must held to the middle-of-the-road to avoid the "fruitless dilemma between fatalism and futilism," in the words of a typical New Dealer, John Dickinson.

After helping shape the course of the New Deal from its inception, as assistant secretary of commerce, Dickinson is now assistant attorney general. His job is to defend legality of the government's course.

Big, hearty, jovial, Dickinson's conception of government draws upon a background similar to that of others who have shaped the course of the New Deal. His reasonings reflect long years in college classrooms.

Born on the eastern shore of Maryland, he was graduated from Johns Hopkins, Princeton and Harvard. He served on the faculties of Harvard, Princeton, Amherst and the University of Pennsylvania.

Favors Liberal Supervision
Although a lawyer by profession and training, it is the economic aspects of the New Deal that interests him most. The government must continue, he believes, to wield a wise and liberal supervision over economic forces.

The New Deal, he sees not as an expedient to be junked when prosperity has been regained, but as an active force to maintain a balance between conflicting interests of labor, capital, industry and agriculture.

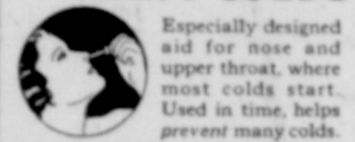

In government supervision of industry and labor he advocates "a policy which gives due weight to all and not to just some of the factors and forces which must work together to bring about na-national prosperity." The danger of government regulation of industry and agriculture, as he sees it, is that political leaders may be drawn too far toward views of one group, or interest, without giving due weight to economic rights of others.

"Economic forces affecting national prosperity are far more complex than ever before, and cannot be solved alone by application of laws and remedies which brought us out of past depressions," Dickinson said.

Consumption of goods always before has followed expansion of capital and production, he said. "Our power to produce," he added, "now has far outstripped our power to consume, partly because of decreased foreign markets."

To return to the pre-depression era of mass production, speculation and expansion of credit for capital goods, would lead us inevitably into the pitfall of 1929, Dickinson believes. Increased production and consumption must be accomplished gradually, he holds.

"We can spend our way out of the depression only when money is expended in directions where they serve to create new wants and at the same time the means of satisfying those wants," Dickinson said.

In a book just published, Dickinson advocates that government supervision of economic forces "hold fast the middle way."

Government, he said, must hold a middle course between those who would tear down our economic structure and attempt a new order and the proponents of inaction.

If America is to hold the middle way, "this government must have legal power to act where government action may be needed to supplement or control private action," Dickinson said.

"We are confronted with problems which cannot be mastered by private action alone, but require for solution concerted action of different groups and the intervention of governmental policy as well," Dickinson said.

He is convinced "we shall be heading for ruin if we turn back to an old policy which closed its eyes to all but one group of interests, or on the other hand, utterly ignore those interests in favor of others equally one-sided."

"The middle-of-the-road policy which holds open, for each such force and interest, its proper sphere, and protects it resolutely against encroachment from others, is not merely the best but the only method of attacking the evils which need to be attacked," he said.

It always works

Just do what hospitals do, and the doctors insist on. Use a good liquid laxative, and aid Nature to restore clocklike regularity without strain or ill effect.

A liquid can always be taken in gradually reduced doses. Reduced dosage is the real secret of relief from constipation.

Ask a doctor about this. Ask your druggist how very popular Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin has become. It gives the right kind of help, and right amount of help. Taking a little less each time, gives the bowels a chance to aid of their own accord, until they are moving regularly and thoroughly without any help at all.

Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin contains senega and cascara—both natural laxatives that form no habit. The action is gentle, but sure. It will relieve any sluggishness or bilious condition due to constipation without upset.

Recreational Value of CCC Camps Is Welcome In Texas

LUFKIN, Tex.—Value of CCC work in the woods and parks, and economical value of the allotment checks of CCC enrollees fade in some East Texas communities before the recreational facilities in isolated communities. All CCC personnel, whether army officers in charge of the camps or forest, or park, or soil conservation service officials in charge of work projects, are instructed to cooperate in every way with local people. Most welcome form of such cooperation in many small towns are the stunt nights, boxing and wrestling matches, free picture shows, dances, and other recreational ac-

War Scene as Italians Prime Guns for 'Big Push'

FIRST ITALIAN ARMY of 100,000 men, Gen. Emilio de Bona commanding, advancing steadily beyond Adigrat-Aksum line, anticipating major battle near Akale, 50 miles southward. Desaye would be next goal.

