U. S. Asks UN Intervention In Balkans

That Reminds Me

The sheriffs and district and county attorneys of Eastland and adjoining counties will meet in a conference in Eastland at the courthouse July 18. This is one of a series of similar meetings to be held over the state. The purpose seems to be to swap ideas and discuss the problems confronting them as law enforcement officers of the State.

Personally I would like to see uniform markers over the graves in our cemeteries, like the plan followed by our government in its soldier cemeteries. In death there is no rich or poor, or upper or lower class. We are all alike. The massive and costly monuments often erected by survivors over the grave of a departed one always seemed to me to be an effort to carry on in death the fact that the departed had been able to get together enough of this world's goods to afford a costly monument. Very often that is the big monument does signify. Close beside it may be the marker of a departed citizen of the community, who when measured in true human values, was worth more to the community and to humanity and to those with whom he lived and worked many times over than the massive slab, yet over whose last resting place there is a small marker whose obvious purpose is merely to mark the place where the departed one lies buried. He lived simply, died simply and needs no stone commanding proportions to shout to passersby his presence in this last resting place.

For this reason and because it seems to me to be an impeccable taste to have a section in which all markers are required to be of uniform form and shape.

PLAY TO SUBSTITUTES AT LOCAL METHODIST CHURCH

A play, "The Awful Truth," will be given by the Intermediate Department of the First Methodist Church at the 8 p. m. service Sunday evening in a series of non-recurring services to be held from time to time.

Director of the play is Mrs. A. F. Taylor. The cast consists of Stanley Stephens, Bill Stephens, Don Hill, Joe Robert, Nancy Merrill, Cecil Lee, Jessi Whelan, Ernest Troncy, Patterson, Robert Hines, and Haines, Nina Stephens, and Lane.

County Courts Notes

County Judge P. L. Crossley and the four county commissioners have been sitting during the week as a Board of Equalization. They have completed their work as such. However, there is considerable work yet to be done in connection with non-rendered property.

Judge Crossley stated Friday morning that the Commissioners Court had received several offers to purchase the county office building in Eastland, some of the offers running as high as $10,000, but the matter of whether to sell the property was not to be considered.

Judge Crossley also stated the matter of rent payment by the various agencies occupying the building is being considered.

ARTISTS CONFIRMED FOR SEASON

In a recent letter to Mrs. Clyde Grisson, of Eastland, Chairman, The Community Concerts Association's Western Office confirmed the following artists for Eastland County's Fall Season:

MONA PAULEE, brilliant Mezzo soprano of the Metropolitan who has been heard recently on several performances of the Voice of Firestone program. A beautiful warm voice, musicianship of extraordinary versatility, penetrating interpretive gifts, combine with a vivacious temperament to make Miss Paulee an outstanding personality.

THE REVELERS, world's most famous quartet. This organization with a history embracing five European tours and command performances for British Royalty recently has been dormant due to the fact that members James Melton and Frank Parker embarked on distinguished solo careers.

ANGEL REYES, Cuban Violinist with an international reputation for musical and personal magnetism. All members of the Reyes family are quite musical, and the parents, recognizing their son's talent, took abroad to study at the age of twelve.

WASHINGTON COLUMN

BY PETER EDSON NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON, D. C.—(NEA)—One of the more pathetic sights in Washington is that of a diplomat out of a job. He comes to America full of high resolve. He presents his credentials to the President with a fine canned speech about the "glorious record of friends between our two countries."

Edson He entertains. All official Washington becomes his friend. He is photographed for the society pages, he is in a glass and a glassy smile while guests at some grand dame or debutante in fur and feathers. Ambitious hostesses invite him places. He is somebody.

During the war years it hit Jan Ciechanowski of Poland. It hit Wilmur Procope of Finland, who was asked to leave. It hit Dr. Alfred Bilmanis and Povilas Zadelkis of Lithuania. It hit Constantine Fotich of Yugoslavia who, loyal to Mikhailovich, refused to knuckle under to Tito and the Communies.

All of these diplomats bowed out of office warning of the dangers of Soviet Russia aggression. "You will see!" they all said. But nobody would listen to such talk in wartime, for Russia was a glorious ally. Today—well—maybe they were right.

Currently this is the story of Adair Szedy-Maszak of Hungary and 11 of his Washington embassy staff of 14 who have decided they cannot accept orders from the new government set up by Communist coup in Budapest.

His only hope for that return now lies in solution of his country's problem by the UN. "Hungary," he says, "is a test case for the United Nations. Hungary was the only country that had free and unfettered elections after the war. There the peasants were granted an opportunity to express their point of view, with the result that the Small Land Holders Party won 57 per cent of the votes while the Communists won only 17 per cent. Now the Communists are attempting to reduce this majority to a minority."

