Porter Woods Makes Statement Of Candidacy

Porter O. Woods makes the following statement in behalf of his candidacy for Constable of Precinct No. 1.

I am now 48 years of age, and was born in this Justice Precinct. My father and grandfather moved to Eastland County in 1888. At the death of our beloved "Dug" Barton I held a deputyship under him, and when he passed on the Commissioners Court gave me the appointment to serve out his unexpired term.

This is my first time to ask for a public office, and therefore will appreciate your vote and influence in my behalf.

If you should favor me with your votes in the primary election and I am elected, I will endeavor to discharge the duties of the office with fairness to all.

Respectfully,
Porter O. Woods.

Congress Asked In Speech To Remove Limits On Army Size "As May Need To Exceed Limits"

WASHINGTON, July 19 (UP)—President Truman today authorized mobilization of National Guard and Reserve units and asked Congress to remove its statutory limits on the size of the Armed forces.

But it still was not clear how many will be called.

A top Defense spokesman said some National Guard units will be called up very soon, possibly tomorrow. He said present plans are to call the Guard and the organized Reserve in "selected units" as needed. National Guards will not be called by complete divisions.

The spokesman said that for security reasons all figures on the number of men to be mobilized will be kept secret, except for those disclosed in draft calls.

The President said he has empowered Defense Secretary Louis Johnson to mobilize as many National Guardsmen, Reservists and draftees as necessary—within the existing statutory limits.

600 men could be called up immediately. The president did not say, however, that he wanted the full expansion to statutory strength right now. The best indication was that less than 500,000 additional men would be called soon.

The president today sent Congress a tough preparedness program calling for $10,000,000,000 in new military spending, heavier taxes, "substantially" bigger armed forces and curbs on output of civilian products.

He said that these are needed

Under that directive, up to 550,000 men could be called up immediately. The president did not say, however, that he wanted the full expansion to statutory strength right now. The best indication was that less than 500,000 additional men would be called soon.

Truman grimly warned that further Communist aggression in the world "might well strain to the breaking point the fabric of world peace"—in other words, bring on World War III.

He revealed in a 6000-word message that he has authorized Defense Secretary Louis Johnson to call up as many National Guard and organized reserve units as may be needed.

And he asked Congress to remove the present 2,005,000-man limit on the strength of the armed forces because "we may need to exceed these limits."

Truman urged Congress to enact promptly legislation authorizing the government to enforce priorities and allocate materials; limit the use of materials for non-essential purposes; prevent inventory hoarding; requisition supplies and materials needed for the national defense; restrict consumer credit; and curb credit used for commodity speculation.

Truman did not specify where he thought civil production would have to be checked. But the allocation and limitation powers he sought are devices which could be used, for instance, to require

House Says Reed Is Friend Of WT

FORT WORTH, July 18—"A proven friend of West Texas."

This was the tribute paid by Boyce House of Fort Worth, formerly of Ranger and Eastland, to his friend, W. O. Reed of Dallas County, candidate for Lieutenant Governor, in a speech here.

House, who polled 446,000 votes for Lieutenant Governor four years ago, cited from Reed's record of 18 years' service in the legislature.

"As chairman of the House Appropriations Committee, Reed aided the State-supported colleges of West Texas in a greatly needed building expansion program.

"While speaker, he twice cast the decisive vote to submit to the people the Constitutional amendment for redistricting to give growing West Texas its rightful increased representation in the legislature.

"W. O. Reed is for good schools, for combatting juvenile delinquency through our youth development program, for adequate provision for our senior citizens, for saving our soil and conserving our water—a problem of vital importance to West Texas."

Church Of God State Camp Meet Near-Eastland

The annual state camp meeting of the Church of God began Monday night and will continue through Sunday, July 23.

The camp is being held on the property owned by the Church of God of Texas, west of Eastland. It is known to many persons here as the Warner Memorial University property.

Eight services are held daily. Three general services, at 10:30 a. m., 2:30 p. m. and 8 p. m.

People of the community are welcome to attend and share in the fellowship.

Those in attendance are from many sections of the state, and some are from other states. One family is here from California.