MANY ETHIOPIANS KILLED. Dajjasmach Ayaleu, their leader wounded in impatient and rash attack on Italian mountain stronghold.

150,000 ETHIOPIANS. Ras Kassa commanding, in this sector. Sporadic attacks against Italian right wing repulsed in rugged country.

ETHIOPIAN RESERVE FORCE moving up here for major battle. War Minister Ras Mulu Getta commanding. May resist invaders at Makale.

ETHIOPIAN CONCENTRATION here, in strong position, inspected by Emperor Haile Selassie who will take personal command soon. Eight thousand trained troops en route to Desaye from capital. Italians hope to reach Desaye as southern army reaches Harar, then make advance on Addis Ababa from two sides.

THIRD ITALIAN ARMY. Gen. Rodolfo Graziani, Italy's greatest colonial fighter, commanding. Capture of Dagnereji marks advance of 25 miles in two weeks, 60 miles further than the original line. Determined assault on Gorahai expected soon.

DAGNERREJI FORTRESS falls to Italians, native Dubats leading attack with aid of forces of Sultan Gid-Dula, formerly Ethiopian dependent. Italian planes from Mustahil base aid advance.

150,000 ETHIOPIANS. Ras Seyoum commanding, in this sector. Expected to fall back, with armies left and right, south of Makale before attempting major resistance.

30,000 ETHIOPIANS protecting foothills leading from Danakil Plain in northeast.

SECOND ITALIAN ARMY. based at Asseb, advancing to execute two-pronged movement: one force to strike northward to protect Italian first army's left wing; another to swing southward toward the railway and Ras Nasibu's constantly growing army.

LARGE ETHIOPIAN ARMY massing here for defense of Harar and all-important Djibouti-Addis Ababa railway. Ras Nasibu commanding.

This map, picturing latest progress of Italy's invasion of Ethiopia, gives you a comprehensive picture of the scene as Mussolini's Blackshirts and their black-skinned native allies were reported about to launch a big-scale offensive on four fronts. The dotted arrows indicate how the Italians hope to penetrate Ethiopia's machine-gun studded mountains from north and south and its harsing Danakil desert and plateaus from the east, the invaders then to be in position to strike toward Addis Ababa, the capital, from Desaye, to the northeast, and Harar, to the east.

activities of the camps. No charge is made for any CCC activities except dances, when sufficient money to pay for the music is collected. With the opening of the autumn county fair season virtually every one of the 25 CCC camps in the Lufkin District has taken an active part in the fairs of their counties, furnishing trucks for the parades, displays for the exhibit halls, fascinated and spendthrift spectators for the midway attractions. At the opening of the Angelina County Fair at Lufkin the army furnished a car, two trucks, and two ambulances for the parade from the district headquarters motor pool; Texas forest service furnished three realistically decorated trucks; and the U. S. Forest Service, which has a headquarters but no camp near Lufkin, sent in two trucks from an outlying camp. Popular in local circles are the "Showboats" of the colored camps at Lufkin, Nacogdoches, San Augustine, Oakhurst and Zavalla, whose quartets, hoofers, and instrumentalists appear at churches, luncheon-clubs, and the like, as well as drawing crowds at their weekly stunt nights. A group of white enrollees at the Madisonville camp has organized an entertainment program which is exhibited without charge at the schoolhouses in the vicinity.

Better Bouts Are Scheduled For the Elk Wrestling Show

The matchmaker for the Elks has arranged for next Monday, Nov. 4, a program of wrestling that will please all the fans. All of the boys on the program have shown their wares here and have become favorites with the fans. In the main event, Tiger Billie McEuin, who has for the past four months been upsetting the boys in Southeast and Southwest Texas, returns to Ranger. Tiger Billie has always been a favorite with the fans who will turn out to welcome his return. Billie has a tough assignment for Monday night in Owen Davis, the Texas University champ. Davis won his match here last week against the tough Dutchman from San Antonio. The second event brings back another old favorite, none other than Eddie O'Shea. Many requests have been received by the matchmaker to get Eddie O'Shea and Tommy Kaiser together. This has been accomplished and these two tough boys will try to out-do each other any way and every way. The show starts at 8:30. Spokane high school adds course in auto driving. At the end of the semester, the instructor ought to be a pretty good one-arm driver.

