INVESTIGATION OF PAULEY AND GRAHAM TO CONTINUE

WASHINGTON — Republican Senate speculation investigators today defeated a move to give Edwin W. Pauley and Brig. Gen. Wallace H. Graham a clean bill of health in their commodity dealings.

The move was made by two Democrats of a Senate appropriations subcommittee to clear the names of Pauley and Graham. But the three Republican members of the committee voted against the Democratic motion.

At the same time, the committee voted to ask for an appropriation of $20,000 for a 90-day period to hire four or five experts and a stenographer to assist in the investigation.

Thus far, their only assistance has been from staff experts who in a short while have to devote their time to regular duties in connection with appropriations bills.

Pauley is a special assistant to the Army secretary and Graham personal physician to President Truman.

In defeating the motion to clear them of having used "inside" information in commodity trading, acting chairman, William F.

Knowland, R. Cal., said it "seemed to us that it would be premature to say there was no wrong doing when the investigation is incomplete."

Sen. Theodore Francis Green, D. R. I., who proposed the motion said there was no evidence that Pauley and Graham had operated on the basis of "insider information" on government purchasing programs. He contended it was the subcommittee's "duty" to clear their names immediately.

Voting against the motion were Knowland, Sen. Henry C. Dworshak, R. Ida., and Chairman Homer Ferguson, R. Mich., by proxy. Green cast an affirmative vote and the proxy of Sen. Millard E. Tydings, D. Md.

On the $20,000 proposal the Republicans voted for it, but Green withheld his own and Tydings' vote.

Screen actor Robert Mitchum and his wife Dorothy testified in a Los Angeles Superior Court that Mitchum's former business agent, Paul Behrman, had doled out 30 dollars a week to them as spending money, and had withdrawn $9,000 from the actor's bank account without Mitchum's knowledge. ### Japanese Editor Tells His People They've Failed

TOKYO (UP) — The Japanese face "franks second or third ugliest among the races of the world," according to the Tokyo magazine Van.

The magazine didn't bother to name its candidates for the No. 1 and No. 2 positions. It was more concerned with out-doing its competitors in the current popular literary sport here of debunking every element of Japanese life which until V-J Day fitted into Nipponese propaganda on the "Japanese super-race."

"Who are the Japanese?" the editor asked. "You could have answered this question satisfactorily up to 1946 by saying they are 'the Stainless People of the Land of the Gods' or 'the Sovereigns of Greater East Asia.'"

"Such conceptions now have been thrown into the wastebasket of the eternal past, together with the old constitution and military shoulder straps."

Today, the magazine informed its readers, it would be more accurate to call the Japanese "the Stainless People of the Land of Poverty" or "the Pariahs of Greater East Asia."

What's more, the Japanese people today "are the filthy people of the world, with 90 per cent of them blighted by parasites and of the world, with 90 per cent of tuberculous bacilli," the editor told his fellow countrymen.

"Neither superficial repentance, nor the nursing of the absurd idea that they are 'the descendants of the Sun God,' will do to dispel the fleas and lice and suddenly transform the pariahs into a well behaved people," he counseled.

Australia Making Big Strides In Polar Studies

By DAN L. THRAPP
United Press Staff Correspondent
LONDON (UP) — Australia's 5-year plan for Antarctic exploration developed with great success this season. Purchase of a third exploration ship is contemplated, to give the dominion the largest scientific fleet in South Polar seas.

The Wyatt Earp, veteran exploration ship, was damaged slightly recently when she was buffeted by southern gales and ice. The other vessel used by the commonwealth, the LST-3501, succeeded in the hazardous task of landing a 14-man wintering party on desolate Heard Island, landed stores on French-claimed Kerguelen Island to re-supply the Wyatt Earp, and now is en route back to Australia.

Group Capt. A. C. Campbell, leader of this year's diverse expedition, was expected in England this month or in February to select a third vessel, which must be wooden-hulled to withstand expected battering by Antarctic ice. It was thought that still other ships might later be bought in Britain, the United States, or in Scandinavia as the five-year exploration plan develops.

