TRUMAN SAYS POLITICS HAS BAD EFFECT

KEY WEST, Fla.—President Truman today said presidential election year politics is having a very "bad" effect on the affairs of government in both domestic and international fields. The President met with reporters here in his first news conference in more than two weeks. In his comment on politics the President said he was not being critical of anyone in particular, but that it was impossible for certain candidates in the senate to approach issues of the day without bias. He named no names. Settlement of foreign and domestic affairs," he said, permitting direct quotation. This comment resulted from questioning about his presumed candidacy for re-election. Mr. Truman brushed aside the request for a statement about his re-election campaign, saying that he had been so busy lately with foreign and domestic problems that he had not had much time for politics. He blamed presidential-year politics particularly for blocking the administration's housing program in Congress. He said the situation also made conduct of our foreign policy difficult. Mr. Truman took a guarded viewpoint in discussing the recent revolt of southern Democrats against his civil rights program. He would not comment directly on the revolt, but expressed the opinion that every state has a perfect right to decide how to conduct its elections.

Legion Speaker Endorsed UMT At Eastland Meet

Strong endorsement of Universal military training and preparedness program for this country was given by George E. B. Peddy of Houston, principal speaker at the 17th District American Legion and Auxiliary convention held in Eastland Saturday and Sunday. Peddy spoke at the noon hour. The next district convention will be held at Rising Star on June 5 and 6. At that time a successor to Vice-Commander C. L. Cofer of Cisco, who resigned Sunday, will be chosen. Delegates to the Eastland meeting were given an opportunity to view Seymour Stone's painting of the "Typical Texas Fighting Man" which was unveiled recently at Grandbury. District Commander P. C. Stacy of Stephenville presided at a 7:45 o'clock breakfast on the Connelley Hotel roof for post officers and service officers. At 9:00 a.m. there was a joint meeting at the Eastland Legion Hall of the Legion and Auxiliary members. Memorial and Church services were held at 11:45 at the Legion Hall with addresses by Rev. J. B. Blunk and N. P. McCarney. A resolution was passed requesting the Texas Employment Service to re-open the employment office in Eastland only recently closed. Judge V. T. Seaberry of Eastland acted as master of ceremonies at the noon meeting and luncheon. Others presiding at various meetings included Dulin-Daniel Post Commander D. J. Fiensy, and District commander Stacy of Stephenville. Attendance was upwards of 350, most of whom registered.

MISS JEANNINE HOWARD — daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Veon Howard, West Commerce street, Eastland, who did fancy and tap dancing at the American Legion and Legion Auxiliary convention Saturday in Eastland at the Legion Hall. Miss Howard also danced on the program for the crowning of the queen, Mrs. Ruby Jeanes of DeLeon, and also at the dance which was in charge of Earl Francis.

WOULD HALT WORLD WAR III BEFORE IT STARTS

WASHINGTON —Senator Vandenberg urged the Senate today to approve the European recovery program and mass America's resources in a mighty effort to "halt World War III before it starts." "It can be the turning point in history for one hundred years to come," the Republican foreign policy leader told the Senate in opening debate on the 5-billion-300-million dollar bill. "This legislation seeks peace and stability for free men in a free world," he said. "It seeks them by economic rather than military means. . . . "It aims to preserve the victory we thought we won in World War II. It strives to help stop World War III before it starts." In eloquent and hard-hitting language, Vandenberg said the nation faced a decision which might tip the scales between peace and war, prosperity and economic chaos. As chairman of the senate foreign relations committee, he stoutly defended the concept of a 51-month self-help program for the 10 nations of Western Europe along with the first year expenditure of more than 5 billions. He struck out at those who would slash the program, saying they threatened to slice off arbitrarily the difference between "success and still-born failure." He appealed for an appropriation that would leave "no abili for failure." Somberly Vandenberg told the Senate that the vast spending plan was only a "calculated risk" made doubly difficult by the Soviet Union's "great sabotage . . . shockingly echoed by some of our own citizens." But then he confronted the Senate with this challenge— "The greatest nation on earth either justifies or surrenders its leadership. We must choose. There are no blueprints to guarantee results."

