Our neighbors, the Browns, live very near us; in fact our apartment house is separated from their only by a narrow court.

Some of the Browns seem to be always at home, and they have a radio which they delight in listening to. Indeed, they never seem to tire of listening to it, for they listen day and night, as do we, for we cannot devise any way to shut out the sound of that radio.

I'm sure it is a most unusual radio. I do not believe there ever was another which had quite harshness of tone or strength of volume that this one has. The sound comes pouring into our apartment in spite of our closing windows and doors and even covering our heads until we almost smother in our efforts to keep the offensive sound out.

We feel that we might possibly tolerate it if they would only choose to tune in on what we consider a good program, but alas! They never do! They listen to the most absurd music, uninteresting dramas, and longest dryest talks about such subjects as food, housekeeping, care of babies, and the stock market. It seems to our poor tortured minds as if they deliberately choose the worst programs

And that is Ford policy today just as it was in 1905. Buy a Ford car, whether new or used, and you are entitled to the benefits and economies of Ford Service.

That is why thousands of well-equipped Ford Service Stations dot the world. You can get the help of trained mechanics, and genuine Ford parts, in almost every village and town.

And more than that-you can get the help of the Ford factory when it comes to major repair work. Ford has done something different to save your time and money. Ford Service has an Engine Exchange Plan by which in a few hours you can have an engine installed which has been reconditioned at the factory. And you save at least one-third the cost of an ordinary engine overhaul. You can get the same Exchange Service on smaller units such as carburetor, distributor, generator, fuel pump.

In many communities, Ford dealers are adding Neighborhood Service Stations in order to bring Ford Service closer to you They are also installing the scientific new Ford Laboratory Test Set, which tells in a minute what is wrong with any engine or electrical system.

All this is to give you more satisfaction in the use of your Ford car, at less cost We believe it will cost you far less if you own a Ford and use Ford Service.
