A CHALLENGE TO LABOR AND INDUSTRY

In a time like the present the horizon is fairly cluttered up with signs and portents. None of these is much more has been visiting with her parents significant than the sudden epidemic of strikes-an epi- for a few days. demic that has broken out in the last month or so and that ed Mrs. Funk's grandparents, Mr. Ziehr. is giving the federal doctors one of the busiest seasons and Mrs. J. Whatever else these strikes may mean, they at least tored to Strawn Sunday afternoon. prove that industry is no longer stagnant. They didn't put in an appearance during those dull months when we were at the bottom of the depression. They're coming now for on the north end of the district, a number of reasons, but chiefly because things are pick-land extended the regular school ing up. Men don't strike when the plant is closed down the district sure appreciates the for lack of orders.

And the strikes present—to a nation which already has a century's supply of problems to settle in a few months- a party Saturday night. A good a new problem; one that carries a double-barreled challenge, one barrel for industry and the other for labor.

It is a challenge that must be read in the light of the NRA program. The National Labor Board's ruling, which emphasizes the fact that the law guaranteeing the right of collective bargaining means exactly what it says, is part of the background for these strikes, and it conditions their significance.

First of all, the problem challenges the directors of industry. It is a test of their spirit of fairness, of their willingness to co-operate in the tremendous experiment of broken leg by being run over by a the new deal. Labor has gained a great victory in the Industrial Recovery Act; the industrialist who seeks reprisals and wants to "put labor in its place" is pilling up trouble, not only for himself but for the entire country.

upon labor the necessity of developing some broad-gauge statesmen. It calls on labor to take the long view of things, Wheat Bill Whatley, Jenny Hayes, to exercise patience in places where patience comes hard, to get rid of the racketeer and the self-seeker.

Both of these challenges must be met. The present outbreak of strikes could, if unchecked, lead to a catastrophic situation. It can, if the leaders of the contending forces meet the test with intelligence and patriotism, be the forerunner of a new era in American industrial history, an era-in which both sides can profit as never before.

DALLAS GAS RATE

The outlook for a 20 per cent rate reduction in natural gas in Dallas and 250 other Texas cities and towns does town to hunt for it and found it not seem particularly rosy, and there's nothing much anyone can do about it. It is true the state railway commis- Roberson had gone out to get Tom sion has ordered the wholesale or gate rate to supply com- Butler's car to repair it and went panies cut from 40 cents per 1.000 cubic feet to 32 cents, to the wrong place and took Cliff's but that is only the first step.

With this order put into effect with what seemed to be reluctance on the part of the commission, the further proceedings will doubtless be in the courts. There the tina Sowersby, of North Finchley, whole question of valuation on which the commission's order is based will have to be gone over again, as well as what is a reasonable return on capital in these days.

Among other things the court held that 8 = per cent was a reasonable return especially as the gas business was a hazardous business. With what are considered prime securities selling at prices so low a return of 12 to 15 per cent was possible, the court thought 8 per

A court, especially a federal court, undoubtedly would give weight FOR SALE-Cheap small or large to this development in the situation .- Dallas Dispatch.

HO'W MUCH OIL?

The Texas railroad commission is in a quandary as to how much oil can be produced in Texas, and from each field, during an eight-day hiatus between federal and state regulations. It is uncertain as to what can be done about production after the troublesome eight days are up.

The federal government has allocated to Texas 955,-000 barrels daily production from Sept. 8. The Texas commission, require dto give 10 days' notice and hold a hearing before changing proration orders, has called a haering for the 16th. Meantime, its orders allow 1,200,000 barrels daily production, prorated between fields, as about the lowest restriction that courts-federal coutrs, by the way -would tolerate as reasonable.

The federal oil committee, and Charles F. Roeser, Texs representative, have not tried to say how the total Texs production shall be allocated to fields. The Texas law gives that power to the railroad commission. The commission, in past experience, found that federal courts wouldn't let them cut production too low.