Gable, Harlow, Beery Head Week-End Cast at Arcadia

TEMPERAMENT WITH GABLE, JEAN HARLOW AND BEERY ON SAME SET? NOT AT ALL!

Three Famous Stars of "China Seas," Thrilling Adventure Drama Showing At Arcadia Saturday, Got Along Like Real Bosom Pals.

Pals on the set—pals in real life—three of a kind! That, in a nutshell, tells the story of the outstanding three-way friendship of Hollywood.

Clark Gable! Jean Harlow! Wallace Beery! Though the studio first brought them together it was the gold threads of life and experiences shared that actually wove the firm bond of loyalty and friendship which has endured among the three since they played together in "The Secret Six" almost five years ago.

When "The Secret Six" was made Jean Harlow was almost unknown. Clark Gable was a young man just off the stage, without any great screen experience, and Wallace Beery was turning back to serious drama after playing comedy for several years.

Anything in harmless fun was likely to happen on the set. A "gag" was always on.

Some scenes of their new picture are laid on a steamship on the waterfront of Hongkong, reproduced on a lagoon on the back lot of the studio.

It was a colorful set, teeming with coolies who mingled with well dressed Occidentals. Junks and sampans drifted about in the water. And now and then the squeal of pigs could be heard as they were lifted aboard the ship as cargo.

Gable played the hard-bitten young skipper of the passenger liner on the most dangerous run in the world. Jean was a wise-cracking, tender-hearted lady of the ports of the Orient, deeply in love with Gable and not afraid to show it. Beery was a genial Irish trader whose gruff affability masked his operations as the sinister "brains" of half-wild bands.

One day Clark arrived in a black coupe of popular make. Over his immaculate white captain's uniform he wore a battered brown and white check overcoat, with the collar turned up well about his ears. The rest of his head was concealed in a tropical sun hat.

Bob Benchley, the humorist, who plays in the picture, was sitting, half asleep, on an old trunk. Clark joined him for breakfast. That is, the coffee and doughnuts which he, Jean and Beery took turns supplying for the company each morning.

Beery was sitting next to Jean, who remembering her figure, sipped gingerly at black coffee. He dangled a huge doughnut before her wistful eyes, and remarked how sorry he was that she could not join him.

But Jean got even. It was Beery's birthday.

Beery gasped with delight when Jean and Clark presented him with a huge cake. But his grin faded when he started to cut it and found it was made of wood.

As if sorry for the mean trick, they sent him another. Wally, a little doubtful, cut it and found it made of cotton. He laughed it off, but when a third cake arrived, he wouldn't go near it. So Jean and Clark distributed it among the company. It was real!

Jean came in for her share of "ribbing," too. Beery was always "razing" her about the phonograph she played between scenes, and got a tom-tom for competition. When she was wanted for a "take," he beat the tom-tom to summon her before the cameras.

Perhaps the reason the three stars get on so well together is the similarity in their tastes. The three enjoy simple things. As a matter of fact, each of them lives quiet, enjoying the privacy of their homes, rather than the social side of the film colony.

Jones Traces Film Success To Childhood

Buck Jones, star of "The Fighting Ranger," showing Saturday at the Columbia Theatre, wonders what would have been his lot in life if his family had not migrated to Oklahoma from Vincennes, Ind., where Buck was born. He feels that he would not have had an opportunity to become the great horseman he is, and thus pave the way for his successful career in motion pictures.

Buck's youth was spent in the frontier country, where he learned to ride a horse as soon as he was able to sit safely in the saddle. As he approached manhood, he left home and spent several years as a cowpuncher, roaming throughout the southwestern states. He utilized his riding skill by joining the United States Cavalry, and saw action in the Philippine wars.

When the rebellion there had died down, he returned to the United States and joined the famous Miller 101 Ranch Wild West Show, and toured the country with reels.

Racing swiftly through scenes of the recent Mid-West drought, the story fixes itself in a California bean-growing community. Farmers see failure of their crops, unless water can be brought to the parched fields. Enter "Roscoe, the Rainmaker" (Bob Woolsey), and his somewhat chuckle-headed assistant, "Billy" (Bert Wheeler), brought to Lima Junction by the kindly local banker to produce rain.

But Simon Parker, the big lima bean and burleg bag man, pooh-poohs the rainmakers. He wants to build a flume from the mountains, and collect cash from his fellow farmers.

