SOVIET PLANE DOWNED; US RETREATING

SPECULATION TOUCHED OFF BY DOWNING OF RUSSO PLANE AFTER ATTACK ON UN FORCES

LAKE SUCCESS, N. Y., Sept. 5 (UP)—A Russian-marked bomber, apparently manned by a Russian crew, opened fire in an attack yesterday on United Nations naval forces off Korea and was shot down by UN fighter planes, the United States reported today.

Speculation immediately was touched off that Russia may have taken up arms to "protect" the North Koreans under a policy that might even include reoccupation by Soviet troops of the northern half of the battle-torn peninsula. The U. S. delegation was understood to be ready to make the report the first order of business when the UN Security Council meets at 3 p. m. EDT. However, there was no indication that the U. S. was ready just yet to charge Russia with outright aggression in Korea.

In Tokyo, Gen. Douglas MacArthur, the UN's Supreme Commander in the field, scheduled at least one top level conference today, presumably in connection with the incident. A reliable source there hinted that Russian planes had taken part in previous Korean operations and were believed to have strafed a British destroyer two weeks ago.

Diplomats awaited the reaction of Russia's delegate Jacob A. Malik as the possible tip-off to Soviet policy on Korea.

It was regarded in diplomatic circles as one of the most serious incidents in U.S.-Russian relations since Red Air Force planes shot down a U. S. Navy Privateer bomber over the Baltic Sea earlier this year.

THE REPORT OF THE INCIDENT was delivered to Trygve Lie, secretary-general of the UN, at 12:30 a. m. EDT and to Sir Gladwyn Jebb, president of the UN Security Council 15 minutes later by Ernest Gross, Deputy U. S. representative on the Security Council.

The report said the twin-engine bomber, marked with a Red Star of Russia, was shot down at 1:29 p. m. Monday (Korean time) while a UN task force was operating off the west coast of Korea at approximately the 38th parallel.

SOME DIPLOMATIC OFFICIALS saw significance in the department's careful statement that the incident occurred near the parallel — the old dividing line between North and South Korea.

They speculated that Russia may have reoccupied all territory north of that boundary in a move to keep the UN forces from making an eventual sweep across the 38th parallel to the Manchurian border.

The U. S. report said a UN destroyer recovered the body of a member of the bomber's crew and that identification papers indicated he was Lt. Mishin Tennadi Vallehu of the armed forces of the USSR, serial number 25054.

Ferguson Says

Asiatics Are Land Hungry; This Is What Makes Them Fight Fierce

By Harry Ferguson
United Press Foreign News Editor

What is it that makes a Korean Communist willing to fight and die for a salary of a dollar a month and one meal of boiled rice a day?

Dispatches from Korea describe the Communist troops as fanatics, careless of life and safety, and advancing in wave after wave against the muzzles of American guns. It is difficult for Americans to understand what the enemy is fighting for so fiercely, but occasionally a clue comes from behind the Iron Curtain.

Such as a broadcast from the Korean Communist radio station at Pyongyang. It said that 240,000 acres of land in the west coast province of South Chung-chong had been seized from South Korean owners by the Communist government. The Reds then announced the land had been distributed to 216,000 loyal Communists. That is a little over an acre per person—a truck garden in the United States. But to the Koreans, who have lived for generations under a system of feudal landlords, it appears to be an independence and wealth they never hoped to achieve. They feel like Cinderella when she was magically transformed from a ragged urchin to a beautiful girl who became the belle of the Prince's ball. But the clock strikes midnight in real life as well as in fairy tales, and that is the bitter lesson that millions of peasants have learned.