"If democracy is to survive, it must be based on the peasants' wish for self-government, independence, and individualism. If the UN is to assure peace and order based on law, it must find the proper way to deal with this question."

"This is the first element, which concerns Hungary alone. The second element is broader and concerns all of Eastern Europe—Romania, Bulgaria, and the others. This is the real test case for the United Nations. If these small nations can survive only as satellites to a big power, then there is little hope for the independence of small nations anywhere in the world."

The ex-minister mentions as a parallel the failure of the League of Nations to stop Italy's invasion and seizure of power in Ethiopia in 1935. Four years later the League was dead.

SPORTS

BY HARRY GRAYSON NEA Sports Editor

NEW YORK—(NEA)—Eastern and Western playoffs scheduled June 20-21 at Yale and Denver, with the survivors meeting for the national championship, focuses attention on college baseball as it has never been fastened before.

A round-up finds the schools loaded with talent trailed by major league scouts. In the pitching department, for example, Yale has the six-foot-two-inch, 200-pound right-handed senior Frank Quinn, who struck out 116 in seven games, 20 Pennsylvania in one start. Competent agencies say he can't miss in the big show.

Illinois annihilates the only left-hander mentioned in a national crack. He is Marv Rotblatt, who turned in six consecutive victories plying the Illinois to the Western Conference title and into the east-west sectional. His performance tied the Big Nine modern record established last year by Wisconsin's Gene Janssen. In 24 innings, the Chicagoan had 102 strikeouts, more than five feet eight and weighs only 163 pounds, yielded no more than nine runs and 18 hits, fanned 49, walked 14.

TEXAS' great passing back Bobby Layne has won 24 consecutive Southwest Conference games in three years. This season he bagged eight, added three others for an 11-0 record, pitching the Longhorns into the western sectional. Robin Roberts, who doubles in basketball for Michigan State, turned in a no-hit no-run game against Great Lakes a year ago. This year he won seven, dropped two. Wally Kramer was unbeaten in six, pacing Washington State to the northern division championship in the Pacific Coast Conference. Army's Roger Conover won seven before being repulsed by Navy. Penn State's Ken Yount was beaten thrice while winning five times, but his power and 340 batting average had him in the outfield when he wasn't on the mound. Several big league clubs have looked at him. Willard Nixon, 19-year-old Auburn freshman, is called the Southeastern Conference's finest since Spud Chandler of Georgia joined the Yankee chain in the early 1930s. He won seven, lost two. Beating Georgia he accounted for 20 putouts, a league record. Sophomore Walt Mahannah won his first four for Notre Dame. Seniors D. J. Gambrell of Alabama, Lee Ellbracht of Illinois and Tom Sheehan of Notre Dame are the colleges' top catchers.

The Tollivers

THE STORY: Annabelle is jealous of Flora's marriage to Sam. When Sam insists she get a job instead of offering her and her mother an allowance, she takes an active dislike to him. Everyone entertains Flora and Sam on their return from their honeymoon. All eyes were on the bills for Flora's trousseau, which Sam had offered to pay for, before he came in.

THE bills came in an avalanche, from dress shops, linen shops, baby shops, shoe shops, specialty shops, from milliners, from department stores. Sam told "father" the confidence that he had allowed "Flora" a thousand dollars for her trousseau, but she had spent over $3,400. Sam was disappointed and bitterly hurt. He felt that Flora had taken reprehensible advantage of his good nature.

Flora's excuse was that a thousand dollars seemed such an enormous sum that it had never even occurred to her that her bills amounted to that amount. Flora was frightened and extremely contrite. She assured Sam that she had enough clothes both for herself and Gloria to last years. She asked for an allowance—a few dollars for pin money that she didn't have to keep track of and would spend as she pleased. Sam, angered at Flora's tractability, gave her an allowance of a hundred dollars a month. But Flora was to pay no charge accounts, except for household necessities, if she wanted extras that ran into real money, a fur coat, for instance, she was to come to him. Flora laughed and clapped her hands and told Sam he was the most generous old dear in the whole wide world.

So the first rift in the lute was sealed and happily healed, although it did leave scars. But then Mrs. Tolliver's bills were dumped on Sam, the bills she had run up in the past year or five months. They amounted to $1,500.

WHALING DAY OVER, OLD PORT OBSERVES 100TH ANNIVERSARY

NEW BEDFORD, Mass. (UP)—Whaling fleet, which departed from this historic port, once the home of a now-vanished New England whaling fleet, will go back a century in spirit on Sunday, June 29, when it opens a week-long celebration of the 100th anniversary of the city's incorporation.

belle wearing a heavy sweater, Mrs. Tolliver wrapped in a shawl. There was no fire on the hearth, and the house was cold. The clammy house, the shivering women, only added to Sam's already considerable rage. There was plenty of coal in the cellar, as he well knew.