Parker, aided and abetted by his drugstore cowboy son, tosses many a monkeywrench into Woolsey's rainmaking machine. Wheeler, in love with the banker's daughter, played by Dorothy Lee in a featured role, also stubs his toe on rocks strewn the road to romance.

The climax includes a wild, woolly and thrilling crash between two ancient railroad locomotives, staged by Woolsey to gain an audience for his rainmaking activities.

Supporting Wheeler and Woolsey are many favorites, among them Berton Churchill, George Meeker and Fredric Holand. The last named, recently from the New York stage, is making his picture debut in "The Rainmakers."

this group of noted cowboys and cowgirls. The country entered the World War and Buck joined the air service and saw action at the front. When the war ended he toured Europe and performed his skillful feats of riding before the crowned heads of the Continent. William Fox saw him and engaged him to appear in films.

Modifications of Federal Youth Aid Are Announced

AUSTIN.—Modification of federal regulations, to permit needy students, as well as those on the rolls of the Texas relief commission, to participate in the high school aid program, has been announced by Lynden B. Johnson, state director of the National Youth Administration.

Hitherto only students whose families were on relief in May, 1935, were eligible for certification for the $6 a month job appointments. The $6 for which the students perform various duties assigned them by school officials is to provide carfare, lunch money, funds for supplies and incidental expenses.

The order in which students now may be selected for high school aid is as follows:

First, students whose families were on relief in May, 1935.

Second, students whose families are now on relief or families whose heads are employed by the Works Progress Administration.

Third, students members of rural rehabilitation families.

Fourth, students who are needy. They need not be certified for relief, but must be unable to attend high school if they do not receive one of the jobs provided under the high school program.

All students, no matter under which classification they fall, Johnson said, must be capable of doing high-grade academic work, and adjudged worthy of receiving assistance by the county placement committee.

Procedure in the selection of students was outlined by Johnson as follows:

In each county there is a placement committee, composed of the county school superintendent, the case worker-in-charge and the superintendent of any school district with a scholastic population of 500 or over. This committee allocates the county's quota to the various participating schools.

The student applies to the principal of his high school who recommends the application to the placement committee. In the case of relief children the relief status must be certified to on the student's application by the case worker-in-charge. Rural rehabilitation students are certified by the rural supervisor and cases where need is the deciding factor, are certified by the principal of the high school, who must testify that without this aid the student could not remain in school. The proper certification of a student's application is sufficient authority to put that student to work.

EDITORIAL
The Road to Success.
What is success? We often wonder if true success is ever in this world truly attained.
The factors which enter into the making of true success are so varied that we ponder the not well defined subject over and over in our minds. What is its true meaning?
Success, as defined by some authorities, "is the reaching of some favorable end." True success comes when we best correlate our sincere efforts to meet the commands of the supreme and matchless. Its meaning may be, therefore, compounded as inward and outward.
We can at least say, that in the hills of somewhere is the road to success. Mounted on some lonely peak is the bush which bears this blossom fair. The path that leads to this somewhere spot is rough, rugged and pebbled worn by the spring that water the seekers below.

Just one scent of this fragrant rose plunges seekers into its depth—they must all like the fishes of the sea swim the upward course. Some will begin the task to pluck, but falter and fall back to the valley below. Some may swim to some lonely ravine and down in the depths to distress and woe. Some will climb and climb and climb—they ponder and plunder the peak of the hill and waste their lives in vain skill.
The one who is to reach this success which is sublime, must hold, must suffice, must swim, and must climb.
It's not for honor or glory or fame, nor that we should seek a great name. But honest efforts our whole duty perform is the breeder's of the bud where success is born.

