Eggs Are Eggs But Scientists Find By Trial That Some Taste Better

By Robert Musel
United Press Staff Correspondent
LONDON (UP)—Three scientists who smacked their lips, made wry faces, or groaned or politely spat into napkins, have completed the world's most unusual banquet.

Nothing else. Eggs, just eggs. Lone conclusion announced by Dr. Hugh Cott of the University Museum of Zoology in Cambridge is that man and the mongoose like the same kind of eggs. So does the ferret, the hedgehog and the rat. Dr. Cott assembled the panel of tasters because he was scientifically curious about why some eggs taste better than others. He sat his three volunteers around a dining table and had portions served them—scrambled and cooked by steaming. Then he graded the 81 species, using the figure 10 as perfect or excellent. The scientists didn't give that rating to any of the eggs. The domestic hen could only cluck her way to 8.8, but that was top edibility score. In a three-way tie for second place were the eggs of the coot, the moorhen and the lesser black-backed gull, all at 8.3. If the price of eggs keeps soaring, all you have

OFFICE Nurse

By Adelaide Humphries

THE STORY: Janice Hilars, pretty, efficient young nurse to popular and handsome society doctor Eric Holbrook, runs his office for him. Eileen McRae, one of the secretaries, has been acting strangely of late. She has received several mysterious phone calls and taken time off during office hours without explanation. At last she confides to Janice that her husband, whom she ordered out of the house, has actually carried out his frightening threat to kidnap their little girl, Edna Mae. She is afraid to notify the police. Janice thinks of Ben Archer. He will be able to help, if anyone can. She telephones him—knowing he may still be angry with her for breaking his first date, without giving any reason.

XIII
WHEN he heard Janice's voice over the phone, Ben thought, She's calling up to see if I'm sore, to see why I haven't come around since she stood me up and got her kid sister to do a stand-in on our date.

Yet he knew that that was only wishful thinking on his part. He knew Jan better than that. She must have a much better reason for calling him, especially at his job. She had. Only after she had finished telling him that a friend, a girl who worked in her office, was in trouble and that she wanted Ben to meet them in a tea room on Third Avenue, did she say, "You're not mad with me, are you, Ben?"

"I'm not glad," he retorted. "I'll try to explain—" she began. Which he cut short with, "Why bother? Isn't it a bit late?" "I hope it isn't," she answered. "Hurry over, Ben, there's a dear. This is really important." It turned out to be. Ben was a sottie when it came to kids, and added to that, any man would have felt a tug at his heartstrings seeing how that poor young mother looked. She had a beaten look, as though she dared not hope for hope.

He told Mrs. McRae that he

"That's what I meant," Janice replied. "I'll get in touch with you as soon as there's anything to get in touch about," Ben told her, as he had Mrs. McRae.

Janice's eyes thanked him again. She seemed to hesitate a moment. Then she said, "I'm sorry, Ben, about the other night. It was Dr. Holbrook's birthday," she explained. "He asked me, at the last minute, to have dinner with him. You see, Mrs. Holbrook had just left for France, and well, I suppose he felt rather at loose ends."

JANICE had thought this was a reasonable explanation; it sounded, however, like a lame excuse.

Ben accepted it, however. He gave her his wide grin. "Skip it," he advised. "As I said, it's water over the dam now."

"You didn't mind, then?" "Why should I?" His grin broadened, but he felt rather woolly inside. So that was who it was—the doctor she worked for, the guy she was with day in, day out, even after working hours, it appeared. And his wife was in France, which made it all just dandy. Ben would have liked to give the doctor a punch in the jaw. "I'm glad you understand," Janice was saying. Her voice, so warm and vibrant, held relief. Her eyes told him that she had not wanted to hurt him, but that she could not help herself.

Jumping Jupiter! Ben was surprised that that had not come out in a groan, instead of just echoing inside him. She might as well have said, I cannot help it, Ben, that I love someone else. I'm so sorry, truly I am. But there's nothing I can do about it.