All Asiatics are land hungry. A plot of soil and a bullock or a mule they can call their own is their supreme goal in life. No one then can tell them whether to plant wheat, barley or rice, or how many crops to try to harvest a year. The Communists are experts in playing on the peasants' hunger for land of their own. They make extravagant promises and, surprisingly, live up to them as they are now doing in Korea. But that is only half the story. In the early days of the Russian revolution the peasants rallied to the Bolsheviks on a promise of redistribution of land. Feudal estates were broken up and to the Russian peasants it seemed that a brave new world had dawned. But as the years passed the Communist collective farms ceased to be paradise. Moscow tried to persuade the peasants in the Ukraine to send some of their crops to the cities. The peasants refused. Then the Red Army moved in and confiscated the harvest. One of the great tragedies of history resulted. Some 4,000,000 persons starved to death in the Ukraine, partly because Moscow wanted to teach them a lesson in Communist ideology.

United Press dispatches from China say the Russian pattern is beginning to repeat itself. It is true that Chinese farmers have their own land and can raise any crop they choose. But it is also true that the Communist tax collector is appearing more frequently these days and is taking an increasingly larger share of the crop. The peasant finds himself right back where he was except he is working for the government instead of a landlord.

The Korean Communist peasant is caught between the devil and the deep blue sea. If the Reds lose the war, he is going to lose the land the Communist government has just given him. If the Reds win the war, the tax collector will start appearing in about six months to cart away a large share of the crop to the cities.

In the meantime he fights fiercely, not realizing he is in a blind alley instead of being on a path that leads upward to a plateau of freedom and plenty.

Rayburn Ranks Truman, Dean Acheson High

PRINCETON, Sept. 5 (UP)—House Speaker Sam Rayburn, in a staunch defense of the National administration, said last night that critics of President Truman and Secretary of State Dean Acheson are doing a disservice to all mankind.

Speaking at ceremonies winding up the first annual field day at Princeton's model soil conservation farm, the veteran Texas legislative chief said he had never seen a more honorable and patriotic President than Truman.

He said he ranks Acheson among "the greatest secretaries of State we have ever had."

"I care not whether people love or hate President Truman, he is and will be until Jan. 20, 1953, our President," Rayburn said in his broadcast speech. "If he is not our leader, we have no leader."

After the crowd which had assembled in a high school gymnasium applauded, Rayburn remarked:

"I've never had more confidence in the honor and patriotism of a President than in Harry S. Truman."

The Texas Democrat scoffed at charges of "socialism" made against the Truman administration and asserted the United States today is "the strongest nation in all the tide of time."

"We will demonstrate that whenever we are challenged," said Rayburn. "We are going to drive the enemy out of Korea and we are going to get strong enough to protect ourselves."

Tokyo Quarters Concerned By Soviet Action

By Earnest Hoberrecht
United Press Staff Correspondent

TOKYO, Sept. 5 (UP)—Gen. Douglas MacArthur scheduled at least one top level conference today a few hours after word reached Tokyo that a bomber with Russian markings was shot down off Korea.

Vice Admiral Charles T. Joy, commander of United National naval forces in Korean waters, will confer with MacArthur within a few hours.

Signs were evident that the conference was scheduled to discuss developments stemming from the downing of the plane, one crewman of which carried papers indicating he was a Russian lieutenant.

A reliable source hinted that Russian planes had taken part previously in Korean operations. The source said two Yak fighters which gunned and bombed the British destroyer Comus last Aug. 22 were believed to have been Russian and not North Korea.

THE FIRST PUBLIC WORD of the incident came from the U. S. state department in Washington. Spokesmen for air and naval headquarters countered all early inquiries with "no comment" or a denial that they had heard anything of any such incident.

Perhaps significantly, a spokesman for Joy added that the Admiral had no comment "at present." A little later it was learned that he was to see MacArthur. The only speculation, and that entirely unofficial, immediately after receipt of the Washington announcement was that the warships involved may have been British.

The regular assignment of the British ships assigned to the Korean theater was off the west coast, where the bomber was downed.

Like the Tokyo sources, the British admiralty in London had "no comment" for the time being.

THE REPORT FROM WASHINGTON came as no great surprise to many persons in Tokyo. A belief had persisted generally that the Russians were sending some replacement planes into North Korea for the use of the Communists.

