House Group Votes To Lift Sugar Control

That Reminds Me

By FRANK A. JONES
Plans for the Eastland Chamber of Commerce's Trade Extension Campaign in July were to be completed this afternoon at 2:30 at a meeting at the Chamber of Commerce.

A newcomer went to a typical Texas County seat town—one where the business houses were built around a public square—with the view of entering business. Only one building was available and he began negotiating to lease it. Immediately people began saying to him: "That building won't do." "You will be a failure there." "No one has ever made a success there" convinced that the people were sold on the idea that the location was no good. He decided to ascertain the reasons for their opinions and asked a number of them. "It's on the wrong side of the street," they told him. Thinking the matter over, he took a long lease on the building and began remodeling and getting ready to move into it. The natives, wagging their heads, watched while the improvements went on and were aghast when he displayed a modern sign over the front that read, "The Store On The Wrong Side Of The Street." In all of his advertising he featured the name and before long his was the best known business in town and was a success from the very beginning.

For he knoweth our fame; he remembereth that we are dust. As for man, his days are as grass: as a flower of the field, so he flourisheth—Psalms 103:15.

We mentioned in this column a few days back the auction sales at the auction barns just south of town. These auctions are being held regularly and at last Saturday's sale more than 200 head of cattle were handled at prices only a few cents below those being offered in Fort Worth.

Nearly every individual one meets up with these days has had some interesting chapter or event in his life. Few recognize the event of interest to others and do not think to tell it until it is more or less wormed out of them. The interesting thing about visiting with others is leading them out to tell the interesting things in their lives.

Many lights in Eastland's "White Way" have been disconnected, especially is this true on streets other than Main. These should be re-installed. These lights add materially to the appearance of the City and help to keep up that reputation we covet so much of being the cleanest and best lighted little City in the Country. A little money spent for good appearance is a good investment.

Mystery Still Surrounds Cisco Bloody Clothes

Eastland County Sheriff's deputies today were still investigating the matter at Cisco where a man's clothing, soaked in blood, was found hidden in the underbrush just off the highway north of Lake Cisco.

Nothing new had been learned as to whom the clothing, along with a blood covered automobile seat cover, belonged nor why the items, after apparently being washed, were hidden.

The clothing was found by a Cisco man early Sunday morning as he was returning from a night of fishing near or on Lake Cisco.

The County Sheriff's office stated this morning that a man and his wife of near Cisco, visited the sheriff's office Monday to view and examine the clothing, stating that a son of theirs was missing, but that they believed they knew where he was. It developed, however, that the boy was not where his parents had believed him to be and they had not been able to contact him.

DEFIES LABOR TO PROTEST LABOR LAW

WASHINGTON — Chairman Fred A. Hartley, Jr., of the House labor committee said today that Congress will reply with an "even tougher" measure if organized labor stages a general strike to protest the Taft-Hartley union there is "mounting evidence" that control bill.

The New Jersey Republican said a general strike "is within the minds of labor leaders." During the past 30 days, he said, more than 900 strike notices have been filed with the labor department.

"I have had a careful analysis made of these strike notices" and they are far above the normal number for that period," Hartley said. "It is obvious that the unions want to be in a position to strike as soon as the present bill becomes law."

Hartley said there would be no point in filing the strike notices if purely economic issues were involved. The Smith - Connally act which makes them mandatory will expire on June 30, he pointed out.

"The only reason that a large number of unions would want to file strike notices for this period is to be ready to strike in June when the labor bill becomes law," he insisted.

Petroleum Shortage To Be Discussed Tues.

Eastland Woman Receives Letter From Italy

Several months back when the Girl Scouts were collecting clothing for foreign relief, Mrs. Jess Taylor, North Connelley St., donated a lady's coat and scarf and other clothing.

In the coat Mrs. Taylor placed her name in a note and a few weeks ago she received a letter from Italy written in Italian, which had to be translated in English before Mrs. Taylor and Eastland people could read the letter. The following is the letter: "Kind Miss:

This is to inform you that we have received a package from you containing a ladies coat and scarf. In the coat pocket we found a note stating that you would like to know who received the package and if the coat was a correct size. The coat is a perfect fit for my sister.

