

President Truman Advises People To Expect More Spending

By Merriman Smith
COLUMBIA, Mo., June 9 (UP)—President Truman today advised the American people to expect continued heavy spending on foreign arms and economic aid as part of the "long and hard" battle for world peace.

He said these "temporary" costs are necessary to stop Russia in her "plain intent" to "overthrow the tradition of freedom—shared by our country and many others."

The President spoke on the economic aspects of American foreign policy before a commencement audience at the University of Missouri which conferred on him an honorary Doctor of Laws degree. Mr. Truman was also made an honorary member of Phi Beta Kappa, the national scholastic society.

"Obviously, we do not want to continue our extraordinary financial assistance to other countries any longer than necessary," Truman said.

But he warned that it would be "disastrous" to take away our assistance now.

"Our program for peace and freedom is necessarily designed at present to build a strong community of free nations which can resist Communist aggression, whether that aggression takes the form of internal subversion or external attack," he said.

The chief executive left wide open the question of how this country will continue to send aid overseas when the Marshall Plan ends in June 1952. But he emphasized that "our vital national interest in a healthy world economy will not end" then.

"It will be just as necessary then as it is today to have a secure foundation for world peace," he said.

"The economic well-being of other free nations around the world is important to our common effort for peace. It is also important to our own economic well-being."

Truman noted with satisfaction that the European recovery program had produced a steady recession in Communist influence abroad.

"The nations of Western Europe, with Marshall Plan aid, are setting new records of production and approaching the restoration of pre-war standards of living," he told the campus audience.

"In the last two years, the Communists have received progressively fewer votes in every election held in the Marshall Plan countries. Today, every one of them is stronger and better able to resist Communism and to work for peace than at any time since the war ended."

But the President cautioned that Western Europe still is some distance from economic self-sufficiency.

"If we were to take away our assistance now, they would still be unable to pay for all the things they need to buy from us and from other countries," he said. "The result would be a sudden drop in living standards, weakened defenses, and a greater opportunity for the Communists to move in."

The chief executive, on his first visit this year to his home state, forecast that current federal studies on closing the door on the gap in exports and imports would benefit Europe extensively. He repeated earlier recommendations for greater imports into this country and increased investment of private American capital abroad.

He also took the occasion to plug again for his "point four" program of aid to underdeveloped areas abroad. He said it is needed "if we are to build a healthy world trade and investment."

He rejected complaints that the point four program, by helping underdeveloped areas produce more, would cut down American foreign sales.

On the contrary, he said, as under developed areas in Asia, Africa and Latin America grow in economic strength and prosperity, "they will increase the economic strength and prosperity of the whole world."

Truman, in a pointed reference to Russia, said that "one nation did not want to help world recovery."

"That nation," he said, "wished to prolong and intensify the misery of others (in the immediate post-war period), so that it could gain domination over them."

The Russian attitude, he said, made it necessary for this country "to work with other countries to build the combined strength necessary not only to withstand aggression, but also to achieve peace and human advancement."

"If we are to have that kind of peace, we must be willing to work hard and long for it," he said. "We must be willing to bear the temporary costs of defensive armaments as well as those of constructive economic development."

After his speech and lunch on the campus, the President returned by train to St. Louis for his annual reunion with World War I buddies of the 35th division.

Carbon Player Hurt In Game

Ted Norris, Carbon softball catcher, suffered a broken nose and leg when he collided with Paul Norris, third baseman of the Carbon team, as they both chased a pop fly in the Kilgore-Carbon softball game at Fireman's Park last night, before a large crowd.

Paul was knocked unconscious from the impact, but suffered no serious injury.

The accident occurred in the third inning of the game which was won by Kilgore, 9-3. A pop fly ball was lofted between third base and home plate, and both players made a run for the catch.

Sgt. Charles Brannon, who was umpiring behind the plate, said that it was evident that the two were going to collide, and the crowd began to scream. The players did not sense the danger, and collided while running at full speed.

Both players were knocked unconscious. Paul soon recovered, but it was evident that his leg was broken and the Hamner ambulance service was notified. The player was rushed to the Gorman hospital where it was discovered that he also had a broken nose.

Hospital officials said that the leg may be broken in more than one place. X-rays were to be taken Friday morning.

James Wright, manager of the Kilgore team, agreed to continue the game, and not count it as a league contest. It had originally been set as the City League opener. The first official night contest will be played Saturday night between Jack Muirhead's Olden team and Lamé Motor.

Tonight's action will pit Willy Willy's Rockettes against a girls' team from Fort Worth.

City League games will be played on Thursday and Friday nights. The Rockettes will play a game each week in addition to the regular loop contests.