Rev. Robert E. Bowden of Sweetwater made this announcement. He was formerly pastor here. He left here in 1937.

Bait digs itself for fishermen who sprinkle a little of a new product on the ground where anglerworms abound; they crawl out by themselves.

The above is a panoramic view of what will be taking place in Ranger for the next four days. Mayor Price Crawley's hand should get tired after he's shaken hands welcoming all the cowboys and cowgirls to the big event. In the above he is welcoming to two local riders into town. Furnishing as many thrills as any other two events is the bulldogging. There's some top hands here for this event. And Steiner's rodeo stuff is wild and mean. The clown is going to have his hands full getting the bulls away and taking care of himself. No job for sissies—b u t something the girls like awful well—is barrel racing. To be a winner in this event you've got to have a fast and nimble horse. And then you got to be able to stay on that kind of horse.

One of the last night's extra events will be the twirling of aces from the twirling school being held here. This should draw a large group of Ranger and Eastland people, and from towns further away. The teacher at the school is rated one of the better twirlers in the state. The rodeo was kicked off at noon today with a joint meeting of Rotarians, Lions and Jaycees. Ted Gouddy's Texo Hired hands will play for three American Legion dances here, tonight, Thursday and Friday.

Probably the biggest attraction of the parade outside of the music will be the horses and horsemanship displayed. Also due to attract a lot of interest is the big truck that carries Levi's Rodeo puppet show. The truck is worth seeing—and according to reports, the puppet show is a big show in itself.

THE STORY: Don Jose, young officer in a fashionable Spanish regiment, falls victim to the charms of the bewitching gypsy, Carmen. He kills his commanding officer in a sword-fight over her and is forced to flee to a mountain hide-out where he joins the band of gypsy rogues who are Carmen's associates. His last illusion is shattered when he learns that Garcia, the leader, is Carmen's husband. During a shooting fray with uniformed constabulary, Carmen suggests to Jose that he put a bullet in Garcia's back. Jose, shocked, refuses; but Garcia has no compunctions about later shooting a wounded constable (Remondado) when he is asked to travel under the name of a deserter. Jose, however, is a gypsy foot. Edgy, he insults Garcia, calling him coward.

XX
The two men faced each other, half crouching. They reached simultaneously for the knives in their belts. Pablo watched, anxiously. Dancaire did not even glance up from his solitude. He turned a card absently, but his voice was sharp with reminder. "Has it slipped your mind that we have lost one man today, Garcia?"

Garcia looked blank for a moment then began to laugh. The laughter was boisterous but relieved, too. "Why so we did, so we did." He replaced his knife in his belt, flexing his knife hand to ease the tensed muscles. "It appears I must let this puppy live until we can replace him with a man."
Jose ran toward him, his knife held high.
Garcia spread his arms in a wide gesture, showing that he was unarmed. His tone was mocking and amused. "Ah-ah—I am unarmed, caballero, as you can see. An honorable gentleman like yourself doesn't attack an un-

AT the Corral de la Plaza in Cordova, the matadors, picadors, and hangers-on practiced in sort of an exercise pen off the main arena. They rehearsed the horses. Some jumped back and forth over low barriers, concentrating on their foot work, others practiced with the cape. Enthusiastic fans lounged around.
A slim-hipped young Spaniard worked alone with the cape, twisting and turning with brilliantly executed steps, furling and unfurling his billowing cape. He was elaborately and expensively dressed. He worked near the foot of a flight of steps leading down from the arena grandstand to the corral, and he was watched by an admiring group of hangers-on. Executing one final, intricate pattern, he whirled and stopped, throwing the cape to his helper, and resting for a moment, smiled his acceptance of the admiring shouts of the others.
"You are in good form today, Lucas!"
The matador nodded. "I am in good form every day, Carlitos."
"No ordinary bull will be able to withstand you today, Lucas," another man said.
"Nor any ordinary woman!" Carmen intervened clearly, her voice coming from the steps above them. Lucas turned to look up. The gypsy walked slowly down the steps toward him, smiling in scornful challenge. "But then, I am not an ordinary woman."