Many responsible persons here believe there are Russians fighting in the rear of the Communist fighting forces or waiting across the line north of the 38th parallel.

But none welcomed the news that a plane with Russian markings and crewmen with Russian identification would fly into areas where it would encounter defenders of South Korea.

The feeling persisted that incidents such as the one reported might lead to more and vastly more trouble.

US, ROK Men Fight To Hold Pohang Port

By Earnest Hoberrecht
United Press Staff Correspondent

TOKYO, Wednesday, Sept. 6 (UP)—Americans and South Koreans fought desperately today to maintain their shaky hold on Pohang and its vital airstrip. But the Reds were infiltrating their lines and apparently only were awaiting reinforcements before making another southward lunge.

Americans and South Koreans were defending a perimeter in the fight, assisted by an American destroyer which shelled enemy positions from off shore.

At one time tanks fought tank inside the city limits of ruined Pohang.

United Press Correspondent Robert Bennyhoff, reporting from Kyongju, 17 miles southwest of Pohang, said the Americans and South Koreans were defending a perimeter roughly 3,000 yards from Pohang on three sides from northeast, northwest and southwest. From Pohang the line then ranged southwestward to a position about a mile and a half to three miles south of Angangni and the main Pohang-Taegu highway.

No one yet could tell the full extent of this latest desperation move on the part of the Communists, but it definitely was a threat to the defenses of both Taegu, the former provisional capital 45 miles west southwest, and our base at Pusan, some 60 miles directly south.

The enemy was directing his greatest effort toward splitting allied defenses at Pohang. Other fronts were comparatively quiet or showed Allied gains. Here was a quick picture:

KASAN — ANCIENT FORTRESS guarding the approaches to Taegu from the north. "No organized enemy forces are behind the lines in this sector," an 8th Army communique said.

Naktong river line — Advances up to six miles by American Marines on the second division, recapturing about half the territory lost to the Reds in last Friday's offensive.

Masan Front — Sizeable enemy forces trapped and being chopped up by the Americans.

The main Red force, which on Monday broke through the South Korean capitol division, captured Angangni and seized at least a five-mile stretch of the main highway, today was reported probing Allied positions two to three miles south of Angangni.

AMERICAN OFFICERS FEARED they only were awaiting a regrouping of their forces before making another major stab southward. However, for the moment, they said the Red salient was being contained on the front and both flanks.

The massive Communist attack with at least three divisions on the northeast front, has driven the South Korean Eighth division back five to eight miles in the last three days. Early this morning the Reds were within five and a half miles of Yongch'on, major town on the Pohang - Taegu highway only about 20 miles from Taegu. Strong enemy patrols were reported within two miles of Yongch'on which was being pounded intermittently by North Korean artillery.

Small arms fire, presumably by Red infiltrators, was reported inside the town.

Communist Troops Reported On Run Along Lower Naktong Front, Today

By Jack Burby
United Press Staff Correspondent
NAKTONG FRONT, Korea, Sept. 5 (UP)—Communist troops were reported on the run along the lower Naktong front today, and the Yanks were feeling better than they had since the enemy crashed across the river in force last Friday.

A field grade Communist officer captured on the Naktong front told his questioners: "If the Russians do not give us material aid, this front will collapse in a week."

American officers, sobered by repeated displays of hidden power in the Communist ranks, tempered the report in the light of their own experience. But even some of the high U. S. authorities were more optimistic than might seem justified in view of the fact that their line had been hit hard only a few days ago.

The Marines were shoving the North Koreans back toward the Naktong from their deepest penetration in the big bend of the river west of Yongsan. One Marine officer said the advance could have gone faster against the slight resistance, but "we wanted to do a through job."

In the southern part of the Naktong from the Communists were reported falling back steadily. Resistance was reported easing in the central sector. In the northern part, southwest of Taegu, the Americans were holding their own. The Communist artillery quit Monday. Eleven of their tanks were knocked out by Air Force and Marine planes. Another eight or more were destroyed or captured by ground forces.