The schedule for next week will include Kilgore against King Ford on Thursday, and Carbon against Olden on Friday.

3 Named In Indictments

Indictments were brought against James A. Houghton of Ranger, Roy D. Chandler, Odessa, and Donald Ray Ellis, Breckenridge, by the Grand Jury which recessed Wednesday.

James Houghton was indicted on 19 burglary counts, despite the fact that he is already under a five-year burglary sentence.

All of the men have been apprehended, Sheriff Williams said. Ellis and Chandler are also indicted on burglary counts.

Indictment papers had not been returned to District Clerk Roy Lane Friday morning on five charges: removal of mortgaged property, swindling by worthless check, cattle theft, burglary, and forgery and attempted passing.

Four Czechs Sentenced

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia, June 9 (UP)—Mrs. Milada Horokova, 49, a former member of Parliament, and three other Czechs were sentenced to death last night on charges they plotted to overthrow the Communist government at the direction of Western diplomats.

Mrs. Bradford Wins Poetry Society Award

Johnnie Barber Bradford, who is Mrs. E. E. Bradford of 310 Hill Crest, has been notified by the secretary of the Poetry Society of Texas that her entry won the May Portrait prize award at the meeting in Dallas last month.

The Portrait Prize contest is a monthly contest of the Texas Poetry Society and Mrs. Bradford's winning poem was a Petrarchan, or more commonly called Italian Sonnet, a form considered an advanced form of poetry writing.

The sonnet was titled, "Portrait of Miss Maude," and Mrs. Bradford says of the sonnet that it was the portrait of a real person, "Miss Maude was my Sunday School teacher when I was about nine years old."

Mrs. Bradford has been the recipient of a number of sonnet prizes as well as other prizes with her poetry and writes mostly in the sonnet pattern. She is the author of three volumes of published verse, the latest book being composed of 100 sonnets.

Her sonnets have proved popular over radio and can be heard at frequent intervals on WBAP's "Serenade in the Night," on Wednesday from 10:30 until 11:00 p. m. They also are heard on KIXL's "Sentimental Journey," an 11:00 a. m. program heard daily.

The work of Mrs. Bradford has been widely published in national poetry journals and other publications. She has two appearing in the current issue of "Stanza" and "The Westminister."

Child-Rapist Burns While Parents Mourn

HUNTSVILLE, June 9 (UP)—A convicted child rapist died in the electric chair today, claiming innocence in his last words.

When William R. Ray, 35, was asked if he had anything to say before his execution, he replied: "I'm dying for something I don't know anything about. I've been treated pretty tough, but I hope God will forgive the persons who persecuted me. May God have mercy on their souls."

Ray's mother and sister, who had joined the rapist in a condemnation of newspapermen who covered his trial, sat in an automobile 25 feet from the death chamber at the Texas State Penitentiary during the execution. Ray was raving the death sentence for raping a nine-year-old girl in Fort Worth two years ago.

EDITOR AND PUBLISHER FACE POSSIBLE JAIL TERM—A possible ten-day jail sentence for editor Clayton Fruechy, left, and publisher David Stern, center, of the New Orleans Item, was involved in this summons from the Louisiana Senate being served on them by the Assistant Sgt.-at-arms, Preston LaBlanc. A Senate will try the Item chief's June 8 on a contempt citation for an editorial calling certain legislators "trained seals."

County Still Lags In Bond Buying Drive

Sale of Series E savings bonds in Eastland County continued to grow.

But the $15,927.50 in bonds that has been sold in the first three weeks of the drive is far from the $108,700 quota accepted by the county.

There haven't been too many bonds sold in the state yet. A report from the treasury department shows $5,397,589.25 worth of bonds sold out of the quota of $24,088,000.

Gordon Brown, director of publicity for the current campaign said that next week's report, which will include a large volume of May sales not previously reported, is expected to show a tremendous increase.

First Negro Student At UT Finds Fellows Helpful; No Resentment

AUSTIN, June 9 (UP)—The happiest man at the University of Texas today was John Saunders Chase, the first Negro admitted to the traditionally all-white campus.

With a legal assist from the U. S. Supreme Court, Chase, 25, took an unsegregated seat in an architecture class yesterday.

Chase's face was expressionless as Hugh L. McMath, director of the School of Architecture, introduced him to his 14 classmates.

McMath said he believed each shook hands with Chase.

"I didn't attempt to make anything of it," McMath said. "I did what would be done for any new student. He's just one of the boys."

"I sat about half way back," Chase said. "As the rest of the class came in, they just filled in." If the white students resented his presence, they did not show it, Chase said.