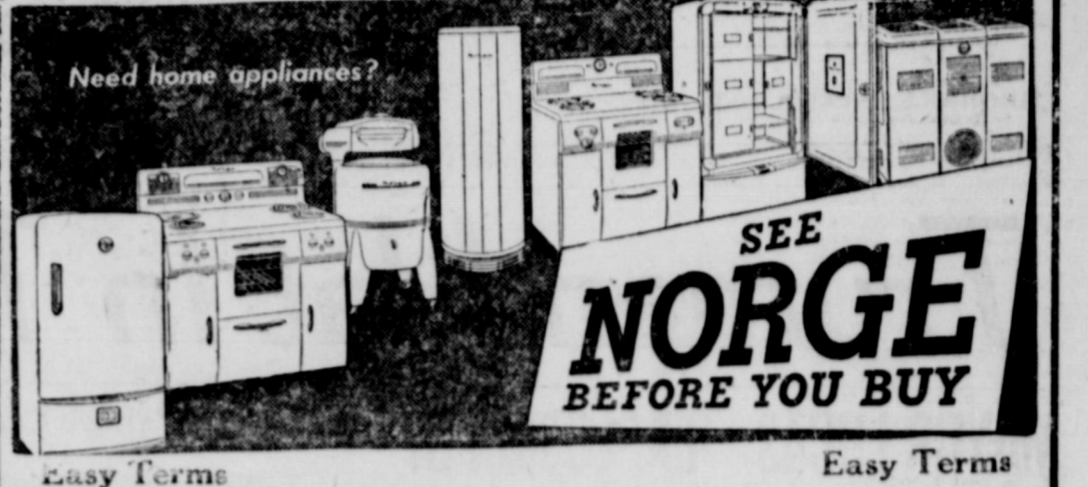

Her eyes said it for her. Janice had that kind of eyes, direct and honest. So Ben could not blame her, either. He had no right to, since he was in the same kind of sea-going vessel. He knew that when you loved someone you could not help yourself. You had to sit tight even if the boat went down.

"I understand," he said. (To Be Continued)

Peanuts Move At Support Prices

Light remaining supplies of farmers' stock peanuts continued to move at government support prices this week, according to the southwest area office of the U. S. Department of Agriculture's Production and Marketing Administration. Current offerings showed a high per cent of damage.

Most shelling plants continued working on government contracts. Otherwise, shelled goods found very little demand at prices generally quoted at 16 3-4 to 17 cents a pound for U. S. No. 1. Demand slackened for peanut meal also, and prices tended downward along with other feeds.

taste the worst, as protective devices. One omelette from the eggs of the bar-headed goose had all three tasters gagging. "The freshness of the material available," reported Dr. Cott with scientific detachment, "may have been in question."

to do is find the proper nest, but beware of Mamma Moorhen. She pecks egg stealers.

A few other "relatively palatable" tips for the household table are the herring-gull, the penguin (whose rating is "particularly fine and delicate in flavor"), the white rumped crane, the hedge-sparrow, the partridge, the jackdaw and the domestic turkey, who gobbles his way into 21st place.

Surprisingly down in 41st place and classed as of "intermediate palatability" is the domestic duck—well below the carion-crow. The long-tailed tit is also not too edible and the romantic turtle dove had the scientists holding their noses with a score of five.

In the unpalatable class they put the great tit (salty, fishy and bitter), the blue tit (acid, rancid and soapy) and the wren (sour, oily). The wren had the lowest score, two.

Do you like onion omelettes? The oyster-catcher (also known as haematopus ostralegus occidentalis) is your dish. His eggs have a strong onion-like flavor. However, one scientist ate an oyster-catcher egg he claimed was distinctly reminiscent of hamp.

Dr. Cott's other conclusions are that bitterness in eggs is related to size and coloration—the smallest and most brightly colored eggs

19 Years Ago Today

From Files of this Newspaper Feb. 19, 1929:
As announced at a former meeting the Eastland Lions' Club will provide a program of entertainment for the inmates of the William Epple Memorial Home, (Farm). At today's meeting of the club, president Donald Kinnaid appointed Lions Bittle, and Harper as a committee to arrange a suitable program to be rendered at the Farm.

