Taft Report Urges Gardens As One Way to Stop Inflation

BY PETER EDSON
NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON—(NEA)—If Sen. Robert A. Taft of Ohio can do a better job of running the United States than he has done in running the Joint Congressional Committee on the Economic Report, it doesn't look as though he'd make a very hot President. Under Taft's system of operation, nobody has been permitted to do anything while he was out of town. And he has been out of town frequently, campaigning. Politics before business, every time. The Taft Committee report on the President's economic message to Congress was due last Feb. 15. It isn't in sight even yet. But maybe that's just as well.

Last summer, Sen. Raymond E. Baldwin of Connecticut needed Taft into having his committee look into the high cost of living. Three subcommittees were appointed to hold hearings during vacation time in the east, mid-west and west.

Sen. Arthur V. Watkins of Utah ran the western show. He completed his report early in March with some red-hot recommendations. The eastern subcommittee, under Sen. Ralph Flanders of Vermont, filed a report, also pretty good. The mid-western group, under Sen. Joe Ball of Minnesota, hasn't been heard from.

But the full committee has, at long last, gotten around to making a final report of last summer's work.

As a solution for the high cost of living, the committee recommends Victory Gardens. That might have been all right in March, but it's pretty late to get started now in all but the northern tier of states. To mitigate the effect of high prices, the committee recommends, more farmers' markets should be established, and consumers should shop more intelligently and use substitutes. Doing anything about the high prices themselves isn't even mentioned.

On prices. There is one item about cutting excise taxes which directly increase the prices of essential cost-of-living items, particularly for low-income groups.

What they probably mean here is lipstick and whisky. There are no excise taxes on meat, potatoes, spinach, nor even applesauce.

For the inflationary danger of too much expansion of credit, the committee has another dandy suggestion. It is to give the matter more study.

There are other things the committee recommends putting off. One is the matter of doing something about controls over scarce items. In one place the report says there should be allocations of scarce raw materials for consumer goods. But in another place it says this needs more study.

It's Going To Be Pretty Hard To Explain

I GIVE YOU TEXAS

By Boyce House

Maybe here's an Abe Lincoln story that you hadn't heard: Lincoln said of a certain judge, "He's so strict, he'd hang a man for blowing his nose on the street but he would quash the indictment if it didn't specify which hand he blew it with."

Everybody in Eastland is talking about oil.

Used to edit the paper at Eastland many years ago so the other day I re-visited the "old home town" and was amazed to find the place is really "stepping out."

One company, they told me, has leased 40,000 acres in the county. That's a lot of land and indicates a strong belief in future oil possibilities and there have been several blocks of 8,000 acres each.

Eastland County was the scene, back in 1918-20, of one of the biggest oil booms in history. Wouldn't it be odd for the county to have another real oil rush after 30 years? And yet it seems quite possible.

We told recently of the show which advertised, "See the horseless carriage," this being in the early day of the automobile which was known as the "horseless carriage." Folks paid their quarter and saw a buggy drawn by two mules.

This reminded a reader of the Carrizo Springs Javelin of a similar "sell." E. C. Smith writes from Redondo Beach, California about a sideshow along about 1900 in San Antonio which had a sign reading "See the horse with the tail where his head should be." People paid their dimes and saw a horse with his tail tied to the trough.

Boss Concedes Worker Is Important Man

AUSTIN, Tex. (UP)—Judge Charles Betts found an honest man.

An employer called the judge to ask that one of his employees be excused from jury service.

The judge explained that he might not have enough jurors if the request were granted.

"Well," said the employer, "if that's all that's worrying you, I'll be right down to serve. This man is much more important to the business than I am."

In 1900 American women wore an average of half a dozen starched petticoats.

XXVIII
THEY came out into the busy street and turned idly away from the crowd before the theater, wandering down the Place de l'Opera.