In some sectors where the enemy was falling back, he was abandoning his dead and equipment. Including tanks and small arms. Some officers theorized that a weird torchlight demonstration along the Naktong just before the offensive was launched last week was part of a pep rally for a final push.

Corp. Mike Matisk of Palmerston, Pa., who was at the edge of the river to take part in a small scale U.S. attack, got a glimpse of the demonstrators.

"I thought it was some kind of a secret weapon," he said. "Some of them were already on my side of the river when I saw them. It was a ring of light that looked like a blimp or something, but didn't move."

THE STORY: Alice Pine, secretary to Muriel Halleck, who writes popular stories under the name of "Jo Patravola," has discovered that she is strangely attracted to Brent, Muriel's husband, in spite of Alice's suspicion that Brent is a year-old whippersnapper, his four-year-old adopted son, and in spite of Alice's feeling of loyalty to Muriel. After Brent kisses her, she goes to the train to meet Muriel, who has been conferring with her literary agent in New York. Muriel has just revealed that she has had a conference with an executive of a Hollywood film company.

MURIEL HALLECK had stopped for breath. Alice knew now the reason for her excitement. If that man Alice Crowther had flown from Hollywood to see Muriel: "You've got a Hollywood contract now and a fabulous salary!" Alice put her thoughts into a question.

"Right, my dear. And that's not all. Crowther's buying two serials of mine for filming. So—" Muriel's strange eyes sparkled—"California, here I come."

"Just as soon as I can close this place and—well, do something else that has to be done. But I want you to go out to Hollywood first. And end us some wonderful and wickedly-expensive place to live."

"But, Muriel," Alice's head spun. "You won't need a secretary if you're working in a studio."

"Oh, yes, I will. Look, dear, I wouldn't be setting foot in Hollywood if it weren't for my free-lance work. I won't drop that and I told Crowther so. The net of it is, I'm to have plenty of time for private writing. Especially to finish this novel."

"But—" "Oh, my goodness!" Muriel exclaimed. "Here's a wonderful chance for both of us—I'll make it wonderful for you too. And all you can say is 'but.' What's the matter now?"

Alice hesitated. "I was just wondering—Oh, never mind it." Muriel's eyes were suddenly twinkling toward the end—manufacturing day by day an interesting, perhaps important book. But just now the papers meant something else to Alice.

They furnished a legitimate excuse to go in to Muriel; lead up to a discussion instead of plunging abruptly into it. She began to read. She wanted to read with care. But her mind refused to co-operate fully. Words, sentences, persisted in forming on its fringes. And she was aware of trying to do two things at once—absorb a story and talk, from afar, to Muriel Halleck.

BUT, abruptly, she was talking to Muriel no longer. She was reading, with furious concentration, unconscious of a frown cutting deeply into her forehead. She finished the last page. Then, for a moment, she sat utterly stunned.

It was unbelievable. Yet there it was, a scribble on yellow, waiting to be transcribed in clear readable black by Alice's type-writing. Alice Pine got up slowly. Her right hand, hard and savage, held a crumple of yellow. And little red dots seemed to be dancing, tortuously, in front of her eyes. She did not walk into the study. She swept into it.

Muriel sat at her table, composed, cool-looking, the inevitable cigarette dangling from her lower lip. "Gosh, Alice! I know I'm smoking. But there isn't any other fire. So why behave like you're going to one?" Muriel stopped. Alice felt the red dots running together, merging into a dull crimson glow. And the words and sentences, lately so clear on the edge of her mind, merged also into a confused jumble.

shrewd. "About Brent, eh? And Rick?" "Yes, I was," Alice admitted. "Listen, darling!" Muriel sounded rather sharp. "Brent has his job. And much as I'd adore having Rick, it's impractical. Between the studio and my own stuff, I'll be bushed all the time. And I couldn't ask you to be a nursemaid."

