Eastland Schools Are This Week Closing A Most Successful Term

Under the direction of Superintendent W. G. Womack and through the co-operation of an efficient staff of teachers, the school board and patrons, Eastland Public Schools are this week completing one of the most successful terms in its history.

The graduating class of 1947-48 numbers thirty-five.

Among the big accomplishments made during the past term of the school was the institution of the Eastland High School band, movement. Other worthwhile improvements started looking toward the

ORGANIZATION DAIRY ASSN. COMPLETED

The Eastland County Dairy Association met at 8 p. m. Thursday night, in the County Courthouse, Eastland and completed the election of officers and appointed the committee. Great and enthusiastic interest was shown in this new organization by the 110 dairy men and interested parties present.

It was agreed that the association should meet the last Tuesday of each month at 8 p. m. in the County Courtroom of Eastland.

At present there are 52 members with a treasury of $70.00 and many prospective members in view. "We are a young and growing organization and want every individual interested in dairying in the vicinity of Eastland County to become a member of our organization at the nominal fee of $1.00."

H. J. Tanner, secretary of the Eastland Chamber of Commerce, challenged the Dairy Association to a free barbecue and social event to be held Monday, June 14, at 8:00 p. m., at the City Park of Eastland. The challenge was accepted without a dissenting vote and each member in the organization is urged to attend and bring their families. Those planning to attend this event are asked to please let one of the following men know by Thursday, June 10, either by telephone or by writing:

Nimrod and Romney—R. B. Carmichael, General Delivery, Cisco, Texas.

Eastland—Jack Wadsworth, 708 S. Bassett St., Eastland, Texas.

Gorman—C. D. Simmons, Box 215, Gorman, Texas.

Ranger—Ranger Agricultural Committee, Ranger, Texas.

Carbon—A. G. Justice, Rt. 1 Eastland, Texas.

Carbon—A. G. Justice, Rt. 1, Eastland, Texas.

Desdemona—Jack Gray, Agricultural Instructor, Desdemona or Eastland, Texas.

Rising Star—Perry Spenny, Rising Star, Texas.

Cisco—A. Z. Mrick, Cisco, Texas.

If anyone is unable to contact any of these men concerning attendance at the barbecue, you may contact H. J. Tanner, of the Eastland Chamber of Commerce.

The primary purposes of the organization is to bring into this community improved dairying through the uses of artificial insemination and the testing of cattle for T. B. and Bangs disease together with records of milk production.

Mr. Dillingham of the Banner Creameries brought forth the fact that we in this area have great possibilities to develop a very profitable milk shed through constant interest in improved dairying. The fact that we have relatively no limit to potential market centers as far as 200 miles away by the use of modern transportation was of great interest to those present.

In all of its undertakings the school officials have had the unstinted co-operation of the patrons, civic organizations and numerous individuals, especially the Eastland Quarterback Club.

This program, which has for its purpose the general improvement of the Eastland Schools, will be continued until its goal has been reached, it is understood.

Day Barely Failed To Discover Eastland Oil

Thousands of readers of the Fort Worth Press read an interesting article centering around the new oil activity in the Eastland area and weaving in a never-before-published bit of drama in connection with the old-time oil boom.

The article, which appeared in Wednesday's Press, under a 4-column headline, follows:

In the great oil comeback which Eastland is making as evidenced by an even more widespread leasing campaign than marked the famous boom of many years ago, it is fitting that one of the largest leases should have been gotten together by Frank Day, colorful Eastland oil operator.

He was one of the first men to believe in the county's oil possibilities—this was several years before the discovery well of the county was drilled. Then he was one of the most successful operators in the great rush and, during the years that have come and gone since, his faith in the county has never faltered.

When he set out to get together approximately 9000 acres in one block, folks said it couldn't be done. But he did it, though it did take him a full year. He assembled the block for the British-American Oil Producing Co. The acreage is north of Eastland and there is not a gap in it.

Day and Jess Willard, then the world's heavyweight boxing champion, were partners in the Eastland County oil rush of 30 years ago.

Day was born in Eastland and has spent all of his 59 years here. In his youth, he worked on a railroad section gang and in stores; then was district clerk, became bookkeeper in a bank and rose to cashier and vice president.

One day in 1913, an erect, elderly man entered the bank, introduced himself as Isaac Canfield, and said, "I would like to make a deposit." He handed the young banker $20,000. Day gasped in astonishment; it was, by far, the largest single deposit that the small bank in the sleepy little county seat town had ever received.

The two men became friends. Canfield would sit around the bank and read. One afternoon, when it was just about closing time, he asked Day if he would get into Day's Model T and drove around over the county.

