Dewey's "Unity" Jeopardized By Possible Democratic Senate

BY PETER EDSON
 NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON—(NEA)—GOP candidate Thomas E. Dewey's principal appeal to the voters thus far is that he should be elected president so as to give the country "unity." He wants this unity particularly to back up his conduct of foreign affairs and his drive for peace, which he says is the biggest domestic issue.

A lot more unity around Washington would be a welcome change. President Truman's campaign against Congress and vice versa indicates how little love has been wasted between the legislative and executive branches of the government. And the Democratic Party itself couldn't possibly be more hopelessly split, what with Henry Wallace and Gov. Strom Thurmond going off on tangents.

To give Dewey a chance to get his unity, however, it will be necessary to give the Republicans good working majorities in both Houses of Congress. Moreover, these majorities must be sympathetic to the Dewey program on all important issues. But to elect senators and congressmen who will work with Dewey is going to require some awful straight thinking on the part of voters in a number of states.

GREATEST threat to Dewey getting his unity could come through election of a Democratic majority to the Senate. This is no remote possibility. Present Senate division is 51 Republicans to 45 Democrats. This gives the GOP a working majority of six.

Up for election to the Senate this year are 18 Republican and 15 Democratic seats. Election of 19 or more Democrats and 14 or fewer Republicans would give the Democrats a majority. Should that happen, the Democrats would be able to elect the chairman and have a majority of Democrats on all Senate committees. That would hamstring Dewey's unity program even before it got started.

Eleven of the Democrats running for the Senate this year are from the South and are sure to be elected. Only a few of them have ever been considered sympathetic to a liberal program such as it is believed Dewey will finally present. They are Sparkman of Alabama, Lyndon Johnson of Texas, Kefauver of Tennessee.

The four Northern and Western Democrats seeking Senate seats and with known, fair to good liberal records are Green of Rhode Island, Murray of Montana, Johnson of Colorado and Clinton Anderson of New Mexico.

At least eight of the Republicans running for Senate seats may be said to have strong isolationist and ultra-conservative leanings which might bring them into disagreeing with the Dewey program and disrupting unity. Governor Dewey in his barnstorming about the country has nevertheless given most of them his blessing. They are Brooks of Illinois, Buck of Delaware, Dvorshak of Idaho, Rizley of Oklahoma, Revocomb of West Virginia, Robertson of Wyoming, Wherry of Nebraska, Wilson of Iowa.

ANOTHER eight of the Republican Senate candidates have good records on support of the bipartisan foreign policy and international co-operation. They are Bridges of New Hampshire, Ball of Minnesota, Mungel of South Dakota, Cooper of Kentucky, Cordon of Oregon, Ferguson of Michigan, Sillonsall of Massachusetts, and Margaret Chase Smith of Maine. They would probably fit into the Dewey unity program without embarrassment.

If the idea of giving Dewey complete unity is carried through consistently to the House election, the defeat of certain Republican congressmen who have shown strong opposition to the bipartisan foreign policy might also be indicated.

The race in the House isn't so close. At the end of the last Congress, the Republicans held 245 seats, the Democrats 185, two American Labor and three vacancies. The Republicans could therefore lose up to 30 seats and still retain control of the House, putting their chairman and majorities in all committees. Few dopesters give the Democrats much chance of winning the House.

TRUST

By Elswyth Thane

THE STORY: Hilary Sheen, British secret agent, is wounded in the Indian desert beside a crashed plane, after completing a dangerous mission. He thinks of Nana Parthing, his home in the English countryside, and feels a desperate need to get back there. He doesn't know that the house has been let and that dream, it is a year-old habit, which he has never met, has adopted his return. "Things have been to old room and eagerly awaits his return. "Things have been to old room and eagerly awaits his return. "Things have been to old room and eagerly awaits his return."

HE stood there in the warm, familiar surroundings of his club in Pall Mall and knew that he was dead.

Dead. He realized it with a terror he had never known on earth, helpless, unreasoning panic which flattered and struggled and strained like the wings of a frantic bird. The commissioner in the hall—the men who went through the door just ahead of him—Dewey crossing the marble floor towards the lounge—none of them had known he was there. They couldn't see him. They couldn't hear him. He was cut off from them forever—disembodied—invisible—exiled. Dead.

No. No, this could not really be. It was some form of delusion still—fever—nightmare—delirium. . . . He would prove to himself now, at once, that this thing simply hadn't happened. He would speak to Dewey—and then they would turn to him with incredulous looks, seize his hands, order drinks all around.

