

WEED CONTROL

For a moment today, I want to talk to you about that last point—weed control.

All of you have seen one or more of the estimates of hundreds of millions of dollars' loss to the farmers caused annually by weeds. "In a sense," say the authors of the new version of familiar old Farmer's Bulletin 660—"farming might be called a warfare against weeds."

These men, W. M. Talbot, weed control investigator, and Dr. F. V. Coville, chief botanist of the Bureau of Plant Industry, see no easy way to win the war. They lay down three principles and counsel that we fight the battle out along these lines if it takes all of several summers. The first principle is—prevent weeds from maturing seed on the farm. The second, prevent the introduction of weed seed to the farm. The third, prevent perennial weeds from making top growth.

Now I know a lot of you are wondering what Mr. Talbot and Dr. Coville have to say about the method of chemical warfare on weeds which has been so much discussed in the past three years.

Well, they say this: (I'm quoting) "Weed-killing chemicals, because of their cost and other objections, should be regarded as substituted for tillage, pasturing, and cropping methods of keeping down top growth of perennial weeds. A limited use of suitable chemicals is practicable, however, for the destruction of small, scattered patches of very troublesome weeds. Chlorates, oils, common salt, and soluble arsenicals are examples of fairly effective chemical weed killers."

If you wish to employ chemical weed killers against small, stubborn patches of perennial weeds on your place, you'll find the precautions to observe duly noted in Farmers' Bulletin 660. You'll also find the directions for the old, hard, but tried and true methods of killing weeds. You'll find also a table of the common weeds of each section giving details that will enable you to recognize them. Ask for Farmers' Bulletin 660-F, "Weeds and Their Control."

Here's another old familiar Bulletin number, Farmers' Bulletin 1549-F. Its title is "Feeding Cattle for Beef." Mr. Black and the other men of the beef Cattle section in the Animal Husbandry Division keep on revising this publication as fast as their experiments give them new knowledge. The latest revision includes the facts revealed by their cooperative feeding trials of the past several years in the Eastern Beef sections. These facts relate mainly to the value of grain supplements fed beef cattle on the Appalachian pastures of the East. But the regular standard information on Western grass feeding, on dry-lot feeding, on feed lot equipment, and on the special points revealed by modern nutrition study that should be known by every feeder, is retained.

Here's another one for stock owners. It's for the men who have sheep and it offers one way of cutting a bit off the huge market supplies of lambs from the record 1931 crop that will start toward the packing houses in September and October. "Farm slaughtering and use of lamb and mutton" is the title of Farmers' Bulletin 1172-F. The ease of killing sheep and lambs on the farm and the small size of the carcasses make them a convenient form of fresh meat for family use and for killing. You can also cure the meat for future use. Farmers' Bulletin 1172-F tells Dad and the boys the modern methods of slaughtering and dressing, and mother the modern methods of cooking.

Here's another one for the housewife. Its title is "Making Fermented Pickles." Its number is 1438-F. Don't let the title scare you away. It simply refers to the bacteriological processes of fermentation that go on when you pickle any vegetable in brine. Farmer's Bulletin 1438-F, "Making Fermented Pickles."

And here are two that will interest only a few sections of the Farm and Home Neighborhood. For you folks in Florida we've again reprinted the bulletin on spraying for the control of insects attacking citrus trees in Florida. It's Farmer's Bulletin 933-F. Seems to me we have to reprint it about every 60 days.

Now for you folks in the extreme northern parts of the Eastern United States, we have a circular on "Moss Peat, Its Uses and Distribution in the United States." The other Farm and Home folks listening in know they have to pay fancy prices for moss peat to use as a composting material in their gardening work. Most of it is imported from Europe. But there are deposits of it in the Northern States. The author of Circular 167 has been investigating the composition and availability of deposits in several of these States. If you want a copy of this report, send for Circular 167.

Goodbye, now, for about three weeks.

STATIC

By J. L. Cottingham

Dee Williamson wishes an announcement made to the effect that he has at last caught some fish. That boy is a hog for publicity—he should have been a society leader. Ira Hanna tries to put too many things in his show windows, they remind you of the Battle of Bull Run after the bulls have gone.