Snyder Against Income Tax Cut

WASHINGTON — Treasury Secretary Snyder today opposed tax reduction now because it involves "serious consequences" for domestic prosperity and world peace. Opening the administration's fight in the Senate against the House approved 6-billion-500-million dollar income tax slash, Snyder said it would raise prices, be of little or no help to lower income groups and create a deficit next year. He said postponement of tax reduction "requires an unusual measure of self-denial, but this is no time to lower government revenue. Snyder's views were contained in a statement to the Senate finance committee which opened hearings on the bill. He reiterated in a large part his testimony given previously to the tax-writing House ways and means committee. His testimony carried little weight there. The Senate, however, was expected to set its target on reducing the over-all slash to about 4-billion dollars.

Carrier Boy Contest Winners Are Announced

The ten day contest between Telegram carrier boys, to ascertain which could get the largest list of new subscribers, ended Saturday with Morris Lee Riggan as the winner of the first prize of ten silver dollars. Second prize winner was Harrel Maxwell, who won five silver dollars, while third prize of two silver dollars was won by Calvin Maxwell. The winners of these prizes asked that the Telegram extend to those who subscribed through them, their thanks for the cooperation. Each subscriber took the paper for at least 30 days. The new subscribers added to the Telegram's growing list of readers during the past ten days, Saturday, totaled 202. These were from the rural districts as well as in the City of Eastland and this despite the fact that bad weather kept rural solicitors from doing much work in their respected territories. Another carrier boy contest will be put on during the month of March with as much as twenty-five silver dollars as prizes. In the rural districts the attractive bargain rate of the balance of this year is still in effect. Subscribers who subscribe for the Telegram at the office and who desire that the solicitor in their respective communities have credit for the subscription, may so state at the time of placing the order and the solicitor designed will be allowed his or her commission.

Rebellion Of South Spreading

WASHINGTON — Southern rebellion against President Truman's leadership spread today, causing dejected congressional democrats to fear the election already is lost. South Carolina is today's hot spot. The Democratic executive committee there met to consider means of withholding the state's electoral votes from Mr. Truman, assuming he is nominated on a civil rights platform. Some angry Democrats believe the nomination should be refused him. House and Senate Democracy cloak rooms are gloomy caverns these days. Four out of almost any five Democratic congressmen will tell you the party is in bad shape. Wallace's third party is blasting Democratic prospects in the industrial east and in California. And the solid south is beginning to substitute action for talk.

Finnish Leaders Study Reply To Russia's Request

HELSINKI — Finland's top government and parliamentary officials met today in a momentous round of conferences to decide how to reply to a Russian request for a military alliance. President Paasikivi met Premier Pekkala, together with political and military leaders, probably to draft a preliminary reply to Premier Stalin's proposal for a Soviet-Finnish pact. The matter will go before parliament tomorrow. Responsible quarters believed the Finnish leaders were preparing today at least an outline of a proposed answer to Moscow. Predictions were made freely in responsible quarters that Finland would send a delegation to Moscow in response to Stalin's invitation. Pekkala was understood to have recommended that Finland agree to negotiate with Russia.

Dental Agony Eased For Younger Set

SEATTLE (UP)—What used to be the "last mile" for children—a trip to the dental chair—now is almost fun. So says Dr. Gerald A. McGuire, editor of the Washington State Dental Journal. No more hauling the reluctant little patient into a room where terrifying instruments are on display. They have been replaced with happy-colored wallpaper on which gambol elephants, lions and kangaroos. The modern dentist is a student of psychology. "He doesn't leave odd picks, chisels, pliers, drills or Bunsen burners lying around to impress the parent with the size of his tool box—and scare junior," Dr. McGuire said. Anterooms have become playrooms. Mickey Mouse movies toys, books and child furniture amuse the young ones while they await their turn.