We are so very grateful for the articles, kind Miss, and we know you will be blessed for your kindness. Here in Italy it is impossible for us to buy anything.

Gentle Miss, my brother was a prisoner of war in Mississippi for 8 months; Louisiana 7 months and 15 months in Hawaii. We would like to know if immigration restrictions have been lifted in the U. S. My brother would like to come to U. S. for employment. I would appreciate it if you would send us this information.

We are well at present and hope that you and yours are enjoying good health.

MANY OPPOSE NEW LIQUOR CONTROL LAW NOW BEFORE JESTER

The United Press Tuesday quoted Governor Beauford H. Jester as saying that the mail he was receiving in opposition to the new liquor control measure of the 50th Texas Legislature exceeds without the office. The bill permits local option elections to permit wet towns or justice precincts within counties that have voted dry in county-wide elections.

The tomato was first brought to Philadelphia in 1798 from Santo Domingo but was not regarded as a marketable product.

BILL WOULD AFFECT ONLY SUGAR FOR HOME USE

WASHINGTON — The House banking committee today approved a bill to end immediately the allocation and rationing of sugar for household use.

The measure, introduced by Rep. Ralph A. Gamble, R. N. Y., would not affect price control of sugar.

A similar bill to end sugar rationing at once is being considered by a Senate banking subcommittee.

Chairman Jesse P. Wolcott said the House bill was approved "overwhelmingly but not unanimously" by the committee.

The Michigan Republican said he hoped to have the House consider the measure within the next two or three days.

Rationing and allocation of sugar for industrial use is not affected by the measure. Under existing law, both industrial and household sugar rationing are continued until Oct. 31, but Secretary of Agriculture Clinton P. Anderson may end it sooner if he sees fit.

WASHINGTON COLUMN

BY PETER EDSON
NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(NEA)—The Senate Foreign Relations Committee may be taking President Harry Truman off of a barbed and rusty hook by refusing to do anything about confirming former Attorney General Francis Biddle for the $20,000 a year tax-free job as U. S. representative on the UN Social and Economic Council, to succeed John G. Winant.

Edson

The President nominated Biddle for this job last January. Republicans in the Senate gave it silent treatment for a few months. Then the President was asked to withdraw the nomination. He refused, and another showdown fight such as the President had with Ed Pauley became necessary.

Under urging from Democratic Senators Alben B. Barkley of Kentucky and Tom Connally of Texas, Chairman Arthur Vandenberg of Michigan agreed to have Biddle before the Foreign Relations Committee to explain his political views. Biddle is reported to have let on that he wasn't the 100 per cent New Dealer he was supposed to be—even though it was known that he and Harold Ickes were ringleaders with the CIO-PAC in supporting Henry Wallace for vice president at Chicago in 1944. Biddle's defense was that he had opposed Roosevelt's court-packing plan and the NRA.

WHAT Harry Truman knows—what every senator who served under his chairmanship on the War Investigating Committee knows—is that if the Senate Foreign Relations Committee had to go into an all-out investigation of the former attorney general, it would have to dig up a lot of skeletons.

Twice before congressional committees have been on the verge of investigating Biddle's administration of the Department of Justice in wartime. Both cases were outgrowths of the Norman Littell affair of 1944.

Littell had been assistant attorney general in charge of the lands division under Biddle, Frank Murphy, and Bob Jackson. Littell had given off the record testimony to the Truman committee on a number of cases handled by the Department of Justice—the Breakers Hotel case, Sterling Products, Empire Ordnance, Savannah Shipyards, Elk Hills, Canal Pipeline, and surplus property disposal. All were notorious scandals of the early war years.

The brunt of Littell's testimony reflected no great credit on Biddle. In fact, they attempted to make much of Biddle's close connections with Tommy Corcoran. Corcoran and associates represented Sterling Products, Empire Ordnance and Savannah Shipyards among others.

FOR his testimony before the Truman Committee, Littell was accused of disloyalty to the attorney general, who asked for his resignation. When it was refused, Biddle carried the case to the White House. President Roosevelt settled it by firing Littell.

