

King of Cotton Ball Selected

COLLEGE STATION, Texas.—Judson E. Loupot, senior agricultural administration student from Dallas, was elected king of the third annual cotton ball and style show to be held at the Texas A. & M. college the night of April 6. His election was at meeting of the Agronomy society, student organization, which sponsors the event. The cotton ball and style show at the college stresses cotton, its cultivation and its many uses, and ranks as one of the outstanding events on the students' social calendar.

Proceeds from the ball and style show are used to augment traveling scholarships awarded to the three high point men of the annual cotton contest. Winners the past two years toured the cotton belt of the south and visited textile centers of Europe to study conditions in the industry.

A Large Class Received Into M. E. Church

At the Methodist church Sunday Rev. E. R. Stanford took as his subject "A Host of Witnesses." Hebrew tells of a host of witnesses who are watching the runners in the Christian race. The theme of the blood is the finality of faith as revealed in Christ.

Spectators are an inspiration to a runner. Records are broken before the great crowds at the Olympic Meet.

Christians are urged to lay aside every hindrance in the race. The things that hinder and prove a handicap to the Christian should be laid aside. Not only that, but the besetting sin must be overcome. The sin that ensnares our feet or waits around the corner to engulf us must be overcome.

Christians are encouraged to have patience, to run steadily. Some people run by fits and starts. A steady consistent Christian is the ideal before us.

To attain the end we must keep our eyes fixed on the goal Christ Jesus. He endured the cross, despised the shame and is seated at the right hand of the throne of God.

The following members were received into the church:

Mrs. J. Atchley, Mrs. R. B. Bralley, Mrs. J. H. Fry, Mrs. Virge Foster, Mr. and Mrs. Cecil Hibbert, Mrs. W. B. Harris, Mrs. F. H. Lemmert, Mrs. L. O. Lynch, Joyce Newman, Betty Jo Newman, Mrs. L. A. Noell, Dorothy Perkins, Bobbie Perkins, Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Ray, Donald Ray, Jane Ray, Virginia Ray, Marguerite Ray, Mr. and Mrs. Ed Skidmore, Norma Jean Atchley, Billy Mickle, E. C. Satterwhite, C. G. Satterwhite, Louise Cook, James Ray Pierce, Gladys Gates.

President's Ball Grand Success

Eastland turned out en masse to pay tribute to the president Tuesday night. There were many who attended the entertainments from surrounding towns.

All the entertainments were well attended, which were: the game tournament in "42" and dominoes and bridge at the Community clubhouse, the attractions at the skating rink, the colored folks ball in the Frost building, and the dance at the Connelley Hotel.

Lawrence Welk and his orchestra provided music for the dancers on the roof which was near capacity. Throughout the program vigorous patriotic songs were played which created an atmosphere of 10-15 an address by the president was heard by the attendees through the facilities of a radio installed in the ballroom.

In the course of the evening a picture of President Roosevelt painted by D. High, local artist, was sold. The members of the Welk orchestra bought the picture which was auctioned off by Kinnaid. The sum derived from the picture sale was $34.10. The money will be part of the benefits which will be sent to national headquarters of the ball committee. Wednesday morning, Kinnaid did not have the exact figures as to the sum of money derived, however, the celebration was a decided success.

Red Cross Workers Met Saturday; New Organization Begun

A meeting was held in the chamber of commerce office Saturday afternoon of the local Red Cross committee composed of Mrs. Milburn McCarty, George Brogdon and H. J. Tanner.

Miss Schuneman of the St. Louis Red Cross headquarters, was present accompanied by the county chairman, Mr. Spencer, from Clee. At this meeting the Eastland home hygiene and care of the sick department of the Red Cross was organized. Mrs. Milburn McCarty was elected chairman of this committee. Mrs. Earl Johnson, also an attendant at the meeting, spoke of the need of this work in Eastland.

A first aid department was also organized, this to give instructions along first aid lines. George Brogdon was elected chairman of this committee. Teachers will be selected and classes organized. Miss Schuneman gave a very interesting talk on what wonderful work has been done in these classes in various parts of the country.