Six Families In One House Stirs Court's Wrath

CHELSEA, Mass. (UP) — A one-family house was converted into apartments for six families totaling 16 persons, it was disclosed at a district court hearing on various charges against the landlord. "And this is America," commented Judge John W. McLeod as he looked at police pictures of the interior of the house. One showed a 19-year-old groom and his 16-year-old bride honeymooning in a basement apartment that lacked partitions. "Dog Tag" Proves Useful PHILADELPHIA (UP) — A. K. Homes, former Marine sergeant, fastened his service "dog tag" to the collar of a dog he brought back from Guam, figuring it would do some good. The dog got lost but a day later the pet was returned, identified by the disc.

Banner Convention Year Expected in N. Y.

NEW YORK (UP) — This city in 1948 will have the largest number of conventions it has had since 1939, the World's Fair year. Approximately 650 conventions will be held here, it was estimated by Royal W. Ryan, executive vice-president of the New York Convention and Visitors Bureau, Inc. In 1939, the city had 726 conventions. Last year, it attracted 626, with an estimated 1,000,000 delegates and guests, who spent approximately $150,000,000.

Showers Threat To Swollen East Texas Rivers

Scattered showers and thunder storms today threatened to send already swollen East Texas rivers and streams further out of banks with the probable result of thousands of dollars of additional property damage. Clouds hovered over the entire state except the extreme southwest. Although precipitation had been generally light, a cool front approaching from the west was expected to cause heavy rainfall on making contact with the warm mass of air which has prevailed the last several days. A torrential hour-long down pour in Dallas added to the load of the already flooding Trinity. The rain sent a flash flood swirling through a group of business houses in the Fair Park section of the city.

Sharp Earthquakes Shakes California

LOS ANGELES — A sharp earthquake shook parts of Southern California early today, but there were no reports of damage. The shock was felt at 12:13 a. m. and lasted about 15 seconds. It jolted many parts of the Los Angeles area and was felt in Riverside, Santa Anna, and San Bernardino, as far as 80 miles inland. A char-a-banc is a sight seeing bus.

WASHINGTON COLUMN

Wallace Directs Appeal To Discontented Minorities

BY PETER EDSON
NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON—(NEA)—Henry Wallace's latest political adventure is shaping up as the offer of a cure-all for every thwarted and discontented minority element in the United States.

His third party platform won't be formally adopted until its April convention. But the objectives stated at the Chicago Progressive Citizens' of America conference last month give the clue.

The dollar-an-hour minimum wage request is an appeal to the underpaid. The demand for price rollbacks and curbs on inflation is an appeal to every family bucking the high cost of living. Abolition of the poll tax and Jim Crowism, plus demand for passage of anti-lynch laws and fair employment practices, is an appeal to the colored races. Repeal of the Taft-Hartley law is an appeal to labor. Death for the Un-American Activities Committee is a bid for liberals.

Stopping the universal military training program is an appeal to conscientious objectors. Banning use of the atomic bomb is an appeal to pacifists. Furnishing arms to Palestine is an appeal to militant Zionists. Abandoning the Marshall Plan is the line taken by American isolationists. The whole foreign policy program follows the Communist line—ending the Truman doctrine of aid to Greece and Turkey, stopping further aid to Nationalist China.

SOME of the objectives on this list may be found in Democratic or Republican policy statements. Lumping them all together shows that the Wallace platform is an attempt to offer something for every unhappy or misfit individual in the country.

This effort to reach the underprivileged may be a deliberate effort of the Wallace organizers. They think their campaign is going to be financed by the dimes and quarters of the "forgotten" men.

At the recent PCA meeting in Chicago, one delegate from California came into headquarters and laid down $240 as his campaign contribution. As his train came east, he had collected it from Pullman porters, waiters and fellow-passengers in rallies held in the dining car after meal hours.