Virgil Seabury is my vote for the wisest man in town. He never pops off about how he manages his home. Rineman presented me with a newspaper clipping which alleged that I had gone to work. Said it made him feel better to know that misfortune had overtaken me too—yet they say women are catty. Floyd Brewer is a great help to the sheriff—saves him many steps when he needs another juror.

Onions make bad breaths but good hamburgers. If a girl steals a dollar bill, she is a thief, but if she steps out with another woman's husband she is a sport. A nice girl is one who saves her prettiest lingerie for a windy day. A graceful man is a fellow that can shift gears in a small car without getting his face slapped. The preceding specimens of vulgarity were not put in for your instruction but to fill space. Twenty inches is a lot of stuff to write every week.

Now that Ben Hamner owns his own business he can charge Jean Day's daily cup of coffee to expense instead of to ill-advised associations. George Karantous has increased the size of the holes in his doughnuts—that is no way to help us get through hard times. Nick at the Palace of Sweets claims that the glass jars on top of his show case are not there to be sampled.

Met Homer Brelsford on the Carbon highway—apparently sober but driving on the wrong side of the road. Curtis Hertig says Jack Lewis takes ten minutes for his tee shots—a quarter of a minute to drive and nine and three quarter minutes looking for his Reddy Tee.

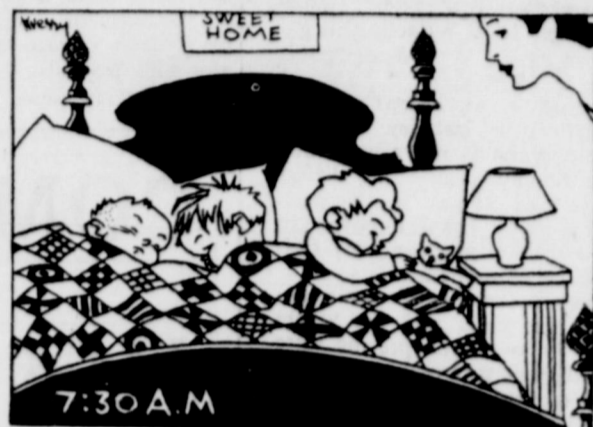

John Lee Roper says Static is useful. He read in the column that Arthur Wright had a new pair of coveralls and missing a pair of his own went down to investigate. He says Wright is now wearing his old ones.

Eddie Caontr in the Saturday Evening Post and W. S. Michaels, in the Weekly Record, wrote articles explaining the depression. Cantor seemed to believe that the only relief possible was to have everybody eat bananas and strew the peels on the sidewalks; Michaels seemed to believe that if everybody went to work, prosperity would swing around the corner on two wheels. Michaels is the nearest right of the two—even if we do seem to brag on the home team—but he has not suggested the way to get every body working again. After many weeks of research work I have discovered the answer to that. Some smart bird from the days gone by said that a clean man is never out of work. That is the key word—clean. Now, if every lady that goes shopping in town will buy three cakes of soap each time she goes shopping, and then take a trip around the square and present a cake to each man she meets that looks like he needs it, unemployment here would soon be over. The ladies should remember to present the soap to the fellow that needs it most, however, whether he is handsome or has soulful eyes or not. Joe Laurent says he was a better ball player than he is a barber. Oscar Chastain claims he is a bridge player—the other bridge players should protest against such scandal. Ted Ferguson has two bad habits—he chews gum and plays chess. Dr. Carter always says that he hopes you are well —wonder if the doctor is telling the truth. Further deponent sayeth not. I thank you. "Bud" Williamson has gone "West"—flying high. His end was violent and sudden—probably the way he would have wished it to be. He always stood on his own feet and he was a square-shooter—that is my tribute—and my best.

HUMORETTES

Neuman—A man is happier dining at his own table.
MacTish—He is if he can keep his mind off the cost of the food.

"Is this magistrate honest?"
"Absolutely! He's never taken an appointment yet without paying for it!"

"I married my first husband for money and my second for love."
"Then you are happy, I suppose?"
"Not very. You see my first husband married me for love and my second for money."