"Of course she did. But we're not driving through the Bois in the moonlight to talk about Charlotte. I want to forget her."
"I see."
He looked at her sharply. "Just what do you mean by that? In that tone of voice."
"Only that you're driving with me in the Bois in the moonlight simply because you want to forget Charlotte."
"I'm not."
"You are. But it's all right. You see, I want to forget Paul. That makes us quits."
"Well, I'll be darned." He drew her to him roughly. "What is all this? Whoo Paul? I don't like the sound of him."
"He shook her head.
"You don't want to talk about Charlotte. I don't want to talk about Paul."
"That's fair enough." He kissed her again. "Shall we talk about each other? I suppose you know—hang it all, I've just told you—that I'm crazy about you."
She smiled slowly.
"Temporarily."
"Darling, love affairs are always temporary."
"Oh, no," she said sharply. "Not all love affairs."
"I'm afraid so."
"I don't want to think that," but even as she said this she wondered if it were true. There'd been Paul Paul with whom she thought she'd been in love for all time.
"Don't let's bother about whether we're in love for tonight, a week, a year or a lifetime," Roger said softly. "Let's just enjoy the moment. Don't let's think of anything else. Of tomorrow. Of returning to London."
"Or such a person as Paul."
"Patience, you're so utterly sweet." And he drew her closely to him again and kissed her.

DAWN was breaking over Saenr Coeur when eventually they returned to the hotel. They'd lingered on the terrace of the Henri Quatre watching the lights twinkling over Paris. Then they'd driven slowly back again and found a little night club in the Rue Piquante. They'd had supper and they'd danced and they'd said: "We'll do this again tomorrow and the night after. In fact, every night this week." It was a game they were playing. They kept it up till they said good night. And then they came back to earth. They looked at each other. The night porter dozed sleepily in his little cubby hole.
"Thank you for a lovely evening," said Patience.
"There's still tomorrow morning."
"I know."
"We're not catching a plane until three." Roger glanced over at the night porter. "I wonder if he's really asleep. The devil, I don't care if he isn't." He caught her to him and kissed her. "Sleep well, darling."
A clock struck the half hour as she went into her room. She looked at her watch. It was even later than she realized. Half-past four!
She undressed and slid into bed. She reached out a hand and switched off her bedside lamp. She'd drawn the curtains apart and now a faint gray light was seeping into the room. Morning—it was here already. She lay very still, sleep evading her, going over the events of the evening. Hearing again all Roger had said to her. Feeling his arms around her. Thinking, "It's Roger now, it's Paul." Wondering if she really meant it. Wishing that she did. Hoping that she did. Only, if so, where would it lead her? Roger wasn't seriously in love with her. Whatever he felt for her would only be in passing. He'd as good as said so in the taxi driving around the Bois. All love affairs were temporary. He'd probably very soon be forgetting her. Once they were back in London this was almost certainly what would happen. Besides, there was Charlotte.

FUNNY BUSINESS

"Jack prides himself on being a self-made man!"

Days of drifting on the flood-swollen river end for Freckle, Lard and Andy!

Caught you at last, Smith! Thought you could run out on me, eh?

Why, Hilda! Fancy meeting you here!

Well turn you loose, Buckskin, if I told you our money goes back!

But I ain't got to go with you, I had nothing to do with those gold mines!

Well, make our getaway while the mob takes care of Buckskin, Wade!

Are you sure we can get away without being seen?

Yes, it's safe! I hid it under the floor in the old saloon!

If what I'm looking for is here, it won't take long to find it, little beaver!

Tomorrow we will drive out those denizens from our Nile!

Well, now we'll see how easy they're going to be!

Our chief is a mighty man! All through the night he sits in his palace and plans the battle!

Crash!

THE SCOREBOARD

Athletics' Top Pitching Staff Cost Mack Only $37,000

BY HARRY GRAYSON
NEA Sports Editor

NEW YORK—(NEA)—Bill Vecek of the Indians says he will pay $200,000 for a starting pitcher.

Pitchers figured prominently in the $500,000 Dick Muckerman collected during the winter for the eighth-place stars of the Browns.

