Action-Packed Week Is Ahead Of Legislature

AUSTIN, March 26 (UP)—An action-packed week lay ahead of the 52nd Legislature today, with work expected on taxes, spending, crime and prohibition.

The House will not return from its long Easter week end until 11 a.m. tomorrow, but the Senate scheduled a "solo session" for this morning.

The House Crime Investigating Committee will open hearings tomorrow at 9 a.m., when west coast gambler Mickey Cohen and six other persons were summoned to appear.

Cohen was subpoenaed last week while he was attending the funeral of a friend in El Paso. At the time, he said he would return to appear before the House committee investigating organized crime in Texas, but later he said in Los Angeles that he was "broke" and the lawmakers would have to pay his expenses from California.

There was still a question today whether Cohen would show. Failure to answer a legislative summons can result in a fine of up to $1,000, a one-year jail term, or both. However, the charge is a misdemeanor—and though not impossible—it would be doubtful that Cohen could be extradited from California.

Hearings will be held on nine tax bills Tuesday and Wednesday as the House Revenue and Taxation Committee, headed by Rep. Jim Lindsey of Texarkana, steps up the pace on considering revenue-raising measures.

Included will be a proposal to increase taxes of natural gas, authored by Reps. R. E. (Peppy) Blount of Big Spring and Deno Tufares of Wichita Falls. The other measures call for gross receipt taxes on hotels and on storing or parking of automobiles, sponsored by Rep. Jack Bryan of Buffalo.

A prohibition measure—expected to bring dry forces marching on the capitol—was docketed for a 2:30 p.m. hearing Wednesday by the House Constitutional Amendments Committee.

The state-wide prohibition plan, sponsored by Rep. Milton Wilkinson of Patroon, calls for a constitutional amendment to be submitted to the people.

A state spending program for the next biennium was expected to move into its final stages this week with submission of the bill to a joint conference committee to iron out differences between the two lawmaking bodies.

The House-approved measure totals $163,000,000 while the Senate-passed program amounts to $169,000,000.

Both House and Senate scheduled committee hearings on controversial legislation affecting the state's trucking interests.

The Senate Highways and Motor Traffic Committee posted a Monday hearing on a bill increasing the legal limit for trucks from 48,000 to 72,000 pounds. Meanwhile, the House Motor Traffic Committee docketed a Tuesday hearing on a measure to boost legal truck lengths from 45 to 55 feet.

ENTIRE AREA SHARES HONORS IN LIVESTOCK JUDGING

"A tremendous success," was what the Tri-County Livestock Show in Ranger, Friday and Saturday, March 23-24, was termed by the large crowd who attended this Ranger Junior Chamber of Commerce sponsored affair.

The show wound up Saturday afternoon with boys from the entire area sharing in the honors of the show. A top grade of stock was viewed throughout the days judging. H. L. Self, Tarleton State College's animal husbandry department, was in charge of all of the day's judging. He proclaimed the stock and exhibitors both as good.

B. S. Dudley, Jr., secretary of the show, stated that there were approximately 175 entries in the show. All divisions were for junior exhibitors except one adult class which showed beef bulls.

In the Jersey show Buddy Aaron, Eastland FFA member, showed the grand champion female. Franklin Myrick, Cisco 4-H, showed the reserve champion.

In sheep classes Joe Buckley, Desdemona 4-H, showed the grand champion breeding male, a Suffolk ram. Buckley also carried off the reserve champion honors in the same class with a Rambouillet ram.

It was a Rising Star 4-H club member, Horace Witt, who showed the grand champion beef calf in the beef cattle division. Ray Burton Norris, Carbon 4-H club member, showed the reserve champion in that class.

Burleson Blames Anderson In Lag On Peanut Action

"Texans peanut farmers have Senator Clinton Anderson of New Mexico to blame for the failure of Congress to act on peanut acreage allotments before the Easter recess," Rep. Omar Burleson of the 17th District said today.

Burleson said Senator Anderson's "supercilious and dictatorial manner" in the Senate Agricultural Committee, which cut in half the acreage increases to Texas and Alabama, is responsible for the stalemate brought about this week. The House adjourned without accepting the Senate revision on the peanut acreage bill for 1951, which reduced the 79,000 additional acres for Texas and Alabama to 35,000 acres.

"If it looks like Congress will pass the Senate bill quickly when we reconvene, April 2nd," Burleson, "I suppose we'll take this half a loaf to enable our peanut farmers to begin planting now. But if things are going to lag on, then there is no advantage to being content with what they left us."

In a heated exchange of debate on the floor of the House this week when the Senate bill was brought up, Burleson said, "Everyone recognized that Texas and Alabama were due acreage increases to correct inequities of the past law. That's why the House passed a bill early this year giving the States 79,000 more acres. But the Senate returns the bill today cutting this to 35,000 acres for the two States, and refusing to discuss it further."

The men's skiff capsized as a loaded tanker passed nearby, throwing up a large wave.

O'Dwyer Given Confidence Vote

MEXICO CITY, March 26 (UP)—U. S. Ambassador William O'Dwyer enjoyed votes of confidence today from a high Mexican government official and two major newspapers.