Seek fair seekers with courage and faith; not all will welcome and open the gate.
CHARACTER
Our character is what we really want it to be. If we wish to be a good citizen of our country, not only in dreams but in reality, we must have courage which means we must be strong enough and brave enough to control what we think, say, and do. We must have strength and courage to be truthful—to be able to tell the truth without fear, being honest in all our dealings and thoughts, for unless we are honest we cannot have self respect upon which hope is established and hope is power for improvement.
We must have wisdom and knowledge enough to act wisely in school, at home, in our playing, working or talking, and be able to choose good and escape bad. We must respect everyone who has more wisdom than we, and have reverence for that which is good, and know where and how to obey. We must be able to know ourselves, our fellow man, and the world about us so as to make use of useful knowledge and welcome it at home, in school and elsewhere.
We should be good sports at all times, joyous over victory, but never angry over defeat.
We must love God, our parents, our home, our neighbors, our country and be loyal to all of these—good health is an obligation we owe them; we owe them the best that is in us. The teaching of Christianity, truth, honor, and a right ambition fits us for a helper in the world's advancement.
Theodore Roosevelt said, "Persons educated in intellect and educated in morals and religion will become a menace to our nation." If our homes have begun the work of building a good character, our schools and our association with the world, will help us to go forward to success.

CLASS ROOM NEWS
There have been but few in school this week due to some being at work and of the severe rains. We sincerely hope that all can be back next week and that a full attendance can be reported.

TO PATRONS
We would like to insist, if it will not be asking too much, that the parents encourage their children to study some during bad weather like we have just experienced this week. This will enable them to carry their work on with the rest of the class, who have been attending.

AGED CYCLIST TOURS CANADA

VICTORIA, B. C.—Age has not dimmed the eyesight or weakened the muscles of Harold T. Ravenhill, 75-year-old Pacific Coast cyclist. Ravenhill has just returned from a 3,000 mile jaunt across Canada. He said he averaged 48 miles per day.

CARD OF THANKS
We desire to take this means to thank our many friends and neighbors, who were so kind and thoughtful of us during our dear husband's and father's illness and death; and for every kind and loving act shown him. We shall always think kindly and lovingly of each and everyone; and for the comforting words of all. May Heaven's richest blessings be with all in such hours as this. We also wish to thank thee for the many beautiful floral offerings. — Mrs. Bob Camfield, Robert Camfield and Marian Camfield.

There have been but few in school this week due to some being at work and of the severe rains. We sincerely hope that all can be back next week and that a full attendance can be reported.

We would like to insist, if it will not be asking too much, that the parents encourage their children to study some during bad weather like we have just experienced this week. This will enable them to carry their work on with the rest of the class, who have been attending.

County Relief Load Lower at Dalhart

DALHART, Texas. — Largely because of the Soil Conservation Service project, 20 miles east of here, the Dalhart County relief load is 120, lowest in history of the office. Administrator A. F. Roark said. The drop was from 245. Twenty more clients are to be given permanent work through a visiting housekeeper project, said Roark, with about 65 clients unable to do any kind of work.

Peak load of the office about two years ago was 758. The conservation project is demonstrating how to control wind erosion and uses the former relief laborers for removing fences from fence-row dunes and planting trees.

SOREL, Que.—Workmen digging a trench for a sewer system in the Dominion government shipyard here uncovered the keelson and stern of an old vessel built of oak, imbedded deeply in the sand. No trace of the craft's name could be found.

Florida Planning For Its Greatest Tourist Season

TALLAHASSEE, Fla.—Florida is on the verge of its greatest winter.

From every source of reliable information, and from the thousands of letters that are pouring into this state to make hotel and house reservations and other arrangements for life through the winter, this statement is borne out. Never before has the state been as well equipped for the influx into the nation's winter playground as it is now. Every facility for taking care of winter visitors has been gone over and placed in readiness. Hotels and apartments—under strict supervision of the state hotel commission—have been rebuilt and reconstructed for winter residents and tourists.

Gauging Seen as Ended
Public opinion has been aroused, within the state, to such an extent during the past two or three years that gauging of tourists and visitors is virtually a thing of the past.

Retaining its fame as a winter playground for the wealthy, Florida more than ever this year is a haven for visitors of lesser circumstances. Prices are on a par with those in other states.

Every angle of the business of tourists' entertainment may honestly be said to be under the watchful eye of some supervising body—a body that is more than ever watchful to see that the visitor gets full value for his vacation dollar.

This year, more than ever before, Florida is joining forces to keep out the panhandler. Undesirables that have, in previous years, stalked the streets to the discomfort of visitors and our residents, will be turned back at state lines this year to save guests what they deserve—a safe and unimpaired period of pleasure and recreation.

7,500,000 Visitors Expected
Conservative estimates last year were that more than 5,000,000 persons spent at least part of the winter here.

My estimate this year, and a conservative one, is that fifty percent more visitors and tourists—or approximately 7,500,000 persons—will take advantage of Florida's facilities during the coming winter.

