Two Plead Guilty In Vote Fraud Case

That Reminds Me
BY FRANK A. JONES

IT MUST BE IN THE HEART

There is a popular selling book by Dale Carnegie on "How To Make Friends and Influence People." The author of this book also conducts classes on this subject in the larger centers which are largely attended. Every normal person, I think, wants friends, they want people to think well of them. Many people have many friends without seeming to make any effort to attract them. Others seem innately friendly towards them. I think that the secret of having many friends lies in being friendly. One cannot go about sour and glum with a dour expression and expect to have friends. Such a disposition repels friends. Few care to break through the ice in which such an individual is encased and be friendly with them. Rather they leave them alone to stew in their own blue juice. In the same way I think people reflect goodness and kindness and charity and brotherly Christian love. If there is much of it in the heart it is bound to show in the face and manner just the same as friendliness shows.

MORE THAN 40,000 SEX CRIMES ARE COMMITTED IN THIS COUNTRY EACH YEAR

The records show that there are committed in this country each year upwards of 40,000 sex crimes. By sex crimes is not meant a violation of the social laws. The record includes these instances in which men and young girls and women are criminally and forcefully assaulted and in a good many instances mutilated and murdered. It is safe to say that the number, if it included those women who for fear of publicity fail to report that they have been attacked to the authorities, would be five times as large as it is. The known record is enough to awaken even the most lethargic and indifferent lawmaking bodies to action.

Rivers and men become crooked by following the line of least resistance.

You can get a fairly accurate picture of a person by observing what he will do for money.

Congress has finally become worried about high prices, probably because the prices are eating up the 50 per cent wage increase the members of congress recently voted for themselves.

Sees End of Cooperation
LONDON—The British foreign office today interpreted the rebirth of the Communist International as making the formal end of the wartime cooperation among the big powers.

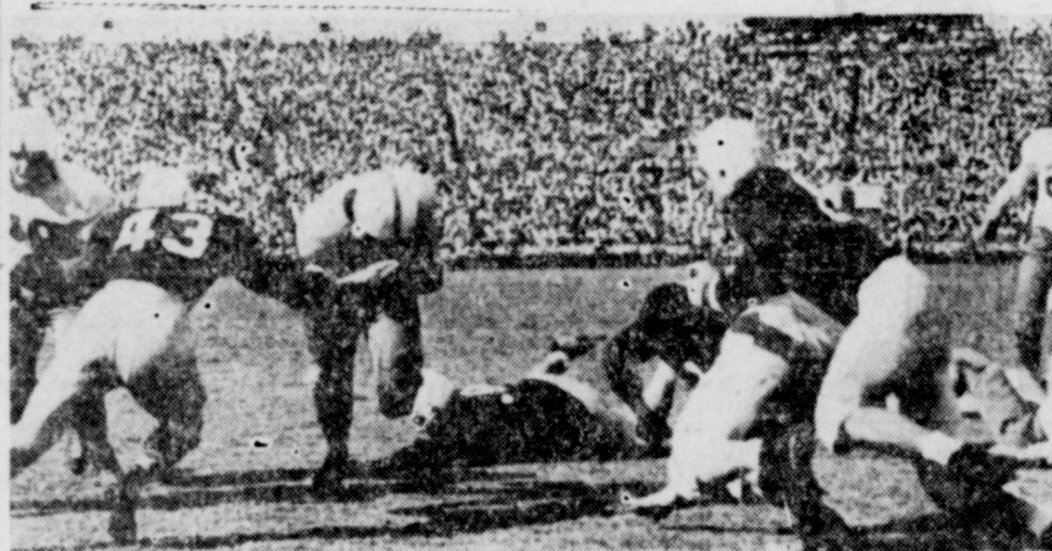

An official spokesman said the development was "under the most active study" by the British government.

How To Prevent Fire

MATCHES carry the Red Terror. Don't throw a match away before it is out. Keep matches in metal containers and out of reach of children. Youngsters playing with matches cause 26,000 fires a year.