Mrs. Tolliver came to Sam and kissed his cheek. She said in a choked voice that she wanted him to know she would always be his friend; she looked on him as a son, and under no circumstances would she quarrel with him, no matter how deeply he hurt her.

He laid the fat pile of bills on the table. "I want you to look these over and let me know whether or not they are correct. It seems incredible that four women could have eaten the amount of food you are charged for. When you have checked the accounts, you can let me know." He started for the door.

"Just a minute," Annabelle commanded. She picked up the bills and skimmed them through hastily. "They seem to be in order," she said coolly, "but since you insist that we check every loaf of bread and peck of potatoes, we shall do so. You seem to forget, Mr. Samuel, Forbes the husband, that when you were still in the cover you told my mother, indeed urged her, to see that Flora had every comfort."

Sam said: "I wanted Flora to have everything necessary, everything in reason. I told your mother so, expecting her to come to me if she needed money. I did not, however, authorize her to run up bills out of all reason and charge them to me, as she and you very well knew."

"We knew nothing of the kind. We had no money, as you must have known, and you had authorized my mother to see that Flora was properly fed and cared for. We took you at your word. But perhaps you expected Flora to be fed and us to starve. Perhaps..."

"I would as soon argue with a basketful of eggs as any member of this family," Sam interrupted and took himself home in a towering rage.

(To Be Continued)

WHALING DAY OVER, OLD PORT OBSERVES 100TH ANNIVERSARY

When the Revolutionary War broke out, Bedford Village was already a shipbuilding and whaling port. Its busy harbor, a rendezvous for American privateers, was the scene of the first naval engagement between the British and the Colonians.

Incensed when the Americans seized two sloops, the British invaded the town and destroyed parts of it.

By the end of the War of 1812, Bedford Village had captured the whaling leadership from Nantucket. Two years before incorporation as New Bedford, 10,000 seamen manned the storied ships of the whaling fleet which annually contributed thousands of barrels of oil to the town's wealth.

The first impulse to change the history of the town ever more than the earlier change from agriculture to whaling, opened in 1846. Though the mild, damp climate was favorable to the handling of cotton, the industry grew slowly until the discovery of petroleum in 1857 in Pennsylvania. Then the growing scarcity of whales doomed the once-lucrative fleet.

Today New Bedford is an industrial center, best known for the manufacture of fine cotton goods, shoes, electrical equipment, clothing and glassware. But hundreds of small Portuguese fishing craft in the harbor at the mouth of the Acushnet River still nurture the maritime tradition.

For the coming week's celebration, New Bedford has invited state and national dignitaries, including Gov. Robert F. Bradford of Massachusetts. The city's 25,000 textile workers will be on vacation, and many other industries will be closed for the anniversary.

Two New Bells Complete Set Rung In 1776

PHILADELPHIA (UP)—The set of bells that rang out when the Liberty Bell sounded American independence on July 4, 1776, is now complete.

Two additional bells were dedicated at famous Old Christ Church, joining the eight other historic ones brought to this country from England in 1754. The two new bells completed the belfry set needed to play all bell and hymnal music.

The additions were made in part from enemy material captured in World War II, provided by the

Second Working Life Begins At 45, Man Says

CLEVELAND (UP)—Millions of persons must expect "two working lives"—one beginning at 18, the other around 45—Ewan Clague, commissioner of U. S. Bureau of Labor Standards, told the Northeastern Vocational Guidance Association.

"Men on heavy duty, such as in the rubber industry, can't stand the gaff after middle age," Clague said. "Many have to turn to broom sweeping."

The lesson, as Clague sees it, is to teach high school students to anticipate "a second career" for job security.

"Adult education must be expanded," Clague said. "Many a laborer could turn in later years to timekeeping or semi-clerical work if he went back to school."

Would Save Farmers $100,000,000 On Hay

WASHINGTON (UP)—Frank R. Nichols of Davenport, Ia., figures he can save farmers $100,000,000 this year—and that is hay.

Nichols, president of a wire and steel company, told the Agriculture Department that much can be saved in hay and straw from this year's crop if aluminum is used as a substitute for steel in making wire for hay bale ties.

He estimated that farmers would need 143,200 tons of steel ties this year. Only 127,757 tons were available last year, and Nichols expects this year's shortage to be greater. "While aluminum bale ties cost more than those made from steel," he said, "the difference is negligible compared with the overall savings in hay."

He estimated that the extra cost for aluminum ties, compared with steel ties—at the legitimate price—is 75 cents per ton of hay baled.

