded the world, he saw her turn, and caught the gleam of her surprised eyes.

"You mean children-a child?" she said, surprisedly. "Why not. Peter?" she added, tightening her fingers, "what could be more wonderful than that we should have a child? Can you imagine a happier environment for a child than that little sunshiny, woodsy beach cottage; can't you see the little figure-the two or three little figures !-- scampering ahead of us through the country roads, or around the fire? will! Alix-I know her!-will only be sorry for me. She'll only think me mad to disgrace the good name of Strickland; she'll think we're both crazy. Perhaps she'll plunge into the orphanage work, or perhaps she'll go on here, gardening, playing with Buck, raising ducks-she says herself that she has never known what love means -says it really meaning it, yet as if the whole subject was a loke-a weakness!"

"I believe she will forgive us for she is the most generous woman in the world," Peter said, slowly, "Anyway-we can't stop now! We can't stop now! There is the steamer line that goes to Los Angeles," he mused. "Yes-I believe that is the solution," he added, with a brightening face. "Nobody you know goes there on it: It leaves daily at eleven, and gets into Los Angeles the following morning. From there we can get a drawingroom to New Orleans; that's only a day and a half more; and we can keep to ourselves if by any unlucky chance there should be any one we

"You arrange it, Peter, and some how I'll go, I'll write Alix-I'll tell her that where she's sane. I'm mad, and where she's strong. I'm weak! And we'll weather it, dear, and we'll find ourselves somewhere, alone, with all the golden, beautiful future before ue. But, Peter, until this part of it's over we mustn't be alone again-you mustn't kiss me again! Will you promise me?"

As stirred as she was, he gathered her little fingers together, and kissed them.

"I'll promise anything! Orly trust me for a few days more, and we will be away from it all. And now you put it all out of your mind, and run in and go to bed. You're exhausted, and if Alix gets the eight o'clock train she will be here in a few minutes."

"Good night!" she breathed, and he saw the white gown flicker against the soft light on the lawn, and naw the black shadow creeping by It, before she mounted the porch steps (TO BE CONTINUED.)

·ROAD · BUILDING

SCRUBBING-BOARD SURFACES

Bureau of Public Roads Building Experimental Highway to Determine Cause of Waves.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

What causes a "tarred" road to develop that peculiar scrubbing-board surface is a question that has been worrying the highway engineers quite as much as the long-suffering public. As often as not the symptoms appear in a macadam road that has been treated with asphalt. But the trouble is largely confined to roads built with tar or asphalt. Concrete and brick roads never develop such a surface, and ordinary dirt roads seldom do.

The bureau of public roads of the United States Department of Agriculture is building at the Arlington (Va.) experimental farm an experimental roadway 15 feet wide in an attempt to discover the cause of the trouble. The road is laid out in the form of a circle with a 90-foot radius. and its circumference, 565 feet in length, is to be divided into sections, each of which will be surfaced with a different kind of asphalt or tarred surface.

The experimental sections will be built exactly like actual road surfaces and when completed they will carry a "traffic" as much like actual traffic as it is possible to devise. The "traffic" will be supplied by a driverless motortruck which will be held to the circular path by means of a long arm extending from the center. The course of the truck will be altered from time to time so that the entire width of the roadway will be traveled.

It has not been possible to determine the cause by observation of actual roads because there are too many unknown quantities. The defect may be due to distortion of the earth under the road surface or to defects in the surface itself. It is probably caused in some way by the wheels of motor vehicles-how and why the engineers have not determined, largely because they have never possessed all the facts with regard to surface and subsurface conditions and character and weight of traffic.

OILED ROADS ARE APPROVED

Operation Must Be Performed Intelligently or It Will Make Conditions Worse.

The American Highway Bulletin, which approves of oiled roads, observes that oiling must be performed intelligently or it will make conditions worse instead of better. According to this authority it is useless to oil a dirt road which is not thoroughly drained and properly graded. It is a waste of money to oil a road which does not have a smooth hard surface free from dust. If the surface is uneven, oil collects in shallow depressions and softens the surface so that after the first heavy rain the travel tends to make mudholes at these places. If there is dust on the road, the oil combines with the dust to form a sort of mat, which the travel over it quickly breaks up into large flakes or scales. But if the road is in proper condition to receive the oil and the right kind of oil is used, the oil percolates into the pores of the earth for a depth of several inches, sealing them with an asphaltic binding material which unites the surface into a tougher mass than the original surface. The oil cannot make the road any harder, for only stone or gravel will accomplish that, but it will prevent the displacement of the earth particles under any loads which an earth road is adapted to carry. If the oiled surface is immediately covered with a thin layer of clean, hard sand, the travel will not disturb the oil and the travelers will suffer less inconvenience.

Gate for Crossings.

A new safety gate for railroad crossings is designed which stretches across the road like the old style gate, but is flexible and elastic, so that it gives instead of breaks when run into. The gate will force the vehicle backwards, away from danger.