And now with the legislature coming on again, Texas is promised more, many more, words, as lawmakers undertake to settle the problems of oil that won't stay settled.

The Junior B. Y. P. U. put on a play entitled "Grandpa Sings Up," directed by the Junior B. Y. P. U. sponsor, Mrs. Robert Webb.

"Grandpa" was played by Travis Cook, and "Grandma," by Miss Marzelle Wright. H. A. McCanhes Jr. was the announcer of the play and characters, some 10 junior members filling out he balance of the cast, and presenting a sword drill, a feature of the play.

Junior League Meets
The Junior League of the Methodist church had their session Sunday night, opened by John Hart, chairman for the program, who presided in the absence of the president and vice president.

"The Fight Is On," was followed by the program of which the subject, "Power of Purpose," was given the preparatory introduction by Billy Satterwhite.

Ralph Mahon Jr. spoke on 'What Kind of a Purpose," and Joan Johnson on "Power to Endure and Do."

-Hymn, "I'm Pressing Onward," and the league benediction in uni on, closed the program, for which Clara June Kimble was pianist.

In the absence of their president the first vice president, Mrs. Whatley, presided over the session, which opened with the Lord's Prayer in unison.

The minutes by the secretary, Mrs. Sone, were read and approved, and roll call answered by reports of the members vacation.

During a brief business sessio plans were made to clean up the yard of the church.

The contest that has been in progress for a month among the members who have been selling vanilla extract and skidoo, won by Miss Mabel Hart, who will be presented a favor. The devotional, a very searching and beautiful theme, was brought by Mrs. Verne Hart, who spoke on "Sin, Its Causes and Prevention," quoting authority from Peter, Isiaiah and the Psalms. An intensive and well developed Bible study from the first and second chapters of Romans was interestingly given by Mrs. James Horton, and the third, fourth and fifth chapters, finely interpreted by Mrs. Ray Larner.

The next meeting of the aux iliary was announced for the first Monday in October, at 3 p. m., with Miss Mabel Hart. Dainty refreshmerts of small cakes and iced limeade were served Mmes. Ross Moorhead, Vern Hart, Jack Meredith, Robert R. Pearson, Ray Larner, J. L. Cottingham, James Horton, J. LeRoy Arnold, Whatley, Harry B. Sone, and Miss Mabel Hart.

Pretty Shower Honors Mrs. Howard Harris

One of the week-end delightful affairs, that honored Mrs. Howard Harris of Ranger, was the open house, kept at the home of the honoree's mother, Mrs. W. W. Walters, 404 West Patterson street, assisted by her co-hostesses Mrs. Harve Gutherie, and Mrs. Raymond Richardson, the latter the sister-in-law of Mrs. Harris.

The home was darkened and lighted with softly shaded effects in line with the pink and white color motif employed in all details of this attractive affair, and matching the lovely pink roses in vases and floor baskets, used throughout the home in adorn-

WHAT HAS HAPPENED

Rod agrees.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

Rod told her the truth—the whole story from beginning to end. Abby was stunned. Her faith in the man she loved crumbled about her with a mighty crash. Her dream castle became battered ruins. Somthing snapped in her heart.

"You're a quitter!" Her words bit out contemptuously. "You want to start at the Lop—along with men who've worked all their lives—you want them to bow down to you and flatter you—like those so-called friends of yours—making you think you're great because of what you can do."

"You've made it pretty plain "You've made it pretty plain or contempt to say the plain was desperate. "But they can get other jobs—they have experienced." Idon't doubt that, but we haven't time to waste in training."
Rod was discouraged. "Is see."
"Than sorry—I hope we can place you some time—"
"Thank you." Rod turned to go, changed his mind and turned back. "Listen, Mr. Conover, I don't want to keep anybody else out of a job, but I'm desperate—I'm—I may not be as good as these fellows out there, but I'll work twice as hard—and you won't have to tell me if I'm no good—I'll know. You just give me a chance—that's all I want."