"I wouldn't mind." "No," said Muriel decisively, "you wouldn't. But I've made my plans. It's all settled. We've made everything out today. Brent's keeping his job in Providence. He's getting an apartment and a housekeeper who'll look after Rick. Everything's going to be just fine and dandy."

Alice said nothing. But she didn't like the thought of Rick, cooped up in a moderately large city after the space and freedom of Grosvenor Point. Why could not Brent have agreed to a transfer of the entire family? Had his job, in this short time, become so important and lucrative?

"Well," Muriel said impatiently, "California's pretty nice. Is it so terribly hard to make up your mind?" Suddenly it wasn't. For Alice saw a means of escape from a delicate and dangerous situation. A chance to break cleanly before things went any further. To put a continent between herself and an enigma of a man with whom it was both folly and disloyalty to be falling in love.

"I think," she said slowly, "that I'd like to go, Muriel. If you're sure you want me?" "Sure, she says!" Muriel gave a ringing laugh. "And me on my knees begging her. Oh, darling, I'm tickled silly!"

CHUCK WISNER studied the "dregs of his third Nighball" and said: "If I weren't a trifle tight today, Toots, I wouldn't have the nerve to tell you. But you're a darn fool." (To Be Continued)

"No. But— you have." Muriel smiled unconcernedly. "Listen, honey, aren't you a wee bit overreacting? I know, I asked you to be critical. Also, I know that I'm a lousy writer, maybe. But—" she touched the mashed papers with a scarlet fingernail—"I didn't think I was this lousy."

"Oh, Muriel!" Alice's voice rose. "It isn't that and you know it. It's just that you—you can't do this thing."

"Can't I?" Muriel's eyes hooded suddenly. After that, for a space, silence lay heavy on the room.

MURIEL broke the silence. "Darling," she said patiently, "you asked me once what I was going to make of my central character, Larry. I couldn't tell you then. Now, though, Larry has developed quite logically."

"But, Muriel, Larry is— Brent. I never realized before what you were working up to. It wasn't so dreadfully apparent before. But now, you've done all except name him."

"Well," Muriel interrupted, chuckling, "there's no law against using a prototype. Of course, and I quote: 'All characters in this story are entirely fictitious.' Unquote."

"Oh," Alice waved exasperatedly, "that's just talking around the point. It is Brent, and you've misrepresented him. You've made him a defeated, frustrated man. A weak man and a— total loss. And he isn't, essentially." An edge crept into Muriel's voice. "I need you, I suppose. Alice, to tell me what kind of man my husband is?" Alice gaped at her incredulously. This woman, with the dangerous, yellow gleam in her eyes and a cold smile playing about a tight, red mouth, could not be Muriel Halleck, Gay, even-dispositioned Muriel, so kind, thoughtful and tolerant. This woman was a stranger, ruthless, cruel-looking.

Alice bit her lip, said: "I know I'm taking a lot on myself. But why did you feel that you had to do it, Muriel?" (To Be Continued)

Publisher Says US Should Not Defend Formosa

By Fred McCabe
 United Press Staff Correspondent

DALLAS, Sept. 5 (UP)—Publisher Gardner Cowles says the U. S. must arm itself heavily and quickly if it is to evade a total war with Russia.

Cowles recently returned from an extended tour in Europe, said his views on armament were shared by a majority of leaders in Western Europe as well as U. S. officials in the Allied zone of Germany.

American officials in Germany warned that "we are so weak that we could barely evacuate our civilian population in Germany in event of a Russian attack," Cowles reported.

Cowles, Des Moines newspaper and magazine publisher, and his wife, Fleur, were guests at a luncheon given yesterday by Tom C. Gooch, publisher of the Dallas Times Herald, and Mrs. Gooch.

"They came to Dallas to receive awards at the Neiman Marcus mid-century fashion exposition last night for "a new fashion in magazines-flair," which Mrs. Cowles edits.