County Motorcycle officer Bob Hammett and members of Sheriff Virge Foster's office this morning brought in a "boozie" car found wrecked at the side of the highway in the outskirts of Olden. The car, according to Hammett, was heavily loaded with liquor. The car, which bore a Ward county license, was brought to Eastland.

For the second time within a week, the Bankhead highway near Olden, was the scene of a fatal car crash when late Monday afternoon, J. Porter Wylly of Eastland sustained injuries that cost his life. Scene of the accident was about three-quarters of a mile east of Olden. The driver of the car that sideswiped the car driven by Wylly continued on his way, according to Joe Bailey Niver who was with Wylly.

The Boy Scouts of Carbon, at a meeting at the Boy Scout Hall in that city, on February 16, passed resolutions expressing thanks to manager Harold Smith of the Connellee theatre in Eastland for courtesies shown them on the occasion of their nineteenth anniversary.

Death Of Pepper Due To Persist

BATAVIA (UP)—The fabulous pepper trade of the Dutch East Indies presents a gloomy picture to a pepper-hungry world.

Few Dutch economic experts expect Indonesia to reach her pre-war level of 32,000 tons before 1951.

Before the Japanese "eight day conquest" of the Indies, Indonesia supplied 89 per cent of the world demand for pepper.

The estimated crop for 1948 is unknown. Nobody will hazard a guess. No figures exist on the total acreage of land now growing pepper.

Pepper is no longer produced in the "spice islands" of olden days, the Moluccas and Ceram—now incorporated into the state of East Indonesia.

New bushes take three years to cultivate before they bear the precious spice. No large-scale pepper planting has yet taken place.

The source of pepper being exported from the Indies today is old stockpiles. Little of the stockpile pepper ever reaches the big American dollar market. Old pepper cannot pass rigid United States food control laws.

Old, stockpiled pepper is generally directed to European tables.

Male Students Older Than Before War

STATE COLLEGE, Pa. (UP)—The average male college student today is two to three years older than he was before the war.

A survey conducted by Registrar W. S. Hoffman at Pennsylvania State College showed that the average senior now is 23, while the majority of seniors before the war were 21.

The survey noted no rise in the average age of the co-eds, although there was almost no difference in age between the men and women before the war.

Trade Winds are those blowing continually towards the thermal equator and deflected westward by the rotation of the earth.

where no food inspection laws for pepper exist.

Dutch economic experts said the deteriorated pepper cannot be reconditioned for the American market, "as much as we like United States dollars."

Parking Meter Salesman Over Does Himself

COLUMBUS, Ind. (UP)—Five parking meter salesmen refused to give their sales talk before the Columbus city council because the representative of one firm was absent. They claimed he was using unfair tactics and probably was seeking a special appointment.

The missing salesman turned up as the session ended. He explained he was late because of a long argument with a policeman about over-parking.

Old Rip ...

nerstone was opened, and after razing of the 31-year old red brick courthouse had been ordered. House was told by Ernest Wood, now justice of the peace, that when the new courthouse was built in 1897, and when he was county clerk, he understood that a horned frog which had been picked up by his son, Will, was sealed in the cornerstone. Another man was supposed to have inserted the frog.

Wood also told House of an old West Texas belief that a horned frog could live for 100 years without food or water. 1,500 At Ceremony ... House reported the tale and when the stone was opened on Saturday, Feb. 18, 1928, some 1,500 persons many from distant points were on hand to see whether the frog would emerge. This is the way the event was reported:

Workmen cleared the stone, chipped off a thin layer of concrete and lifted the metal cover over the recess.

The late Rev. F. E. Singleton, then a Methodist minister here, pointed and said: "There's the frog."

Eugene Day, an oil man, lifted out a flat, dust-covered frog and handed it to Rev. Mr. Singleton. The pastor passed it on to County Judge Ed S. Pritchard, now a resident of Fort Worth. Pritchard held it up by one hind leg. The other hind leg twitched.

Will Wood took the frog on tour. Forty thousand people crowded to see it at St. Louis. Sound pictures were made of it, with Wood as spokesman, in New York. Silent Calvin Coolidge, who postponed his presidential lunch 15 minutes to view the creature, stared at it in amazement for a full minute.