Lawyer—Why do you want a divorce?

Movie Mae—Oh, I'm just crazy to have another wedding.

Toutes Seules Club Entertained

Mrs. C. H. McBee entertained the Toutes Seules Club and several guests with a tacky party at her home on South Seaman street Tuesday evening. Mrs. Clyde Street was awarded the prize for the tackiest costume.

After many contests and games were played refreshments of old fashioned pumpkin pie with whipped cream and coffee was served to all members and the following guests: Mesdames J. W. Miller, Frank Tucker and L. E. Beaty.

EASTLAND, TEXAS

EDITORIAL

Mayor McCullough was seen and stated that much disappointment is felt because of the fact that John W. Moore, to whom a gas franchise was granted recently by the City Commission, has not returned to Eastland, and has not expressed himself properly in regard to his ability to put in the gas system and his ability to furnish a sufficient gas supply. The Commission is not expected to go further with his proposition until Mr. Moore makes satisfaction on these two points. He was expected back in Eastland early last week, but no further information has been heard of him.

There has been some other gestures, however, concerning the gas matter. An influential banker has been in Eastland making inquiry touching opportunities for a new gas distributing company in this section. We are still looking for a new gas supply, one that will cost our people in the neighborhood of 35c per thousand. If Oklahoma can get gas for 45c per thousand, and if 42 West Texas cities can get 15% reduction in gas rates, then, located as we are, we think gas at 35c is a reasonable rate.

The Mayor is working hard to bring to the citizens of Eastland relief from the high gas bills of the last few winters. Every gas user should remember that winter is not a great distance away and we have no reason to expect anything different from the high gas bill we have had to pay in the past. Remember, too, that the City Commission has the power to fix gas rates, so if the plan for a new distributing company fails we can set the rates through our City Commission.

This is not a new idea. It has been before our Commission. It failed to pass, however, but the gas users and the voters still have the power in their hands to lower the present rates and if they will follow closely the different proposals that come before the Commission they are sure to find a satisfactory solution of our gas troubles—then get behind that proposal and put it over. One or two Commissioners cannot do the job alone.

So far three proposals have been before the Commission. First, Mayor McCullough introduced a resolution to give the present gas company notice and then have a judicial determination of a reasonable gas rate. That means the City would go to the District Court and ask that court to fix a reasonable rate, in case the gas company refused to agree to a lower rate. This proposition was voted down by a majority of 3 to 2 of the Commission.

Second, Mayor McCullough offered an ordinance to fix the gas rate at 35c per thousand feet. Three of the Commissioners objected to that ordinance and same was not passed.

Third, the franchise was granted to John W. Moore, and now it remains to be seen what will be done with this proposition. The franchise as proposed was amended several times, and three of the Commissioners voted for its passage and one voted against it and one was absent.

You are the one who will profit or suffer by such changes. Don't stand by and allow a change to be made if it is not for the good of the masses, and, on the other hand if it is for the good of all, it is your duty to help make the changes.

Will you support the Commissioners whom you elected or will you desert them now that summer is here and your gas bill low. Let's finish the job.

wheels moving to bring about this event. Valuable assistance was cheerfully given by Mr. Homer Brelsford, Jr., and Earl Bender in soliciting advertisements for the premium catalog. As a result of our combined efforts we have secured advertisements from 71 individual and business firms agreeing to pay a total of $591.00. This compares favorably with what was done last year when we obtained advertisements from 86 individuals with a total of $775.00. A two thousand and copy edition of this catalog is now in the hands of the printers and will be ready for distribution to the ten or more community fairs beginning with September 1, 1931.

Mr. J. C. Patterson, county agent and Miss Ruth Ramey, Home Demonstration agent, are both actively engaged in soliciting exhibits in their various departments and disseminating the news of this Fair throughout the county.

The various attractions of the midway will be operated this year exclusively by local organizations such as the Rotary and Lions clubs, American Legion, Boy Scouts, Civic League and a number of other organizations. The committees working on this promise many new and amusing attractions. A new feature this year will be an exhibit of old relics loaned by the citizens of Eastland county. These will be placed in a store building on the square sponsored by and under the supervision of Ed T. Cox, Sr.