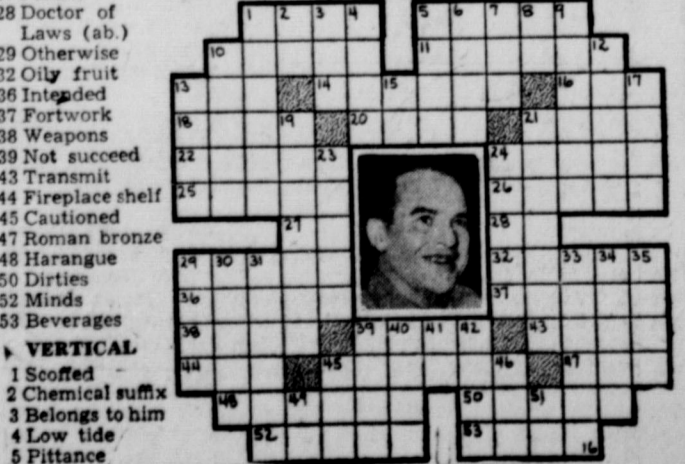

Yet the Athletics' staff, perhaps the slickest in the game, cost Mr. Cornelius McGillicuddy exactly $37,000.

Included in that tremendous outlay was $12,000 for young Alex Kellner, called in from Birmingham and as yet untied, $10,000 each for the great Phil Marchildon and Dick Fowler, obtained from Toronto, where Mr. Connie Mack had the pick of the club, and $5,000 for the 33-year-old relief worker Bubba Harris, bought last September from Lincoln of the Western League.

PATIENCE awoke late and flung back the bedclothes. To her horror it was half-past nine. Swiftly she bathed and dressed and went into Charlotte's room to find it empty. Imagine Charlotte up and downstairs before her! She hurried down to the restaurant to find Charlotte, Dwight and Roger having coffee and rolls and apparently discussing whether Charlotte should call her. Only Charlotte, it seemed, had demurred. Charlotte had been saying that surely it was better to let her sleep. If she'd gone to bed so late—

Charlotte looked at her now and Patience wondered why her eyes were so hostile. "Hello," Charlotte said. "Tired?" "Not very." Roger smiled at her. "I'm in disgrace, Charlotte's been lecturing me for keeping you out so late last night." "Oh, but Charlotte, I enjoyed it!" "I'm sure you did," said Roger. "Where did you go?" asked Dwight. "Well, we had a drive around the Bois first," began Patience, and then stopped short, not quite liking the way he was laughing at her. "What's wrong with that?" "Nothing," said Dwight. "In fact, I imagine it was very pleasant." "Have a croissant," said Roger, a slight frown creasing his brows. "And I suggest we don't give them any more details about our evening. They're not telling us anything about theirs." "You didn't ask us," said Charlotte shortly. "I didn't imagine you were interested." "I wasn't, very." "I am, Charlotte," said Patience.

Charlotte rose to her feet. "I'm out," she said. "I've an appointment at ten-thirty. And another at twelve. I'm getting dresses for the film, Dwight. Want to come with me to see them?" "Can I see you in them?" "I don't see why not." "Sure, I'll be right along." Roger too was on his feet. "You stay and look after Patience," said Charlotte. "I'm going to. But where do we meet up?" Charlotte shrugged her shoulders. "I've no suggestions."

DWIGHT by now had already left them. He'd a couple of telephone calls to make, he said. He'd meet Charlotte in the lounge later. "Where are we lurching?" said Roger. "I don't care." Roger looked at her. "It doesn't suit you to be so bad-tempered." "Oh, leave me alone!" Roger sat down again and poured himself another cup of coffee. Patience watched Charlotte, her head held high, every inch of her body suggesting suppressed anger, disappearing from the restaurant. Then she looked at Roger. "What's wrong, do you think? With Charlotte, I mean?" "I'm still wondering." "Maybe she's had a row with Dwight." "I wouldn't say that was it." Patience look at him. She said unhappily that she didn't like it. That she felt horribly uncomfortable. After all, she was Charlotte's guest. She swallowed down her coffee and got quickly to her feet. Roger laid a detaining hand on her arm. "Where are you off to?" "I want to catch Charlotte before she goes out."

"I'd leave well enough alone. I know our Charlotte. She'll recover." "I'd rather speak to her."