Useless Work on Roads. Work on dirt roads at this season is worse than useless unless the soil is very dry and the road is hard rolled after working.

Kissing Custom Centuries Ago. Three hundred years ago it was a sign of hospitality for the lady of the house to welcome the men guests in her husband's presence with a kiss. It might be on lips, forehead or cheek. An interesting reference to the freedom of kissing in olden times is introduced by Sir Walter Scott in "The Fair Maid of Perth," where one of the characters says: "Thou knowest, the maiden who ventures to kiss a sleeping man, wins of him a pair of gloves.' -Philadelphi Ledger.

Dropping the Pilot.

Mr. Old-Timer, Miss Knowall and Miss Wise stood at the rail of an outgoing steamer as it slowed up to let the pilot off.

"Why are we stopping?" asked Miss Knowall.

The obliging Old-Timer replied, "To drop the pilot."

"Why are they letting him go?" Miss Wise wondered. "Another case of incompetence, 1 suppose," Miss Knowall suggested. "Well, it's lucky the captain found him out right away, before we got out any further into deep water," and Miss Wise heaved a sigh of relief .-

JOBS GO TO EX-SERVICE MEN

British Legion Secures Promise From Government to Give Employment to Former Soldiers.

The British Legion, formed from three veteran organizations with constitution and by-laws modeled after the American Legion, has secured a promise from the English government that in public works for the benefit of the unemployed 75 per cent of the jobs shall be given ex-service men.

With King George's approval, the Legion works through Britain's consulates and all employers showing a preference for ex-service men are permitted a special seal and their names are inscribed on the King's Roll.

Lubricating the machinery now in motion for the care of veterans in New York, New Jersey, and Connecticut, is the task assigned to Henry G. Opdycke. His job will be to speed up the work of the United States Veterans' bureau in the second district, where he has been appointed manager. "Service for the ex-service man" is the policy announced by Opdycke, who since the war has been active in the Broadway post of the American Legion. In his plan to rehabilitate the soldier he aims to bring the school work directly under government supervision so that exploitation of veterans, through contract schools, will be impossible.

Marjorie Rambeau Stars at Ball Given by the Legion at Waldorf Astoria Hotel.

Marjorie Rambeau knows what it means to be victorious. She won a victory in "Eyes dorf Astoria hotel, New York. None of the many social leaders and stage stars who appeared there in the historical pageant had a more agreeable part to play than Miss Rambeau, and persons attending the ball noticed that her "eyes of youth" were particularly bright and victorious on that occasion.

Chinese Women Advance

About the only thing of modern times to which China has not laid claim as being so old in that country that it was outworn and discarded centuries ago, is the new woman with a magazine of her very own, published in the interest of her development.

This publication, called the New Woman, boldly states as its object the reform of the old society to give more honorable place to women and the new woman is described as "a joyous being, of honest occupation, complete personality, free, independent and mutually helpful," says the Pittsburgh Dispatch.

Why does any healthy person want to be kicked into wakefulness in the morning?

Many people feel that they have to be agitated into wakefulness in the morning. They think that without the tea or coffee they take in the morning that they will not be able to meet the tasks and duties of the

Nothing could be more false than this reasoning. Any doctor can tell you this. For a healthy body does not require a stimulant. It gets all the stimulant it needs from food.

The thein and caffeine found in tea and coffee are irritating to the heart and nervous system. They jolt the nerves into undue activity. The result is a reaction. This is why regular tea and coffee drinkers think they must have their stimulant the first thing in the morning to wind them up for the day.

If you will stop using tea and coffee for a week, and drink

Postum, the pure cereal beverage instead, it will give Nature an opportunity to rid the system of the irritating substances that harass your nerves, upset digestion, increase your heart action, and make you nervous and irritable.

Many people who have tried Postum say that inside of a week they wake in the morning without that "all gone" feeling that they used to have, and are full of energy, strength and endurance.

Order Postum from your grocer today, and make it according to directions. Your first sip of Postum will surprise and please you. Postum comes in two forms: Instant Postum (in tins) made instantly in the cup by the addition of boiling Postum Cereal (in packages of larger bulk, for those who prefer to make the drink while the meal is being pre-pared) made by boiling for 20 minutes.

GAVE HIM DRASTIC LESSON

a new method of correcting the youth who had started to go astray was tried out the other afternoon by a big business man. He had caught his fifteen-year-old son pilfering articles from the house, and the boy had also been in trouble in the private school he was attending.

The father confided with a personal friend, a high official of the police department.

"Bring your son down to my office in headquarters at five o'clock this afterpoon and when I get through with him I don't think he will trouble you again," said the policeman.

At five o'clock father and son were on hand. They were then taken to the rogues' gallery, finger print and cell rooms, where the boy was told what would befall him eventually if he did not mend his ways. After ten minutes in a cell and a lecture before half . dozen detectives who were about, the boy was taken home, with the parting information from the police and his father that the next time he did anything wrong he would land down in Center street, to go through all the things that befall crimicals, and that it would be in earnest the sext time. The boy indicated he was cured-