Lucas moved closer, as bold as a cat as Carmen herself. Carmen sat down, her movements deliberately slow and provocative. She was just above the matador's head. As she looked down at him it was exactly as she had looked down on Don Jose, the young, clear-eyed soldier newly come to the great city from Navarre.
But Lucas was no boy. The matador was not a shy young corporal.
Carmen leaned over, smiling down at him with an intimate little smile. "You seem to me like a man who would enjoy having his fortune told."
His eyes appraised her intently. "And you seem to me like a girl who would be very skillful at it."
"I have a little place on the edge of town. It is a very nice place for fortune telling."
"And I have a little place in the middle of town that is a better place for fortune telling."
Carmen nodded and held out her arms to be helped down.
NIGHT had fallen on the card game at the ruined house. Garcia was growing more and more angry. "She should have been here a long time ago."
Pablo said, "Maybe she never went into town at all. Maybe that is why the Navarro lied and said he was sick."
Garcia considered that and Pablo continued with, "Maybe they had it planned that way all the time."
Garcia rose frowning.
Dancaire said, "That isn't true, Garcia."
But Garcia started off and as the others rose to follow him, he said, "You two remain here for another hour. If she comes, we will have lost nothing. If she is

Enemy Got Tee Shirt How In Chonan Battle?

By Gene Symonds
United Press Staff Correspondent
ADVANCE U. S. HEADQUARTERS IN KOREA, July 19 (UP)—This is about Pear Jung Pal—the enemy.

A few days ago Pear was a cocky young Lieutenant in the North Korean Army who was hopped up with the idea of driving "American Imperialists" from Korean soil.

Today he is a servile prisoner-of-war who petulantly disobeys who he is ordered but who agitates and causes trouble among his fellow prisoners.

A raw-boned young man of 25, Pear would be working in his family's rice field if there wasn't a war.

He wears a white American tee-shirt, a torn coat and trousers and rubber sandals.

He shaved recently but there are a few hairs, indicating he was she diverted herself, amused her particularly.

THE sun was low in the sky when Garcia arrived at the ruined door which marked the meeting place they had set and looked through an archway. "She's not here yet." He squinted at the sun, computing the time of day. "Another hour until sunset. Time for a game of cards before they come."
Pablo tethered the horses out of sight of the road. "Too bad the Navarro won't be here for the fun," he said and then, deliberately trying to make trouble, continued, "Does anyone know why he refused to obey Garcia's orders and come with us?"

Dancaire answered quickly and sharply, "He said he was sick and I believe him."
They sat down around a dirty pack of cards.
"He's sick, all right," Garcia said. "He's sick because Carmen is doing a little work for a change. Gypsy women do their part!"
Then he turned to Dancaire, who was not a gypsy, and asked, "Don't your women contribute anything?"
Dancaire smiled wryly. "Our women do not ordinarily," he said, "pick up men and lure them into ambush to be robbed by their husbands, Garcia." He shuffled the cards deftly. "Don Jose is what he is. He is not a gypsy. He cannot think the way a gypsy does."

Garcia said, "You are not a gypsy and you think the way a gypsy does."
"I don't think at all. That is my protection. I observe and am amused. The Navarro is not an observer. He feels deeply and strongly, and what he is going through is killing him."
Garcia started his rumbling laugh. "Don't worry. I won't let him die slowly of love, Dancaire."
Pablo said, "With the bull fights in Cordova this week, Carmen should have some very good luck." He smacked his lips in anticipation. "When the bull fights are in town, the place is always crowded with nice fat pockets to pick."