While the LST deposited the Heard Island party, the Wyatt Earp was expected to reach the Antarctic mainland before the end of January. A landfall was to be made off the South Magnetic Pole, west of the Ross Ice Barrier, site of Little America.

Magnetic observations a n d soundings would be taken and the ship then planned to cruise west along the almost unknown coast of the continent, carrying out scientific work.

The ship would seek a base for a permanent station on the continent within the Australian-claimed sectors, and would then return to Hobart and Melbourne by way of Heard Island and Kerguelen Island. It may take several such trips to find a suitable base for a land party, authoritative sources thought.

Landing the party on Heard Island turned out to be a rather adventurous task, but the Australian flag was raised on Boxing Day, Dec. 26, just below the 11,000-foot central peak of the island.

Lieut.-Comdr. Dickson, captain of the LST, originally had picked Spit Bay, where sealers once established huts, as the "port" used by the expedition, but when the ship reached the island, the bay was found not so handy as it appeared on the map, and stores were beached on the wind-swept northwest corner of the island instead.

Landing operations were abandoned once when a gale arose and the LST was forced to put to sea. Eighteen consecutive days of calm weather then permitted a bulldozer and some 400 tons of supplies to be beached, some of it floated in with the tide and waves.

Treasury Surplus Hits New High

By United Press
WASHINGTON — The treasury's surplus has reached the highest level in history, the daily treasury statement disclosed today. The surplus is $3,258,878,821. It surpassed the previous high of $3,252,000,000 achieved last March 31.

The new record high is more than three times the $1,101,000,000 surplus shown on the statement just a year ago. Also, it is approaching half the surplus of $7,500,000,000 estimated by President Truman to be on hand on June 30, at the end of the fiscal year.

PANHANDLE BLANKETED BY 3 INCH SNOW

By United Press
A blanket of snow lay over the Texas Panhandle today, fading into freezing rain to the southward in the vicinity of Childress.

From two to three inches of snow fell at Pampa, Amarillo and other points in the Panhandle yesterday, with sub-freezing temperatures recorded. At the same time the lower Rio Grande Valley felt the warmest weather of the nation.

The mercury climbed to 85 degrees at Presidio. The highest reading at Amarillo was 30 degrees.

Highways in the Panhandle were glazed over and dangerous, with the highway department recommending only emergency travel.

Three persons were killed late yesterday when an automobile skidded on wet, slick pavement and collided with two other vehicles near Lubbock.

Airlines felt the effects of a low overcast early today, as some flights were delayed and others cancelled.

Sub-zero temperatures were reported from Montana to the Atlantic Ocean as the nation entered its 25th consecutive day of unseasonably cold weather.

The coldest spots were Concord, N. H., and Harve, Mont., both with 11 degrees below zero. The temperature dropped to .7 at Albany, N. Y., Willmar, Minn., and Miles City, Mont., 5 at Watertown, S. D., and 2 at Syracuse, N. Y., and Rockford, Ill.

STOCK MARKET IN LONDON ALSO TAKES A NOSE-DIVE

By United Press

WASHINGTON — Government economists hoped today that the commodity market break may mark the downward turning point in the cost of living, but they were puzzled why the stock market followed suit.

Food, clothing and other consumer goods will be somewhat cheaper later on if basic commodity prices continue down. It is just this for which President Truman, and Congress, and many businessmen have been praying.

Lower living costs would take some of the steam out of the drive for a third round of increases, government economists pointed. At the same time, a drop or even a leveling-off in prices will kill the administration's last lingering hope for restoration of price and rationing controls.

CHICAGO — Grain prices plunged downward for the third day in a row today in a major break which many experts believed meant the end of the inflationary food spiral.

Corn, wheat and oats prices at Chicago, Minneapolis and Kansas City, dropped the limit or close to it.