Democratic Sen. Harley Kilgore of West Virginia and other members of the War Investigating Committee favored opening up the whole case and doing a job on Biddle, to purge the party. But Harry Truman had in the meantime been elected vice president and Sen. James M. Mead of New York had succeeded him as chairman of the War Investigating Committee. Not wanting to wash his party's dirty linen in public, Mead dropped the issue.

"Littell was, therefore, made the goat. He went into private law practice in Washington and is apparently doing all right at it. Also, he is entitled to the last laugh in the situation.

When Roosevelt died, Truman—knowing all this background—lost no time in accepting Biddle's resignation which had been submitted as a formality. But then the pressure began to be applied to Truman to find Biddle another job. He was given temporary work as a Nuremberg war crimes trial judge. Now he needs another. Only out for the President now is to have Biddle ask that his name be withdrawn, and go to work in private law practice, as his predecessor Homer

SPORTS

NEW YORK—(NEA)—Man and boy, Casey Stengel has seen many and wondrous things since at an early age he discarded tooth caps for baseball. The irrepresible Stengel obtained a liberal education in the bizzy while playing under Uncle Wilbert Robinson in Brooklyn and watching and managing the Superbas. He is distinctive for many reasons, among them the fact that he was once paid for not managing the Yums.

A Dodger at heart, the inimitable Stengel fits a fair for the fanciful. A bird once flew out of his cap when he doffed it while at bat, for example.

After what he has been through, nothing in baseball would surprise Stengel, but he had to wait until the other day to find out why managers so frequently feel like shooting somebody or committing suicide.

STENDEL had to go to the Pacific Coast League to see something new—a ballplayer, who is a poor judge of it, gone with the wind.

With Stengel's Oakland club and San Diego scoreless in the last of the 11th and two out, a long fly was hit into the territory of Maurice Van Robays, formerly with the Pirates. Van Robays took a look, decided the ball would clear the wall and trotted into the dugout. The ball landed at the foot of the wall, where the outfielder could have caught it, the batter circling the bases for a home run.

The Tollivers

By MATEEL HOWE FARNHAM
DISTRIBUTED BY NEA SERVICE, INC.

THE STORY: I was off in boarding school when the Tollivers first came to Osego. Father wrote that in a short time Mrs. Tolliver and her three daughters had already provided plenty of food for gossip. They had rented the big carriage house next to ours, although everyone knew their finances were limited. The two youngest girls—Flora and Annabelle—were beauties and quietly making a play for the two well-to-do and middle-aged bachelors: Sam and Nelson Forbes. When I came home for vacation, the Tollivers gave me a "surprise party." Father suggested I entertain in return. The simple affair I thought of assumed significant proportions when Flora and Annabelle took a hand.

THE party, which as first planned would have cost twenty or twenty-five dollars, came to well over two hundred. But it was an enormous success and was talked about in Osego for years. One hundred and forty-odd sat down to supper at flower-decked, candle-lit tables. We had not only the Spanish rice, but turkeys and hams; shrimp as well as sweet-bread salad; rolls, coffee, ice cream in molds, a dozen home-made cakes, a cheese tray, crackers, and punch.

As it slowly darkened, a dozen boys under Leah's direction lit 190 Chinese lanterns. Flora had talked me into getting an orchestra from Ithaca and, as she said, they were divine. We danced during supper and after on a cement platform which stood in one corner of our lawn and which we had waxed for the occasion.

At nine o'clock the full moon rose over the tree tops. I don't see how it could have been more beautiful.

Although all the Tollivers had worked like beavers over my party, Flora and Annabelle had found time to make themselves new dresses. They were in pale lemon organdy with light blue velvet sashes and carried quaint little bouquets of pansies and forget-me-nots. Amy wore a white dress, and Mrs. Tolliver, who was still in mourning, stayed only until after supper and would not stand in the receiving line.

WE received in front of a blooming syringa bush that made the air deliciously sweet. Father had a new white silk suit and looked every inch the judge. I was in flesh-pink chiffon and carried red roses. I had never been so happy. As it was the first real party I had given since my mother died, all the older women made much of me for my mother's sake. And everyone was more than kind to Flora and Annabelle. How could they help it? As Father said, they looked like two angels.