Steers Stomp Tar Heels

Tom Landry, (24) goes through a wide hole in the North Carolina line for the second Lghorn touchdown in the first quarter. Bill Maceyke, (43) tries in vain to halt the pay dirt drive. Texas went on to win 34-0, boosting them into the upper brackets of National standing. (NEA Telephoto).

ARAB ACCUSES U. S. OF AIDING PALESTINE UNREST

LAKE SUCCESS, N. Y.—A spokesman for the Arab countries today accused the United States in contradiction of the "Truman doctrine" — of tolerating U. S. financing of minority "terrorism and illegal immigration" into Palestine.

Dr. M. F. Jamali of Iraq made the charge in the midst of increased tension at the United Nations General Assembly resulting from the announcement that the Communist parties of nine European countries have formed a new international to fight the Truman doctrine and the Marshall plan. Speaking before the UN Palestine committee, Jamali used President Truman's own words to support a contention that the United States policy is inconsistent—that it follows one set of principles in Greece and another in Palestine.

Jamali quoted the President's "Truman doctrine" speech to Congress in which Mr. Truman proclaimed U. S. policy as support for "free peoples who are resisting attempted subjugation by armed minorities or by outside pressure."

"But see what is happening in Palestine," he shouted. "Armed minorities and outside pressures have worked to thwart the will of the majority during the last 30 years."

"The honorable delegate of the U. S. accused some states bordering Greece as supplying Greek guerrillas with men, arms, and ammunition. He denounced this act as an international aggression. 'We think this principle of non-intervention in the internal affairs of another country should be accepted as a universal principle and we think that Palestine should be no exception."

Dr. Juan Rivera Reyes of Panama again exposed to the Palestine committee the alarm of the little middle-of-the-road countries in the UN at the worsening of American-Soviet relations. He deplored "stubborn accusations" and "unfriendliness" displayed by the two great powers toward each other and warned that the common people of the world will never forgive UN delegates if they fail to find a solution here.

Nine Nations Join To Stop U. S., British Plan

PARIS—Russia headed a closely meshed organization of the Communist parties of nine European nations today, whose avowed purpose was to wreck the Marshall and Truman plans and stop American and British-style democracy in its tracks.

In seven of the nations—Russia, Yugoslavia, Bulgaria, Romania, Hungary, Poland and Czechoslovakia—"Communist party" is synonymous, or practically so, with "government." The two exceptions are the Communist parties of France and Italy, powerful organizations in nations with the Marshall plan zone.

PREDICTS TRUMAN WILL INCREASE PRICE OF GOLD

DUNCAN, Okla.—Erle P. Halliburton, industrialist who owns gold mine in Honduras, predicted today that President Truman would wipe out $12,000,000,000 of the national debt in 1948 by changing the value of an ounce of gold.

"He could do it with an executive order," Halliburton said, "and he has the power to issue the order."

"Today's gold price is $35 an ounce. If that price were changed to $55 an ounce, the value of the gold stored at Fort Knox, Ky., would be increased $12,000,000,000 overnight.

"Next year is a political year. A $12,000,000,000 slash in the national debt, and a $4,000,000,000 surplus at the end of the next fiscal year, which seems indicated, would justify a $16,000,000,000 cut in income taxes. "That would be a big political stick for the Democratic party in the 1946 presidential election year. Gold mining stocks are now selling at far above their present earning power. It looks like the gold mining people are expecting Truman to put the price of an ounce of gold up to $55 next year."

Halliburton said gold on world markets was selling above today's $35 an ounce price in the United States. Mediterranean markets are nearly twice that figure and in China price, he said, was nearly $120 an ounce.

Each of the thirty Legion Posts in the 17th District has indicated that it will be represented at the Convention, Stacy said. All requests for room reservations should be made to O. R. Rodien, Chairman, Housing Committee, Abilene, he said. Adjournment will be Sunday evening.

THREE OTHERS PLEAD NOLO CONTENDRE

KANSAS CITY, Mo. — Two men pleaded guilty today to charges of ghost voting in the August 1946 congressional primary election as the Second Federal District Court vote fraud trial got under way.

Three other defendants in the group entered pleas of nolo contendere, leaving only Robert McKissick, brother of second ward democratic boss Henry McKissick, to go to trial on the charge of ghost voting.