The Chamber of Commerce of Ranger will have charge of the opening nights platform entertainment. The rural community chorus the second night's platform entertainment and the rural community dramatics the third, winding up on Saturday night with the Chamber of Commerce of Cisco furnishing the platform entertainment. Please keep the dates in mind and be sure to be present September 23, 24, 25 and 26th.

Also do not forget that your Chamber of Commerce is open during business hours every day of the year, ready and willing to give information on any subject called for. Our phone number is 192.

Climate

For many years we have been bragging about this, not only mild, but equable climate. During the last six months many of the patriarchs of this for other parts of our country.

The extreme heat they have had to endure accompanied by sweltering nights to damp to sleep, while mosquitos and flies made life miserable, this brought forcibly to them the delightful climate they left. As they write letters back here or straggle home for a breath of our clean air, while thinking of the sunshiny days and cool nights they all express appreciation of this blessing.

Our climate is something that does not cost us anything and should be the first subject of conversation to every stranger we meet. Constant bragging of the "glorious climate of California" has made that region famous and prosperous. It will do the same to us if we wake up to the fact that we have the best place on earth in which to live in comfort and quiet enjoyment.

LETTERS FROM THE READERS

Weekly Record, Eastland, Texas. Gentlemen:

A Flatwood farmer says he will pick up the nails and tacks, also any small pieces of metal that can puncture auto tires. This to be done with a home made magnetic machine.

ONE OF OUR LOCAL SERVICE CLUBS

A short time before his death President Harding made this prediction: "The Men of the American Legion will be summoned with confidence to deal with the problems of today and the possible crises of the future." This prediction is proving true every day. The Legion is neither conservative, nor is it liberal. Its views are rather those of the average doer of the world's deeds, a middle of the road course that eventually will make it the most powerful organization in the land. The vigorous young men composing the Legion realize their unselfish program. They have earned the ungrudging admiration of all elements of citizenry for their efforts toward a laudable end.

The local Legion post is winning the support of many good citizens of Eastland. They have shown that their principal purpose is not only in the interest of their disabled and down and out buddies; but also join hands with all other service organizations of the town. The citizens of Eastland have learned that when tickets are sold for any purpose by the Legion, or donations asked, that the money so obtained is not for any selfish purpose; but is for the benefit of Eastland as a whole.—A Citizen.

HOLE IN ONE

Marshall McCollough, Jr., while playing on the Eastland Golf Course Monday afternoon, made one of those rare things—a hole in one. The hole was number two and is a 197 yard par three. This is the first time a player has sunk his tee shot on this particular hole, it having been in existence only two and one-half years, after the remodeling of the course.

Other plays in the foursome were George Taggart, Jr., Winston Castleberry, and E. Laurent.

ROWENA RIDES THE RUMBLE

COPYRIGHT 1931 BY THE AUTHOR

by ETHEL HUESTON

SIXTH INSTALLMENT
Rackruff Motors hire Rowena to accompany Peter on a nation-wide tour in their roadster as an advertising stunt. At the last minute little Bobby is engaged to act as chaperon.

A few miles out Bobby becomes tearful at being parted from her sweetheart and Rowena insists on taking her place in the rumble seat so that she can ride with Peter and have him to talk to about Carter. Rowena gets Peter to consent to divide the expense money each week as it arrives, and astonishes Peter by eating too economically.

The three tourists reach Denver, after passing through Buffalo, Chicago and St. Louis. Peter and Rowena have many tiffs on the way while Carter keeps wiring Bobby to return to New York. The morning after they reach Denver Peter and Rowena discover Bobby has deserted them and returned to New York by train. They are faced with the impossible condition of continuing their trip without a chaperon.

Rowena suggests to Peter that they make a "companionate" marriage. They are married and go to Cheyenne, where their actions, when they ask for rooms on separate floors, arouses the suspicions of the hotel clerk. They finally succeed in getting rooms, but not without exciting the laughter of the hotel loungers.

Now go on with the story.