PRIZE exhibit of Wallace leadership, however, is Rex Tugwell, ex-New Deal brainstruter, ex-Governor of Puerto Rico, now a University of Chicago professor.

Tugwell has been a leading spirit in both PCA and Americans for Democratic Action, the Wilson Wyatt-Leon Henderson group of anti-Communist but liberal Democrats. Recently, Henderson wrote Tugwell, inviting him to the Philadelphia ADA convention. Tugwell declined and withdrew from ADA.

"I can agree with most of what Mr. Truman says: I look aghast at what his administration does. So, I think, must any realistic liberal," he wrote to Henderson.

"In contrast, Henry Wallace has spoken with increasing strength and clarity. . . . He has persuaded me that he is the genuine embodiment of the tradition I value above all: that American hatred of exploitation and concern for the common man which has always had some champion no matter what the cost to himself.

"Henry Wallace is against war and the policy which leads to war. To say this is an assessment of Russia is deliberately to refuse to see the distinction between an invincible friendship for the Russian people in an inclusive world—neighborliness—and a covering before the threat of force. . . .

"The only step beyond that is war. . . . we cannot have a war. If we do, the human race is through. In the face of all this I must support the only great voice now being lifted for friendship to all men and against the exploitation of any. . . ."

SPORTS

BY HARRY GRAYSON
NEA Sports Editor

NEW YORK—(NEA)—Mrs. Gretchen Fraser, the first American ever to win an Olympic skiing championship against Europe's masters, says she learned to ski as fast as a man in order to keep up with her husband, Don.

Fraser, a staff member of the Sun Valley, Ida., Ski Club, smiles somewhat wryly. He remembers improving her technique, sometimes with an instructor along to pick out minor flaws, at other times working out with her friend, Mrs. Kathleen Harriman Mortimer, daughter of Secretary of Commerce W. Averell Harriman.

In the evening the 28-year-old Mrs. Fraser's now famous pigtails were pinned up into a trim tangle and she donned lounging clothes at the resort and relaxed with other guests.

Largely self-taught at the outset, Mrs. Fraser, blonde pigtailed, flashed in the sunlight, just as they did when she twisted and scussed her way to the smashing victory in the Olympic criss-cross slalom, competed against both girls and boys before she finished high school.

Those were the days of skiing's earliest development in this country, before leading ski areas had been built. Racers lined up, much as in a track meet, hurtled down slopes pluck-meal.

Neighborhood victories were behind her when Gretchen first went to Sun Valley's open slopes as a girl of 17 in 1926. It was there that she met Don Fraser, a member of the 1936 Olympic team, who later became her husband.

When Mrs. Fraser faced the Olympics starting gate she wore a four-leaf clover pin given her by her husband.

Mrs. Fraser's answer to her instructor's warning against dangerous speed was a cheerful negative shake of the head. She trained at Sun Valley harder than ever. There was day after day of college professor.

Because they attend classes during the day, the night shift from 4 p. m. to midnight is predominantly college students. The entire personnel, with the exception of a captain, a sergeant and a radio operator, is enrolled at either Hardin-Simmons University, McMurtry College or Abilene Christian College.

OFFICE Nurse

By Adelaide Humphries

© by Adelaide Humphries; Distributed by NEA SERVICE, INC.

THE STORY: Janice Hilary, pretty, efficient young nurse to popular and handsome society doctor Eric Holbrook, runs his office for him. Eric and Janice have fallen in love—although Eric already has a wife (who is away) and Janice has a boy-friend (Ben Archer). They continue on formal terms with each other at the office, meeting in out-of-the-way restaurants when they want to be alone together. They both know things can't go on this way indefinitely but put off doing anything about it. Janice is happy for a while—then she begins to feel the strain of the secret relationship. Her mother and people at the office remark about her looks. Janice makes up her mind that she and Eric will have to come to some decision.