Those who pleaded guilty were: Jesse Bell and Lucius Carter, both negroes.

Carl C. Dood and Margaret Jackson entered nolo contendere pleas today and Stella Page entered a plea of no contest on Sept. 19. All three negroes. The government charges that the five were "tourists" on the election day, driving from one polling place to another.

Judge Albert A. Ridge informed the defendants that they could be sentenced to a maximum of 10 years in prison and a fine of $5,000. He told those who pleaded no contest that, as far as the court was concerned, theirs was the same as a plea of guilty.

Judge Ridge withheld sentencing the five pending the outcome of the trial of McKissick, who served as democratic precinct captain in the 21st precinct of the second ward on that August voting day.

After the pleas were entered, selections of a jury was begun to hear testimony in the trial of McKissick. Richard K. Phelps, U. S. prosecutor, said he had about 25 witnesses to testify.

THERE is hardly a business, shop, factory, or organization in this area that can't employ disabled veterans to do a job as well as unimpaired employees.

A survey just completed by the Department of Labor, in cooperation with the Veterans Administration, proves the point. They went into all kinds of light and heavy industries and got the facts from industry's own records. The physically impaired had fewer work injuries and were on the job as regularly as the unimpaired. In production, not only produced as well in most cases but better in some. Naturally, the disabled veteran must be placed in a job in keeping with his special skills and physical capacity.

It's just good business to weigh skills, experience, and physical capacity against the requirements of the specific job. It is the job of the Veterans Employment Service, cooperating with the local offices of the State Employment Service, to be of assistance to employers and to disabled veterans looking for a job. If we can be of help during National Employ the Physically Handicapped Week, or any other time, please call on us.

FROM FILES OF THE

OF OCT. 5, 1928

Murray P. Gill has resigned his office with the Oilbelt Power Company and Texas Electric Service Company and about the middle of this month will leave with his family for Allentown, Pennsylvania, where he will be connected as construction manager with the Phoenix Utilities Company which is virtually the Pennsylvania Light and Power Company. It has not been announced who will succeed him.

George Karantonis and Earnest Halkias, who recently purchased the old Charlotte Hotel building, are improving it in a very extensive manner.

The pastor of the local Church of God is looking forward to a great day next Sunday, as there will be a specially planned program at all services in behalf of the Warner Memorial University. All congregations of the Church of God in the Southwest will participate in observing next Sunday as Dollar Day for the benefit of Warner Memorial University.

Jess C. Day is looking for his automobile, a Dodge coupe, which he parked this morning on the east side of the Texas State Bank and which was not there when he went to get it an hour later.

Exercising economy where ever possible, the budget of the city expenditures for the ensuing fiscal year has been completed and approved by the City Commission, and the tax rate was fixed today at $2.35 and the $100 valuation. This is based on total valuation of $5,000,000 real and personal property. The rate is 10c less than it was last year.

There will be a barbecue at Merriam next Saturday, dedicating the new Merriam bridge also honoring Mrs. W. C. Gunkle, who was the leader in getting up a petition and working for the bridge. The citizenship appreciates and, is proud of the bridge.

PERSONAL NOTES

Flood Waters Expose Coal and Bones

RICHMOND, Mo. (UP) — The results of the recent summer floods of the Missouri basin weren't all bad.

The waters washed a hole approximately 75 feet deep and an acre in extent three miles southeast of Hardin along the Crooked River.

When the waters receded, observers found a vein of coal approximately 12 inches thick and a cache of bones, believed to be from prehistoric animals. The latter were sent to the University of Missouri for study.

Brothers Keep Step In Fatherhood

PORTLAND, Me. (UP) — Babies were born the same day to Mrs. James Nappi and Mrs. Joseph Nappi—who live at the same address—but the coincidence doesn't stop there.

Both babies are boys. The mothers shared the same room at the hospital.

The same physician made both deliveries. The children are the first for both couples. The fathers are brothers, and both are employed by the same firm.

Court Awards Calf Before It's Born

SAVANNAH, Ga. (UP)—Municipal Court Judge Columbus A. Alexander will have to wait for a bovine blessed event before a Solomon-like order of his can be obeyed.