At Chicago, on the nation's biggest grain exchanges, the flurry of opening trade lasted only three minutes. Traders swarmed into the pit as the opening gong sounded.

Sellers opened the bidding on corn at prices eight cents below yesterday's close. This is the limit loss on corn for a single day's trading, but even so there were few buyers.

Corn futures generally had dropped the full 24 cents in the last three days. Wheat, with a 10-cent limit of decline, had dropped 30 cents a bushel in three days on the three big exchanges.

Wheat futures broke another eight cents a bushel on opening of the Kansas City board of trade today.

The May option opened at 248, off 7 3/4 cents from yesterday's close following two days of plummeting prices. The July delivery was off 8 3/8 cents on today's initial sale at 228 3/8.

LONDON MARKET DROPS

LONDON — The London stock market took a nose dive today in the heaviest selling slump since July, 1947.

The British market which had nervously watched the plunging American exchanges for two days today went into a spectacular decline of its own.

Millions in pound sterling values were wiped out. All types of securities were affected by the wave of selling.

★ WASHINGTON COLUMN

BY PETER EDSON

NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON—(NEA)—"They're for it, but they're afraid of it," a prominent international businessman told the Senate Foreign Relations Committee the other day, in summing up his observations on business reaction to the Marshall Plan. He was Roy W. Gifford of Detroit, board chairman of Borg Warner International. For nearly 40 years he has been building and running factories and setting up sales organizations in 100 foreign countries.

Edson

Gifford came to Washington to tell the Senate about his plan for an "American Council for Aid to European Industry." First public announcement of the Gifford plan was made in this column last November. Briefly, Mr. Gifford proposes to line up the services of America's top executives, engineers and technical experts. He would make their "know how" available to the 16 European nations receiving aid under the Marshall Plan.

Gifford believes this aid would be readily forthcoming if American businessmen understood that, by contributing their services, they would help restore Europe, bring about a more lasting peace and reduce the drain on the American taxpayer.

THE trouble is that American businessmen generally, with little or no foreign experience, don't know about these things. Sen. Alben W. Barkley of Kentucky asked Mr. Gifford why. Mr. Gifford had one thought on the matter. The trouble was that the Marshall Plan presented so many imponderable problems that its elementary principles were lost sight of. This is the point that Undersecretary of State Robert A. Lovett has been emphasizing for months. Keep it simple. Don't get involved in details.

At Gifford analyzed it, no private business could conceive or handle a $8,000,000,000 program. But, if it were explained that $1,000,000,000 of that sum were to be set aside for industrial reconstruction, which would mean $1,000,000 in new capital for each of 1000 enterprises in Europe, that they could understand.

In terms of the Gifford plan "an admirable suggestion for independent co-operation with the Marshall Plan," Chairman Arthur H. Vandenberg, of the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, declared that two-thirds of the possibilities it raised could be handled in the agreements made with each of the 16 European nations.

However it is done, the Gifford plan presents the first, if not the only, practical suggestion that has come from American business. Now that the big brass of government has finished its first round of testimony on European recovery programs, leaders of business, labor, farm organizations and other pressure groups are coming to Washington to speak their pieces. What they have had to offer has been pretty thin stuff. Most of their ideas have been for curbs and restrictions.

PERHAPS the political opposition expected big businessman Bernard Baruch to sabotage the Marshall Plan. When he gave it not only full support, but also suggested an even bigger program than the State Department planners had outlined, the opposition had to fall back on Herbert Hoover. And the ex-President obliged by giving the plan its worst black eye. In a letter to Senator Vandenberg, Hoover suggested cutting the appropriations.

Likewise using the letter approach, president John L. Collyer of E. F. Goodrich suggests that the goals for industrial expansion in Europe be reduced substantially. In so doing, he is reneging on the recommendations he approved in the Harriman report.

The National Association of Manufacturers, first of the big business groups to come out with a criticism of the Marshall Plan, listed 14 points—all negative—on which it wanted modifications.