Cowles said responsible European government officials believed Western Europe's defenses were so weak that Russia could reach the English channel in a matter of "a few weeks," if total war should come.

"I am desperately afraid the United States is going to find itself involved in total war unless we do a great deal more than we are doing now to prevent it," he said. "The way to beat war is to launch a greater armament program."

Cowles said Europeans generally praised the United States' stand

Funny Thing To Miss American Cost Her Money

By Harman W. Nichols
 United Press Staff Correspondent

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Sept. 4—The funniest thing that happened to the Miss America of 1949 wasn't funny to her—it cost her money.

Our heroine, Jacqueline Mercer, Miss Arizona and Miss America of 1949, was making a personal appearance at Champaign, Ill. The city fathers had presented her with a key to the city which was four feet long, and which weighed a heap. According to the air regulations on luggage weight, Jacqueline had to pay another $12 to lug her trophy home.

"That's what I mean," Jacqueline said. "You don't make anything much being Miss America."

Jacqueline claims she came out of the Miss America deal, with nothing more than about $5,000, a pinto pony and expensive saddle, a key to a lot of cities—and a kiss from a guy named Nichols.

But anyhow, Jacqueline is happy. She is going to use her scholarship she won to keep on studying dramatics. Jacqueline hasn't done too badly, actually. She looks like a million—same as she did when she stood here on the ramp a year ago and did something out of shape. She had something in her future, too.

I wondered how the Miss Arizona of 1950 felt following Miss Mercer. I asked the current Miss Arizona, Kathryn Lunsford, she felt fine and looked fine. She wasn't scared a bit. The little lovely had weathered the preliminary storms out there in Arizona and was sure she could do it again in the big league.

I went from state to state.

Pat Berry, Miss Indiana, was confident as the next one. She was born in Indianapolis a hop and a jump from the Indianapolis speedway, but would rather sing than get behind the wheel of a car. I've never ridden with her, but she sure can sing.

The girls have a busy day ahead today. They first meet for a panorama picture. It takes all morning. Then the kids have to doll up in their evening gowns and line up for the parade down the famous boardwalk.

The fact that the girls will be pushed or motor-driven on the floats has little to do with it. They still have to stay with the hot sun, for three or four hours.

The instructions say to be sure and put on some sun tan lotion.

The parent people don't want any hospital bills.

Me, I'm a lucky guy.

Mal Dodson, the affable tobacco chewing public relations man for the Miss America contest, has provided good old Nick with an umbrella.

After the Revolutionary, Great Britain repaid many of her Indian allies in Alabama by giving them Negroes to be worked as slaves. The Negroes were known as the "Kink's Gift."

BOYCE HOUSE SAYS

At breakfast a woman said to her husband, "You were talking in your sleep last night."

He replied, "Surely, my love, you don't begrudge me these few words."

"There never was a perfect man," the speaker proclaimed.

"Oh, yes, there was," a man broke in.

"Who?" demanded the lecturer.

"My wife's first husband."

Three regiments of Negro volunteers were raised in Alabama at the outbreak of the Spanish-American war but hostilities were ended before the troops were sent into action.

24TH INFANTRY DIVISION

THE 24TH INFANTRY DIVISION, a hard fighting outfit of the Regular Army, has the distinction of having never served in the United States as a unit, although some of its components, like the 10th and 21st regiments, have battle records back to the days of the Civil War.

MAJ. GEN. DEAN

Rowan, who carried the message to Garcia in '98, at one time was a company commander in the 10th. The 24th division stems from the old Hawaiian division which was organized in Hawaii shortly after the World War I and garrisoned the islands until redesignated. It suffered in the Pearl Harbor attack and early in the war was charged with the defense of Oahu. It moved to Australia in August, 1943, and in January, 1944, to stage the Tanamurah Bay-Hollandia operations.