Alexander settled a dispute between two Negroes over ownership of a cow by awarding one complainant a calf which had not even arrived.

Frances Bowen and Horace Wright both claimed the same cow. The woman said she reared the cow for Horace for half interest, then bought his interest for $10. Horace said it wasn't so.

When the judge found that the cow was in "an interesting condition," he asked Frances if she'd be willing to give the calf to Horace. Frances said she would, except for one thing:

"Suppose," she asked, "the cow has twins?"

DOCTOR WOODWARD'S AMBITION

By Elizabeth Seifert

THE STORY: Pop McAn, hospital Chief of Staff, chafes at the inactivity forced on him by a partially paralyzing stroke. He tells Dr. Malcolm Glenn, top obstetric surgeon and Acting Chief, that Woodward, the new staff doctor, is due to arrive soon. Dr. Malcolm Glenn, McAn's brother, is in love with Susan, Malcolm's office nurse. Nancy is Malcolm's wife. Pete and Jerry are his sons. Andrew Woodward arrives on a Sunday, makes a tour of the hospital as an ordinary visitor, without making himself known to the staff.

VII

THE operating schedule was the heaviest of the year. Those who clipped schedule sheets to boards were aware of this crowding the nurses did the extra duties assigned to them; the doctors frowned at their schedules and followed them, moving briskly; the interns hurried a little faster. There was no confusion, and no patient knew that the Hospital was especially busy. By eleven o'clock the beds were changed, the given; the wards stretched in shining efficiency. The Hospital reflected this air of competent management, and Andrew Woodward was especially conscious of that perfection. It was like fresh icing on one of his mother's round cakes, tempting a small boy to touch the smoothness, to leave a mark or so.

At eleven, a young man who limped slightly, came, and asked Dr. Woodward if he would accompany him to Dr. Glenn's office for an informal Staff meeting. "I'm Dr. Brack, O.B. Assistant," the little doctor with the club foot explained.

"You work with the great and wonderful Malcolm?" asked Andrew, running a comb through his already polished red hair.

He turned in time to see the frown upon Brack's face. "I think he is great and wonderful," the young doctor said soberly. "So will you, when you know him."

"I have a horrible habit of seeing an idol's feet of clay," the new doctor said pleasantly, opening his office door, standing back for the other man to precede him.

A DOZEN white-coated men were gathered in Dr. Glenn's big office; they turned as one man to look at the new Staff. Andrew grinned widely, his blue eyes crinkling up behind his cheeks, his heavy underlip dropping. He pushed up the tail of his coverall and plunged his hands into his trouser pockets. "Well!" he said. "A reception."

Dr. Glenn came forward. "If we had not been so busy, we would have had a band out on the front steps this morning," he said in his deep, good voice. "Dr. Woodward, I am Malcolm Glenn, O.B., and—"

Andrew stretched out an eager hand. "No need to identify yourself, sir. With so many techniques bearing your name, the greenest medic knows who Dr. Malcolm Glenn is."

Malcolm flushed, hesitated. "Thank you very much," he said stiffly. In this hospital, where he worked as hard as anyone, fulsome praise was not considered necessary. He turned to indicate the dark man at his side. "My brother, Dr. Martin Glenn, diagnostician." He went around the circle—Andrew had a warm handshake, a smiling word or each one. He was talking enthusiastically to Kramer, his own assistant, when Susan came in from the hall and stopped short, her eyes widening. She pressed her lips tightly together, went over to Malcolm's desk, and worked with the papers there. She heard—Malcolm introduce the new Staff to Miss Huppert. "Superintendent of Caroline Lehr nurses, Dr. Woodward. Your boss, as she is to all of us."

Miss Huppert bridled; Andrew laughed low in his throat. "I think we shall get along," he said. Dr. Malcolm looked at his wrist. "I have a clinic—I am asking Miss Huppert to take you around the Hospital, Doctor. Be sure to take him in to Dr. McAn, Miss Huppert."

"Yes, Doctor," she said briskly. She smiled at the new Staff, felt of her back hair, and led the way out of Malcolm's office. The others trailed away.

