Newspaper Notes Safety Meeting In Editorial Monday

Comment on the Oil Belt Safety conference held last week at Eastland was made Monday by the Dallas Morning News in an editorial which follows:

The automobile crash just east of Dallas, that took six lives, gives added point to the plain words spoken on lack of safety in Texas at the Oil Belt Safety Conference at Eastland, Oklahoma reduced highway fatalities 32 percent last year, but in Texas the slaughter continues almost unabated. A few cities, including Dallas, are making valiant efforts to save lives. Dallas had eleven traffic deaths in the first four months of this year compared with eighteen a year earlier—but much remains to be done.

Despite the revision that has been made—the Texas drivers' license law is still far below standard. There is need for further tightening in examinations, enforcement and procedure for removal of licenses. Another legislative step essential to highway safety is compulsory periodic examination of cars to keep unsafe vehicles out of circulation. Legislative attention is needed to the recent suggestions toward making reckless drivers conscious of financial responsibility.

Stricter enforcement of existing laws is having a salutary effect in some communities, but often there is need for simpler and more convincing means of determining whether or not a driver is drunk. Far too many drunken drivers have been let off because juries were not certain of the extent of intoxication. More stiff sentences for drunken drivers probably will do as much as any other one means toward making Texas highways safer.

Eventually the construction of boulevard-type highways, with central strips separating lines of traffic, will give added protection against some kinds of accidents. So will the further elimination of grade railway crossings and major highway intersections. But meanwhile, education of drivers on the importance of careful driving is urgent. The State-wide meeting to be held in Fort Worth June 15 may help to make Texans more safety-conscious and to reduce the prevailing mania for speed.

Science Rolls On And Finds Many Aids for Humans

PITTSBURGH—A year's work in the new "Temple of Science" which houses the Mellon Institute of Industrial Research, has led to new conquests in the field of both pure and applied science, according to a report by Dr. E. R. Wiedlein, institute director.

For example, hard coal heating equipment has been developed to the point where the furnace will operate "for weeks at a time without any attention whatever to the fuel supply, ash removal, or damper settings."

The 218 scientists supported by the institute from March 1, 1937, to March 1, 1938, conducted experiments in everything from shirt collars to tooth cavities to hydroxyethylapocuprine—a drug which is proving useful in the treatment of pneumonia.

Among other things, the institute's scientists have conducted worthwhile experiments in the field of dental caries or tooth decay.

It has been found, Dr. Wiedlein reported, that "modification of the diet of female rats during pregnancy and lactation affects the caries susceptibility of the young . . . indicating that nutrition plays a part in the formation of caries-resistant teeth."

"Proof that foods which promote decay do not necessarily initiate cavitation is provided by the demonstration that fermentable carbohydrates will not start dental caries in rats but will accelerate decay in existing cavities."

The young research scientists found uses for many things that in former years were discarded as useless. For instance, anthracite ashes. "Strong and attractive" building materials have been produced from them and they are being tried as soil amendment agents.

Dr. Wiedlein was enthusiastic about the progress made since the institute moved into its new $10,000,000 headquarters, donated by the late Andrew W. Mellon.

Give It Straight From the Shoulder

Before so very long, commencement orators will be popping up like so many jack-in-the-pulpits, and up and down our broad land, exhorting high school and college seniors about the world which they are soon to enter.

Commencement time is still a number of weeks away, but the orators might well start in now to think about what they are going to say. For the world has more or less put them on the spot.

What can a man say to these youngsters, anyhow? He can't paint a rosy picture for them, because the plain facts are mostly the reverse of rosy. He can't tell them that the world is waiting to use their skill and energy, because the world can't begin to find jobs for the people who graduated last year and the year before.

He can't, in short—if he is an honest man—tell them much of anything, except that the world is in a bad mess and that they have drawn the unenviable assignment of stepping out into it at the worst possible time.

Yet even to say that much is better than to say nothing. For youth is not cowardly. It can stand it to hear the worst; indeed, there is something about the resiliency and the dauntless energy of youth which makes a bad situation act as a challenge.

And there is nothing we need right now more than a frame of mind in which we can see in our troubles a challenge rather than a reason for rushing to the nearest wailing wall.