Finally Wood and the durable frog came home. Wood put it in a goldfish bowl on his back porch. On Jan. 19, 1929, a norther blow in and the frog froze to death.

Embalmed and placed in a miniature casket on a satin cushion, it was installed in a concrete and glass "mausoleum" in the lobby of the new $300,000 courthouse. It is still there and still attracts visitors. Sculptured likenesses of the frog appear between the five points of the "Texas Stars" above each of the four courthouse entrances, and the storied cornerstone has been incorporated in a stone coping about the building.

Nicodemus Not A Rooster Proved Convincingly

MOULTRIE, Ga. (UP)—Kent Upson thought his chicken was a rooster when it was born. So he gave it the name of Nicodemus.

Then he found that the chicken is not only a lady but likes fancy surroundings for egg laying.

Nicodemus hopped right onto Upson's bed one morning and laid an egg. Up to then, the hen had scratched at the kitchen door every morning. When admitted, she headed for the basement to lay an egg.

But now, according to Upson, Nicodemus gets locked out of the house altogether.

Tariff Cuts Worry American China Makers

NEW YORK (UP)—American makers of china and earthenware have more business than they can handle just now.

They are worried, nevertheless, about recent tariff cuts and possible revival of Japanese competition which hurt them so much in the 1930's.

They do not share the view of some dealers that there is plenty of market room here for both U.S. and Japanese production.

James K. Love, president of the United States Potters Association, dissented sharply from the idea that Japanese and American offerings to chinaware users are on divergent and non-competitive lines. Love is vice-president and treasurer of the Shenango (Pa.) Pottery Co. He told the United Press:

"Our best information is that the cost of labor in Japan is approximately one-ninth of the cost of the same labor in the United States. American labor constitutes from 60 to 65 per cent of the factory selling price of American china.

"Thus it is easy to understand why Japan can manufacture ware, pay the tariff, and land it in the United States at a price to the dealer which is considerably less than the American cost of production.

"Japanese china was accepted in large quantities before the war by the American housewife. There is no reason to doubt that it will not be accepted now. When imported in quantities comparable to those imported before the war, it will constitute a serious threat to the American chinaware industry.

"The Geneva tariff cut will increase this competition. The cuts are substantial on a large proportion of the chinaware and earthenware imported to this country.

"Naturally, because so far the imports have not nearly reached the size of those before the war, it is impossible to tell how heavy will be the blow to American industry.

"Since Japanese china was imported in immense quantities at the old rates, it would be illogical to contend that any smaller quantity would be imported under the greatly reduced rates.