"That's all they want." Conover noded towards the door, where some twenty men were waiting to be interviewed for the job.
Rod was descouraged. "Is see."

"Listen, Mr. Conover, I don't want to keep anybody else out of a job, but I'm desperate—I'm—I may not be as good as these fellows out there, but I'll work twice as hard—and you won't have to tell me if I'm no good—I'll know. You just give a chance—that's all I want."

"That's all they want." Conover noded towards the door, where some twenty men were waiting to be interviewed for the job.

"You've made it pretty plain what you thought of my friends—and of me—"
"I haven't said half of it! Where would you be if you didn't have your father's money? You couldn't earn a living if you tried—"

"You've said enough, haven't you?"
"Yes," said Abby, "I've said pride, humble, Conover watched enough and now I'm going—going back to work——"

"I see," Rod said numbly.
And Abby did. Steve was only too glad to get Abby Fane back in his Club Biarritz. The next day after Abby's name was again up in lights, the newspapers' largest headlines proclaimed to the world Abby's and Rod's separation. Like flares plunging up into a night sky, so did the headlines illuminate the story for an avid public. Abby became more popular than ever, more story for an avid public. Abby became more popular than ever, more of a drawing card for Steve's club.

Then Rod came to see Abby. The visit was not for reconciliation purposes, for Rod—perhaps, egged on by the Deane family—came with more selfish motives. The exploitation of the Deane name in connection with Abby was bad for the social status of the Deane family. Rod made that clear. Abby was infuriated. She had asked for no quarter and now she would show none. Everything that was going to be printed would be printed. No matter what Rodney Deane—or any other Deane—could say! Or do!

"Now—if I can. I could get in a half day.

Abby and Steve were seated at a restaurant table eating lunch. "And you haven't heard a word since?" asked Steve.

"The lawyer called up once." "I guess you didn't do so much harm to that name of theirs. There's been nothing in the papers for a month." Steve stopped as he no-ticed Rod approaching their table. Steve's face remained expression-less.

"Hello, Steve."

Abby looked up, startled. "How are you, Rod. Sit down."

matter what Rodney Deane—or any other Deane—could say! Or do!

Rod returned to the apartment dispirited. The whole place was dismantled, pictures down, furniture wrapped for storage, rugs rolled up—all ready to be sold. He was only home a few minutes when the doorbell rang. It was his father and prother.

May looked up, startled.

"How are you, Rod. Sit down." Steve nodded towards Abby. "I down." "Wello, Abby!" "Hello, Abby!" Abby ignored Rod. She turned to Steve. "Did you arrange this?" "Me? Arrange what? What do

"Rod," said the elder Deane, "I've got to ask your help."

"If it's about Abby—no. I'm sorry."

"Look here, Rod. The girl blames us for your separation. She's bitter—her hatred for us seems to be more important to her than money—at the moment. However, I think if we offered her enough she'd listen to reason. You can appeal to her sense of fairness—"

"I told you how I felt about that —and I haven't changed my mind."
Rod was adamant. Dean exploded. "But the girl's making a byword of our name—your name."

"I don't blame her," said Rod quietly."

"And don't," Abby added. "Well," said Rod, "as long as I'm here, I may as well show you Exthibit A." He took a piece of paper from his pocket and tossed it never the solution.

"What's that you say?"
"I think she's entirely right."
Deane's face grew red. "Rod, I've given you everything that a son could ask for You've never wanted for anything in your life."
"That's true. Dad, according to your values."
"According to any values. I'm not asking gratitude, Rod. I'm reminding you of your obligation to your family."
"I'm sorry. I just don't feel any Don't you see. Dad, it's your name and money that ruined me—and my marriage?"
"Do you believe that?"
"I've got to believe it. She saw it and tried to help me. I couldn't make the grade. I quit. But this time I won't. So I'm going on—minus you—minus all this. I'm sorry, Dad. I hope you'll see it my