JANICE resolved to exercise her common sense that same evening. But, as luck would have it, she was not able to. Eric could not get out of his appointment; he told Janice that if he could break away early enough, he would get in touch with her and they could see each other for an hour, perhaps. But Janice told him that perhaps he had better not try. And as it happened, that was just as well, because when she came out of the big office building she found Ben Archer waiting at the entrance for her.

She was glad to see Ben. Seeing him, being with him, might still some of the doubts that were gnawing at her. Ben represented everything that was not complex or mixed-up. He was of the past, not the present or the future.

And he brought good news. Or what he said he hoped would turn out to be good news. He had not come upstairs to Dr. Holbrook's offices because he had been afraid Mrs. McRae might still be there. He did not want to give that poor woman any false hopes. But he thought her husband and her little girl had been located. "Thanks to Ed," Ben added, modestly.

"Oh, that's wonderful!" Janice thought it was so wonderful that her own troubles were banished for the moment. "How did your friend ever find them? Where are they now? What are we going to do about it?"

"Not so fast," Ben said, taking her arm and starting to walk.

HE did not have on a hat, and the lights, just beginning to come on in the wintry dusk, made a spot of copper of his sandy head. He looked bigger and broader than usual in his topcoat.

"I don't know just how Ed finally ran him down—this McRae guy," Ben told her, not slackening his pace. "He just got in touch with me and gave me the dope."

"You mean the address?" She became a little breathless keeping up with Ben. He was expert, though, at pushing through the homeward-bound crowds, avoiding tangled traffic. Janice knew from past experience that there was no use in asking him to go slower; he would slow up only for a brief while, and then, forgetting, plunge back into his regular stride.

Eric was more thoughtful; he always matched his step to hers. But Ben pushed through anything, anywhere, dragging Janice along with him. Now he was pushing her down the crowded stairway, through a maze of underground ramps to Grand Central Station, without stopping to enlighten her as to their ultimate destination.

"I mean the address," Ben finally answered. "What I hope will prove to be the right address. Why this guy had to pick such an inconvenient spot, I don't know. Ed's pretty good, I think, to have run him down. Think he said he found him through a personal ad in some paper. Of course, Jan, you must realize that it could be the wrong steer. McRae and the kid may already have taken it on the lam by the time we get there. Stand right here and I'll be back," he ordered, leaving her by a post while he went to a ticket window.

"YOU might enlighten me," Janice said, with just a shade of exasperation, when he came back to grab her by an arm and start moving again. "Are you going there—to this address that you and Ed think may be the right one? And what will we do if we find that it is, or isn't?"

"One step at a time," Ben advised. "How can I tell? Certainly, we're going there. What if it does turn out to be the wrong hunch? It's worth following, isn't it? The reason we have to hurry is that, as I just explained, this guy McRae may get scared, thinking it over. From what Ed said, he advertised for someone who was willing to take care of a little girl, for small pay, in pleasant country surroundings. But, as I said, one step at a time. How do I know what we'll do until we get there?"

"I hope you'll get a bright idea when we do," Janice murmured, allowing him to push their way through the crowd waiting to get on a train at one of the gates. She was not really exasperated or alarmed. She was pleased, and grateful to Ben and his friend, even if this hunch should turn out wrong. Any hunch was worth following. Eileen McRae would come to the breaking point before long, Janice knew; the point Janice herself had reached some time ago in the rest room. Moreover, she was not alarmed because she knew that Ben would be able to cope with whatever this hunch might produce. She had actually put aside her own problems. Part of that ache was gone. Common sense was a good steady-rod to lean on. Thinking first about someone else instead of yourself was another. And then, too, it was good to be with Ben, at his side in the old comradely fashion. It just made you feel good somehow, so good that it did not matter that they might be headed for trouble.

All the cats around Parsons, Kan., would spit in Nickie's eye and then leap into a tree and jeer at him. Nickie took it for a while, and then the 1½-year-old fox terrier had enough. A Page from the Past

BY FRANK A. JONES

19 Years Ago Today
From Files of This Newspaper Of March, 1929:

Lou Teatsworth, Eastland oil operator, had a miraculous escape from death this morning when he was struck by a Texas and Pacific railroad switch engine in the local yards. Teatsworth was not seriously injured but the car he was driving was demolished.