I was too happily excited to have much to say. But not Flora and Annabelle. They chatted and laughed and made jokes with the young people; they were demure and sweet and admiring with their elders.

And never for long did they cease their golden praise for Father and me.

IN talking over the party beforehand, I had said to Father that if all went well and it didn't rain and the moon came up, I was willing to bet that one or both of the Forbeses would propose before the evening was over. Father refused to bet. He said the poor sumps hadn't a chance, what with soft music, moonlight, the fragrance of roses and syringas, and four determined women combined in a pack against them.

Flora and Annabelle had supper with the two Forbeses, but Flora was seldom at the table, for she was dancing with this one, and then more and more often with Bob Finneran. I noticed for the first time that evening how beautiful they were together. They were both blond and blue-eyed, though Bob's hair was a true gold and Flora's what we used to call ash blond, and is now known as platinum. I noticed, too, that separated they seemed to droop a little, as if all the life and fire had gone out of them. Together they lit up like pumpkin lanterns, as Leah later put it.

Cousin Sam loved to dance, but he had never bothered to learn the new steps. For a little while he stood on the edge of the platform and watched Flora dancing cheek to cheek with Bob Finneran. Then he turned on his heel and went home in a huff, without even bothering to tell me good night.

Neither did Nelson know the new steps. For a little while Annabelle refused to dance and stood hanging on Nelson's arm and watching the rest of us. But Annabelle was only 22. After a little the lit of the music was too much for her. When Dick Salmon insisted that she dance with him and Nelson himself said gravely it would be a pity for her not to, she went off with Dick. Nelson stood a long time and watched her wistfully.

AROUND midnight, as I was standing beside Nelson, Annabelle abruptly left her partner and came up to him.

"I have a bone to pick with you," she told him gaily, laughing her delicious laugh.

"With me, dear child? What have I done?"

"You've spoiled me for boys. You make them seem so silly. But it was too late. Nelson told Father long afterward he first realized that night that he was too old for Annabelle.

ON a Saturday morning two weeks later Flora was missing from her bed, and nothing was heard from her for 24 hours. Then it came out that she had eloped with Bob Finneran and gone to New York on her honeymoon.

Everyone said with obvious relish that the Tollivers, having failed in their gamble and used up most of their five thousand dollars, would soon be down and out.

MORE FOOD NEEDS MORE PROTECTION DURING VACATION DAYS

Now that schools are out and children are at home all day every day, electric refrigerators are faced with the tough job of providing more protection for more food. In addition, little folks playing in the yard get thirsty and hungry often and, of course, make a dash for the electric refrigerator. This causes refrigerator doors to be opened far more often than under normal conditions and adds considerably to the work the refrigerator is called on to do. You can help your electric refrigerator get through these trying vacation days with flying colors if you'll give it proper care—regular defrosting, as often as is necessary, and having needed adjustments or repairs made promptly.

Lt. Governor Loses Fight To Kill Own Office

LINCOLN, Neb. (UP)—Nebraska's Lt. Gov. Robert Crosby has lost in his attempt to abolish the "fifth-wheel, blind alley" post of lieutenant governor. Crosby, who campaigned for the office while stationed in the South Pacific naval area, argued it is a part-time job at best. The lieutenant governor waits for the governor to resign or die, he said, and presides over the non-partisan, one chamber legislature. Either position, he said, could be handled better by the speaker of the legislature. The senators disagreed with their president, however, and killed the bill.

His Temporary Jobs Take Up Lifetime

PITTSBURGH (UP) — The Rev. W. W. Ritter has devoted his life to "temporary" jobs.

Once he was asked to fill-in as pastor of the Mt. Nebo United Presbyterian Church for six months, until a regular pastor could be assigned. That was 37 years ago. He's still got the job.

During the teacher shortage in World War I, Ritter was asked to substitute in the one-room Mt. Nebo school until the school board could get another schoolmaster. They never did.

He's still "substituting."