Dancaire started to deal the cards.

playing games with me, it only takes one of us to handle her." He untethered his horse, mounted and galloped off.
Dancaire looked at Pablo with almost clinical curiosity. "Why do you hate the Navarro so, Pablo? Could it be because Carmen—"
"Shut up."
Dancaire chuckled softly. "Well, now, you too, eh, Pablo?"
Pablo turned away.
AT the mountain camp, Don Jose sat alone by the fire. A fowl roasted on the spit and he turned it awkwardly with a stick. He felt lonely and bitter.
He looked up at the sound of a horse's feet and nose slowly as Carmen came in the light of the fire and dismounted.
Carmen was surprised to find him alone. She was in a sweet and mellow mood. "Joseita, you did not go with the others?"
He looked imploringly into her eyes. "You didn't take anyone to them for them to trap?"
She unsaddled the horse, shaking her head and smiling to herself as though something coming something funny. "No, I didn't," she said.
She went to the fire and flipped the roast fowl to the ashes, with-in reach of her hand. She did not look at Jose but she felt his brooding stare. "Don't you want some supper? Aren't you hungry?" she asked.
"No."
She reached for the scorched bird gingerly. She tore at it from it, blowing on her fingers. "I'm always hungry." She sat on a flat rock near the fire, tentatively touching the hot fowl with the tip of her tongue, picking up at him over the edge of it. "You never are."
Jose spoke with all the despair of a lost soul. "What is the matter with me, Carmen? Why don't I go away from here? It is driving me mad to be near you, knowing you are married to another man."
Carmen took a bite of the fowl. She answered him absently. "I wouldn't be married to another man if you had used your head yesterday." She licked her fingers.
"Would I?"

each regiment."
"Why did you fight in civilian clothing?"
"My commander ordered it."
"Are you glad to be out of the fight?"
The interpreter said Pear didn't want to answer.
"Ask him where he got the Tee-shirt," I told the interpreter.
"He got it from Chonan," the interpreter said.
On the bottom of the now-filthy tee-shirt were several American G. I. laundry marks.
It was on the Chonan front that Gen. Douglas MacArthur reported captured Americans had been bound and shot by the North Koreans.

First Cavalry Division Bounces Over Dusty Roads To Aid Buddies

By Murray Moler
United Press Staff Correspondent
POHANG-DONG, Korea, July 19 (UP)—First Cavalry division troops bounced over rutted, dusty roads on their way to the fighting front today after the first allied amphibious landing of the Korea war.

The men held their rifles and machine-guns at the ready. Red guerrillas and snipers were known to be in the wooded hills through which the Americans fanned out from their east coast beachhead.

The first cavalry divisions—actually a motorized infantry division—scrambled ashore from landing craft here yesterday, some 50 miles south of the main enemy lines.

Planes and ships of the U. S. Seventh Fleet and the British Fleet guarded the operation.

As of this afternoon, none of the First Cavalry units had exchanged fire with the Korean Reds. Combat teams already in the area said strong forces seldom are molested by the guerrillas.

The division is heading into the thick of the fighting and the men are eager to get there and get the job done. The First Cavalry liberated Manila and was the first unit to enter Tokyo in World War II.

The American command decided to put the division at Pohang-Dong, site of a South Korean naval base, because the main American base supply port of Pusan, 60 miles farther South, already is jammed with men and supplies.

Rear Admiral J. H. Doyle, a veteran island-hopper in World War II and commander of the operation was a "superhuman" being the vessels needed for the operation was a "superhuman task."

"Even under the best of conditions in the last war, planning an operation of this magnitude would take at least three months," he said.

"This time, under Korean emergency conditions, it was done with in a few days by a staff working day and night."

Some of the landing ships carrying vehicles and men were operated by Japanese skippers who had been running them as part of the occupation.

Doyle said the 1,000-mile trip from Japanese bases to Korea took the invasion fleet through waters where "submarines were all around us." He indicated the submarines were detected by sonar. None actually was seen.

The submarines presumably Russian, Doyle said he would take "good" counter-measures if any attacked, but none did.

The armada, comprising the flagship Mount McKinley, four large transports and a number of smaller vessels, arrived off the beaches at dawn. A lighthouse twinkled its warning at the south entrance to the bay.

An advance party came out to the flagship in a small Korean harbor vessel. Two small children of the native crewmen were asleep on top of the wheelhouse.

Then the signal was given for the landing to start. Small boats laden with troops and equipment begin hitting the beach in waves.

On one of the two beachheads set up, cumbersome landing ship tanks steamed toward a shallow beach and grounded well out.

Vehicles and troops splashed ashore. The other landing spot was near the village docks and this facilitated the unloading.