Manager W. M. Seale of the local Western Union office has had the interior of his office renovated and a new electric sign placed at the entrance. Workmen have just completed repainting the building on the outside and laying new floors.

A number of Eastland ex-students of the State University will go to Breckenridge tomorrow night to attend the annual meeting of Texas University ex-students. Mrs. Virgil Seaberry and Mrs. B. B. Biggerstaff of Eastland, will be on the program.

Mrs. Pearl Hall has been appointed by the Board of Education of the Eastland Independent School district to take the scholastic census of the district. She began work this morning.

More than $1,500 in merchandise, which included diamond rings and various other kinds of jewelry, cigarettes, cosmetics, etc., was taken from the Murray Drug store on West Main street, Eastland, by burglars last night. Entrance to the building was gained through the skylight. R. L. Murray had only recently opened the store and the entire stock was new. Murray stated that he had no insurance.

Henry Aggers, 86, one of the world's oldest followers of the oil industry is dead. He died at 7:15 o'clock this morning at the home of his son, Roy Aggers, 322 Cypress street, Ranger. He is survived by four sons including F. K. and Roy Aggers of Ranger, both of who were at his bedside when death came. Following funeral services at a Ranger funeral home, the body was sent to Fresno, California for interment.

The veteran driller was one of the last of the pioneers of the oil industry. He began his career in the oil fields in 1863 four years after the Drank well was discovered. While drilling in this well, which is in Westmoreland county, Pennsylvania, he heard the roar of artillery, which he later learned came from the battle of Gettysburg. He said the roar kept up during the afternoon, but it was the next morning before he knew that it was the Gettysburg battle.

Aggers was not in the Civil War being debarred because of his size. He went 60 miles from his home into Ohio and there tried the second time to enlist, but was turned down.

From the Pennsylvania oil fields, Aggers went to California, then to Oklahoma, then to Texas and then back to California. He drilled in a well in Los Angeles and one at Bakersfield.

During those years he was twice on the top financially, but in 1874 and 1874 the price of oil went down to 50 cents per barrel and remained there for three years.

Aggers' wife lived to be 81. All of his sons and husband of his daughter are in the oil business. He was the last of his family, which when he was born lived on a farm in Pennsylvania. Aggers had done no actual drilling since 1924 when he came to Ranger.

Henry Aggers once drove a buggy eight miles to see Lincoln. Before his death he told of the all day parade and of how he and his mother got up early the day before and made the drive. "I had one real day," he said. "Ole Abe" was on a platform supported by wagon beds and as the procession moved through the streets, he would stop and split some rails that were on the platform with him, showing the people that he was still a rail splitter and had not forgotten even though he was a candidate for the presidency.

If loss occurs in the household of the uninsured his life's saving are wiped out, but not so with the insured man. To be both thrifty and wise, be insured. PSYCHIATRIST URGES STUDY OF PERSONS IN WAR ON CRIME

CHICAGO (UP) — A prominent psychiatrist suggests that law and psychiatry should pool their resources to combat crime.

Dr. Benjamin Karpman, chief psychotherapist at St. Elizabeth's Hospital, Washington, D. C., says in an article in the Northwestern Journal of Criminal Law and Criminology that a new concept should be adopted. Emphasis would be laid "primarily on the doer rather than the criminal deed."

Karpman pointed out that crime shows no sign of decreasing. It is growing more every day despite all methods used to prevent it. "One of the severest limitations that still exist in modern law," he said, "is the concept that so rigidly separates the deed from the doer; more specifically, the crime from the criminal."

"We pay little attention to the criminal as an individual. Why should we be at all concerned with the doer instead of, merely taking care of the deed at its face value? After all, so it is maintained, society's prime concern is with results, with acts as they affect the life of the community, and the effect is the same whatever cases may be back of the act."