Although Peter was furiously angry, highly humiliated and blaming Rowena for everything, he was kind at heart and could not resist the plaintive pathos in her voice, usually so crisp and cool.

"Good night, Rowena," he said more pleasantly than she had any right to expect. "Don't worry. Everything will be all right."

After a sleepless night Peter was down in the lobby at an unbelievably early hour. But early as it was, he did not precede the interested smiles and stares of the day staff which had replaced the night workers—clerks, telephone operators and elevator boys.

Even at that unreasonable hour there were loungers in the lobby. And each and every one of them, and even the head waitress smiling in the door of the dining-room, knew all about the young New Yorkers married the day before in Denver who demanded rooms on separate floors. Confusion stung his face with burning red.

He went up-stairs, walked up, to Rowena's room and knocked sharply. "Yes—who?" called Rowena in a bright voice that had obviously been schooled to register good nature in the face of adversity.

"Me," he answered surlily. "Chuck your things into your bag and let's get out of here."

"How about breakfast?"

"The hell with breakfast."

"O. K. by me," called Rowena, in the maddening voice of one who has stoutly enjoined one's inner soul to smiles and sweetness. And indeed even in her sleep Rowena had been reminding herself that she must be very patient with Peter for a few days, as he was apt to be just the least bit in the world cross about the state of affairs.

Within an hour they were hurling the dust of Cheyenne from the wheels of the roadster and as soon as the last outpost of the city lay buried in the past Peter pulled off to the side of the road and drew up to a grinding stop. Then he turned to Rowena and his was not the look of a newly married man.

"Well, you see what fools we made of ourselves," he began. "I hope you're satisfied."

"I'm terribly sorry," said Rowena humbly. "I feel just wretchedly about everything. But I couldn't possibly fore see such awful complications, now could I, Peter? What experience have I had with husbands and hotel registers and such monstrosities?"

"We'll just have to make the best of a suite or adjoining rooms hereafter," said Peter more kindly. "It's this demanding separate floors that makes them give us the razzberry."

"But we can't have connecting rooms, Peter," said Rowena unhappily. "We just can't. We have to be terribly careful about things like that or we can't get it annulled. Don't you see, Peter, if we stay in adjoining rooms clear across the country, nobody in the world is going to believe we—really did—stay in adjoining rooms."

"Then we'll have to get a divorce instead of an annulment. I am not going to make a fool of myself like that again."

"But we can't get a divorce in New York," protested Rowena. "I wrote a story about that once—I know how the laws are. One of us would have to go to Reno or Paris to get it and it would take every cent of money we can save on the whole trip to pay for the divorce. And what good would that be to anybody?"

"I'll give you grounds to get it right in New York," said Peter grimly. "I'm desperate."

"That's like you, Peter," said Rowena impatiently. "Thinking only of yourself, as usual.—Well, don't you think for a minute that I'm going to get a divorce in New York. I'm not going to be made a fool of there before all my friends."

"What do you mean—made a fool of?" Peter demanded.

"Why, having everybody think I'm so no-good I can't hang on to a husband for two months! — No, if it comes to that, I'll give you the grounds."

"You'll what?"

"Give you grounds for a divorce."

"What grounds?"

"The same grounds you so magnanimously offered me."

"Rowena, are you crazy? A woman can't do a thing like that. Why, it—it would ruin you. You're crazy."

"Oh, am I? Well, let me tell you one thing, Mr. Peter Bland! I'd rather have my friends think I stepped out on you in two months after our marriage than that I couldn't keep you from stepping out on me. It's much more flattering, I assure you!"

"You would, Rowena, I honestly believe you would. You're just that dumb," said Peter. "However, let's not fight over getting the divorce today. The thing to agree on now is that we've got to put up with rooms adjoining or en suite and say no more about separate floors."

"If you're too proud to ask for separate floors, I'll do it," said Rowena. "I'd rather be embarrassed before a strange hotel clerk than be the laughing stock of my own friends."

"Yes, that would do me a lot of good, wouldn't it?" demanded Peter. "That would certainly save my face! To have my wife sail up to the desk and register for me and ask for rooms in separate floors. Oh, yes, that would make everything fine and dandy."