MALCOLM went to stand at the window, his shoulders hunched. Susan threw a glance at his direction. Should she tell him that Woodward had already made his way to the Hospital? Why had he come here the day before, posing as a stranger, and asked all his questions? Susan tried to remember what she had said to him. She had an uneasy feeling that one must be careful with Dr. Woodward. He had the air of a man who would remember casual words, store them up.

As Huppert led Dr. Woodward down the hall and across the lobby, she was explaining to the new Staff the general system of the Hospital Group. A Manager—not a doctor—was in the main office. Each separate hospital had its complete Staff, as Caroline Lehr Women's and Children's did. The Staffs met occasionally in joint session; none had jurisdiction over the other. Dr. Malcolm Glenn had served as Acting Chief of Staff at the Lehr since Pop McAn's stroke.

"Are they going to appoint a new Chief?" Andrew asked. Huppert shrugged. "Not until McAn himself suggests it. He got the Lehr Foundation for the Hospital group. Nobody will put him out while he's alive."

"I see. And he hangs on as Chief?"

"The gossip is that he's waiting until the new orthopedic wing is finished and staffed. It's possible that the new Orthopedic Chief will be Hospital Chief. Though McAn is a pediatricist. As you are." Her blue eyes darted to Woodward's face. He met them boldly.

"Thank you for the tip," he said frankly.

not supposed to find your nurse attractive."

"Don't worry. I won't. Now— you treat Dr. Glenn much better."

"You mean Dr. Malcolm? Yes, Susan is as pretty a girl as the Staff can boast. But she's a good nurse, too."

"Then why can't I have her?"

Miss Huppert laughed again. "Not a chance. She's strictly Malcolm Glenn's property. You wouldn't be the first to try to get her away from him, and fail. I don't believe one thinks the other could function alone."

"Could they?"

"Malcolm could. I was his personal nurse, until I was made Supe. Then he took on Miss Perry. At the time, he said he couldn't work without me."

"I imagine you still are a great help to him."

"Well, I try to keep the place running smoothly. He's a very busy man."

They had come again to the main corridor. Andrew smiled at Miss Huppert. "You've been very kind," he thanked her. "And I shall count on your helping me."

She looked up at him. "In just what way, Doctor?"

His smile was gay. "Oh, you know—put me wise to all the little hidden things a Staff doctor needs to know, and which might help me while I'm strange here. Keep me out of hot water."

"I think you're smart enough to keep yourself out," she assured him. "But I'll enjoy a gossip with you, now and then."

He laughed, low in his throat. "Good girl!" he said approvingly. As she turned away, his hand resoundingly whacked her well rounded hip. Miss Huppert squealed, jumped a little, looked back at the smiling Staff with excited blue eyes. He nodded, opened his office door, and went in.

But with the door handle still in his fingers, he stood short. His eyes befogged with thought. His nurse looked up, and Andrew winced. "I'm going to Dr. Malcolm's office," he said quickly, and backed out. He'd go speak to the Acting Chief about this nurse business.

Malcolm looked up, sharply. "What is that?"

Andrew's infectious smile held. "I don't like the nurse assigned to my office. In fact, I came here with the intention of stealing Miss Perry away from you. The older Dr. Glenn seems to have the cream of the crop."

Susan glanced at him, went over to one of the white-paneled walls, opened a door, and pulled out the drawer of a filing cabinet. She busied herself with the morning's cards. But she was alert from the red-gold hair upon her head to the soles of her neat white shoes.

"What nurse do you have?" Dr. Malcolm was asking courteously.

"A horse named Dyson. Sixty if she's a day."

"Not sixty," Malcolm murmured. "Near enough. What does a man have to do to rate a nurse like yours, Doctor?"

Malcolm chuckled, pouring into his cup the last drop of coffee from the little silver pot. "Perhaps you'd better take the qualifications up with Miss Perry," he said amiably.

Andrew nodded, stood up. "I'll consider that, sir. Well—I suppose I'll be getting a schedule."

"It's probably on your desk," said Susan crisply. But she kept her attention on the files until she was sure Andrew had gone through the outer door. Then she turned to smile ruefully at Malcolm. "Sorry," she said, "but I wouldn't want to be his nurse."