The Black Douglas, a former schooner yacht, was purchased for the expedition by a special congressional appropriation. Before the vessel reached Seattle, the war started and the Navy requisitioned the Black Douglas as a patrol boat.

Back from war-time service and equipped as a floating laboratory, the ship and its 15-man crew, headed by Dr. Victor B. Scheffer, service biologist, is en route to the Pribilof Islands in the Bering Sea. This island group is known to be the breeding grounds for the seal herd. There the expedition will conduct sealing and tagging operations. Examination of the stomach contents of the seals will determine if they are feeding on valuable commercial food fishes, the service explained.

Later in the fall, the Black Douglas will follow the seals south to continue study of their migration routes to winter waters.

The expedition also expects to gather information on other marine life, such as killer whales, hair seals, sea lions and sea otters, to see if those animals prey on young seals. Since the U. S. government assumed direct control of the fur seal herd in 1910, the animals have increased from 132,279 to 3,386,000 in 1946. The herd is at present valued at more than $100,000,000.

Meeting Dog Restores War Victim's Memory

CAGLIARI, Sardinia (UP)—A ten year old boy, who lost his memory during a war-time bombardment here four years ago, suddenly remembered his name and family when he met a little dog while walking down the street.

The boy had been adopted by a widow who found him in the ruins of his neighborhood and gave him the name of her dead husband.

When the lad recognized the dog and called him by name, his foster mother questioned him and after several hours the lad recalled his proper name and details of his childhood before the bombardment.

The boy's father had been killed in the bombardment and his mother had died when he was less than a year old.

RUBBER COATING DEVISED TO PRESERVE NAVY SHIPS

PITTSBURGH (UP) — Scientists at Mellon Institute, heart of the nation's industrial research, spent more than $7,000 a day during the last year developing new "servants" for manufacturers and housewives.
The institute's director, Dr. E.
R. Weidlein, in an annual report to the board of trustees, said $2, 497,982 had been invested in experiments during the year.
His report covered a wide range of research activity, stretching from atomic energy in the petroleum industry to longer-wearing nylon stockings.
Much progress also was made in the field of synthetics, particularly synthetic rubber.
One of the hopes of the institute was to make synthetic rubber spread like lacquer to seal materials against rust and wear. Weid-lein said the process already is in use "mothproofing" the navy's reserve fleet.
The institute believes this protective coating will be used some day to prolong the life of steel con-institute was to simplify plant operations, increase production and lower prices of the finished synthetic product.

Highly successful achievements also were noted in the field of plastics.
Weidlein disclosed the use of clay as a chemical in the production of plastics. This new plastic, especially applicable as insulation against electricity, is acid resistant, water shedding and withstands high temperatures.
The institute said another "very important" step was taken in the development of a new plastic called "polystyrene." Now under production at the Kobuta Plastic plant of Koppers, Inc., the new plastic is considered tough enough to use in building construction.

PHILADELPHIA (CP) — The set of bells that rang out when the Liberty Bell sounded American Independence on July 4, 1776, is now complete.
Two additional bells were dedicated at famous Old Christ Church, bringing the eight other historic bells brought to this country from England in 1754. The two new bells completed the bellry set.
The bells will ring all bell and hymnal

Throngs Expected At Nat'l Parks. WASHINGTON (UP)—The bears and birds in this country's 17 national parks will have lots of company this summer.

The National Park Service predicted that an all-time record number of tourists will visit the parks this year, with the peak of the rush lasting from now until Labor Day.

NPS Director Newton B. Drury cautioned prospective park visitors to reserve accommodations now. Otherwise, he said, they will be "disappointed," because bookings already are heavy at such big-name parks as Yellowstone, Yosemite, Glacier, Grand Canyon, Bryce and Zion.

In preparation for the record turnout of tourists, the Park Service has rehabilitated many buildings which fell into disrepair during the war, built some new facilities and fixed up some park roads.

For those preferring to pitch their own tents, free campgrounds will be available at all national parks except Carlsbad Caverns in New Mexico.

building has fallen into disuse. At one time it was the scene of colorful activity as housewives and tradespeople bargained over produce. A "flying" staircase led to the second floor city council chambers and in adjoining cells, prisoners gazed from barred windows. City officials have asked the state to preserve the building as a memorial.

Signs Warn Of Fate Of Invading Mexican Animals

SAN ANTONIO, Tex. (UP)—One thousand cardboard signs are being posted along the United States-Mexico border to warn Mexicans that cattle, swine, sheep or goats crossing the Rio Grande River will be destroyed in the drive to conquer foot and mouth disease. Dr. W. C. Dye, veterinarian in charge of the Bureau of Animal Industry office in San Antonio, says the posting of signs is the latest step to keep animals which might be infected with the dread disease out of this country.