Fund Pays Out Two Million for Charity, Education

CHICAGO.—Despite a complete suspension of income, due to shrinkage of capital assets, the Julius Rosenwald fund paid out approximately $2,000,000 in its program of education and philanthropy in the last two fiscal years. It was revealed in President Edwin B. Embree's biennial report.

Most significant of the fund's accomplishments were those in the fields of Negro education and medical economics. The building of schoolhouses for Negroes in the southern states was so successful that the fund has decided to withdraw from this work.

"It is not felt that the ideal of public education for all has been approached, particularly in reference to the Negro," the report said, "but with the program of Negro public schools well under way, the fund regards its efforts in this specific direction as ended."

Initiated in 1913, this activity of the fund has resulted in the building of 5,357 individual schoolhouses in 883 counties in 15 southern states. The "Rosenwald schools" maintain a staff of 15,000 Negro teachers and provide educational facilities for 600,000 boys and girls. To promote the development of adequate leadership among the Negroes, the fund has been giving increasing attention to the need for a few first rate centers of education on the college level. In this effort activity has been concentrated on assisting a small group of colleges to maintain high standards. Four of the centers which have received special aid are the newly projected Dillard University in New Orleans; Howard University in Washington, D. C., the federated group of institutions in Atlanta, and the group in Nashville composed of Fisk University, Meharry Medical College, and the State Agricultural and Industrial College of Nashville.

Guy Patterson In Role of Perfect Tire Salesman

Guy Patterson, employee of Speed's Super Service Station, Eastland, Friday played the role of perfect salesman. Mr. Patterson made a tire sale and later was notified to cancel the order because the car for which the tire was sold had been stolen, found the car and after all sold the tire.

The automobile was stolen from C. A. Martin while in "trecken-ridge" Friday evening and found in a way house in Eastland, south of the T. & P. tracks.

Local authorities have arrested an Eastland man in connection with the case.

crushing burden for a large part of the population of the country. The division of medical services, a general information service on the economic aspects of medical care and service through which the information and suggestions assembled by the committee may be made available to interested groups and individuals. Studies and appraisals of existing group plans and experiments are being made and published.

Scholarships in Health Education Being Offered

AUSTIN, Tex.—The Texas Tuberculosis Association announced today the offer of two summer school scholarships in health education for teachers in service. Each scholarship amounts to seventy-five dollars.

The purpose of the scholarships according to Miss Pansy Nichols, executive secretary of the Association, is to encourage teachers in service to take training in health education so that their training may be comparable to that of teachers just leaving college.

"Much of our work for the prevention and control of tuberculosis," Miss Nichols stated, "is among school children. The cooperation of teachers trained in health education is of inestimable value in furthering the campaign against tuberculosis."

One scholarship is offered to elementary teachers and administrators. The other is offered to high school physical and health education teachers and administrators. The scholarships may be used in any Texas university or teacher training college offering summer school courses in health education leading to the standard requirements in that subject proposed by the State Department of Education.

They Satisfy—

You know, that means something

By "balancing" 6 different types of home-grown tobaccos—

By adding just the right amount of the right kinds of Turkish—

By blending and cross-blending—

"welding" these tobaccos together—

We believe we have in Chesterfield a cigarette that's milder and tastes better.

"They Satisfy" has always seemed to us the best way of describing what we mean by this milder better taste.

Brunk's Comedians To Play Here Next Week For Firemen

Fred G. Brunk's Comedians, repertoire company, will play an engagement in Eastland the week starting Feb. 5.

Repertoire companies have for the past several years been the last vestige of "flesh entertainment" in many small towns over the southwest. In regard to their standing, it is interesting to note that the vice president of the most important thespian organization, "Equity," is a man who heads a repertoire company.

Brunk's Comedians will present a new play every night. They will also present variety entertainment. Curtain time, it is announced, will be 8 p. m. each day.

With the company is a nine-piece orchestra which is directed by Zeke Boyd. There will be a band concert at 7 p. m. each day, in front of the tent.