The first troops ashore sped quickly inland on patrol. They linked up with a regimental combat team from another division that had been working along the coast for several days in anticipation of the landing.

Included among those landed were 12 nurses and a group of army doctors prepared to set up a full-fledged hospital.

Few troops relished the task ahead. But most agreed that there was a job to do and the quicker it could be done, the better.

Redskins Told Proper Way To Eat, Tip, Smoke

By Terman W. Nichols
United Press Staff Correspondent
WASHINGTON (UP)—No football squad ever went off to training camp better equipped with know-how on how to act like little gents than the current pro Washington Redskins.

They took off by plane for Los Angeles over the week-end. As they boarded, each was handed a booklet telling him everything from how to finger a salad fork to tip a waiter, and to dump the leavings of his cigaret in a tray instead of on the rug.

The foreword of the instructions said:

"Congratulations—you are in major league football. You will be traveling like a champion, living like a champion. Great players have worn the burgundy and gold. Do as the men before you have done: Make it an honor and a privilege to be a Redskin!"

The "instructions" promised "the warmest welcome ever given any professional athletic team" on the return in September to Washington.

"The fans in the nation's capital are first in war, first in peace and—first in loyalty."

There were several pertinent paragraphs about the conduct of the players when they dig in for a long residence at Occidental College dormitories.

The Los Angeles Times has generously agreed to provide daily newspapers for the boys during their stay at Occidental. But the Redskin management warned the players to be careful of the disposal of same.

Cartoon by Vaughn Shoemaker of the Chicago Daily News. U. S. Treasury Department

DON'T CRACK IT MORE!

"It's all right to save your press notices," the bulletin said, "but don't throw the rest of the paper around on the lawns and the floor."

There were rules about smoking too, and the ball club was concerned about what might happen if one of the boys get careless. Like:

"Ashtrays are plentiful in your rooms. Be sure to use them—not the floor."

Remember, it's somebody's wife who has to clean up."

The men were given careful instructions about how to handle the tip business. For example, on the day by day breakdown on a scheduled trip from Los Angeles to San Francisco and return, the program for Sunday, Aug. 20, will be as follows:

"9:30 a. m. (PDT). Morning call. Early risers may go to hotel restaurant and order juice, toast and coffee and sign check. Be sure to add 25 cents to check for tip."

During the whole trip, the club pays all tips for normal service to waiters; also to porters, bellhops, and baggage men.

When the athletes arrive at home base in Washington they will eat and sleep on the house until Sept. 17. After that, when the club is home, the players are on their own. Good luck, Redskins.

Hoarding, Price Increases Irks Senators; They Plan Committee

By United Press
Price increases and reports of scattered hoarding prompted plans today for a senate investigation.

Meanwhile, prices of many commodities continued to rise. Butter for November delivery on the Chicago mercantile exchange rose to 58 cents a pound, a high for the new crop year.

But the rise in grain prices on the Chicago board of trade came to a sudden, if temporary, halt. Traders said the announcement that the Senate banking committee will investigate price increases had something to do with it.

Another factor, they said, was the stiffened resistance in Korea and indications that the tide of war might be turning.

Soybeans, which had led corn, wheat and other grains upward, dropped 6 cents a bushel today, but later began moving upward again.

Hog prices, which have been rising more or less steadily as a result of increased consumer demand for pork, opened 50 cents to $1 lower at major midwestern markets today.

Farmers, hoping to cash in on the booming market, had increased their shipment of hogs to market and price dropped as a result.

At Washington, government officials said dealers' shelves are well stocked with items that were scarce in World War II, and that only scare-buying and hoarding could create serious shortages. They said there is plenty of meat, sugar, soap, coffee, automobiles, tires, electrical appliances and clothing.

But apparently many consumers were paying little heed to government warnings against hoarding. One New York hosiery firm reported that its customers "have gone completely haywire" despite the fact there is "plenty of hosiery available."

Many large nylon hosiery manufacturers said they have adopted an allocation system to protect regular customers. Berkshire Knitting Mills, Wayne Knitting Mills, Van Raalte and Interstate Hosiery Mills all announced allocation systems for "equitable distribution."