"It is our contention that, be it a special deed or only personal reaction of the criminal, it is no more possible to treat the deed satisfactorily without considering the doer, than it is possible to treat a symptom without considering the disease which produced it."

Dr. Karpman explained that, as he sees it, the deed is the surface expression of a large number of factors, some external to the individual, but for the most part entirely internal and having a long history. "No deed," he said, "can be understood unless the psychology of the doer is understood."

He would split rails and talk and then the procession would move on. If lasted all day and was just a short while before he election.

250 Prospective Teachers Register With T.T.P.S.

Texas school superintendents may be surprised to know that something new may be added to the profession next fall,—teachers.

Two hundred fifty prospective teachers registered this week with the University of Texas Teacher Placement Service, compared to only 53 who registered at this time last year.

When the prospective teachers met to hear a discussion of job possibilities, there was standing room only for many, and that may be an optimistic sign that there will be a better supply of teachers next fall, Dr. Hob Gray, chairman said.

Teacher demand is acute in elementary grades, and there are also severe shortages in teachers of high school mathematics.

FOR THE SAKE OF ALL BRAVE BEAUTY PAST

You and I know absolutely nothing about our real selves. Did you know that? If we actually know so little of our friends, of other people, what can we really know of ourselves?

I say to you that you are a stranger to yourself.

There are somethings we know, of course. We know how other people look, we know whether he has good manners or bad; we know whether we respect him, whether we like him, whether we love him.

But what do we actually know about him? What do we actually know about ourselves?

Practically nothing. The veil that separates the conscious from the unconscious is indeed thin, yet completely impenetrable.

Have you ever had the experience of looking into the mirror at yourself and suddenly feeling that you are a stranger? Have you ever been sitting talking to your friend, to someone you love, and have the strange feeling that you do not know this person? Do you ever feel the magic contained in someone else... the magic that excites you, startles you... almost frightens you?

Of course you have. And mighty quickly you try to forget it.

It's something unknown to you. Human beings fear the unknown. But I can't tell you that you are a stranger to yourself and that those you love are strangers to you.

Could it be that when this life, as we know it, is over, we will find ourselves and our friends and those we love... as we really are?

I think so. I think it is a part of God's plan.

It's a promise of adventure, at least.

Anything Can Happen'

The surgical towel, right, was removed from the abdominal cavity of Mrs. Lillian Arthur, 30, of San Mateo, Calif., following her complaint that "something must have been left inside me" after a Caesarean operation two years ago. Since the operation, in which twins Donald and Donna, pictured with Mrs. Arthur at left, were delivered, she had suffered pains and lost 100 pounds. The towel, wrapped neatly around Mrs. Arthur's intestines, was removed in an exploration operation. Dr. Ray Schutt, of Bremerton, Wash., who attended Mrs. Arthur two years ago, said, "Anything can happen in an operation of this sort." (NEA Telephoto).

Dodge Process Protects Engine Cylinder Walls

The possibility of scuffing or scoring piston rings, pistons, or cylinder walls has been greatly reduced and even better lubrication of these working parts has been effected by a protective oil-absorbing coating applied to the cylinder walls of all engines now being produced by the Dodge Division of the Chrysler Corporation. This important advancement in engine manufacturing is especially valuable during the early break-in period of an engine. Scuffing or scoring is most likely at that time and would reduce the efficient functioning and normal life of the engine.

Scuffing or scoring occurs when extreme local heat of pressure resulting from abusive overspeeding or overloading of an engine causes piston rings, pistons, or cylinder walls to expand and pinpoint areas of their metal surfaces to flow or drag. The combination of better lubrication and chemical properties of the protective coating prevents such a flow or drag of these metals and the serious damage which would result from their welding or bonding together.

The new chemical process creates on the cylinder walls thousands of minute pockets or pores that trap and retain oil, thereby providing better lubrication. Simultaneously, the process applies to the cylinder walls a protective oil-absorbing coating of manganese iron phosphate crystals that become chemically combined with the cylinder walls and which possess properties that prevent the flow of metal under conditions of extreme heat or pressure.