Brunk's Comedians are playing their engagement in Eastland under the auspices of the Eastland fire department.

County Treasurer Used Much Red Ink

SAN SABA, Texas—Using three pints of red ink during 1933, Clarence A. Harkey, county treasurer of San Saba county, has set an all-time record in the courthouse for use of the red fluid.

Vouchers have been issued by the county and this necessitates listing them in a separate ledger in red ink until they are paid. The last year was a busy one for Harkey and the red ink flowed freely all during the year.

Eastland RMA Secretary's Work Highly Praised

The directors of the Retail Merchants Association met Monday night 7:00 p. m. in the office of the association in the Masonic building.

A resume was presented of the association's work last year which included, conductance of good will programs throughout the county, presentation of twelve trades day programs, cooperation of the association with other organizations including that of the race meet in December and the fair association, and maintenance of an advertising committee that passed on advertising propositions.

The committee claims to have saved merchants who are members of the association many dollars by rejecting over fifty per cent of the advertising propositions submitted.

At the meeting a financial report of last year's operation was submitted and accepted. Although the income was limited, the association finished the year by paying all current operating expenses.

Membership of the local association, which is now affiliated with state and national merchants associations, is steadily increasing. Since H. C. Davis assumed directorship over a year ago, the membership has increased over 70 percent. Two local firms in the last month have become members and here are several others who have expressed their desire to join in the near future.

Davis was complimented on his managership by the directors who voiced their opinion that the past year was a highly successful one and that the present year will be a still more successful one.

Churches

ST. FRANCIS XAVIER CHURCH
Tomorrow is the Feast of St. Blaise, patron of sore throats. Throats will be blessed in Ranger at 7:30 a. m. and 8 p. m.

Mass on this Sunday will be at 10 a. m. by Rev. M. Collins.

Sunday is Sexagesima Sunday and the epistle read is taken from the Second Epistle to the Corinthians II to XII:9; and the Gospel is from St. Luke 8:4-15. Here is related the parable of the sower with its full explanation and which contains a lesson for all—Christian and non-Christian.

METHODIST CHURCH
Next Sunday is communion day at the First Methodist church. A large attendance is expected. Rev. Rosemond Stanford will tell of his trip to the evangelistic conference at Fort Worth and preach on "The Secret Sustaining Power." At the evening service at 7 o'clock there will be special music service led by Mr. A. E. Herring and the orchestra. The subject of the sermon will be "Making Excuses." A number of excuses why people do not join the church will be discussed by the pastor.

All are invited. The service lasts just one hour, from 7 to 8.

county chairman for the Red Cross and Mrs. W. D. Conway, Mrs. R. H. Hodges, Miss Beulah Boles and E. H. Peacock, met in the office of the Chamber of Commerce Friday afternoon and discussed plans of the organization and for the establishment of first aid and home hygiene classes under CWA and Red Cross supervision.

A committee composed of Mrs. Conway, chairman, and Mrs. Bob Norman, Mrs. L. H. Flewellen and Mrs. Roy Jameson was selected to co-operate with the Red Cross and the CWA in establishing the classes.

Mrs. Schuman pointed out that the Red Cross had been so busily engaged in distributing government flour and clothing in the past that little time had been available for the regular program of the organization, but (with the distribution completed the work could be pushed more in the future.

Miss Boles, who is a registered Red Cross nurse, has been conducting the classes twice a week for the past few weeks and it is hoped that enough can be registered to have it included in the federal adult school courses being offered. Demonstrations in home hygiene, including care of the sick, making of bandages, sterilization of instruments, application of bandages, food values, diet and nutrition will be included in the courses offered. These classes are now being conducted at the high school building from 7:30 to 9:30 five nights a week and anyone interested in the subjects offered can register for the instruction.

It is hoped that a membership of at least 30 can be obtained for the night classes and if enough are interested afternoon classes will also be organized.

B. H. Peacock was appointed to contact the doctors of the city and see if he could secure one of them to conducted classes in first aid, which will be taught free of charge to CWA workers or to others who might care to attend the classes.