SHE was gone, promising to meet him in the lounge a little later. She hurried upstairs to find Charlotte flinging things into her dressing case.

"Could better pack too, Patience, before you go out." "Yes, of course." "Leave your suitcase all ready, and it can be picked up after lunch. I suggest we meet here at two-thirty."

"You mean you and Dwight want to lunch alone?" Charlotte raised her head from her case.

"Wouldn't you and Roger like to lunch alone?" Patience felt her color rising in her cheeks.

"Oh, Charlotte, don't be silly," and then: "Would you mind if we did?" "Good heavens, no."

"Well, then—Charlotte, why are you so bad-tempered? What have I done?" Charlotte swung around on her. "I didn't expect you to come in at half-past four in the morning. I heard you creeping along the passage. I'd been lying awake worrying myself to death about you."

Patience stared at her. "Why, I was all right." Charlotte's eyes were even more hostile.

Patience drew a quick breath. What was Charlotte getting at? "What do you mean by that exactly?" Charlotte laughed shortly. "Roger's a man of the world!" For a moment there was silence in the room. Charlotte closed her suitcase and locked it. "Just bear that in mind, that's all," she said, "if you propose to see much more of him."

She reached for her hat and put it on. She picked up her handbag and gloves. Then she left the room without another word, and Patience heard her high heels tapping down the corridor. (To Be Continued)

Cellar Layout Eases Couple's Housing Problem

LIMA, N.Y. (UP)—Mr. and Mrs. F. M. Nataline solved the housing problem by going underground.

Faced with high construction costs, the Natalines decided to build just the basement of their future home. That was one year ago. Today, they are living on an attractive, well-designed basement which cost them less than $3,500.

The home consists of a large living room with brick fireplace, bedroom, kitchen, pantry, furnace room, bath and garage. Nataline

Electronic Tracks Recorded By New Photo Process

ROCHESTER, N. Y. (UP)—The tracks of electrons small negatively-charged atom particles, have been recorded successfully in the research laboratories of the Eastman Kodak Co.

A new photographic emulsion was used in the experiment, the company announced, indicating that it was the first definite identification of electron tracks.

Tracks were first reported from the University of Montreal in 1946. But the Kodak tracks, obtained at Harlow, England, and later in Rochester, are long enough to remove all doubt as to their identity.

The number of developed silver grains per track in the emulsion ranges from six to 28. Length of the path is about two-thousandths of an inch—two-thirds of the thickness of an average sheet of paper.

Termed a valuable tool for studies of atomic disintegration, the new emulsion is expected to prove useful in research on cosmic rays and in medical research involving radio-active isotopes.

In autoradiography, where radio-active tissue is placed in close contact with a photographic material, the new emulsion will enable scientists to detect with extreme precision the source of electrons in the tissue.

In the Kodak experiments, X-rays are directed toward the emulsion through a sheet of lead. Passing through the lead filter, the X-rays knock loose secondary photo electrons.

When one of the flying electrons speeds into the emulsion, it strikes and affects silver grains electrically. A dotted line of the affected silver grains is produced. That is the path of the electron through the emulsion.

From the length and curvature of the track, and the grain-spac-

WILL CHIROPRACTIC HELP YOU

Why not? Is your spine different from that of others? If too much damage has not been done and too much time has not elapsed since the nerve interference occurred, and the Chiropractor is skillful enough to make the correction, the innate intelligence in your body will do wonders with it.

FEMALE TROUBLE

Case No. 1216:
Lady, age 39, complained of irregular periods, right side pains, bad cramps for two days a month, severe headaches before and after, dizzy spells, low back pain, bladder pain, neuritis in shoulders, and sinus inflammation. She went to a Chiropractor for her headache because a patient had recommended one for that complaint. Neurocalometer analysis and x-ray revealed a defective energization. After a few months she was amazed to discover her female trouble and other complaints had vanished with the headaches. An operation had been recommended. It is not necessary now, for she feels perfect in all respects.

It costs nothing to investigate if your condition may be helped. Phone 217 for appointment.