This estimate has been made after careful investigation of the most reliable sources.

To the people of Florida, this means increased prosperity and justification for their plans and labors in providing a welcome for guests. To the guests, it means assurance that Florida is doing more than ever before to enhance her reputation as a winter playground.

BOULDER LIFEGUARD BUSY
BOULDER CITY, Nev.—Boulder Lake, a mass of water now being formed behind gigantic Boulder Dam on the Colorado River, already has reported its share of almost-drownings. Alfred Straub, of Fort Collins, Col., employed as a life guard, has saved more than five persons from drowning.

ASPIRES TO TEACH
TORONTO, Ont.—Paul Robeson, great Negro singer, who gave a concert here recently told visitors his plan was to leave the stage, radio, concert stage and movies to teach foreign languages to children "some day." He said given opportunity, Negroes will rise to high cultural and educational attainments.

Freedom of the Seas
Loses U. S. Support

If you have moments of doubt that this country sincerely wants to stay out of war, you might notice that recent moves for peace have included the discarding of one of America's most ancient and strongly-held principles of foreign policy—the demand for freedom of the seas.

Ever since the nation was in swaddling clothes this had been one of its most dearly-cherished ideas. The notion that the seas were an international highway that could not be closed, and that an American shipowner could take a cargo anywhere on the globe that he could find a buyer for it, shaped out policy for much more than a century and helped to get us into two wars.

In 1812 we rushed (woefully unprepared) into a fight with the British over this principle. To be sure, we came near to getting the stuffing kicked out of us, and the treaty of peace did not mention the issues which had brought on the war; but the fighting served notice on the world, nevertheless, that we were ready to do battle for that principle, and it remained a cardinal part of our program.

Then in 1917 we went to war again because of interruption of our sea-borne commerce. That commerce had been so thoroughly interrupted and man-handled by both sides in the World War that there actually was a possibility, at one time, that we would fight England instead of Germany. But the German submarine seemed a greater menace than the English cruiser, and besides the English owed us money, and in the end we fought the Germans, and the freedom of the seas was one of our chief reasons.

Since the war we have spent great sums on our navy, and most of us have supposed that this was to enable us to enforce our concept of a free sea on any nation that tried to flout it.

Now, however, we have turned in the opposite direction. President Roosevelt's neutrality proclamation warning all citizens that they ship goods or buy passage into a war zone at their own risk is a direct reversal of the traditional American doctrine. Heretofore we have argued that an American could use the sea lanes anywhere on earth save where an actual, effective blockade existed, and that our warships would be ready to make that right good. Now we are singing an entirely different tune.

No more striking testimonial to the growth of the peace sentiment in America could have been devised. We are no longer ready to use our navy to protect American lives and property anywhere and any time. We prefer, instead, to let American lives and property look out for themselves if they do not choose to stay at home.

This may make the old-fashioned patriot howl with chagrin; but to the ordinary citizen it will probably look like common sense. It is hard to avoid war when you persist in clinging to a policy which, in a pinch, you must fight to uphold.

Allred's Appeal for Quick Action
On the Part of Law Makers

In his message to the Texas legislature, Governor Allred pointed to an over-whelming approval of pension last summer. He asserted that the pensions could be "paid without hurt to anyone if the legislature will do its duty." Continuing, he said: "It would be unfair to the people should you authorize old-age pensions, yet fail to finance them—a type of politics justly and surely to be condemned at the polls. I cannot too earnestly emphasize the necessity for immediate, consistent, continued attention to this important problem. It is no criticism to say that the people are sorely disappointed at the outcome of the first called session. It is a simple fact that another barren session will be a tragedy." He predicted that enactment of pension legislation would remove thousands from relief rolls and again called attention "to the grave situation threatened when direct relief is discontinued in December."

The federal government it is said has its plan. The federal dole is to be discontinued in the new year and the states and the counties and the municipalities must provide for their own charges. And why not? Federal government aid is pledged in the security act to match dollar for dollar a state pension to the extent of $15 per pensioner. This is liberal to say the least as there will be thousands of applicants for pensions who are property owners and additional thousands who have small incomes to carry on.