Fortunately, not all businessmen are of the Hoover-Collyer-NAM school of thought. When Paul Hoffman of Studebaker, chairman of the Committee for Economic Development, gave the views of his big business associates to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, he advocated giving the Marshall Plan adequate funds, over a period of time sufficient to make the program a success. "A half-hearted program," said Hoffman, "is likely to be worse than useless."

SPORTS

BY HARRY GRAYSON
NEA Sports Editor

NEW YORK—(NEA)—Basketball's zone defense has been called various names, none of them complimentary, by hot-tempered coaches against whose teams it was effective, but Frank Keaney is the first to tag it un-American.

Keaney's ire was aroused by Maine's use of the zone, or drifting defense in which each man guards a certain area of the court, against Rhode Island State.

In retaliation, the veteran Irish father of freestyle basketball ordered the freeze because "Maine wasn't playing in an American fashion."

HE argued that the Black Bears refused to come out and battle for possession, even though they were behind in the scoring.

"That's not the way American boys should be taught," he stormed.

Zone defense coaches are now in the minority. Penn State's veteran John Lawther is probably the most outspoken exponent of the zone, certainly the most successful teacher of it. The Nitany Lion psychologist several times has taunted the opposition into the use of the freeze, the most notable example of which was the Penn State-Pittsburgh game of several years ago, which saw only five points scored in the first half, with State College finally coming out on top, 15-12.

Like Keaney, Dr. Red Carlson of the Panthers curls his lips in scorn when he speaks of the zone; looks upon those who teach it as unfit for the coaching profession. That a club doesn't have to play freestyle basketball to draw crowds has been demonstrated by Penn State. Followers of the Nitany Lions have come to appreciate the slow, deliberate type of offense employed by Lawther, and his most effective use of the dreaded zone. Spectators have come to learn the intricacies of the system, get genuine enjoyment out of trying to anticipate the next move of Lawther's lads.

Every now and then, usually after a poor performance against an inferior opponent, there are angry letters to the student newspaper. But no letter ever backfired as much as the one this winter which was published on the same morning that the newspaper's sports editor restatically reported the Lions' 50-46 upset victory over highly-favored West Virginia.

It's against superior opponents, incidentally, that the zone is most effective. West at Virginia and Temple, to cite two of the more notable examples, always have trouble against the zone, which plays havoc with the offensive strategy of a side playing the freestyle style of game. The better teams seldom, if ever, bury the Lions under top-heavy scores. Few are the teams that consistently master the Lawthermen twice in a campaign.

If there were anything radically wrong with the Lawther system, college kids would be the first to spot it. They'd also be the first to relegate it to the ash heap. Penn State is proof positive that an entire study body is intrigued by its intricacy.

The dissenters shouldn't outlaw the zone by legislation or other pressure.

The way to force its abandonment is to beat it.

OFFICE Nurse

By Adelaide Humphries

THE STORY: Janice Hilary, pretty, efficient young nurse to popular and handsome society doctor Eric Holbrook, runs his office for him. When little Betty Johnson, the doctor's nurse, suggests to apitasterish Miss Willows, one of the doctor's two secretaries, that Miss Hilary might get married and leave, Miss Willows replies: "Miss Hilary will never leave. Not unless something unforeseen occurs! It's a pity, a terrible pity." Janice Hilary returns home on this particular day to find a surprise visitor. It is Ben Archer, who has been overseas three years.

"Of course she is!" Her mother said now, helping her out, as she always did. "I was overwhelmed, too. You could have knocked me flat with a flick of your wrist when I opened the door and there stood Ben. And he does look the same, if a bit taller and bigger. I kept wishing you'd be just the same; Ben—if you knew how I wished it!"

SHE turned away now to lead them into the kitchen, perhaps so that they would not see how much his being the same meant to her. For Ben Archer was almost a son to the Hilarys. He had lived in their neighborhood from the time he had been a boy until his father died and the Archers' brown brick house was torn down. Mrs. Hilary knew why Ben had continued to return to the neighborhood and to the Hilary house throughout the years; why theirs had been the last house he had come to before he had enlisted and the first upon his return and discharge.