"What about Dalton?" he demanded, approaching the group around the hearth. "Did they get

Edgar S. McFadden, agronomist for the United States Department of Agriculture, stationed at the A. and M. Breeder of the first rust-resistant bread wheat, named "Hope," he has made it possible to grow wheat on millions of acres throughout the world where it could not be successfully grown before. His discovery is authoritatively credited with having saved American farmers $400,000,000 a year during the past war and with having furnished bread for 25,000,000 people who would have died of starvation. His "Austin" wheat now grows on more than a million Texas acres and his new "Seabreeze" variety is spreading throughout the Gulf Coast area rapidly.

the way. Of course Alice had always hated his job—even tried to make him promise to give it up and stay in England. It was because he had half expected this to be his last undertaking before handing in his resignation that he had been so prompt and willing on the day that the Home Office had rung through to Nana Parthing. So George was cutting in, was he. One must look into this.

"I'm thinking Alice won't miss him as much as we do, at that," said Tottleigh, and glanced round at them piteously from the hearthrug. "I always thought of him almost as a son. I've never felt that way about George, somehow. These double brandies," he added, as a club servant appeared in answer to the bell.

But this is awful, thought Hilary. They'll have me crying over them in a minute. It's not as bad as all that, chaps, really it isn't, he wanted to say. . . .

"If it's any satisfaction to us," Denby was saying to the rest of them, "he had finished the job before they got him. The mullah is caught red-handed. If that's any comfort," he muttered, contemplating the amber liquid in his glass. "And I suppose it ought to be."

"It ought to be to Hilary," said Denby grimly.

And it was, but Hilary had had enough of this. He couldn't go on standing there and watch them break their hearts over him. He must take himself off till they came round a bit. The brandies would fix them up. . . . He turned away amiably, and sidestepped the man returning with a tray on which sat three tall glasses and a siphon.

No drink for Hilary, he thought. And I ought to need it worse than they do.

He drifted out into the entrance hall and collected his hat from the peg. The commissioner was writing nearsightedly in the message book and did not look up.

Well, what next? What was the good of it, like this? How did one pass one's time. Time? There was no such thing as time, any more, for him. . . .

ABILENE, Oct. 20.—West Texas is in an especially favored spot to acquire a large part of the nation's textile growth, according to a cotton textile industry survey for the area, just issued in a bulletin from Texas Technological College. This bulletin was prepared by Mark E. Wood, research associate of the Cotton Research Committee of Texas, for the West Texas Chamber of Commerce Santa Fe industrial committee.

Wood points to growing western markets as requiring a greater expansion of the textile industry. The area already has five cotton mills within its boundaries and the only textile engineering school west of the Mississippi, where the "know how" of cotton textile manufacturing is taught.

History of the cotton textile industry in the United States is fully traced in the report, with tables and charts giving comparison of the West Texas area with cotton textile manufacturing centers.

I GIVE YOU TEXAS

By Royce House

Orators don't coin phrases like their predecessors did in the good old days.

For example, the one who referred to a political party with its motley groups as "held together by the cohesive power of plaudits."

And Tom Corwin's phrase that if his native land were invaded, "We would welcome them with hospitable hands to bloody graves."

A man who had just listened to a speech said it reminded him of "the peace of God" because "it passes all human understanding."

All that Texas wants is what is coming to him—not any less but not a bit more. But some are receiving more than they are entitled to because of the greater growth in population of some parts of the State in comparison with others.

Representation in the legislature is not based on today's population as it should be—but what the population was, 28 years ago.

The State Constitution calls for redistricting after each census but there has been no redistricting since 1921. A few members of the legislature have blocked redistricting because they might have to run against each other.

They put their own political interests above their oath to carry out the Constitution. They place their selfish individual ambitions above doing justice to 7,500,000 Texans.

The folks back home do not share any such selfish view. Texans believe in a square deal; they are fair-minded.

That's the reason why Constitutional Amendment No. 2 should pass in the general election; it provides a sure way of bringing about redistricting every 10 years.

Eighty-five per cent of Illinois farms have electric lights.

Bearden Concealed War Injury To Keep Pitching in Majors

BY HARRY GRAYSON NEA Sports Editor

BOSTON—(NEA)—The Yankees did not trade Gene Bearden to the Indians in December, 1946, because the front office feared the handsome young Indian had been so terribly hurt in the South Pacific.

The then Larry MacPhail and Company did not know that the plucky Bearden carefully concealed his injuries from all baseball people "because they might have gotten the idea I wasn't strong enough to pitch."

The story of Bearden beating his injuries to pitch major league baseball did not break until after one of his early fine performances on the Cleveland club's first swing east in early May. You may have heard it, but it's one of the brightest chapters in baseball history, and worth repeating.

Climbing a metal ladder from the engine room when a second torpedo struck the ill-fated cruiser, Helena, near the Solomon Islands, in July, 1943, the six-foot three-and-a-half-inch Bearden was hurled to the deck below. His knee was twisted, crushed, his head split open by flying fragments.

An officer pulled him out, and Bearden, semi-conscious, spent two days aboard a rubber life raft. He was operated on at a naval hospital near Jacksonville. One surgeon worked on him for months.