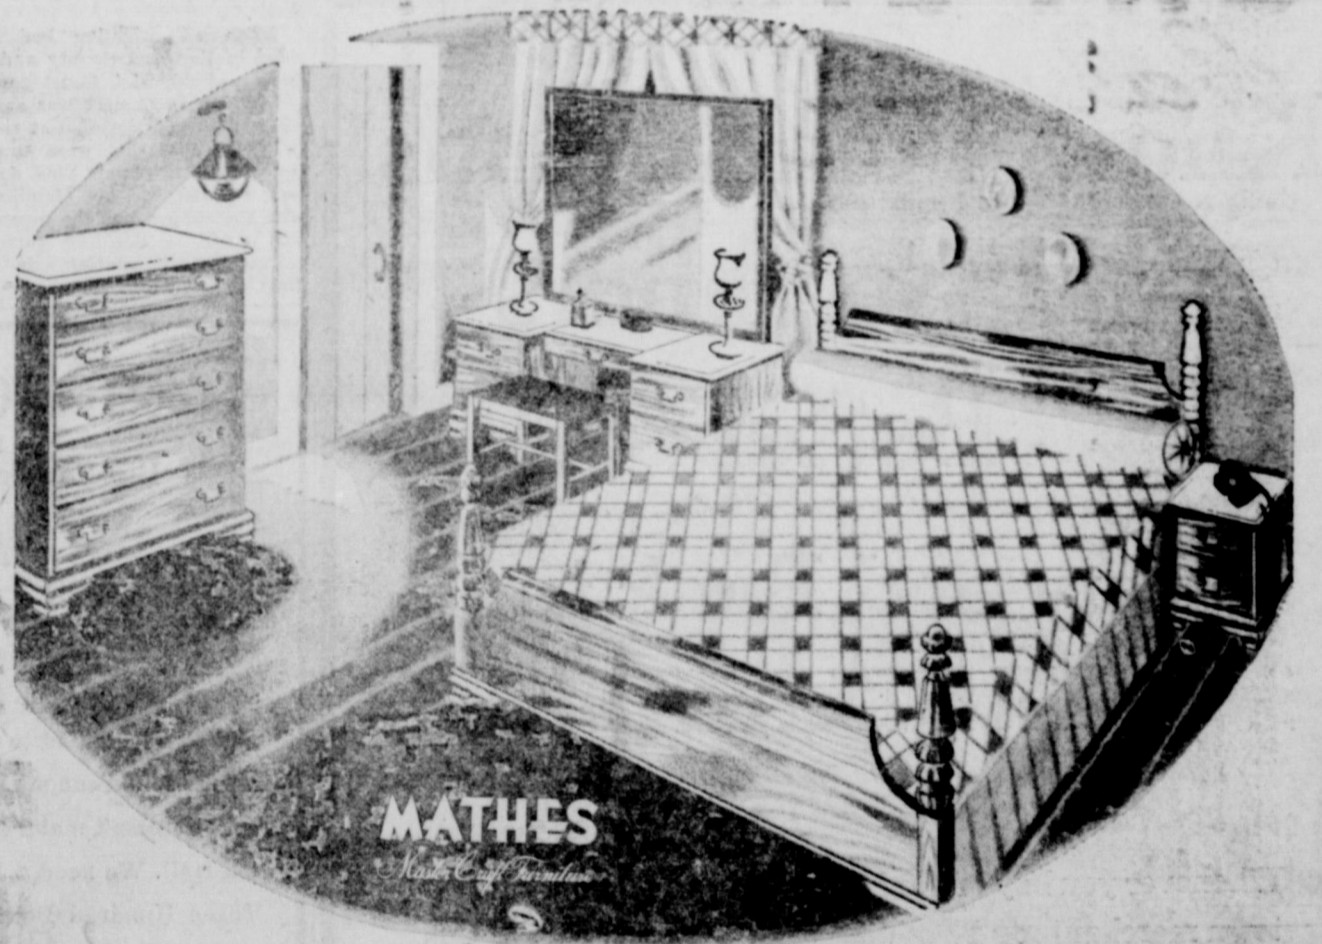

"When American china and earthenware manufacture becomes normal, and the imports from Japan approach pre-war proportions, the effect on at least part of the industry in the United States could be very well disastrous."

PONTIAC

A FINE CAR MADE EVEN FINER!

A Product of General Motors

GM Hydra-Matic Drive optional on all models!

Today, Pontiac announces a series of notable advancements in the car that has already won the wholehearted endorsement of more than a million owners and friends.

Foremost among these advancements is the great General Motors Hydra-Matic Drive—now offered as optional equipment on all Pontiac cars. Pontiac is the lowest-priced car in the world to provide this great mechanical masterpiece—which shifts gears automatically, and completely eliminates the clutch pedal. Coupled with this great engineering triumph is a striking improvement in beauty and luxury. New exterior smartness extends from the new radiator grille to the streamlined rear bumper.

Interiors, too, are remarkably improved. Upholsteries are more beautiful and are expertly blended to achieve new attractiveness and charm. Instrument panels are finished in a smart design adapted from quarter-sawn mahogany—and an adroit use of chrome moulding adds a deft touch of modernity.

Engine and chassis have been refined wherever possible—but they remain, basically, the same engineering masterpieces which have become synonymous in the automotive industry with goodness and dependability.

There are many more things we could tell you about the new Pontiac, for there are countless improvements which add to its traditional quality and value. But we feel that, for those who know Pontiac, we need only say—

—here is, by far, the most beautiful Pontiac ever built

—here is the most luxurious Pontiac ever built

—here is the most dependable Pontiac ever built —and it is now available with GM Hydra-Matic Drive—optional at additional cost.