"Willin' Willie" Sells Used Cars By Making Plenty Of Fun Of Them

NEW ORLEANS (UP)—Negative advertising which goes Hollywood's screwy method of selling used automobiles one better has paid off for "Willin' Willie," a used car dealer here.

Willie, otherwise known as Bill Bridge, has doubled his Canal Street car lot business by not merely low-rating his products, but by positively running them into the ground. For instance, the following newspaper ads of Willie's:

William Fenzel, millionaire oil man from Monroe and Shreveport, La., was appointed by Gov. Earl K. Long to the U. S. Senate to fill the vacancy caused by the death of the late Sen. John H. Overton.

"Willie wants you to come out and get some of these—should I say 'cars'?—off my lot."

Or: "Lazy Lena, a '41 Ford that won't run or even walk. About $25 down."

And another: "Houdini special, a '39 Ford. Pistons can change cylinders without missing a strike, $495."

Willie, a rangy, energetic looking man who has been selling used cars here for 20 years, said he got tired of the "usual puffed up praises you see about used cars."

"However," he said, "I guess I'll have to change my style of advertising because all of my friends are getting together to have my head examined."

Willie said his pet peeves are the "be backs" who bring along their mechanic friends to go over the car they plan buying.

"They're under the car, over it and in and out of it," Bridge said "and they end up helping to push the car home to save face!"

Bridge explained that his technique is not only to low-rate the car he sells, but also to build up, in an indirect way, some of them

One of his build-up advertisements runs like this:

"'47 Chevrolet. The poor old codger who sold this to me was all hunched over. He said he got that way running behind the 1,300 miles the car shows to keep from

Pity The Dromia Dromia-No Sponge To Hide Itself

SAN FRANCISCO (UP)—An embarrassed dromia dromia arrived at Steinhart Aquarium here without a sponge to hide it.

When it was put into a tank with some eels and wrasse, it looked around for a sponge, but finding none, it broke off a sea-fan and tried to cover itself. It has been clutching fans ever since, and has constantly maneuvered to keep the fan between it and its curious tank-mates.

The dromia dromia is known as a sponge crab in Hawaii. When it can't find sponges, it will take clam shells, pieces of wood, or even old shoes.

The Campfire Girls was founded in 1912 by Dr. and Mrs. Luther Gulick.

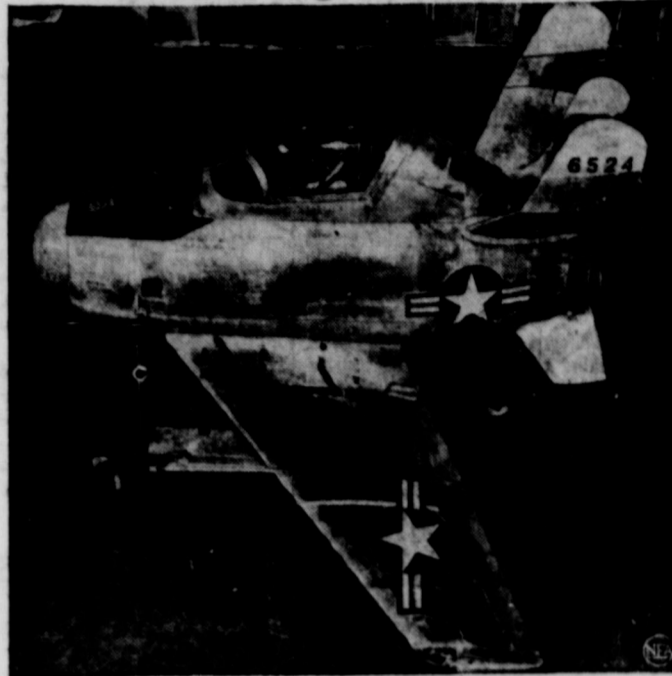

showing wear on the tires." Bridge said the advertisement implies what the buyer wants to know: that the previous owner took good care of the car and seldom used it.

Bride's prose style also has some unexpected turns. In a list of offers he had this one:

"1946 Ford. Crayfish lovers—if you want to eat some of the best boiled crayfish in town there's a place on Canal and Roman that serves Crayfish that are out of this world. About $600 down."