The kneecap had been crushed seemingly beyond repair, the ligaments in his leg badly mangled, so an aluminum cap and screw were inserted. An aluminum plate was fixed in the back of his head.

AFTER the operation, Bearden spent a month in bed, wore a plaster cast while on crutches for two more. More than seven months elapsed before he could walk. He was not discharged from the hospital until 1945, by which time leg exercises had given him full use of the limb.

The only concession the knuckler and slider specialist makes to his leg injury is that he doesn't take a full windup. He doesn't raise his right leg more than a foot.

This is the young man who, with just one day's rest, was as cold as Greenland's icy mountains pitching the Indians into their first World Series in 28 years. No wonder.

The Yanks undoubtedly tossed in their farm hand, Bearden, in what appeared to be an inconsequential trade with the Indians because their scouts didn't believe he was fast enough.

But Lou Boudreau was sold on him when he checked the Giants on the spring training loop. Apparently the stylish shortstop figured, when you stop Johnny Mize and Company you can stop 'em all.

The game young southpaw, who noticed his 20th win in the American League play-off game, had a chance at more National Leaguers, the Braves, in the series. And the best thing about the plucky portside is that he'll be throwing that knuckler and slider for a few years to come.

Big Day Expected At State Fair

DALLAS Tex., Oct. 20 (UP)—Attendance for the 1948 State Fair of Texas was expected to skyrocket still higher today.

Fair officials said that 1,362,765 persons had passed through the turnstiles through Tuesday. Attendance Tuesday was 70,974.

Today is Panhandle Wheat Growers Day, Buckner Orphans Home Day, Hansford County day, Texas Guernsey Breeders day and Antique Dealers day.

Last night thousands saw the State Fair's second giant fireworks display. Harry S. Truman and Thomas E. Dewey, presidential candidates, blazed against a chilly sky with their appropriate party symbol a donkey and an elephant, respectively.

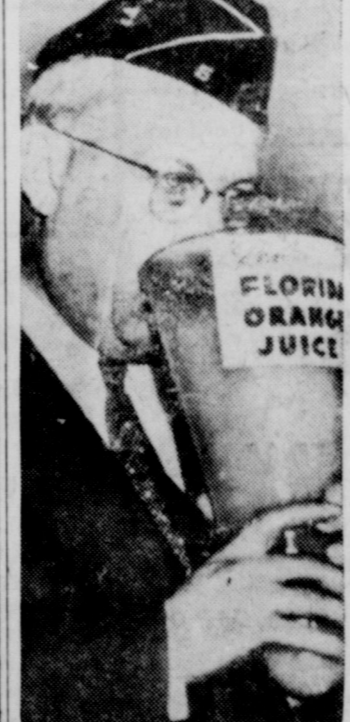

Some 200 Gold Star Mothers, observing Gold Star Mothers' day, heard a talk by Col John P. Kenny commanding officer of Hensley field. He talked about air power in today's world.

The Menard County 4-H club team won first place in the junior livestock judging contest. The team thus won the right to represent Texas in the junior livestock judging contest of the International Livestock Show, to be held in Chicago beginning Nov. 27.

Team members were Fred L. Sutton, Carl Menzies, Jackie Landers and M. D. McWilliams.

Woman Held In Death Of Suitor

GREAT FALLS, Mon., Oct. 20, (UP) — Authorities today held Mrs. Dannie Sue Hughett, 19, in connection with the arsenic death of her suitor, Cpl. Robert M. Burt, 19, of San Marcos, Tex. Burt died at the Great Falls Air Base Hospital yesterday from a dose of poison which police said was administered to him Sunday in a Great Falls apartment shared by Mrs. Hughett and Mrs. Elaine Johnston, 21.

Both women were arrested before the soldier died, questioned for several hours, then booked for investigation and transferred to the county jail, police said.

Police reported that Mrs. Hughett, estranged wife of an air force corporal, said in a signed statement that Burt had come to the apartment she shared with Mrs. Johnston on Sunday morning but was denied entrance because he was "reported to have a gun."

That night Burt came to the apartment again, according to the signed statement police said she gave them.

She said in the statement that Burt was "so drunk" when he came to the apartment the second time that she wanted to give him something "to make him sick so could get past the gate (at the base) and go to the hospital instead of the guard house."

Police said Mrs. Hughett admitted putting "three teaspoons of arsenic, baking soda and rancid butter" into a cup of coffee which Burt drank. Then Mrs. Johnston took him to the base.

Burt was stopped at the gate and taken to the hospital. He told attendants before he died that he knew something was wrong with the coffee but that he trusted Mrs. Hughett and planned to marry her after she divorced her husband, military authorities said. Mrs. Hughett, mother of an 8-month-old baby, said she "didn't realize the danger" of the arsenic, according to police.