All this time, the banker knew nothing about the new comer or his business. But one day after several drives in the late afternoons, just as the car reached the top of a hill north of Eastland, Canfield exclaimed, "Frank, this is the biggest thing I've ever seen she'll float rocks."

Day asked, "What do you mean?"

"It's the biggest oil field I ever saw," his companion answered.

Day then learned that Canfield was a geologist and one of the most experienced and successful.

They went in together and Day got up 80,000 acres of leases in the county. In this acreage was a farm belonging to John McCleskey. One day, they visited that farm and Day drove a stake in the ground as the location for a well.

But the two were unable to interest other operators or companies to come in with them and, at last, Canfield became disgusted, abandoned the enterprise and returned to his ranch in Colorado. Most of the leases were given up, among them the McCleskey.

In 1917, on the McCleskey farm, 200 feet from where Day had driven the stake, the Texas Pacific Coal & Oil brought in the discovery well of Eastland County and one of the most spectacular rushes in all the history of oil began.

Had fate decreed differently, Canfield and Day would have drilled there in 1913, or thereabouts, and Frank Day would have been one of the discoverers of the great oil field!

He retained some of the leases, however, and during the boom he sold a 40-acre lease, which had cost him $40 for $120,000.

And now after all the ups and downs, he sees Eastland County apparently on the eve of a tremendous comeback, as evidenced by the big block of leases recently assembled, one of the largest being due to Day's efforts.

He stands to make a good deal of money, maybe a fortune—but for Frank Day, that is incidental. He wants to reap the richer reward of seeing a dream come true—of beholding the justification of a faith that has never faltered in the oil future of the county where he was born, where he has labored and where he has spent his life.

WASHINGTON—A Senate committee wants to put the United States on record as ready to fight against any armed threat to world peace.

The foreign relations committee, headed by Senator President Arthur Vandenberg, unanimously has approved a resolution aimed at strengthening the United Nations. The resolution proposes limitations on the big-power veto in the U-N Security Council. And it recommends American encouragement of mutual defense plans.

In effect, the resolution declares that insecurity among nations anywhere is a threat to security everywhere. The committee members called for use of force against aggression.

The group urged that this nation make it clear it will undertake by individual and collective self-defense to quell any armed attack affecting its national security.

But the committee emphasized that the resolution would not of itself commit this country to shipment of arms to other nations. Nor would it call for direct American participation in foreign defense treaties that would be up to Congress to decide later on.

The committee report said this country should favor regional and other collective security pacts written within the framework of the U-N. If such treaties were based on self-help, the United States then would consider supporting them.

Vandenberg's resolution also calls for strengthening of the U-N by exerting new American pressure for establishment of the world police force and for international control of armaments with dependable guarantees against violators.

If adopted, the resolution may provide grounds for the first concrete test of the sincerity of recent Russian peace overtures. The Russian government long has opposed veto power limitations and American plans for control of arms.

MAVERICKS TO MEET DUBLIN HERE SUNDAY

The Eastland Mavericks (hardball team) will play Dublin at Eastland Sunday afternoon. The game will be called at 3:00 o'clock.

Tom Grimm, new recruit for the Mavericks pitching staff, will start the game for Eastland, with Jennings standing by. Jennings' arm is still sore and he is giving it every advantage possible.

Grimm, whose home is at Gorman, is a young man with plenty of smoke on the ball. He recently defeated Dublin in a game that he pitched for De Leon. He is a watchmaker by trade and has lived at Gorman only about three months. Still another recruit for the Maverick staff will be available for the game. His identity has not been revealed.

Behind the bat for the Mavericks will be H. Farmer.

One of the largest crowds that has witnessed a game in Eastland in a long time, was present last Sunday at Fireman's Field to see the game between the Mavericks and the Strawn Flyers. The game resulted in a 4 to 0 score in favor of the Strawn team, and was watched by fans as a really good game.

Former Carbon-Eastland Resident Is A Visitor

Garland Pinnell, nephew of Pete Clement of Eastland, is here visiting his uncle and other friends and relatives in Eastland and Carbon.

Garland's father, H. D. (Horace) Pinnell is a half brother of Pete Clement and was reared at Carbon. He left there 27 years ago when he took up railroading at Walnut Springs.

The Pinnells are now residents of Boxite, Arkansas, where they have been connected with the mining interests for many years.

Splendid Rains Of Past 24 Hours Very Beneficial To Peanut Crops

Now that needed rainfall, which was having a tendency to cut down the acreage being planted to peanuts in this area, has been received the prospects are that an average even greater than that of any former year may be planted.

