Author of "HOW TO WIN FRIENDS and INFLUENCE PEOPLE"

Modern Views on Divorce

MRS. HAZEL M. THURSTON holds down a good job in New York City to support herself and her two children, each child by a different father.

Shocking? Well, she doesn't think so. Here is what she says:

My first marriage was dissolved after three years, after we found we had no common interests. When the first flush of "love" wore off, we had nothing. I, with my old-fashioned up-bringing, tried hard to adjust myself, but every day I was at cross-purposes. We parted in friendly fashion.

My second husband deceived me from the beginning. I found out that he had been married previously and that there was a wife and three children. When asked about it, he said, "My past has nothing to do with you." I knew that I never could trust him.

The past generation was afraid of divorce; afraid of a lonely future; afraid, most of all of what people would say. Our generation has decided that any mistake should be corrected. That young people are drawn together while too young to have good judgement is deplorable; but they shouldn't have to suffer the rest of their lives for their bad judgement.

Asked about children of broken homes, she said, "If you had seen children suffer because parents had no understanding of each other's natures; because one took advantage of the other's generous attempts to make all the adjustments; if you had seen children grow to hate one, and sometimes both, parents, you would see that divorce often brings relief to children. The worst element of divorce is meddling neighbors and relatives who make children feel that their parents have disgraced them; that they are to be pitied."

There's a long way to go to educate the public to a different attitude on divorce. Birth control had a hard struggle; teaching children how to protect themselves through facts of birth had a desperately hard struggle. These are now commonsense.

I don't advocate divorce because they can't agree on every issue. That would be silly. Every marriage should, in effect, "have the banns cried" and the young couple wait and think, and think, and think, before they take the step.

As a friend said the other day, after three months of happy marriage, "I don't see how anybody can know whether the other is a desirable marriage partner until she—or he—has tried it." So-called "trial marriages," without the responsibilities incurred in the regular way, are too lax. The only thing left is divorce.

MAYOR McGUP By John Jarvis

Probably at least 4,500 Eastland County residents will read this as you are doing, yet a number of advertisers passed up the opportunity to tell those 4,500 or more potential buyers about their wares or services. In a block this size, including all the white space, the cost per reader would be less than a half cent. By far your best and cheapest advertising medium in Eastland County is your Eastland County Record, read and respected.

his outfit. The boy, Bob, can't sleep at night, for he keeps living over the fate that befell his buddies.

"I believe the most horrible tale was told by a man of the 7th Division. He was with the 31st Regiment and was wounded. A convoy of wounded was traveling along when the Chinese ambushed it. The Reds threw grenades at the trucks and machine-gunned them. Some trucks full of wounded were set afire. The men crawled from the trucks on to the frozen ice of the Chosin Reservoir. There were over 300 GI's—wounded men—on the ice. Some men had been on the ice five or six days before a few Marines braved the Chinese fire to rescue them.

"The Chinese didn't shoot at the men as long as they were on the ice, but shot at the men trying to rescue them. Many of the men were crying or hysterical, some were so covered with wounds the could hardly be touched without touching a wound.

"The Chinese had taken many of the men's shoes and warm clothing. Their hands were black with frostbite as were their feet. The men who could walk were so dazed they just walked in circles. Some were practically dismembered. These men had all been badly wounded before the Chinese shot up the convoy. Grenades had been thrown in the trucks, so some men had their faces blown to pieces, while others had their hands or feet blown off. The men had had no food.

"The rescue was very dangerous, and so it was a job of crawling up to the wounded and trying to pull them from the ice. One man pulling himself along with his arms would say, 'Don't bother with me, help that man over there, he's worse off than I am.' The men were trying to help each other. The five Marines with half a dozen Koreans who saved these 300 men paid no attention to the bullets singing by and sending water spurting as they went through the ice. One 50-year-old jeep driver went back and forth over the ice under fire all day, removing the wounded. And it was only a chance remark which sent these men to investigate.

"I drove to Itami Air Base Sunday and watched the wounded arrive. The Osaka buses have been made into ambulances and they ply back and forth, back and

Pipkin President Of Quarterbacks

Bruce Pipkin was elected president of the Eastland Quarterback Club Tuesday night to succeed H. L. King, who was given a round of applause for his work as president during the past year.

Everett Plowman was named vice-president and Everett Taylor secretary-treasurer.

New directors elected were Bob King, Wayne Jackson and Bill Hoffmann.