We wish only to add that it is here—on display in our showrooms—and that you are most cordially invited to see and inspect it.

of the litigants in the lawsuit. He hews to the line of the law and lets the chips fall where they may. He is courteous, fair and impartial, irrespoachable and supremely honest. His knowledge of the law and his insight into human character are noteworthy. He has a keen sense of justice, and is thoroughly familiar with the principles and application of the rules of equity. He is of judicial temperament, listens patiently and rules positively. In fact, I know of no qualification of a just and upright judge that he does not possess.

Judge Davenport is the son of Captain O. F. Davenport and Eliza Pennington Davenport. He was born, reared, and educated in Texas. He was married to Miss Martha Rawls of Ranger, Texas, and to this marriage was born a daughter, Fay Bracken, wife of John Bracken, who now resides in Fort Worth, Texas. He studied law in a law office and was admitted to the Bar in 1899. He was elected County Attorney of Eastland County in 1900; held that office for two terms, and then entered the private practice of law. In 1906, he moved to Stamford and continued the law practice alone for a few years and was then joined by his brother, B. P. Davenport, now deceased and they practiced together under the firm name of Davenport & Davenport until 1918, when he returned to Eastland County and established a law office in Ranger at the peak of the oil boom in that section. When heavy oil litigation made it necessary to establish a new district court in Eastland County in 1920, the Legislature created the 91st District Court and in June of that year, he was appointed Judge of said court by Governor W. P. Hobby. He has held that office ever since such appointment, having had but two opponents during that period of twenty-seven years.

The 88th District Court of Eastland County was created two years before the 91st District Court. The records show that more than 1800 cases were transferred from the 88th District Court to the 91st District Court. I remember being present in the 88th District Court before the creation of the 91st when it took Judge Hill two days to call the appearance docket.

For many years, the dockets of both courts were badly congested. It took a judge of the administrative and judicial ability of Judge Davenport to handle the situation and the work necessary for the proper disposition of cases was very heavy. He had to try cases involving multiplied millions of dollars in property values.

Among the early important cases growing out of oil development in the Ranger field, tried by Judge Davenport, was that of Connellee vs. Magnolia Petroleum Company. The suit involved more than two million dollars. The case was tried to a jury and resulted in a verdict in favor of plaintiff. Judge Davenport disregarded the verdict and rendered judgement for defendant, based on his construction of the contract involved.

On appeal, the Eastland Court of Civil Appeals reversed and remanded the case, holding that the judgement of the trial court should have been in accordance with the findings of the jury. (Connellee vs. Magnolia Petroleum Company, 279 S. W. 597.) The Supreme Court granted writ of error and on hearing sustained the views of the trial court, reversed the judgement of the Court of Civil Appeals and affirmed the judgement of the trial court. (Magnolia Petroleum Company vs. Connellee, 11 S. W. (2) 158.)

The main point involved in the suit was whether casinghead gas produced under the Connellee lease was oil within the meaning of the lease contract for the value of one-eighth of which the plaintiff sued. The Supreme Court held that the general rule is well established that the Court is not authorized to render judgement notwithstanding the findings of the jury, but that where, as in the case at bar, under no view of the pleadings and evidence is the plaintiff entitled to recover, the submission of issues and the findings of the jury are immaterial and may be ignored by the court, and that it was therefore entirely proper for the trial court to disregard the findings of the jury and render judgement for the defendant.

A number of cases were tried by Judge Davenport in the 91st Court determining the proper measure of damages for failure to drill off-set wells from production which were approved by the higher courts, which at the outset presented a difficult problem.

Among the criminal cases tried before Judge Davenport, the most noted ones which were given much publicity over the State and Nation grew out of the "Santa Claus" robbing of the Cisco National Bank at Cisco, Texas, on Christmas Eve of 1927, in which large sums of money were taken from the bank and two peace officers and one of the robbers were given death sentences and the cases were affirmed by the Court of Criminal Appeal. One of the robbers was later executed and the other taken from the Eastland County jail by a mob.