"There's not a chance of that happening," Malcolm assured her.

DR. WOODWARD was seated at his desk, his own lunch tray before him. Miss Dyson's chair and desk deserted. He sat eating, looking at the schedule which, as Susan Perry had promised, he had found upon his desk, and considering the things he had seen, and learned, in his first morning at the Lehr.

Huppert. As powerful as any Supe is, that power increased by her jealous defense of her position, her insistence upon its constant recognition. And Andrew had got Huppert firmly tucked into his pocket.

He picked up a stalk of celery, leaned far back in his chair, and nibbled upon its crisp, crunchy end. So much for Huppert. Kramer, the resident, offered no problem. He was young enough to be teased, good enough not to give trouble. McAn would take a bit of handling—a hard man to fool, or to drizzle. His being helpless must not be counted on.

The Acting Chief—Andrew's chair crashed forward. He turned his eyes to this corner of his small office, and to that. Why, this business—the doctor's office didn't even begin to remind one of Glenn's plush.

There was no false modesty in Andrew Woodward's make-up. He knew to a final decimal point just how good a doctor he was—and that was good. There was every possibility that he was as good a doctor as Malcolm Glenn. Andrew would have been the first to admit that he deserved as much consideration as Glenn. As fine an office, as good a nurse as Susan—Ah, yes, but not Susan. Let him not fool himself. Susan would never be his nurse; there was no use in pursuing that hope. Too bad; she was a darned pretty girl, a warm and desirable woman. A woman a man would find exciting. A woman Andrew might hope to woo and win.

He got up from his chair, walked to the window, looking out at three Medics pitching pennies against a step. That was the line to take; lay a trap for Susan, the woman.

Andrew had good reason to think his skill as a hunter was above the average. This time, the prey was rare and desirable. And, in the end, he would have Dr. Glenn's nurse!

He went back to his desk, finished his lunch, took up his schedule and decided it was time to go to work.

Automobile production is still behind pre-war figures. In 1941, about 4,800,000 passenger cars and trucks came off the assembly lines, or about 400,000 per month. The shaded area shows how much '46-'47 production fell below pre-war figures, while the black peaks indicate production in excess of the '41 average.

HIRE THE HANDICAPPED

The American Legion DuPont Post No. 70, and the Veterans of Foreign Wars Post No. 4135, are giving their fullest cooperation in the observance of National Employ the Handicapped Week, October 5th-11th. Our local veterans organizations are ever rendering a service for the rehabilitation and employment of the handicapped.

Most firms realize the advantage of employing handicapped persons for a job they can do, however, some handicapped persons report that they have been unsuccessful in obtaining employment, and were told by prospective employers that hiring a disabled person would increase their insurance rates. The disabled person who is given the "insurance story" in being turned down for a job is not being told the truth. Two of the largest insurance associations in the nation, the American Mutual Alliance and the Association of Casualty and Surety Executives are advising their policy holders that there is no provision in workman's compensation insurance policies or rates that penalizes an employer for hiring handicapped workers. Employers who say they cannot hire disabled applicants because their insurance costs would be increased as a result, are telling everything but the truth. Disabled veterans and all other handicapped persons should become familiar with "second injury" provisions, and unite their efforts for the passage of such a law in the State of Texas.

VETERAN'S QUIZ

ON HOME LOANS

Q. Does the Veterans Administration lend money for home purchase?

A. No. The VA only guarantees a portion of the veteran's loan. Arrangements must be approved by VA, but are originated by the veteran through a private lender.

Q. How much can a veteran borrow?

A. As much as the lender is willing to lend. The maximum the VA will guarantee is $4,000 but not exceeding 50 percent of the total loan.

Q. What is the advantage of a guaranteed loan?

A. Because the loan is backed by the Government, the lender is frequently willing to make a loan that he would not make otherwise, often without requiring a down payment.

Q. Does the Government pay any of the loan?

A. Yes. It pays the lender, for credit to the veteran's account, 4 percent of the guaranteed portion. This is a gift to the veteran and not a loan.