On a motion by Don Hill, the club voted not to take part in a drive to obtain a hospital for Eastland. Hill said he feels that Eastland needs a hospital badly, and is for any move to obtain one, but that he feels the Quarterback Club is not the proper organization to take part in such a drive.

Anyway, he said, the club had sponsored the golf course at the Lakeview Country Club, which is not doing so well. Any financial assistance the club may give anywhere might well go to the golf course, he suggested.

Jimmie Harkrider had told earlier of the great need for a hospital in Eastland, and Neil Day had reported for a committee appointed previously, that a plan to use the top floors of the Petroleum Building for a hospital seemed unsound.

One Turkish soldier had died before the plane I watched had landed. The Turkish soldiers were ambushed, the 2nd Division men went to help, the 2nd Division was trapped, some elements fought their way out. The Turks could not be saved. They were just written off. However, their wounded have been coming in to the hospitals here, and we have had requests at the school for books so the ward men can understand what is being said. "There are still many men waiting without heat or shelter for evacuation. They waited patiently for their turns on the plane—and what amazes me the most is that when they arrive here, despite the fact many don't know what they were fighting for or why, their morale is high and they can even joke and laugh. They are so filthy when they come in that scrubbing and scrubbing doesn't take the grime off. They are starved and can't get enough food to eat—most any food, but especially sweets. "The situation over here is very grave. I only hope the people at home are aware of it. If people only had realized from the fact that this was not just a police action but something much larger. . . ."

Successful Parenthood

MRS. CATHERINE CONRAD EDWARDS
Associate Editor, Parents' Magazine

THE DEVELOPMENT of a healthy personality, which was the theme of the recent Midcentury White House Conference on Children and Youth, was outlined in this space last week, up to the years of adolescence. The steps discussed were those which take place in infancy and childhood and included: 1. A sense of trust which helps prevent a lifelong hostile attitude toward other human beings; 2. A sense of autonomy, of being a person in one's own right; 3. A sense of initiative to help the child discover and explore his talents, and 4. A sense of accomplishment to give him the feeling of being worthwhile.

With adolescence the young person has to face his future role as a grownup. His doubts about his ability to accept earning a living, marrying and raising a family often make this a time of turmoil, though he may not know exactly what is troubling him. What he is really striving for is the fifth step in healthy personality development, a sense of identity. The fact finding report of the White House Conference has this to say about this crucial period of growing up:

"Hard though it be to achieve, the sense of identity is the individual's only safeguard against the lawlessness of his biological drives and the authority of an over-weening conscience. Loss of identity, loss of the sense that there is some continuity, sameness, and meaning to life, exposes the individual to his childhood conflicts and leads to emotional upsets. This outcome was observed time and again among men hard pressed by the dangers of war. It is clear, then, that if health of personality is to be preserved much attention must be given to assuring that American youth."

The sixth step toward becoming a mature, well-adjusted person is to achieve what the psychologists call a sense of intimacy, both with one's self and with others. By this is meant the individual's ability to build strong friendships, to have respect for himself and to love in the deepest sense. Boys and girls who have dragged through the earlier steps of personality development are apt to flounder here because of their ingrained sense of inadequacy. As a defense they sometimes retreat into lonely isolation, pretending that they do not want companionship.

These remote, insecure individuals are rarely successful as marriage partners and altogether have an unhappy time adjusting to life's stresses. The plight of these people, distrustful of personal relations as they are, is striking proof of the importance of all the early steps in personality growth which might have prevented their becoming problems to themselves. It does not mean, however, that is hopeless for them. Through religion or other sources of spiritual or intellectual inspiration, with help of parents and would-be friends who understand their rigid nature, they often find ways of making valuable contributions to life, though they rarely find the personal happiness that the more naturally warm-hearted person does. Next week we will take up final steps in healthy personality growth which are achieved in adulthood.

Lone Star delivers America's most sought-after fuel to hundreds of new industries

The cities served by Lone Star Gas Company are part of the region which is leading the nation in industrial growth. One reason for this is an abundant supply of natural gas—the best and cheapest fuel for industry as well as for the home.

Lone Star Gas Company's building program, in which we have invested over 80 million dollars in the last five years, has kept an abundant supply of natural gas flowing to new industries and old.

No one doubts that record-breaking industrial growth in this section will continue. We are continuing our building program which will make still more Texas and Oklahoma natural gas available for Texas and Oklahoma industry.