There was much excitement at the time and it took a judge of such composure and fairness as Judge Davenport to try these cases in such manners as to be affirmed on appeal.

Another unusual criminal case tried by Judge Davenport was the one known as the Gravel Pit Murder Case, near Cisco which attracted state-wide attention.

Both the Santa Claus Case and the Gravel Pit Case finally reached the "True Detective" magazine.

When oil litigation had subsided in Eastland County and the docket of the 91st Court permitted, Judge Davenport was assigned to many of the district courts in East Texas that were congested with oil litigation. This, doubtless, because of his familiarity with the subject and the record he had made in deciding correctly many difficult problems in that field of controversy.

During World War II, Judge Frank Culver, Jr., of the 17th District Court at Fort Worth, was in the Military Service, as was the case with many other district judges in Texas. Judge B. W. Patterson of the 88th District Court and Judge Davenport of the 91st District Court, were requested to take over the docket of the 17th District Court. Judge Davenport spent one-half of his time for two and one-half years, presiding over the 17th District Court, which he was enabled to do by the patience and co-operation of members of his home Bar. During that time, he tried and disposed of a large number of civil cases, among them that of Mary Coutts Burnett Trust, et al vs. Slay, et al. The case was tried by jury, but the jury being unable to agree, were discharged, and Judge Davenport, on motion of plaintiffs, rendered judgement in their favor.

The Court of Civil Appeals, affirmed in part and in part modified and affirmed the judgement of the trial court and in other parts reversed and remanded the Cause. (Slay, et al vs. Mary Coutts Burnett Trust, 180 S. W. (2) 480.)

In the Supreme Court, the judgement of the Court of Civil Appeals was in part affirmed and in part reversed, the result being that the trial court's judgement was in part affirmed and in part modified and affirmed and in part reversed and remained. (Slay, et al vs. Burnett Trust, et al, 187 S. W. (2) 377.)

The trial below lasted six weeks and some idea may be drawn of the law questions involved by the fact that 105 special issues were submitted, none of which was answered, and by the 23 page opinion of the Court of Civil Appeals and 22 page opinion of the Supreme Court, as reported.

It took courage of conviction and soundness of judgement for Judge Davenport to decide the case after the jury had failed to agree and especially in view of the fact that professional brethren were involved in the litigation. The easy way would have been to have adjudged a mistrial and to have continued the case for some other judge to try. But Judge Davenport has never been known to shirk duty or shift responsibility.

Many other cases decided by Judge Davenport of vital importance to the jurisprudent of this State might be cited to illustrate his ability and devotion to duty, but the foregoing seem sufficient. Twelve years ago, Judge Davenport was appointed Judge of the Eighth Administrative Judicial District, which position he now holds.

For pastime, Judge Davenport goes fishing and hunting and plays a fair game of golf. He is a member of the Methodist Church, the Knights of Pythias and the State Bar of Texas.

New Way Found To Fight Disease Due To Infection

BUDAPEST, Hungary (UP)—A new prophylactic and therapeutic principle of fighting infectious diseases has been announced by the director of the physiological institute of the Budapest University, Prof. Geza Mansfeld.

Immunity is attained by injecting immune animal brain cells into the organism.

Prof. Mansfeld, who started his experiments some 14 years ago, concluded that:

1. The toxin of every infectious germ and every pathogenetic virus is first absorbed by cells of the brain and makes its way from there, by the peripheric nerves, to the various organs.
2. Experimenting with alpha drug, Prof. Mansfeld found that they do not kill the germs in the human organism, but keep them and their products out of the organism by blocking the brain cells.

gan to the central nervous system, the disease ceased to develop.

The immunity against the same kind of infection has been developed by the organism, nevertheless. That made it obvious that although the infectious germ succeeded, by way of the blood, in reaching the brain cells it could not continue its trip into the cells of the organism, because the nerve was severed.