Reports of sugar hoarding prompted industry leaders to warn that "hysterical buying" could create temporary shortages, despite the fact the world sugar crop is the greatest in history. I. H. Kempner, Jr., president of Imperial Sugar Co. at Sugar Land, Tex., said, "there is no reason to fear a sugar shortage at any time in the foreseeable future."

On the New York sugar market, sugar for future delivery had risen substantially, but traders said that in view of the amount of hoarding it was surprising the price had not risen more.

McDonald Gives Farm, Plan Views

Veteran Commissioner of Agriculture, J. E. McDonald, has definite views on a national farm program.

He believes in a two-price system for marketing agricultural products—a full parity price for that portion allotted for consumption in the United States, this allotment to be made in units such as bales, bushels or pounds and not in acres—and the farmer left free to produce in excess of American needs for sale in foreign markets at world market prices.

McDonald believes that each commodity should finance its own program.

Gen. John Stark, who died in New Hampshire in 1822, was the last surviving American general of the Revolutionary War. Unscathed by years of Indian warfare and a dozen battles of the Revolution, he lived to be 93.

"LIKE ONE OF THE FAMILY"

The Bundys believe in good old-fashioned family life, depend greatly on their telephone to keep them in touch with their many relatives in Topeka.

As Mrs. Bundy puts it: "We'd be lost without our telephone. It's like one of the family. And best of all—when we kept a five-day record of all our calls recently, we found that we're paying only about 2¢ for each call made and received!"

Yes, Mrs. Bundy, a real bargain—and one that increases in value year after year as more telephones are added and improvements are made. Southwestern Bell Telephone Company.

One of the many calls listed in our five-day record was from my MOTHER-IN-LAW. She wondered what our little Larry would like for his birthday. He'll be five next week.

Called AUNT CLARA. Out-of-town friends dropped in, wanted to say hello to Mother and Dad. Thought they might be at Aunt Clara's. They were!

GRANDMA WELLS called, invited us to dinner. She has some fresh vegetables for us, too—saves about $4 on the grocery bill. Grandma lives alone, three miles from our house, but she's just seconds away by telephone.

What else gives so much for so little?

To the Voters of the 107th Representative District:

We are addressing you this brief note about a very important matter—the 107th Representative District, comprising Eastland and Callahan Counties.

The office of Representative, as you doubtless know, is one of the lowest paid, but one of the most important in our State. The kind of state government we will have for the next two years will be determined, in a large measure, by the kind and character of men we elect to the Legislature on July 22nd.

The Legislature runs Texas. It not only makes our laws, but levies our taxes and spends the money. The Texas Legislature has grown until it is now a billion dollar institution.

We are convinced that Mr. L. R. Pearson is the best qualified man for this important job. He served us ably in the 49th and 50th sessions. He is sound and experienced. He knows state government. He does not favor spending the State into hopeless debt or high taxes. Whatever Pearson does, he does well. We will need his ability and good judgment in the 52nd Legislature which convenes next January.

We believe his election is in the interest of good government.

Over-Confidence Now Enemy ONE AMERICAN SAYS IT'S EVEN MONEY THAT U.S. TROOPS WILL BE DRIVEN OUT OF KOREA

By Harry Ferguson United Press Foreign News Editor

Americans have two more enemies facing them today—over-optimism and over-confidence.

On the surface all the news from Korea seems good. The Communists have come to a halt in the Taegon sector. Two more U. S. divisions have landed in Korea and one of them—the First Cavalry—made an amphibious landing through waters apparently swarming with submarines. The United States Air Force is hammering rear lines and communications. A typhoon that threatened to handicap the Americans just when they were beginning to build up their strength has swerved away from Korea.

In the face of all these favorable factors it would only be natural for all of us to feel a surge of confidence and optimism. That's fine so long as we don't assume that the war is about over and that the United States can relax.

A prominent American who knows all about war cast a cool, logical eye over the Korean situation no later than yesterday and arrived at this conclusion:

Right now it is an even money bet that the Americans will be driven out of Korea. If that happens, we will have to assemble forces in Japan and perform the most difficult of all military operations—an amphibious landing on a hostile shore.