The government official, who was named anonymously, said "political attacks" on O'Dwyer in the backwash of New York Senate crime committee hearings discredited "the most popular ambassador we have ever had from the United States."

Newsletters supporting the former New York mayor were Novedades and El Universal Grafico. Two more Mexico city newspapers—Excelsior and El Universal—said they would support O'Dwyer this week.

A Novedades editorial said "part of the press of the United States has raised a theatrical clamor about the forthright declarations made by Mr. O'Dwyer in regard to charges sustained in New York against third persons."

El Grafico said O'Dwyer had been "cruelly" questioned by the committee and "more than once must have regretted not having remained in Mexico" to recover from his recent attack of bronchitis.

The Government Official said O'Dwyer's return to Mexico City is awaited eagerly.

"As a gesture of affection, we are ready to dispatch a Mexican government plane to return Ambassador O'Dwyer to Mexico when he is ready to come back," he said.

MacArthur Again Has Hands Tied By Administration

WASHINGTON, March 24 (UP)—Gen. Douglas MacArthur, it was learned today, not clear with military and diplomatic leaders here either his offer to negotiate a peace in Korea or his threat of a possible UN attack on Red China.

It was said flatly on high authority that the Supreme Allied Commander did not consult with Washington on either matter before announcing them in Tokyo. The State Department, however, seemed to underwrite MacArthur's under military directives is 8th Army had been ordered to cross the 38th Parallel, if necessary, in their drive against the Chinese and North Korean Reds.

The Department's brief statement said: "Gen. MacArthur is conducting UN military operations in Korea under military directives issued through the U.S. Joint Chiefs of Staff which, as the president stated in a recent press conference, are fully adequate to cover the present military situation in Korea."

"The political issues which Gen. MacArthur has stated are beyond his responsibilities as a field commander are being dealt with in the United Nations and by inter-governmental consultations."

MacArthur has been pressing for instructions that would free his air power to attack Communist bases inside Manchuria, but there is little interest here or on behalf of other UN Allies to grant this authority unless Red Air Power attacks UN ground forces on a major scale.

Social Security Representative Here Thursday

Glen McNatt, field representative of the Abilene office of the Social Security Administration, will be at the Army Recruiting Office in Eastland at 10:00 a.m. Thursday, March 29.

McNatt cautioned that those persons who became eligible on September 1, 1950, because of the amendments to the Social Security Act should apply by March 31, 1951, in order to avoid losing payments. This is because retroactive payments can be made for not more than six months.

Persons who should apply now include workers over the age of 65 who have had at least a year and a half of work under Social Security; children or other dependent survivors of World War II veterans, who are now given Social Security credits for military service; and workers over the age of 75 who can qualify even though they are still employed.

Persons who are not able to contact the representative should write the Social Security Administration, 308 Post Office Building, Abilene, Texas.

SANTA FE, N. M., March 26 (UP)—The trial date for Dr. Nancy D. Campbell, of Santa Fe, has been set tentatively for April 16.

The prominent woman physician will be tried for abducting nine-year-old Linda Stamm.

And the judge who will hear the case, Waldo Rogers, was himself a kidnap victim back in 1911 in one of the most notorious of the Southwest's kidnappings. Rogers' abduction led to passage of the state law under which Dr. Campbell will be tried in Albuquerque, N. M.

Stapper No. 1 Adams Produces 48 Barrels In Eight Hour Test

Bankline's C. E. Reynolds No. 5 produced 51 barrels of 44.5 gravity oil through a 16-54 choke in a five hour test Sunday in the Briggs-Owens area about five miles northwest of Eastland, marking the first Duffer producer for this area.

A total of 13 feet of pay was cut from 3797 to 3800. Tubing pressure was 555 and casing pressure was 1200. The well was acidized with 2000 gallons of acid. The success of the well created a great deal of excitement among drillers as it means a new producing section.

The Edgar H. Stapper No. 1 Adams, about five miles southeast of Eastland, produced 48 barrels in an hour test Sunday night.

E. M. Shirley, who is in charge of operations for Stapper in the county, said that the well will be offset to the East and South-west in the near future. The well topped the Strawn at 1540 feet. Also in the Briggs-Owens area, the S. D. Johnson No. 2 Mize has cemented pipe at 3680 feet. Bankline has started its J. H. Reynolds No. 6 and is drilling at 1365 in shale.

The Mize-Dublin No. 2 was drilling at 2670 in shale. Pipe is being set in the Savage Brothers No. 2 Perdue, also in the Briggs-Owens area, at 3400 feet. The well was drilled through the Lake sand.

THE LIFE STORY OF JESUS CHRIST

Copyright 1951 by Hallmark Productions, Inc.

SYNOPSIS

Jesus, born of Mary, wife of Joseph, in Bethlehem, is taken to Egypt to escape wrathful King Herod, who fears Him as an earthly rival. After Egypt, the Holy Family returns to Nazareth. At 30, Jesus starts out on His mission. He is baptized by his cousin, John the Baptist. Jesus preaches, heals and performs other miracles. He and His 12 apostles, despite the enmity of the Pharisees, go to Jerusalem, where Christ is received in triumph. He foils many attempts to entrap Him, but is finally betrayed by Judas, one of His apostles, and arrested by Roman soldiers. Jesus is convicted on His own word that He is the Messiah.