Guy Patterson Opens Seaman St. Service Station

Guy Patterson, who for a number of years has been employed in the filling station and tire business in Eastland, has entered business for himself and is operating the Guy-Patterson Service Station at the corner of South Seaman and Valley streets at the location formerly known as the States Service Corporation station operated by A. H. Furse.

Mr. Patterson is handling the Marathon Oil Company products and features greasing, washing, battery re-charging, road service, tire repairing, etc. He also handles a complete line of auto accessories and Goodyear tires and tubes.

Mr. Patterson is well known in Eastland, especially to car owners and operators, whom he has been serving for many years.

He extends an invitation to his friends to visit him in his new location.

WHAT HAS HAPPENED

In Matto Grosso, in South America, refugees from all parts of the world gather. The laws of the place were established by Taggart, an explorer. The punishment for stealing is swimming the river full of crocodiles.

To this place comes Allen, a youth, and Joan, whose brother is stricken with the fever, en route to an expedition. It is a dangerous place for a girl, but there is nothing for her to do but remain with her brother.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

From the Trading Post, Taggart saw the girl come ashore. "Who's the woman, Peterson?" he asked the captain.

"Sister of the sick man," replied the officer.

"Why didn't you tell us about it?" Taggart asked.

Frenchy adjusted his coat. "That should be obvious," he said.

Peterson looked quickly from one to the other of the two men. "Unfortunately, she'll have to stay here until I get back," said the captain. "I'll try to make her comfortable," volunteered Taggart, with his eyes on the girl.

"We'll all try to do our best," said Frenchy, with the emphasis on the all.

"That means you leave her alone," said Frenchy.

Chita was instantly aware of competition. She sidled up to Taggart. "Pale—skinny," she said. But, the men did not hear her. Joan was frightened as she saw the faces of the men leering at her.

"Don't pay any attention," said Parrish. "They won't bother you."

Taggart stepped up, tipped his hat, and trying to be very polite. "My name's Taggart. If I can be of any service, let me know."

"If you want to be of service," said Allen, "get out of the way. You're holding up the parade."

Taggart was forced to step back, but he looked after the parade with a hard, light look on his face. Frenchy smiled over Taggart's defeat, and Chita was sore.

"He's a fool," she exclaimed.

Frenchy started away, but Chita me." He stood for a moment. Still more awkwardly, he pulled out his gun and handed it to the girl. "Here, in case anybody should come snooping around, give them some of this. Take it." He forced the businesslike weapon into her untrusting, hopeless hand, and then, after a moment, he said, "Well, so long." He shouldered his bag and went only to reappear in the doorway a moment later and said, "I hope your brother gets better, lady."

She smiled at him suddenly as he beat a hasty retreat. "Thank you," she said as he disappeared toward Dr. Parrish's hut.

All the men were interested in the new woman inhabitant. "We ought to go up and see her," said one.

"She's probably lonesome up there," Taggart, who had heard the conversation, picked up a lighted candle and thrust it into the man's neck. "That goes for anybody who does any peeping around Miss Leeson's cabin," he said as he walked back to his place beside Frenchy. Then, noticing Chita, he added, "That means you, too."

Chita's lips curled in angry scorn. "And you?" she inquired.

Taggart looked at her coldly and ignored her. A moment later, he was over to Dr. Parrish. "You look all worn out, Doc."

"I haven't had much sleep for the last three days," the physician replied.

"How's the patient getting along?" asked Taggart.

"Not too well."

"You're wasting your time, Doc. When they have the fever that long—" Taggart finished the speech with a motion of finality. "Come over and have a drink on me, Doc."

"I'm not drinking," said the physician.

"That's right. Got to keep yourself sober," said Taggart. He put a friendly arm about the physician's shoulder. "But, you're all in. One drink will do you more good than harm."

"No," said the physician. "I've got to keep my head, especially now."

"Nonsense," the other man de-stopped him. "Where are you going?" she asked angrily.