Janice, of course, knew too. And the knowledge, instead of being the comfort it should have been, was a deep regret. For she now saw Ben, after an absence that should have brought the one change she had hoped for, completely unchanged.

He did look bigger, though, as her mother had remarked, and just as nice. He had the same straightforward trim and alert, laughing eyes. Why couldn't she have loved him as he claimed he loved her? She did love him. But she was not in love with him. And therein lay a world of difference which she had never been able to make him comprehend.

"Your mother's been telling me all about you, Jan," Ben was saying. "The successful young career woman. I suppose that's why you became so busy you could no longer write, even to an old pal."

"You're not such a wow as a correspondent yourself, young man," Janice managed to retort. "I can only make an X for my name." He gave her his wide grin. "And I was kind of busy myself, at times." He became magnanimous. "But I forgive you, my dove. On condition that you make up for your sad neglect now that I'm home again."

She owed it to him, Janice knew, yet how could she make it up when the neglect had been deliberate?

"How about starting in tonight?" Ben was suggesting in his easy way. His eyes, resting on her, still held that hungry look, as though it would take much feasting to appease a starved appetite.

"I'm afraid I'm too tired tonight—" Janice began. But her mother, who had busied herself these last few moments at the electric range, turned to say: "You're having dinner with us, Ben. That's understood."

"I warn you, Millie Hilary, you'll be sorry you invited me!" Ben said, his blue eyes atwinkle. "You won't have enough meat left for a meal, let alone hash."

"Go along with you. If you don't eat us out of house and home I'll be angry." Mrs. Hilary laughed at him. Then, banishing them both with a wave of her apron, "Run along upstairs, you two. I can finish up better without an audience. The table's all set, Janice dear. And I think I beg your sister coming in. You spring our surprise on her now. And you'll get a surprise of your own, Ben, when you see how grown-up our Albie is."

"That I want to see," Ben declared. "No one can convince me that the harum-scarum has evolved into a fine young lady. In a way, it would make me kind of sad. Seems I'm running into too many changes already."

His eyes accused Janice, their direct glance telling her that he was not sure he approved the differences he had found in her. Then he caught her hand, pulling her along with him.

Teacher's Life Savings Charged To Experience

CREWE, Eng. (UP)—Hilda Thornadyke was a Cheshire school teacher who wanted to know how the other half lived. She found out by teaching a year in Chicago but the experience cost her her life's savings.

Miss Thornadyke, a comely, 32-year old Crewe schoolmarm, went to Chicago under a teacher's exchange plan. For a year she taught in Chicago, receiving the same salary as she did at her job in Crewe.

The Cheshire Education Committee has reaffirmed its decision not to make a grant toward the $500 ($2,000) of her own money which Miss Thornadyke spent to make ends meet in Chicago.

The Crewe Education Committee, knowing that the $500 she spent were Miss Thornadyke's savings of a lifetime, had appealed to the county authorities on her behalf.

Retired Pastor To Bless Fishermen

SEATTLE (UP)—The Rev. O. L. Haavik has ended more than 26 years in the pastorate of the Ballard Lutheran Church here.

The nationally-known Fishermen's Festival—in which fishermen moving out to the banks from the Port of Seattle were blessed and prayers said for their safety and a good catch—was instituted by the Rev. Mr. Haavik in 1929. Haavik said although he will no longer step up to the pulpit, he will continue to officiate at the Fishermen's Festival.

LOS ANGELES (UP)—An operation for the destruction of mice and insects by sound was described by Dr. Isadore Rudnick, Pennsylvania State College, at the annual meeting of the Acoustical Society of America.

Dr. Rudnick told of experiments, conducted jointly with Clayton H. Allen and Hubert Frings, in which powerful ultrasonic waves were used to kill mice, cockroaches, yellow fever mosquitos, blowflies, firebrats, mealworms and caterpillars.