To apply the cylinder wall coating, the engine blocks are placed in individual tanks in which a special chemical solution is pumped through the cylinder bores. Automatic electric controls regulate the timing of the process to exacting standards.

Communicable Disease Spread By Carelessness

"Carelessness and ignorance represent two of the most powerful factors in spreading communicable disease from man to man. No more emphatic example of this fact exists than the continued ravages of tuberculosis. In spite of the knowledge of its causes and spread, and of curative methods, tuberculosis is still a very serious problem not only in Texas, but throughout the United States, Dr. Geo. W. Cox, State Health Officer.

"It is true that tuberculosis no longer is first on the list of killing diseases as it was formerly," Dr. Cox said, "but despite having been reduced to fifth place in Texas, it still is responsible for more deaths between the ages of fifteen and forty-five than any other disease. And this fact exists even though the majority of tuberculosis patients could have their condition arrested if it were recognized early and proper treatment applied."

"Treatment of the early recognized case is essential. It is of equal importance, from a public health viewpoint, that the spread of this devastating infection be prevented. A more intelligent apmultaneously, the process applies to the cylinder walls a protective oil-absorbing coating of manganese iron phosphate crystals that become chemically combined with the cylinder walls and which possess properties that prevent the flow of metal under conditions of extreme heat or pressure. To apply the cylinder wall coating, the engine blocks are placed in individual tanks in which a special chemical solution is pumped through the cylinder bores. Automatic electric controls regulate the timing of the process to exacting standards.

sult in the saving of thousands of lives.

"When a diagnosis of active tuberculosis has been made, examination of all of the other members of the immediate family should follow as a matter of course. Tuberculosis runs in families, not because of any especial susceptibility to the disease, but because it is communicable, being usually transmitted through close and prolonged contact with the active case."

To reduce the number of deaths caused by tuberculosis, Dr. Cox suggests periodic examination of all adults, a check-up by physicians of the known active cases and contacts, regular examinations of high school children, isolation or hospitalization of the active tuberculosis case, and a more intelligent application of hygienic principles.

Snowstorms Or Not Troopers Stay On the Job

PROVIDENCE, R. I. (UP)—After every major snowstorm, the Rhode Island state police equip some of its troopers with snowshoes, skis and toboggans so they can carry out their duties.

The troopers are required to visit isolated families after storms to see if they need assistance. As many live in backwoods sections it often is impossible to reach them without winter equipment.

There are more than 25,000 school bands and orchestras in United States schools, according to the National Association of Music Merchants.

In 1752, a man was appointed at Yarmouth, Mass., church "to chastise the boys who play in meeting."

TAKE A LOOK AT YOUR INSHES

had taste in your mouth, your coffee (and tobacco) lose their natural flavor, your food does not agree with you, you may have heartburn, gas and dizzy spells, you may be troubled with belching; at night the gas in your bowels may press upon your bladder making you get up frequently, thus breaking into your sleep.

In the morning you are tired instead of refreshed. Gradually your health is impaired. Your complexion may become sallow or bilious; dark rings may appear under your eyes, you may feel lazy, dull and irritable or blue and melancholic. You may have frequent colds (catarrh) or dull head-ache; your bowels stop their free, full and natural action; you have constipation, gas, putrefaction and self-poisoning ("intestinal toxemia" or "acute gastritis" as many doctors call it).

HOW TO GET RELIEF
You can relieve this condition, usually overnight, by taking Calosols at bedtime and drinking water freely, next day.

The beneficial effects of Calosols lie in the fact that they are (1) laxative, (2) antispasmodic to the intestines, (3) diuretic to the kidneys, (4) effective in relieving symptoms of biliousness and acute gastritis due to constipation or faulty digestion.

Calosols are pleasant to take (sugar coated), prompt and effective. Try them and see. Follow label directions. At your druggists.