3. Prof. Mansfeld succeeded in immunizing healthy animals with the brains of animals which have become immune by having recovered from tuberculosis. Inasmuch as the injection of immune brain

Romances Of Egyptian Princesses Get Them Stricken Off Royal List

By Sam Souki
United Press Staff Correspondent
CAIRO (UP)—Passion, love and drama lie behind the announcement that King Farouk has struck the names of two Egyptian princesses off the list of members of the royal family.

It is the story of beautiful women whose romances were condemned as unbefitting titled ladies who a few years ago still had to wear veils in Egypt.

The first of the two disgraced princesses is 25-year-old Nimetallah Amr of the green, almond shaped eyes. She fell in love with handsome, sun-tanned Mounir Sabry, but she was already living with her second husband.

Nimetallah—the Blessing of God—is a tall, shapely dark-haired beauty who looks much like Maria Montez. In any gathering of beautiful women she still stood out and men turned to stare at her.

When she was nineteen, her father Prince Amr Ibrahim, married her to Sherif Sherif, an Egyptian notable, and she dutifully bore him a daughter. She then fell in love with Capt. Negmeddin Shahin.

Negmeddin's father had been private physician to the late King Fuad. Nimetallah divorced Sherif and married Negmeddin without letting her father know.

She had two children. She went out often and unlike the older generation of cloistered princesses, danced in public, rode Arab stallions at the Ferossia riding club and had a gay time with the other young blue bloods of the land.

In time she met dashing young Mounir Sabry who rode well and danced beautifully. His curly hair was often close to Nimetallah's jet-black locks either over a dinner table or dancing together.

One day she sent her husband a note—she was leaving him and would not be returning.

Mutual friends scurried to and fro pleading with her not to leave her husband and children, talking to Mounir to abandon his plans to marry her, and convincing her husband to take her back. She went back to Negmeddin. Shortly after, Mounir Sabry was arrested.

He had been responsible for providing an escaped German prisoner of war with an Egyptian passport.

Prince Amr Ibrahim had had enough of his daughter's Amber-like behavior and protested to King Farouk. Today she is no more a princess.

The same goes for Amina Toussein who is at present in the United States.

Forty-four-years-old Amina is the daughter of the late Prince Amr Toussein and granddaughter of the Khedive Mohammed Said. She married twice in Egypt, but abandoned her second husband after her father died and left her three million dollars. Amina went to the United States to have her fling, and her presence there was widely publicized in the American press.

To Give Concert

Abbey Simon, Pianist

Fourth In Concert Series To Be Given By Young Pianist On Feb. 24

The young American-born pianist Abbey Simon, who will appear in Eastland in the last concert was born in New York, where he attended public school, and at the age of 11 entered the famous Curtis Institute of Music in Philadelphia, where he remained for eight years.

In October, 1940, Abbey's career was launched as a winner of the Neumburg Award, an honor which accords a Town Hall recital to its winners. An equally successful appearance in Town Hall under his own steam followed a year later. In July, 1942, he entered the U. S. Army's Signal Corps, where he remained for more than a year. On his return from the war, the brilliant young pianist went to work for radio station WQXR in New York, under Musical Director Leon Barzin, and gave the first of two successful Carnegie Hall recitals which heralded his return to the concert stage. Subsequently, he joined the musical staff of WOR under Alfred Wallenstein, and later worked with Sylvan Levin, brilliant young conductor of that network's musical staff.

In the season 1945-46, Abbey appeared for the first time in many of America's major musical centers—Chicago, Boston, Providence, etc.—and the following summer he appeared under Dimitri Mitropoulos with Robin Hood Dell orchestra in Philadelphia, and at far-famed Lewisohn Stadium in New York with the Philharmonic-Symphony under the direction of Efreim Kurtz.

With his Baltimore-born wife, the former Dina Levinson, he shares a New York apartment where the couple rented originally from the painter John Koch. His hobby is amateur photography.

Style Show To Give New Look To Men

MILWAUKEE (UP) — Television is going to have its drawbacks, bobby-soxers at Marquette University agree.

One sweet thing was heard to say to another, during a basketball game:

"If you told your mother you were going to be in the library studying tonight, you had better not sit there. The television cameras are pointing right in your direction and she'll probably see you."