The man rubbed the stubble of his chin. "I think I'll shave. The girl gave an exclamation of disgust.

In Allen's bedroom the sick man was made comfortable. "I'm putting you to a lot of trouble," said Joan, genuinely apologetic.

"That's all right. No trouble at all," Allen replied, none too graciously, as he continued to pack his bag.

"Can't I help with those things?" the girl asked, coming closer.

"They're all packed," Allen curtly replied.

"You're ruining those things," the girl persisted, as she beheld the bag.

"Here, let me show you."

Allen was sore. "Lady, I've been packing my stuff for fifteen years, and my way suits me."

"You'll never get all your clothes in," said Joan, as she continued to fold the things as rapidly as Allen jumped them in.

"It isn't the first time I packed a duffel bag, lady."

Joan smiled. "The lady's name is Joan Leeson," she said.

Allen gave her a quick look. "O.K., Lady."

The girl smiled broadly, and gave up the contest. "All right, man."

Allen got it and grinned. "Well, I guess I'll blow," he said. "Come on, Jake," he called to his pet monkey. But, as he reached for him the ape sprang to Joan's shoulder, and put up a jabbering protest.

"He's friendly, isn't he?" the girl inquired with a slight emphasis on the friendly.

"Yeah, Jake's a fall guy." He reached out for the monkey.

"Where are you going to stay?" asked the girl.

"I'll bunk with Dr. Parrish."

"Is it far from here?"

"No, just a couple of huts up the road."

Joan was relieved. "Oh, that's nice."

Allen became suspicious. "Yeah." The girl commenced kidding him. "In case I should scream for help, you'll be sure to hear me, won't you?"

"Listen, lady, nobody is going to bother you around here if you just mind your own business."

Joan became cold. "Thanks. I'll try not to trouble you any more than I can help," she said. "Good-bye, Mr. Allen." She turned away from him, and he realized that he had hurt her. He would like to make up for his rudeness, but he did not know how to go about it.

Awkwardly, he said, "Now, look! I didn't mean for you to get sore at clared. "Look at your hands. They're shaking."

"I know, but I'll be all right."

Taggart urged, "One Bacardi, and I'll send you on your way."

The physician weakened. "Well, just one." The one turned into more until Dr. Parrish said thickly, "Better go—now."

"Sure," said Taggart. "Just finish this off," and he exchanged an understanding look with Frenchy.

The doctor's knees were pretty unsteady. "Better sit down and rest up a minute," Taggart insisted as he led the man to a nearby table followed by Frenchy.

"Very unfortunate," said Frenchy, apparently sincere. "Miss Leeson's brother might die."

"Yes," replied Taggart. "She would be alone, and wouldn't that be too bad?"

Allen came into the place searching for the physician. "Come on, doc. Let's get going," he urged, shaking the physician who was completely knocked out. Then he looked at Taggart and Frenchy with a hard, contemptuous expression. "Why didn't you throw a knife in his G—k. It might have been quicker."

Taggart looked up at Allen with an easy, friendly manner. "You know, Allen, I read a story once about a guy who was always trying to do something for somebody, kind of a wise guy, a nice fellow though. So one day when he was trying to do his good deed, he bumped into a bullet. The man paused. "Poor fellow, he was killed."

Allen was the perfect audience. "That's a sad story," he said. There was a moment's pause, and then Allen continued. "Say, Taggart that reminds me of a story. Once upon a time there was a hungry little bird, and after days of looking for food, he finally came to a pasture. Here the youth paused and then continued. "Well, when he wasn't hungry any more, he flew away whistling to tell the world what a wonderful bird he was. Allen paused again. "And he made so much noise that a hunter picked up his gun and shot him."

"I'm practically in tears," Frenchy exclaimed.

Allen interrupted quickly. "Turn not through. There's a moral in this story." He paused a moment and then continued, "and the moral is, when you're full of horse feathers, keep your mouth shut."

There was silence for a moment as Taggart was unable to top Allen's story. The lad picked the doctor up bodily, hoisted him over his shoulder and left the scene.