Sound waves, 10,000 times more intense than the pain level of the human ear, were directed at a range of a few inches and produced death by heat and vibration, Dr. Rudnick said.

It is probable that human beings could be killed by the same method if a sufficiently large sound beam could be created, he reported.

Scarecrow for Jack Frost

This infra-red frost fighter, in East Lansing, Mich., is reported the answer to a farmer's prayer for a practical frost damage prevention device for delicate, high-value crops like strawberries, fruit and flowers. Developed by Michigan State College, the electrically-operated apparatus burns fuel oil under high pressure and throws off heat rays over a 100-yard radius. Above, two engineers check the fuel pump of the frost fighter, which will be manufactured commercially by a Detroit firm.

Scientist Leans To Belief In The Lost Planet

COLUMBUS, O. (UP)—The solar system once may have had 10 principal planets instead of the presently known nine.

That is the theory of Dr. Carl A. Bauer of the University of Michigan Observatory.

Dr. Bauer told a meeting of the American Astronomical Society that his theory is based on a long-standing hypothesis. The belief is that such a planet also was the parent of the thousands of asteroids or minor planets which inhabit the portion of the solar system between the orbits of Mars and Jupiter.

The supposed planet, Dr. Bauer said, would have had a make-up similar to that of the earth: nickel-iron core, intermediate shell of stony-metallic material and an outer mantle of rock. The planet probably was smaller than the earth, and therefore solidified earlier, he added. Dr. Bauer estimated that the planet exploded several hundred million years ago.

Lecture Here By Samu'l. P. Zeigler Was Well Received

Approximately 100 women attended the out-standing lecture and art exhibit, given by Samuel P. Zeigler of the Fine Arts department of Texas Christian University of Fort Worth, at the guest's day program of the Thursday Afternoon Club at the Woman's club, Thursday afternoon.

Mrs. A. L. Murrell, leader of the program, introduced the speaker and his son, Jack, who was his assistant. Mr. Zeigler having been in Eastland during the oil boom days doing some canvas paintings had two of the canvases with him for exhibit and lecture with fourteen others.

One of the paintings was made at the Ramsour lease north west of the City of Eastland, the other one was on a hill overlooking Lake Eastland and when oil derricks were plentiful.

The artist remembered having stayed in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Norton, who had a son that accompanied him on some of the trips to the scenes.

Mr. Zeigler, in his informal and humorous way, gave a very interesting and informative lecture on the kinds of Art canvases using his canvases with the lecture.

The artist said his family were artists also; his son, Jack, who accompanied him, paints; another son and their daughter is interested in portrait painting.

A native of Pennsylvania, Mr. Zeigler studied at the Academy of Fine Arts in Philadelphia, before coming to Texas better than 25 years ago. First teaching at TWC at Fort Worth and later at Texas Christian University, where he has been for a number of years.

He is also a musician, and is a member of the Pro-Arte String quartet, organized sixteen years ago at TCU. He and the members have been in the quartet since its organization.

The program here was considered the finest given by any Study Club in Eastland this year. Hostesses for the program were: Mmes Jack Ammer, W. B. Pickens, W. W. Linkenhogger, and Frank Castleberry. Mrs. Hubert Jones and Mrs. Jack Muirhead composed the exhibit committee and Mrs. Ben Hamner president, opened the program and introduced the leader.

Mrs. Hamner and Mrs. Murrell seated at each end of the lace laid table presided at the silver service. A yellow and white motif was carried in the decorations and serving. Coconut white and yellow cookies, salted nuts and tea was served, and silver and crystal appointments were used. The table had a huge arrangement of white gladioluses, yellow daffodils, and white and yellow mums and accasia in a white bowl surrounded by white figurines.

CURFEW FOR TEEN-AGERS URGED ON BROADWAY

NEW YORK (UP) — City Councilman S. Samuel Di Falco introduced a resolution calling for a 10 p.m. curfew for unchaperoned teenagers in the theatrical districts of the city.