Q. How quickly must the real estate loan be repaid?

A. The maximum period for a home loan is 25 years, or 40 years for a farm. Payments may be made at more rapid rate, without assessment of fees or premiums.

There is a growing tendency on the part of mortgage lenders to require veterans buying homes with GI loans to make down payments, the Veterans Administration said today in a statement released through C. E. Allen local Contact Representative.

This practice, said VA, has produced results that seriously retard fulfillment of objectives of the Servicemen's Readjustment Act. Under this legislation the government is allowed to guarantee the lender against loss for 50 per cent of the purchase price of a home up to a maximum of $4,000.

VA said that a decision was reached at a recent Washington conference of Loan Guaranty Officers to make a clear-cut policy statement to lenders. It was pointed out that Congress had authorized a guaranty greater than would have been necessary to supply coverages against principal risk in order that veterans might be able to acquire homes without supplying cash to the transaction. The usual down payment afforded the lender in transactions not involving GI-approved loans, said VA, generally ranges from 10 to 40 per cent.

"In fact of that fact," said the statement, "it should be obvious that the insistence by the lender of a down payment in GI loans, except where indicated for the particular case, defeats the fundamental purpose of the law, and invites new legislation which will achieve the original purpose and intent of Congress."

VA said it recognized circumstances in which no legitimate objection can be made to a lender requiring a down payment, or in declining to make a loan.

The government agency said it's former policy prevented the naming of lending institutions where applications for GI loans would receive favorable consideration. This policy has now been changed. Loan Guaranty Officers may now direct inquiring veterans to institutions which are favorably disposed to make GI loans without requiring down payments.

This step, VA said, has been regarded as a necessary service to veterans.

Big Circus Holiday Is Here

The calliope will sound when the Rogers Bros Circus arrives for its engagement at Eastland Monday, October 6.

The red wagon is an American institution. Its coming is hailed with delight and each year thousands of schools are suspended for the day that the students may revel in the delights of circus day. To many, especially business men and captains of industry, the physical side of the circus elicits a great deal of interest.

They marvel at the machine-like precision by which the great show is transported from city to city. Here today and tomorrow perhaps 200 miles away in another state. The answer to it all is this: In no other branch of human endeavor is an organization so perfected as with the circus.

More than 100 performers take part in this season's Rogers Bros. Circus. Among the high lights are features to delight every one. All under new 100 per cent flame proof tents. Benefit Eastland Police Fund, at the softball grounds.

Just Listen.

What do you say to your friend when he comes to you, angry, hurt, bewildered, bitter... because something has wounded him, because someone has said something to him or about him that turns him into a fighting animal?

What can you say to him? What do you think when you look at his face: when you see his eyes, his trembling hands?

What do you say to your friend when he turns blindly to you... instinctively... because you are his friend?

Let him rave.

Just listen.

If you attempt to join him in his emotional unhappiness, you will do both of you harm... harm that might even break up your friendship.

The truth of the matter is: your friend doesn't want to hear what you have to say. He wants someone to talk to... someone to whom he may unburden himself.

And if in you he finds a sponge into which he may pour himself... he will love you more than ever when he returns to normal.

Because you had sense enough to stick with him... quietly... And just listened.

The best kind of friend is the one who knows how to... just listen. And forgets what he has heard.

The Art Of Finding Oil

DAN KRALIS
Lone Star Gas Company
(One of a series)

(One of a series)

The days are gone forever when the geologist can look for oil in the United States using signs such as oil seepages, gas bubbles, and other obvious criteria.

Today he must use geochemistry, micropaleontology, lithology, electrophysics, cartography, and geophysics.

Geophysical exploration is a most helpful tool. Geophysics is a study of the physics of the earth with special reference to its physical properties, structure, and composition. The seismic method is one of the most useful branches of geophysical exploration. This method is based upon the varying speed with which rocks of different types transmit vibrational waves. These waves are produced by shooting off dynamite at a given location while seismograph recording instruments are set up in a particular pattern to chart the time rate of penetration of these waves through the various rock strata.

From this data, possible oil and gas traps can be interpreted by the geologist.

It costs from twelve to twenty thousand dollar a month to operate a seismograph crew.

Tomorrow—other geophysical methods.