"I'm not your wife," stormed Rowena.

"No, thank God."

"I'm—I just happen to be married to you—by accident. A—a sort of detour."

"Worse luck," growled Peter. Rowena opened the door and sprang out.

"What are you going to do? Walk to Yellowstone?"

"I am going," said Rowena coldly, "to retire to my place in the rumble seat."

"Rowena, I ask you, don't be any more ridiculous than usual," he pleaded. "How's it going to look—only two of us in a roadster and you riding in the rumble seat in this boiling hot sun?"

"I'm above worrying about how things look," said Rowena. "I'd rather be bounced and bruised and blistered in the rumble seat than insulted in—in the lap of luxury."

She raised the umbrella with a vicious little click of the snap, adjusted the cushions about her slender body, and rode the rumble in solemn grandeur, leaving Peter to fume futilely alone in the front.

It was about the hour of sunset

Fisherman's Luck

By Albert T. Reid

when a sudden shadow blackened the west, a sudden cool breeze touched their faces.

"They must be having showers in the mountains," said Peter.

But Rowena, deep in a painful sleep of complete exhaustion, did not answer.

It was more than showers they were having in the mountains. It was cloudbursts, one after the other in torrential downpour, and in less time than it took for the cooling breeze to sweep down the plain with refreshment for their tired faces, every dry creek bed and parched arroyo that led from the hot mountains to the burning plains was flooded with rushing water from the heights.

He guided the little roadster along the yellow mesa road toward another of the narrow rocky gorges through which they had been passing at intervals all day long. The roar in his ears grew louder, closer. Suddenly it sounded ominous and threatening. Peter looked to the west and was amazed to see a solid wall of water nearly as high as the car sweeping down the little canyon.

Instinctively his foot pressed the accelerator. The roaring wall of water was close but the arroyo itself was closer—a scant few feet away—and in a few minutes the onrushing river would render it impassable for cars. The car leaped forward down the steep slope into the arroyo. But the hungry water, as if jealous of this boldness roared down up on them. The car swung powerless beneath his hand, slid away from the road and the river tossed it lightly down-stream and drove it securely into a crevice among the rocks.

Rowena, suddenly aroused from her exhausted sleep, had started up in terror at sight and sound of the torrential river bearing down upon them. Prompted by an innate impulse she struggled quickly up to the seat of the rumble, intending to jump, but the car was flung violently from beneath her and cheated of her insecure foothold she fell headlong, face downward, in the icy water.

Peter, stunned by the unexpected onslaught of water, was startled to action at sight of Rowena whipped helpless against the rocks by the irresistible flood.

"You little fool—what did you jump for?" but even as he spoke he was out of the car and in less than a moment had her firmly in his arm. Slowly he drew her back until they had the support of the car behind them against the cold pressure of the water.

"I—didn't" she shouted as soon as she recovered her breath. "Fell!"

"Sorry!" roared Peter regretfully.

A GOSPEL FOR ALL MEN
Acts 11:5-18

Rev. Samuel D. Price, D. D.
Here is a lesson with an unusual amount of action. The Bible is far from being a dull book. To test this read from Acts 10:1 to 11:25 for the entire setting of the narrative. You will need your map in following the travelers as they journey between Caesarea, Joppa and Jerusalem.

Cornelius is a Roman centurion who had found the emptiness of the Roman mythology for the purposes of religion and had developed faith in Jehovah as the only God. He was making practical use of his religion thru prayer and practise. The knowledge that he gained made him eager for a fuller understanding of spiritual truths. In the midst of a certain prayer season he was directed to send messengers to Joppa and get Peter as a teacher of still larger spiritual conceptions.

Now Peter was a devout Hebrew as well as a growing Christian. National customs were a part of his very life. He was strict in maintaining kosher diet. While awaiting summons for dinner he had a vision of various animals let down from heaven in a sheet, and was told to kill and eat. At once his Hebrew training asserted itself as he declared that some of the animals were unclean. He was told that what God cleansed could not be unclean and the teaching of the vision was applied to those who at that very time were knocking at the gate. The messengers from Cornelius were admitted and next day Peter went to the home of a Gentile that he might preach there and have full fellowship with them.