"Everybody was very helpful," he remarked. "For instance, in the bookstore this morning, one fellow voluntarily helped me out."

Health will not eat lunch on the campus. He said he would have sufficient time to return to a lumber yard, where he works, to eat.

Another Negro, Horace Lincoln Heath, 50, of Waco, will enter the graduate school today.

Acceptance of the two students at the state university followed a U. S. Supreme Court ruling Monday ordering the school to admit Herman Marion Sweatt, a Houston Negro, to the state law school.

Sweatt had refused to attend the Texas State University for Negroes, which has its own law school.

Superfort May Have Shot Self Down Over Sea

YARMOUTH, England, June 9 (UP)—Reliable sources reported today that an American superfortress which plunged a flame into the North Sea Wednesday night shot itself down in a rare if not unique mishap.

Three crewmen died, four were rescued, and four still were missing in the downing of the superfort some 35 miles off Yarmouth.

The search for the missing men continued full force over hundreds of miles of the North Sea. Hope ran low that any of them would be saved.

The Air Force imposed a temporary ban on statements by the survivors. It described as "fantastic" a rumor which circulated in London that British anti-aircraft firing was going on at the time.

Police Today Search For Oxford Graduate Among Skidrow Hotels

CHICAGO, June 9 (UP)—The flophouses and saloons of Chicago's Skidrow were searched today for one Stanley William McKenna Walker, 50, an Oxford graduate and heir to half of an $8,000,000 English estate.

The missing persons detail hoped that somewhere among the down-and-outers who line the curbs and sleep off wine binges in the cheap hotels they would find Walker, son of a wealthy British shipbuilder.

All of his family except Walker and a brother were killed during the war in the Liverpool blitz. The brothers became the sole heirs.

Walker, once a British Army captain and manager of a branch of the Bank of England, came to this country some years ago and dereelicts was begun.

FBI Director Asks For More Money As Reds Go Underground

WASHINGTON, June 8 (UP)—Official FBI figures disclosed today that a two-year-old Communist program to infiltrate basic U. S. industries has met with a high degree of success.

The figures were supplied to a senate appropriations subcommittee at a closed session last Feb. 3 by FBI director J. Edgar Hoover. The transcript of his testimony was not released until last night.

Hoover said the Communists have a "potential fifth column" of 540,000 persons—54,174 actual members and some 500,000 sympathizers and fellow travellers.

Fire Damages Douglas Home

Firemen were called at 2 a. m. Friday morning to put out a fire at 220 South Halbury, the home of Mrs. Annie B. Douglas.

Fire Chief Hennessee said that the fire started in a clothes closet, and considerable damage was done to the room adjoining the closet before the fire was extinguished.

Damage other than to the closet, was principally to canvas and wall paper in the room, Hennessee stated.

Firemen stayed at the scene of the fire one hour.

Nelms Enlists In U. S. Air Force

Howard L. Nelms, 407 1/2 Avenue D, Cisco, has enlisted as a private in the United States Air Force for a period of three years, Sgt. Charles Brannon, Eastland recruiting officer has announced.

Nelms attended Cisco High School.

In that year, Henry Winston, Negro Communist leader, ordered an organizing drive into those fields. Winston said in an article published at the time by the Communist magazine, "Political Affairs," that only 18 and one half per cent of the party membership was employed in basic industry.

The FBI chief told the subcommittee he needs more agents next year to combat new tactics of the Communist party. For one thing, he said, it started to go underground to escape detection with the trial—and later the conviction—of the 11 Communist leaders.

He explained that no membership cards were issued by the Communists in 1949 and 1950 and the party has stopped keeping membership records. Meetings also are held to a minimum.

Recently, Hunt turned up fresh evidence that Walker worked in Chicago as a salesman. He wrote again yesterday to the Chicago police.

In his letter, Hunt said that Walker had a fondness for "cheap hotels and cheap whiskey" despite his education and background. Skidrow fitted the description and the search among the transient —Sen. Joseph McCarthy, R. Wis., accused Secretary of State Dean Acheson today of working on a "team of world strategy to create a Red China and a Red Poland."

He said unprecedented numbers of Communist agents are seeking vital American atomic, military and industrial secrets, in operations that are more extensive than those carried out by Nazis and Fascists during World War II.

But even more important, he said, is the fact that 48 per cent of the party's members are "in the basic industry of this country"—in New York, New Jersey, Ohio, Pennsylvania, California and Michigan.

"In this manner," he said "they would be able to sabotage essential industry in vital defense areas in the event of a national emergency."

While there are only 54,174 actual members in the party, Hoover said, its leaders "boast that for every member there are 10 others who— are ready, willing and able to do the party's work."