In April, 1944, the 24th landed in Dutch New Guinea for a permanent assignment. In five days the division smashed through an important airfield and by June 8 had killed 1,771 Japs and taken 502 prisoners. Action continued through the summer and in October the 19th and 34th Infantry regiments landed at Leyte and spearheaded the advance to Pinampogan. At Breakneck Ridge the 21st Infantry relieved the 34th and subsequently took the ridge. On Leyte the division suffered 2,540 casualties. It was awarded numerous unit citations.

In the Philippines elements of the division were in the earliest landings. The 3rd battalion of the 34th regiment made an amphibious assault on Corregidor in support of paratroopers, and the 2nd and 8th battalions of the 19th regiment were sent to Mindoro in driving on Manila from the south. In April, 1945, the division hit at Parang on Mindanao and ultimately stormed into Davao. Upon completion of mopping up operations the division went to Japan where it remained on occupation duty.

Major General William F. Dean has commanded the 24th since October, 1949, having previously served as military governor of Southern Korea. He is a native of Carlyle, Clinton county, Illinois, and began his career in the Regular Army as a second lieutenant of infantry. In operations in France he commanded the 44th Infantry division.

The shoulder patch of the 24th is a green taro leaf bordered in yellow superimposed on a red circle which is bordered in black. This was the symbol of the old Hawaiian division. The taro is a native plant of Hawaii and from it is extracted certain food concoctions and a drink called poi.

Plans For Style Revue Rapidly Taking Shape

Plans for the Annual Fall Style revue, sponsored here for the first time by the Beta Sigma Phi Sorority are taking shape now, spokesman for the group stated today.

The Revue will be held at 8 p. m. Sept. 7th at the Eastland High School Auditorium.

The D. L. Houle Shop, Altman's and the Men's Shop constitute the shops clothing the models.

Rehearsal is being held Wednesday evening at 7:30 o'clock at the High School.

The stage is being decorated for the occasion by Casey Maccell of Desdemona, who is fitting wrought iron props into the stage settings.

A printed program giving the name and appearance of each model and the intermission for coffee, which will be served in the school's cafeteria, are also new features of the revue.

A guest artist will furnish added entertainment, the spokesman said.

Gloria Swanson Receives Oscar From Neiman-Marcus—Another Set

By Patricia Johnstone
United Press Staff Correspondent
DALLAS, Tex., Sept 5 (UP)— Film star Gloria Swanson, being touted for a motion picture academy award for her acting in "Sunset Boulevard" showed off another kind of "oscar" today.

Miss Swanson, 51, received an "oscar of fashion" last night from the Dallas specialty store, Neiman-Marcus, as she stepped forward in a self-styled creation.

Glomorous "Grannie" Swanson was cited "for proving that beauty, good taste and fine fashion are ageless."

"Oscars," Texas style also were presented to four other figures in the fashion world for their part in making the American woman the best dressed in the world.

They were journalists Fleur and Gardner Cowles, California designer Bonnie Cashin and Paris born designer Pauline Trigere.

The Cowles were praised "for a fresh interpretation of the news of fashion through magazines, newspapers and radio, and, more specifically, for a new fashion in magazines—'Flair.'"

Fleur Cowles, editor of "Flair," created the magazine and supervises its staff and unusual make-up. Her husband is publisher of "Flair," "Look," and "Quick," and his activities also include managing several mid-west radio stations, newspapers and the directing of two banks and an airline.

Miss Cashin's "creme de la creme" fashions have dressed up numerous motion pictures. She was presented the award "for her special genius for her historical research, which led not down academic halls but into stardom in the field of apparel and costume design."

Miss Trigere now a New Yorker, wore one of her own dazzling creations as she accepted her award "for consistent excellence in the creation of fashions that combine great taste with an unerring sense of the dramatic."

Presentation of the awards highlighted a three-hour showing of fall fashions to 500 spectators.

Previous award winners have included Hattie Carnegie, Adrian, Elizabeth Arden, Norman Norell, Adele Simpson, Christian Dior and Mme Henri Bonnet.