We are not the only ones having troubles. The Korean Communists have theirs, too, and the rapidity with which they solve them will mean the difference between defeat and victory for the United Nations. Here are the things that have slowed down the Communist drive:

1. The U. S. Air Force has done a good job of knocking out river bridges and the Reds must repair them before they can get their tanks up to the battle line.

2. A modern army is impotent without gasoline and oil and the Communists must bring their fuel down from depots above the 38th parallel.

3. The North Koreans have swept 90 miles in a little more than three weeks. Units have gone to be regrouped. Men who have gone too long without sleep have to be pulled out of the front lines and rested.

4. The Communists may be considering a change in strategy and tactics in view of the arrival of American reinforcements.

All those problems can and probably will be solved. And when they are, the hard facts in Korea still indicate a long tough fight.

The Communists have 150,000 tough troops in action. We have between 30,000 and 40,000.

The Russian-made Communist tanks can still out shoot and out race the American tanks.

There are plenty more weapons and plenty more expert advisers in the same place where the Korean Communists got the ones they now have—Russia.

No wonder Gen. Douglas MacArthur has sent this message to President Syngman Rhee of South Korea: "The way may be long and hard."

American F-80 Jets Destroy At Least 18 Commie Planes Today

By Charles Corddry
United Press Staff Correspondent
AN AMERICAN AIR BASE, Japan, July 19 (UP)—American F-80 jet shooting Star fighters destroyed at least 18 Communist planes in Korea today. Three of them in a dogfight over the Taejon front.
The other 15 were destroyed on an enemy airstrip in the first F-80 raid north of the 38th parallel border between North and South Korea.
It was the U. S. Air Force's biggest one-day bag in Korea and brought the total of Communist planes destroyed since the outbreak of the war to 46.
The American airmen also claimed eight more enemy planes probably destroyed in the two operations. One American plane was lost, presumably to ground fire, in the dogfight over Taejon. The biggest total—15 "kills" and seven "probables"—was claimed by seven planes led by Lt. Col. William T. Samways, 32, of Pasadena, Calif., a group commander.

Samways said his force swooped on the 22 aircraft poorly camouflaged on an airstrip near the town of Pyongyang, of the same name but not to be confused with the capital of North Korea.
Samways got the first plane, a twin-engine type, possibly a light bomber. The others all were fighters.
"We all looked over the field afterward and counted 15 planes burning," he said. "I believe we hit all of them. The official claim is 15 destroyed and seven prob-ables."

Officers at Fifth Air Force headquarters were in high glee, not only because of the large number of planes destroyed, but because the mission demonstrated the ability of Shooting Stars to make long-distance strikes.
The planes made the 800-mile round-trip in two hours and 25 minutes, including 15 minutes spent strafing the airstrip.
Another flight of four F-80s caught four Soviet-built Yak fighters strafing and bombing American positions around Taejon at the Western end of the Korean front.
The four U. S. planes swooped down on the Red aircraft and blasted them from the skies in rapid succession during a dogfight that ranged from 10,000 feet to almost ground level.
One of the American planes was lost, apparently to ground fire. The pilot's name was withheld.
The jet fighters were operating almost as usual despite threatening weather. The weather man reported that one of two typhoons moving through the Korean straits seemed to have subsided, but the other still was advancing and high winds were expected tonight.
First reports said the fighters

Texas Senator Favors Use Of Atom If-When

WASHINGTON, July 19 (UP)—Texas Senator Lyndon B. Johnson believes this country will use the Atomic bomb "if and when" and describes the Korean war as "the first battle of a greater struggle" between Communism and the Western world.
The Junior Texas Senator, a member of the Armed Services Committee, expressed his views in a speech transcribed for delivery last night over the Texas State Network.
He called for all-out military and industrial mobilization to win the fight for "unconditional peace."
He said he expected this country to "use the Atomic bomb—if and when it can be used to stem the tide of aggression."