"In other words," he said, "there is a potential fifth column of 540,000 people dedicated to this philosophy."

Hoover's figures demonstrated a sharp increase—nearly 30 per cent—in the number of party members in basic industries since 1948.

He explained that no membership cards were issued by the Communists in 1949 and 1950 and the party has stopped keeping membership records. Meetings also are held to a minimum.

Palmer Is A Cop Who Loves Kids Plenty

—Lt. Frank Palmer is a cop who loves kids.

If the occasion demands, he'll lollypop 'em sick, but at the same time he likes to see them grow up to be big people. So with the cooperation of authorities in Arlington County, Virginia, and the American Automobile Association, our copper friend has devised a plan.

He looked at the national record. It wasn't good. In 1948, more than 500 children were killed when dumped off their bikes by cars. That same year there were 30,000 other accidents in which young folks were maimed in car-bike mishaps.

So Palmer and his helpers decided to teach the small fry of Arlington County something that might save a life or a limb.

Late in August they're going to have a bike rodeo for all comers. There will be movies showing how to—and how not to—ride a bicycle.

There will be an inspection of brakes, seats, lights, reflectors, tires, chains, lubrication, and a look at the wheels to see if they are in line.

"These things are as important in a bike as in an automobile," Palmer said. "Bad brakes, or handlebars that are on the bias can be as dangerous on a two-wheeler as on a four-wheeler."

"If the kids pass, we'll give them a sticker to paste on their fender. Later we will issue license tags which the young folks can tack onto the back of their bikes. Good psychology, too."

In case a boy or girl fails to pass the test, the county gives him or her 30 days to fix things up—so they can get well with Arlington County.

As an incentive, the county civic leaders put up $300 in prizes for safe bike riding.

In case your small one—certainly a potential victim of some big folk's carelessness if not his own—rides a bike, you might want to paste these rules of safety up on the bedroom wall:

Don't ride in street car track grooves.

Don't ride two on a bike. It's dangerous because the wheel is difficult to control.

Don't ride on the wrong side of the road. Keep to the right and stay close to the curb.

Don't dart into a traffic lane from between parked cars. Always look in both directions.

Don't coast downhill by zipping along, "no hands." It is too easy to lose your balance. Always grip the handlebars with both hands.

The Loves of Carmen

By SOPHIE KERR

Serialization of screenplay from a novel by Prosper Merimee Copyright, 1948, NEA SERVICE, INC.

THE column of cavalry rounded the corner of the narrow, ancient street, the horses' hoofs clapping noisily over the Spanish cobblestones. The day was hot and lazy. The sun beat down on the plumed helmets and the yellow tunics of the dragons in the column as they rode toward the great Sevillian square.

They rode easily, with a bored indifference. All excepting one, a young, fresh-faced and handsome fellow. His sleeve held a corporal's chevrons and he did his best to appear as professionally disinterested in the new and exciting sights of Seville as were his comrades, but it was impossible for him to hold his eyes in check. They darted from side to side along the narrow streets.

The column rode across the square toward the great gate of the military barracks. Even with the color and the clank and the hoof-clapping of the company, few citizens were out to watch. It was siesta time and the square was almost empty.

As the column crossed the square, the corporal had all he could do to keep from twisting in his saddle to view all sides of his new place of duty.

Once through the gate the column lined up abreast and dismounted at an order from the dark-faced sergeant. The sergeant walked directly to the corporal.

"Your name?"

The corporal saluted smartly.

"Don Jose Lizarrabengoa of Navarre, reporting for duty."

"The colonel will see you now. Follow me."

"You may have heard that our time is spent in the consumption of many bottles of wine, in gambling, and in making love to the girls from the cigar factory," the colonel told Don Jose deliberately.

"Yes, sir," said Don Jose, agreeing blindly.

THE orderly paid more attention to the conversation than to what he was doing and poured the glass too full, spilling wine upon the polished desk. By not so much as the flicker of an eye did the colonel appear to notice this, and the orderly, in quick panic, leaned over to mop it up with the end of his sash. The colonel continued talking to Don Jose.

"I say you may have heard these things and they are quite true." He turned slightly and with a vicious movement slapped the orderly across the face with the back of his hand. The suddenness and the sound of the blow made Don Jose's eyes blink. The colonel said, "Get out." The orderly almost ran out of the room, eyes watering. Don Jose stood still, belying the fact that anything untoward had happened. The colonel sat down comfortably in his desk chair.

THE colonel was a sensuous, handsome man in his early forties, with perceptive, heavy-lidded eyes. He was standing before a desk bare of papers and he observed the corporal with cool detachment as the young soldier stumbled nervously to attention before him.