Governor Allred has warned the law makers against the enactment of a sales tax bill for any purpose. He holds that a sales tax "is a tax on poverty and all efforts should be required to contribute to the far-reaching functions of government." This is true. Every man who is protected by his government should be willing to contribute to the support of his government. Heading the list of new bills was a proposed 6 cent tax a barrel on oil or 4 cents increase over the present rates. Numerous new taxes were proposed—on playing cards, electricity, luxuries, natural gas, salt, gross receipts, income, mutual assessment companies, one sales tax (exempting necessities of life) was included. Texas law makers gave a definition of an open saloon at the first called session. Now a definition is in order as to just what constitutes a sales tax, a tax on luxuries or a sales tax omitting "the necessities of life."

"U. S. Gives Up Hunt for William Fox." One is bound to lose interest in this sport unless done in the proper "Yoteks" and "View Halloo" fashion.

Work Relief Collapse
Due To Own Inertia

The three great collapses of the year seem to be those of Maxie Baer, the New York Giants and President Roosevelt's work relief program.

In no case was the collapse altogether unexpected; but while the first two can be laughed off by everybody except those who put their money down on the wrong side, the work relief program's collapse is somewhat more serious.

A fund of $4,000,000,000 was set up, if you remember. With it the administration promised to give work to no fewer than 3,500,000 people by the first of November.

Shortly after the middle of October it was disclosed that 1,310,000 people had been given jobs under this program. Bad enough in itself, this figure is even more discouraging when analyzed.

In the first place, that total includes some 580,000 CCC workers, and approximately 133,000 men working under other than federal agencies. In the second place, far from a last minute rush as the deadline drew near, there was an actual let-down in the work of re-employment, only about 180,000 men having been taken off the relief rolls by the WPA during the first two weeks of October. And of the 600,000 men actually given jobs by the WPA, a full third are in New York City.

These figures reflect something unpleasantly like an utter collapse of one of the most vital of the administration's efforts. In spite of the proven executive ability of WPA Administrator Harry Hopkins, this collapse must be at least partly due to sheer fumbling and bungling. The greater part of the blame, however, seems to have been caused by confusion in the administration's mind as to the form which a work relief program ought to take.

The original idea was that it would be a vast public works program. Bridges would be built, slums would be cleared away, roads would be paved, parks would be laid out, public buildings would go up, canals would be dug, and a great number of highly useful, permanent works would be added to the country's possession.

In such jobs, however, a great deal of money has to be spent for materials. The administration decided that there would be too little direct re-employment that way. So the plan was modified. Projects for public works were scaled down ruthlessly, to make way for ventures in which most of the money would be paid out in actual wages.

The result was a revival of a long series of leaf-raking projects, and local enthusiasm ebbed. It was easy to think of big jobs that needed doing; it was hard to cook up schemes for transferring topsoil from one side of the road to the other.

The original public works program would have picked up speed as it went along. By stimulating business in the heavy industries, it would have created many jobs indirectly. The work relief stunt has no momentum of its own. An artificial thing from the start, it is bound to lag and wobble.

We Lose War Profits,
But Gain Peace

The plight of the Simple Simon who wants to eat his cake and have it too is as nothing compared to the difficulties besetting a nation which wants to have both war profits and neutrality.

President Roosevelt's neutrality stand has already brought some anguished squawks. The loudest has come from the Conference on Port Development of the City of New York, Inc., an organization of shipping and exporting firms which has protested vehemently against the trade restriction as "hasty and ill-advised."

This organization declares that American trade with Italy has given jobs to thousands of citizens, especially in the New York area, through which 90 per cent of our exports to Italy flow. After asserting that the neutrality proclamation "virtually abandons America's traditional insistence on neutral trading rights and freedom of the seas," it adds:

"Our exports to Italy have exceeded those of other nations, and are now at stake unnecessarily. . . . Italy offers us a market for our surplus and she buys more than she sells us on balance.

All this is probably quite true—and it just goes to remind us that peace, like every other blessing attainable by man, has its price.

For the one thing that ought to be clear, in any discussion of neutrality legislation, is this: we can keep our skirts clear and avoid the danger of being drawn into a foreign war, or we can make hay while the sun shines and cash in on war orders—but we cannot possibly do both.

Living up to the arms embargo will be costly; make no mistake about that. It will prevent us from selling many a bill of goods. If the present war spreads and involves such nations as England and France, our loss will be even greater.

Nations at war need to buy many things and they are things which we are peculiarly well equipped to sell them.