Peanut planting has been going forward in this area as well as in the southwestern states, according to the Southwest office of the U.S. Department's Production and Marketing Administration report.

Planting neared completion in the southeastern states and the Virginia-Carolina area, but dry soil still delayed seeding in some Texas and Oklahoma sections. Earlier plantings came up to mostly fair to good stands, but some farmers had to replant. Seed peanuts sold lower at mostly 20 cents a pound, treated.

Shelled peanut markets held about steady, despite slow demand for peanuts and sharply lower peanut oil prices. Shelled No. 1 Spanish peanuts sold in the southwest at mainly 17 cents a pound. Peanut oil was quoted at 32 cents a pound for prime crude of five per cent refining loss. Peanut meal of 41 per cent protein ranged from $75 to $78 a ton.

Rains, which this morning (Thursday) had totaled two inches for the past 24 hours in Eastland and had totaled even more at other points over Eastland County, (at Ranger it was 2.29 and at Leon Plant of the Texas Electric Service Company, it was 3.25) will insure moisture for starting if not completing the growth of peanuts.

The rains, which are still falling as this is written, will also prove beneficial to feed crops, gardens, etc. The fall has been so gradual, however, that little or no water has been received in municipal lakes and other reservoirs over the County. At Lake Eastland and at Ringling Lake, Eastland city officials stated that not enough water had been caught to register.

ROGER moved his chair a little nearer to Patience's. Dwight drew one up next to Charlotte. "Have a drink," said Roger, summoning the waiter. And when he'd given the order: "When did you decide to come to Paris?" "Just a day or two back." "You were clever to track us down here," smiled Charlotte. "I guessed you'd probably be here or at the Cafe de la Paix around drinking time." She smiled at him. "Any plans for this evening, Dwight?" "None. Have you?" "Not yet." "Can I join up with you three?" "Sure. That'll be grand," said Charlotte. Patience felt a hand stray to hers beneath the table. Roger murmured in her ear. "We'll have fun, you and I. We might possibly lose the others." Roger grinned. "What's that?" asked Charlotte. "You'll know later." Dwight looked around for the waiter. "Let's have some more drinks." Patience shook her head. "I don't think I will, thank you." "I don't think I will either," said Charlotte. "I'd like to be getting along to the hotel." They sauntered back together. They talked over what they should do that evening. "We could get seats for some show," suggested Dwight. "But it's Sunday," protested Patience. "That makes no difference in Paris," said Roger. "Didn't you know, darling, that it's a wicked city?" "I believe the Folies Bergere is worth seeing," said Dwight. "That's O. K. by me," said Charlotte. Roger hesitated. "You take Charlotte there, Dwight, and I'll find somewhere else for Patience." "Why?" asked Patience. "I don't think you'd like it." "Oh, gosh," said Charlotte. "I forgot my little sister's careful upbringing." "Why wouldn't I like it?" asked Patience. Roger tucked her arm through his. "It's not suitable for nice little girls like you." "Dwight said: 'That arrangement suits me all right. Actually I've got to see that show. That's one of the reasons I'm over here. There's a girl in it I'm interested in.'" "Another one?" asked Charlotte. "Sure. I'm interested in lots of girls. Didn't you know? They're my job." "You're awfully commercial, aren't you?" His expression changed. He looked at her. "Not always." Patience saw Charlotte's color rise. She thought: "What is going on between those two?" And felt certain there was something. Something, too, that Roger didn't very much like. "Let's dine together anyway," said Charlotte. "And if we go on to different shows we'll meet up later for supper." It wasn't a successful dinner party. Patience knew she'd be thankful when it was over. True, the food was excellent, also the wine, and for her at least it was exciting just to be sitting in a smart Parisian restaurant. But the other three seemed singularly ill-tempered. There'd be spasms of conversation and then strained silences. Till at last Dwight called for the bill.

"Where shall we meet after?" he asked. "Somewhere in Montmartre, I suggest," said Charlotte. "Some place where we can dance." "Let's make no plans," said Roger. "We'll probably bump into each other." Charlotte looked at him. "Is that what you'd really prefer?" "Yes." Dwight grinned at her. "We don't want to thrust ourselves on them, do we?" Patience said desperately: "Wouldn't it be nicer for us all to be together?"