People send him fan mail, Bridge said, and ask him how he manages to write some of the ads. "All I can tell 'em," he said, "is that having a few drinks first helps a lot."

'Parasite' Fighter Is Tested

This plane has no landing gear, because it will make all its take-offs and landings in flight. It's the McDonnell XF-85, a "parasite" fighter designed to fit in the bomb bay of a Consolidated Vultee B-36. The 15-foot-long plane is now undergoing ground and wind tunnel tests on a special dolly. The wings fold, and the tail is especially designed for its unique job.

Janelle Keeps On Smilin' Through

FALLS CITY, Neb. (UP)—Janelle Peck is a girl who can smile in the face of misfortune. The seven year old form youngster always is cheerful despite the fact she has suffered 39 breaks in her legs.

Currently, she is resting at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Glenn Peck and catching up on her homework after missing considerable schooling because of her most recent fracture.

Janelle has a smile for everyone. She thinks that each break will be her last. Three years ago the girl's condition was at its worst and the slightest quick move was likely to result in a fracture.

Until three years ago, all the breaks occurred in the right leg. Since then all breaks have been in the left leg. The latest one occurred simply because she overreached while sitting in her wheel chair at District 30 school, which she attends.

The school is only a few rods from her parents' house. Her father carries her to and from school daily.

She has one wheel chair for use around home and another is kept at the school house.

Janelle has braces on both legs all the time.

Physicians say she has an imperfect bone condition caused by a glandular deficiency.

WISE BANKERS FIND IT PAYS TO KEEP KIDS IN FUNDS

By Claude Ramsey United Press Staff Correspondent MERCEDES, Tex. (UP)—The bankers support the kids in the Mexican border country of the Lower Rio Grande Valley.

For the bankers know that in a few years the kids, especially those with dollar sense, will be putting money in the banks, thereby supporting the bankers.

The youngsters get a chance to show their stuff at the valley livestock show each year. After the show their hogs, steers and chickens are auctioned off.

This year the business men of the area headed by bankers, pitched in with an extra $15,000 for premiums on stock that otherwise would have brought the 4-H club and F. F. A. boys and girls $35,000. The business men are formed into unique "beef syndicates" in 15 valley towns and communities. It is a blind to make their contribution painless. Each "syndicate" designates two or three men to canvass the business people and collect "dues," usually somewhere between $5 and $15.

Dith the money that is raised the syndicate sends "buyers" to the livestock show to bid on calves pigs and chickens grown by the 4-H and F. F. A. boys and girls. The "buyer's" sole mission is to spend the money—and to do it wisely by making other bidders go higher.

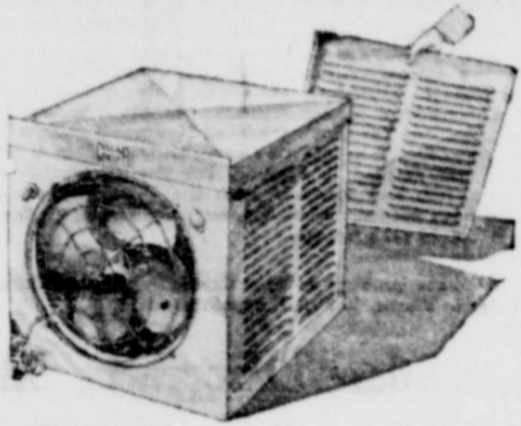

After the show is over, each syndicate takes one of its steers and pitches itself a barbecue. Often a syndicate will have four or five barbecues in the process of consuming a steer.

Mayor Job Bad Medicine

NEW YORK (UP)—Silago Tzo a Navajo medicine man who visited City Hall, emphatically refused when Mayor William O'Dwyer offered to trade jobs.

The other animals are resold—at losses—or donated to hospitals or charity institutions.

"We figure we have a lot of fun at the barbecue for our five or ten bucks," on of the bankers explained. "But we're really proud that the money goes to the kids as a reward for raising good livestock. It encourages them to continue growing cattle and hogs—which is what we need here."