This year we shall invest 18 million dollars building new facilities. In the future, as in the past, industry here (and homes and business) will continue to enjoy the benefits of dependable, low cost natural gas service.

NEED A SHOT in the arm today? Consider Miss Charlotte Heidemann, 42, of whom Chicago can be proud. Her story is unbeatable evidence that you just can't get some people down.

Miss Heidemann lost both parents when she was six. She lived with an aunt until she could find work. She had just begun to support herself, at 17, when she began to feel pains in her feet. They were the first twinges of arthritis.

She went from hospital to hospital. In time her knees were bent almost double. The pain and stiffness spread through all her joints, and she could work no longer. With no funds and no one to help, she went to the Chicago Home for Incurables. At 23, life seemed to stretch out before her an endless desert of suffering and hopelessness.

That was in 1931. Charlotte is still in the Home for Incurables. She is still in constant pain, and spends most of her time in bed or in a wheelchair. But today she is more cheerful than most healthy people. She has a purpose in life and an occupation which makes herself and other people happy.

Twenty years ago she started working with jewelry as occupational therapy, to bring back partial use of her bent and crippled fingers. But Charlotte made an art out of her medical exercise. She learned to forget her pain in the creation of beautiful things. Today she makes exquisite jewelry, including earrings, necklaces, pins and bracelets, and has applied her skill also to constructing extraordinarily lifelike and beautiful artificial flowers. She sells her creations, and has a big demand.

The Chicago chapter of the Arthritis and Rheumatism Foundation has just appointed her chairman of its Arthritis Brigade in the national campaign to raise $2,000,000 for research and treatment of arthritis, which began November 14.

Extension Workers View County Farms

C. H. Bates and Miss Gladys Darden of the Texas A. & M. College Extension Service spent Thursday in Eastland County in connection with the farm unit demonstration program.

The two conferred with J. M. Cooper, county agent, and Mrs. Joe Sparks, home demonstration agent. The group visited and inspected two of the farms where farmers are cooperating in the program.

for some time. The new Eastland man said that when he moved to Sour Lake, near Beaumont, it was pouring down, and when he left there the other day the rain was beating down again. And there was a lot of rain in between, too—over 70 inches of it one year.

Mrs. Ducker commented that there was a drouth when he moved to Eastland, and she'd bet there was a drouth when he left, too.

But the parson said he had lived in West Texas for 10 years of his life, so I guess he must be used to drouth, too.

Farm Workers Get No Blanket Draft Law Deferments

Austin, Texas—Emphasizing that the draft law provides no blanket deferment for farm workers, Brigadier General Paul L. Wakefield, state Selective Service director, declared recently that local boards are required both by law and regulation to consider each agricultural worker's case individually, just as other men's cases are considered.

General Wakefield said that regulations by the president provide for a deferred classification for farm workers only when the following conditions are met to the satisfaction of the local board:

1. The man must be "employed in the production for market of a substantial quantity of those agricultural commodities which are necessary to the maintenance of the national health, safety, or interest."

"The production for market of a substantial quantity of agricultural commodities should be measured in terms of the average annual production per farm worker which is marketed from a local average farm the type under consideration. The production of agricultural commodities for consumption by the worker and his family, or traded for subsistence purposes, should not be considered as production for market. Production which is in excess of that required for the subsistence of the farm under consideration should be considered as production for market."

The state draft director observed that "this still doesn't give the complete picture," and added that a man, to be eligible for farm deferment, must also meet the requirements in the section of the selective Service regulations defining necessary employment.

He quoted as follows: "A registrant's employment in industry or other occupation, service in office, or activity in study, research, or medical, scientific, or other endeavors shall be considered to be necessary to the maintenance of the national health, safety, or interest only when all of the following conditions exist:

"1. The registrant is, or but for a seasonal or temporary interruption would be, engaged in such activity."

"2. The registrant cannot be replaced because of a shortage of or skill in such activity; and

"3. The removal of the registrant would cause a material loss of effectiveness in such activity."

General Wakefield stressed that deferments based on agricultural and other civilian occupations are not permanent. "They are issued he said for one year or less," he local boards have to classify a registrant for service whenever for his deferment ceases.

He explained that Class II-C is used for those deferred because of agricultural occupation.

Mr. and Mrs. Pat Crawford received word Thursday son, Sgt. Patrick H. Crawford, arrived at his station Air Force Base in Michigan is attached to the 2nd Air Force.