NO one seemed to agree with her. And soon Roger and she were in a taxi taking them to the ballet. "Do you like ballet, Patience?" "I've never yet been to any." "I've an idea you will." He was right, of course. She found it enchanting. She sat spell-bound, her hand in his, listening entranced to the lovely music, watching the exquisite dancing, the color, the settings. She listened to the thunderous applause that came when at last it was over, too moved to clap herself, too deeply stirred even for words. "Come out of your trance," said Roger gently. She turned dazed eyes to look at him. "Roger—thank you for bringing me. I can't begin to tell you how much I've enjoyed it. I'd no idea anything could be so wonderful." She rose slowly to her feet. Roger helped her into her long velvet coat, his hands lingering on her shoulders. She followed the people out from their rows of seats, and remembered that other occasion when together they'd left a theater. Then there'd been Paul. Paul standing some distance away from her turning to look at her with that cold hard stare which made her think he'd completely finished with her. How sick at heart she'd been that evening! But now—was it possible that Roger was making her forget Paul a little?

Proposes An Atomic War On Pacific Typhoons

MANILA (UP) — A Philippine congressman thinks atom bombs might destroy typhoons.

Rep. Francisco Perfecto, a provincial congressman, has offered a bill which would create an international "anti-typhoon" commission to test his theory that atomic explosions could quell the fiercest storm.

"Something must be done," he said, "Typhoons caused $100,000,000 damage in the Philippines alone last year. In my province half the coconut trees were blown down and the rest were stripped bare like candles."

Under Perfecto's bill, the Philippines government would put up $500,000 for typhoon research. Scientists of all nations would be invited to join.

Rich Phosphate Deposit Discovered In Florida May Aid World Crops

By Dale M. Johns
United Press Staff Correspondent
BARTOW, Fla. (UP)—The by-product of a 2,000,000-year-old disaster offers new hope to the earth's hungry people today.

Rich deposits of phosphate, urgently needed to fertilize soil drained of its productive capacity during the war years, lie here beneath the heart of Florida's citrus fruit belts. The deposits are near the resort towns of Winter Haven and Lakeland.

To help meet the demand for fertilizer, Noralyn, one of the world's largest phosphate mines, expects to begin full-scale production this month.

The ore, from which Noralyn will produce 1,500,000 tons of phosphate a year, comes from the bones and teeth of countless fish and mammal's destroyed by the convulsions of a planet's growing pains.

Scientists say the rise and fall of the earth's crust and the sudden descent of glaciers caused Florida's phosphate deposits.

Some 2,000,000 years ago, they explain, myriads of shell fish, sharks, manatee and whales lived in the warm tropical waters which covered Florida. The land emerged from the sea to meet the glaciation. Hordes of mammals, including the mammoth, the saber-toothed tiger and the three-toed horse, were driven southward to death from freezing and overcrowding.

Then the ice melted. Once more the Florida peninsula sank into the sea. The bones and teeth that remained were covered by earth, sand and clay. Later the land rose from the sea again and the peninsula of Florida remained.

Still to be found in the phosphate deposits are many fossilized remains, including teeth, jawbones and vertebrae of the mammoth, and sharp fish teeth, some larger than a man's hand.

The phosphate beds average from 10 to 30 feet thick and lie beneath two to 30 feet of earth.

To recover phosphate, Noralyn, which was named for the mother of Louis Ware, president of International Minerals and Chemical Corp., used one of the world's largest draglines. It has a bucket that takes 30 tons of earth or ore at one bite.

When uncovered, the ore is flushed by streams of water into pipes which carry it to a "flotation" plant where phosphate is separated from foreign matter, chiefly white sand.

After the phosphate is recovered, it is dried by giant oil burners and treated with acids so it will be absorbed easily by plant life.

During the war years phosphate production in the United States was about equal to the country's needs. With the end of the war, foreign demand rose sharply. According to the Department of Commerce, fertilizer supplies still are insufficient to maintain maximum crop yields all over the world.

Noralyn's capacity is described by Franklin Farley, vice president in charge of International's phosphate division, as double the amount of phosphate needed to supply the minimum needs of a country the size of Italy for one growing season.

That is equivalent to about one-fifth of the phosphate production in the United States. Florida phosphate accounts for 75 per cent of the domestic supply and nearly half the world production.

Kansas Highways Hit
TOPEKA, Kan. (UP)—The Kansas highway system, second largest among the nation's states but with one of the lowest revenue totals for construction and maintenance, was dealt a record $2,000,000 blow in damage during the severe winter weather, engineers reported to Gov. Frank Carlson.

Find Medieval Halberd Near Peace Bridge

FORT ERIE, Ont. (UP)—A medieval halberd was unearthed during grading operations on ground near the International Peace Bridge.

The weapon consists of a long wooden shaft to which an ax and long, curved spear are affixed. The wooden shaft had long since rotted away but the iron head was in good condition.

Just how the halberd found its way into their area remained a mystery. It was possible that early French pioneers might have left it before the British entered the region.