But self-denial of that kind is the price of peace. If we are determined not to get drawn into another European war, our one hope is to forget about the profits.

The lesson of 1917 is unmistakable. When you set yourself up as warehouse and granary for a warring nation, you are simply leading with your chin; sooner or later you find your own fortunes inextricably tied up with the fortunes of the army of your chief customer.

The anguish of these New York exporters is natural and understandable. Our embargo, even though it is incomplete, is costing them money. What we need to keep in mind is that any sound neutrality program is bound to be expensive.

But you might remember that the profits we would have lost if we had refused to sell goods to England and France during the World War would never have amounted to a tenth of the money we actually did lose by going to war on their side.

It's strange. Italians are building roads throughout Ethiopia, and yet Haile and his countrymen are pitted by us taxpayers.

U. S. colleges should sponsor horse races instead of football, says Nebraska dean. Wouldn't a horse look silly winding the university clock?

College Making
Reading An Art

PALO ALTO, Cal. — Marked improvements in the grades of students enrolled in a new reading training course has been announced here by instructors at Stanford University.

First steps in the course are elaborate photographs of the student's eyes, taken while he reads. The length of pause, regressions, winks and movements of any kind are recorded. Then the photographs are thrown upon a screen and the student is told how to correct his errors.

Too many movements of the eyes and regressions are the chief obstacles encountered, instructors say. One of the ways devised to overcome these faults is a mechanical pacer, a device comparable to a metronome. A rhythmic beat is established and the student adjusts his eye movements from line to line in time with the pacer.

Another way to develop more rapid reading, instructors say, is for the student to time himself when reading an article, then to reread it with a view to increasing speed. Although much will be missed at first the individual will soon find himself reading more rapidly and retaining more of what he reads, Stanford professors assert.

Reading for phrases and ideas instead of looking at separate words is advocated by the instructors as a means of increasing speed and accuracy in reading.

Albert Stern, alias Stein (above), held in connection with eight gangland murders in New York City, and the shooting of Martin Krompner, who was mowed down on Broadway at the same time Dutch Schultz was assassinated in Newark, N. J., who committed suicide in his jail cell when captured.

Seale, at Relief School, Succeeded By Jewell Reaves

Mrs. Jewell Reaves, connected with relief work in Eastland county since its inception in 1933, has assumed position of case worker in charge during the absence of Wortham Seale, who is attending a social service institute in Dallas for six weeks.

Mrs. Reaves began her connection with the Eastland County Relief Board in 1933 as a file clerk at general headquarters in Eastland. After serving in that position for five months she was assigned case work, in which she was occupied for eight months.

Later Mrs. Reaves became manager of the Eastland zone relief office and held that position for four months. Following re-organization of relief work in Eastland county when staff personnel was reduced, Mrs. Reaves was assigned to the Carbon office where she served as intake secretary and manager.

The Carbon relief office was closed recently and consolidated with county headquarters at Eastland, where she continued as intake secretary, this time for the county.

Attendance by Seale at the Dallas institute which is sponsored by the Texas Relief commission marks his second instruction this year as he was enrolled in a course offered in April.

Miss Don Moorman, case worker in the Gorman district, is also attending the Dallas institute.

Health Officer Is Urging a Diphtheria Immunization Plan

AUSTIN.—The state health officer, Dr. John W. Brown, urges all parents of children from six months to 10 years of age who have not been immunized against diphtheria, to take them to the family physician and have this done at once. Last month there were 265 cases of diphtheria in Texas reported to the state department of health. This is an increase over the month of August and shows the need of stressing immunization of the children in this age group.

It was not so long ago that parents dreaded diphtheria because of the inability to prevent or cure this scourge. Now that we not only know the cause but also the remedy there is no reason why this disease cannot be completely eliminated.

As diphtheria is most dangerous to the very young children, it is of the highest importance that immunization be given yearly. What is more, in young children there is practically no reaction to the injection. Immunization has been proven to give absolute protection. It is in the power of the parents of this state, cooperating with their physicians and the health department, to eliminate the disease.

Most children can be protected against diphtheria by a single treatment—with what is known as Toxoid. However, in about six months the child should be given a Schick test to determine if a second treatment is necessary. Early immunization is a routine procedure adopted by modern and up-to-date physicians. Cooperate with your family physician and your community and make early immunization a regular practice in this state.