"This nation is face to face with the most critical hour we have yet encountered in the 20th century," he said. "There is no easy way out—the Korean struggle may last one year—or several years."
He said we must win in Korea, although our military position there is "in grave and immediate peril" and "our troops could be driven into the sea," because Korea is only the first battle of a "greater struggle."
"We must accept this fact and understand what it means," he said. "If we fail to understand—if we fail to realize that this is no longer merely a game of global chess—then we may fail to do enough, soon enough, to save freedom and the free world of the West."
He said United States participation in the Korean war is the latest development in an American foreign policy of five years' standing in which this country has matched every Russian challenge today damaged two trucks, four other vehicles, a railroad car, buildings and a railway yard. Yesterday they damaged six tanks, 45 trucks, five bridges, two railroad tunnels and assorted other targets.

THE AMERICAN WAY

Time to Shift the Spotlight against freedom. Earlier skirmishes in this struggle, he said, occurred in Greece, Turkey, Italy and Berlin.

He said this policy of fighting "fire with fire" worked with "amazing success" up until now. To make sure the Korean war becomes "a graveyard for aggression—not a slaughterhouse for democracy," he said, the United States should immediately mobilize for all-out war.
He added that he believes reserves and National Guardsmen will be called back into federal service "to a limited extent, at least—in the very near future."
But, beyond this, he advocated a "minimum program" including increased manpower for the armed services, immediate steps to "mobilize industry," standby economic controls, all-out aircraft production, readying of all available combat and cargo ships, and reactivation of government-owned war production plants.

Beach Styles Feature Matched Gear

NEW YORK—(NEA)—Colorful beach accessories which possess practicality set off this season's bathing suits.

Pretty shoulders will be wrapped in a terry fringe stole (right) this summer, to keep off sudden chill breezes or an unwelcome sun at the beach. Lined in rubber, it sports twin outside pockets, large enough to hold odds and ends of suntan oil and make-up. White is used in combination with gay colors to harmonize with any suit.

The terry beach bag which teams up with this stole is equipped with a removable rubber lining to make laundering of the bag simple.

A rubber cap which resembles the actual fabric is paired with another beach bag (left) in an all-over geometric diamond pattern. In bright color combinations, the bag boasts a practical rubber lining and three outside pockets for most wanted beach essentials.

the automobile and television industries to shift any amount of their output to military items.

He did not ask for price control or rationing, but warned that "I shall not hesitate" to do so if a sharp rise in prices should make it necessary.

Truman did not spell out in detail his recommendations for economic controls. He is expected to fill in the details in proposed legislation that will be sent to Congress shortly.

But he made it abundantly clear that business and civilian-life-as-usual again is a thing of the past; that the nation now must put itself on a partial war footing.

Truman also made it plain that this situation will prevail for a long time, saying there will be higher defense spending "for a number of years."

Even the whopping $10,000,000,000 in a new defense spending—which comes on top of a $13,000,000,000 defense budget—will not be all. Truman notified Congress he will ask for more money for foreign military aid "as soon as it is possible to determine what each nation will need to do" for the common defense against Communism.

Some informed quarters said this new foreign aid may add up to about another $5,000,000,000.

"The attack upon the Republic of Korea makes it plain beyond all doubt that the international Communist movement is prepared to use armed invasion to conquer independent nations," Truman said. "We must therefore recognize the possibility that armed aggression may take place in other areas."

Truman said he would not attempt to predict the course of events.

"But I am sure," he said, "that those who have it in their power to unleash or withhold acts of armed aggression must realize that new recourse to aggression in the world today might well strain to the breaking point the fabric of world peace."

Just what the Americans on the home front will have to give up to assure the success of the mighty new effort, Truman did not say. He may do so when he reports to the nation by radio and television at 10:30 p. m. EDT tonight. Today's message was read to House and Senate by clerks.

But it could be that as the mobilization effort gathers momentum, automobile manufacturers may be required to produce more tanks and weapons and fewer cars; that radio and television manufacturers may have to turn out more radar equipment and fewer home sets.

This is the apparent meaning of Truman's request for legislation to authorize the government to set up priorities and allocate materials and to limit the use of materials in non-essentials.