When Peter preached the full gospel as it is in Jesus Christ there was a renewal of the out pouring of the Holy Spirit, as on the day of Pentecost. The same spiritual forces were released and without hesitation the evangelist proceeded to baptize the many believers.

ROWENA RIDES THE RUMBLE.

"My fault. Shouldn't have tried it!—No good racing a river!"
"Cheerio!" comforted Rowena loudly. "You nearly made it!"
Other cars pulled up beside the new born river, and the occupants lent their willing assistance in getting Peter and Rowena safely up on the shore. And Peter, against the advice of the tourists and the frightened orders of Rowena, went immediately back to the car for their bags.
"All the clothes we've got he explained cheerfully. "They're important."

Fortunately the bags were not as yet soaked through except for a few articles on the top the contents were dry. Rowena and Peter, soaking wet, hurriedly got out dry clothes and then paused abruptly, regarding both the crowd and each other with timorous hesitancy.

"I'll have my tent up in a jiffy," said a big red-faced Kansas farmer with loud kindness. River'll be down by morning, but we'll all have to pitch camp here tonight. Give me a hand there, youngster."

And before he had finished announcing his kind intentions he had raised a diminutive tent and extended its hospitality to the dripping pair.

"Key to the city, lady and gent," he said with a great laugh.

Peter made a hasty motion to Rowena who slipped quickly inside and dropped the flap.

"Your wife, I take it," said the red faced Kansan with a puzzled air.
"Yes," said Peter. "But the tent isn't so very big—and we're both so terribly wet—and besides—I want to have another look at the car. I don't want it carried off down the canyon."
"Don't you worry about that car, brother. That there car is put for keeps. At least ill the river goes down."

Other cars pulled up and their occupants joined the enforced camp on the river bank. They put up tents and staked out claims here and there. Children were put to gathering stones and sticks for a fireplace.

All together they ate impromptu supper on the plains, sitting in a cluster of friendly groups about the fire, and afterward as darkness fell and the stars lit the black sky over the black prairie, they gathered closer and talked. Some sang, and the men smoked. And presently by twos or by families they crept away to their separate camps for the night.

"Here's an old mattress you can use," said the Kansas farmer, tossing it across to Peter. We've got another one. It's not very big but you're not a very big family."

There is no use now to hope for a return of short skirts. Hemlines may be raised an inch or so for evening wear next autumn, but anything like a really short skirt is out of the question. And so if you still possess any of the old time short skirted frocks you had better dispose of them now—unless, of course, you can do something to make them longer.

Today's dress shows a charming evening ensemble that suggests a clever way to lengthen the skirt of a chiffon dress. The original from which the sketch was made was of flowered chiffon and black lace, but the idea could be carried out with a plain chiffon and lighter lace. In the dress sketched the chiffon extends down to the insteps, but this is not necessary if the slip is of good length. And so if you have a too short chiffon dress our suggestion is to buy lace flouncing for the bottom of the skirt with enough matching lace to make a little jacket. The jacket will add to the usefulness of the dress and will provide an excuse for the lace flounce. If the skirt in its present guise is extremely short you may have to make a flounce deeper than the one shown in the sketch.

The jacket shown here is fairly long with a belt arrangement that ties in a bow at the front. Your jacket may be waist length or one of the very short boleros that have recently come into favor in Paris. If the making of a jacket seems like an ordeal you may use a piece of lace to match the flounce as a scarf or a deep cape collar.

First National Whittling Contest

Boys Whittle Your Way to $1000 in prizes. 325 Prizes in all

FIND yourself a block of wood somewhere—anywhere—get a knife and start whittling... a National Whittling Contest is on!

The first prize is $250.00, the second prize $125.00, and there are 223 other cash prizes and 100 pocket knives to be awarded. We believe every young, rough-and-ready American boy is mighty handy with that pocket knife of his. Show us! Enter the contest today! A famous scout has written a booklet "How to Whittle". It gives many helpful hints on how to whittle, what to whittle and the kind of wood to use.

*Contest closes midnight, October 24, 1931