"Don Jose Lizarrabengoa of Navarre reporting for duty, sir."

"It is my duty and my pleasure, Don Jose," the colonel said, taking a paper from the top drawer and glancing at it as though to verify what he had to say, "to welcome you to our regiment."

"Thank you, sir."

The colonel gave the younger man a long, appraising look. When he spoke again his tones were deliberate. "No doubt you have heard that life is pleasant in this regiment; that it is a fashionable catch-all for young men of good family with no talents to speak of. You may have heard that we are called the gay policemen, because we do little more than stand guard here and there a few hours a day and keep the peace, such as it is, in Seville."

The colonel paused as an orderly came into the room with a bottle of wine and a glass on a tray. As the orderly put the tray down and started to uncork the bottle, he continued, "The rest of the time—you may have heard—"

"Oh no, sir," the corporal murmured.

The colonel ignored the interruption. "—is spent in the consumption of many bottles of wine, in gambling, and in making love to the girls from the cigar factory. There are approximately 200 of these girls. The factory is next door to our barracks." He nodded his head toward the window. "A great blessing and a convenience for the dragons."

The orderly started to fill the glass of wine.

WHEN Don Jose walked along down the narrow street on the other side of the square, the city was beginning to wake from its siesta, but there were still few people in sight.

It was an extremely picturesque street. On one side there were buildings, some three, some four stories high. On the other side was a stone embankment, below which ran the trickle of a stream. It was a city stream, just as the people were city people; flowing weakly downhill, muddied and purposeless. In no way did it remind the country boy of the clear, strong rapids of Navarre that threw themselves from mountain tops into rich valleys. Nor were the people like the direct clear-eyed robust people of his home.

The somewhat ramshackle buildings had pillars which upheld balconies, and the general effect was poor but spacious. There was none of the narrow confinement that characterized most of the streets in Seville.

Don Jose strolled slowly. He pulled out his watch, a large gold object at the end of a heavy chain, and looked at it casually. He swung it for a moment, idly, looking around him. Then he returned it absently to his pocket. One or two men, a dog, a woman carrying a duck, and two ragged urchins trotting along the stone embankment were all that seemed to be moving in Seville so far that afternoon.

As he reached the foot of the street, Don Jose stopped and leaned on a post to get his bearings, or rather to decide whether he should walk to the right, to the left, or to continue straight ahead. Suddenly an orange peed landed with blung force on the pavement at his feet. He looked up.

About two feet above his head he saw a pretty foot encased in a red shoe. They were red morocco shoes fastened with flame-colored ribbons, covering white silk stockings with more than one hole in them. Above the legs he saw a full short red skirt, then a blouse, then the head of a wild, tousled hoyden, as beautiful as sin. She had thrown her shawl back to show her shoulders, and a rose was thrust into the low-cut bosom of her blouse.

In his own country, had Don Jose seen a woman dressed like that, he would have crossed himself.

Insurance is a Life-Time Affair—

.....and is so considered by those who figure safety as a business and protection as an investment. The fact that a person has carried insurance many years and never had a claim does not mean that he lost his money premiums. Rather has he gained them because he invested in safety, got protection and lost none of his property. If we buy insurance for what it really is a large part of our financial problems will solve themselves.

Oklahoma Farm Wife Claims To Have Had 38 Children In 38 Years

ATWOOD, Okla., June (U.P.) —Thirty-eight children in 38 years that's the motherhood record claimed by Mrs. George E. Berry, an Oklahoma farmwife.

Like the woman in the nursery rhyme shoe who had so many children she didn't know what to do, Mrs. Berry, 66, has had so many she has a hard time keeping count of them. The Hughes county mother, who lives half a mile West of here says that she gave birth to the following:

One set of quintuplets, one set of quadruplets, three sets of triplets, five sets of twins and 10 children born singly. All 38—28 boys and 10 girls—were by first husband, John Womack, who died in 1939. The children were born in or near Dallas.

Only 11 are still living. Many died at birth or in early childhood. There are few records to support her claim. However, the Kiwanis club of Dallas honored her with a gold medal in 1940 as the most prolific mother in that city.

The club, with Judge Joe Hill acting as president, checked with neighbors and credited her with 37 children, most of them born in the family home. She has since recalled an additional son, Floyd, born in 1938.

The plump farmwife says she is one of 20 children herself. Aside from the Kiwanis club medal, she has never won recognition for being a many-times mother. In 1938 she applied to Gov. James A. Allred for a "mother's pension" but didn't get it.

"I always expected to get a medal from the government," she said. "But I guess they just forgot."