We have had our fill, or ought to have had it, of drifting along in the pious hope that sooner or later things would right themselves without our help. Maybe there was a time when that sort of attitude would work, but it doesn't now. We are drifting downstream, and unless we help ourselves there is precious little to hope for.

So our innocent young graduates might just as well get it straight from the shoulder, this spring, and know the worst. And we of the older generation could very profitably listen in with them.

For it is our world as well as theirs and we are at least partly responsible for the shape affairs are in these days. Perhaps we clung to our blind optimism too long, perhaps we grasped at solutions that wouldn't work, perhaps we simply were too heedless. Whatever the case, we can hardly be complacent about the world our youngsters are going out into, nor can we afford to assume that it is their problem and not ours.

The commencement speakers, then, may do us all some service. If they can get away from the blind, unthinking optimism traditional to commencement day, and can provoke an honest and fearless discussion of our ills and their solution, they can give us something well worth remembering.

Control of Goat Lice Is Aim For Dipping Campaign

Five Eastland county goat raisers will demonstrate goat lice control by dipping in wettable sulphur, according to plans being made by County Agent Cook in continuing work which started last year.

The men who plan to cooperate are Dan Childress, Eastland; F. E. Harrell, Cisco; Dr. R. H. Hodges, Ranger; R. W. Williams, Gorman, and R. L. Williams, Gorman.

Last year five goat raisers dipped 1,350 head of goats and 950 head of sheep in demonstrations using wettable sulphur supplied by a sulphur company. All got satisfactory results, they reported, shearing more mohair of a better quality than formerly in their fall shearings, but some lice were found on the goats when they were sheared this spring.

This was attributed to the use in most cases of dipping equipment originally intended for dipping cattle. This year each demonstrator plans to improve and rearrange his equipment so that a more thorough dipping will result. Childress and Harrell are arranging their vats so that the goats can be gotten into them with less labor and kept in longer. Dr. Hodges is remodeling an old cattle vat.

R. W. Williams is building a special vat with pen arrangements ideal for handling goats. R. L. Williams is building a dipping pen and draining pen in connection with the goat vat he constructed last year. The county agent says that definite dates for the dipping demonstrations will be announced within the next few days. All goat raisers are invited to attend the demonstrations.

THE GREATEST LABOR SAVER ANY FARM HOME CAN HAVE

PRIZE my Superflex above anything else in our home. That's what users say. And no wonder. We are enthusiastic about these refrigerators, too, and so will you be when you see what one will do in your kitchen, especially if you live far from town, where the need for refrigeration is much greater than in city homes, with food markets just around the corner.

Cheapest to Run

No matter where you live, Superflex is one modern convenience you can have. It works ANYWHERE and it costs less to run it than any other refrigerator we ever heard of. There's no continuous flame. The burners do 24 hours' work in about two hours and then go out automatically. And the kerosene for a whole year costs only about $10—less than $1.00 a month.

Superflex is made by the Perfection Stove Company, and we know what that means, and so does everybody who has ever used any of the oil stoves they've been making for almost 54 years. They began making these refrigerators ten years ago, and when we found out that many of them have been in use right at the equator we figured that they must be pretty good and free from trouble. And that's a fact. Wonderful refrigerators. They have no connections and no moving parts to get out of order.

How It Saves

Think of these advantages—not so many steps daily, no wasted left-overs, meat cold and fresh for days, ice cubes and frozen desserts. Superflex is a convenience that pays for its keep.

Just send us a postcard or a demonstration in your home.

Treating Sorghum Seed Is Urged by County Agent Cook

Sweet sorghum and grain sorghum seed should be treated for smut before planting to prevent the frequent losses that occur from smutty heads, according to Elmo V. Cook, county agent. In addition to a loss of grain running sometimes as high as 25 per cent, smut is harmful to animals when bundled feed is fed without first cutting off the smutty heads. Heading the smutty stalks also requires considerable labor when the percentage of smutty heads is high.

Farmers have a choice of two different treatments, using either copper carbonate or ceresan. If copper carbonate is used it should be full strength (50 per cent copper), using 2 to 2 1/2 ounces per bushel of well-cleaned seed. If ceresan is used, 2 ounces per bushel of seed is sufficient. Both materials are poisonous and should be handled cautiously. Mix the copper carbonate or ceresan with the seed dry in a tight container, agitating to get a smooth coating of the chemical on each seed.