CHAPTER 11

Since the priests could not pronounce the death sentence, they took Jesus before Pontius Pilate, the governor. They knew that the charges they had against Jesus would not hold up in a Roman court. So they accused Him of corrupting the nation; of forbidding the populace to pay tribute to Caesar, and of saying that He was Christ the King.

But the crowd, roused by the Pharisees, and the scribes, and the temple priests, cried out: "He stirreth up the people; teaching through all Judea, from Galilee, where He began, to this place!"

Pilate, who apparently did not want to send an innocent person to death, had an idea. Herod, ruler of Galilee, was then in Jerusalem and since Jesus was from Galilee, he would let Herod pronounce sentence.

Herod tried to force Jesus to work miracles, but He would not do so. So Herod's men mocked Him and Herod sent Him back to Pilate.

It was the Passover custom to release a prisoner and Pilate suggested that this freedom be accorded Jesus. But the crowd cried: "Crucify Him, crucify Him!" and release unto us Barabbas, who was a hard bitten criminal of the day. Finally, Pilate yielded to the popular hysterics and released Jesus to the mob of Jerusalem.

The Roman guards mocked Jesus, put a purple cloak around Him and a crown of thorns on His head. After much humiliation and cruel mistreatment, they led Him out to the crucifixion.

As Jesus went through the streets of Jerusalem and forward on the road to Calvary, many followed Him. Among the crowd were many who had believed in Him, but were too overawed by the Roman soldiers to protest. As the procession moved along, many women began to cry and lament, and Jesus said to them: "Daughters of Jerusalem, weep not for Me, but for yourselves and your children."

Outside Jerusalem they reached a low hill called Golgotha, or "The Place of the Skull." Here they took the heavy cross which Jesus had borne all along the tedious route and nailed Him to it with heavy iron nails. Then they set it upright in the ground. On either side of Him were crosses on which were crucified two thieves. To all three, the Romans offered a drink of wine with myrrh, to kill the pain, but Jesus refused to drink it.

And at the foot of His cross, the soldiers gambled for His garments. Jesus, looking at them compassionately, prayed: "Father, forgive them, for they know not what they do."

One of the thieves dared Jesus to save them. But the second thief rebuked the first, saying they were receiving their just due, but that Jesus had done nothing amiss and he said to Jesus: "Lord, remember me when Thou comest into Thy kingdom." Jesus promised him: "Today, shalt thou be with Me in paradise."

At about three o'clock in the afternoon of this original Good Friday, a darkness descended over the whole earth and it remained for hours. Jesus spoke several times. Finally He said: "It is finished." And then: "Father, into Thy hands I commend My spirit."

Jesus Christ died, as all other men who have lived on this earth have died. Joseph of Arimathea, a staunch supporter of Jesus, won permission from Pilate to take the Lord's body. He had it wrapped in clean linen and laid it in his own tomb and rolled a great stone in front of the sepulchre. Two guards were placed in front of the tomb to prevent anybody from removing the body and staging a hoax to fulfill Jesus' prophecy of the resurrection.

FARM Facts

A lot of farm and ranch chores may be measured in "horsepower," but did anyone ever try to evaluate the energy required of the farmer? It is a well-known fact that a tractor needs quality fuel and lubricants; a team of horses, a span of mules, or even a yoke of oxen, require an adequate amount of the proper ration to do the job.

by H. C. Schofer, Manager National Research Laboratories, Ralston Purina Company

But what of the farmer? Does he regulate his own diet to meet his energy needs? For example, does the farmer eat enough eggs every day to provide the fuel for the day's work? The food value of the egg is high because it contains within itself all the materials needed for the development of the chick within the short space of 21 days.

Feed tests with laboratory animals and human subjects show that for them also it is a food of remarkably high value. Its protein, egg albumin, supports an even faster rate of growth than the protein meat and milk. Its fat occurs in a finely emulsified form and is as easily digested as milk fat. It contains all known vitamins except Vitamin C and all the mineral elements needed for the formation of blood.

For the farmer who works a full day, an ideal breakfast includes two eggs, fried, boiled, poached — or served in his favorite style. Eggs, too, are versatile inasmuch as there are so many tasty ways to use them, either as a dish or as a supplement to other recipes, that one need never tire of them.

Fruit juice, breakfast pastry and a cup of coffee may seem to satisfy the person who expends little or no energy during the day, but for the man who does a man's work, it's a man's breakfast which includes at least two eggs.

Texas Will Not Send Money To Mickey Cohen

AUSTIN, March 26 (UP) — West Coast Gambler Mickey Cohen will appear to testify tomorrow as ordered or take the committal, the hard-bitten chairman of the House Crime Investigating Committee said today.

Rep. Fred V. Meredith of Terrell slapped down any possibility the committee would pay Cohen's expenses from California to Texas in advance.

"There is no way under the law we could send him the money. We are definitely not going to," Meredith said.

In any event, he pointed out, Cohen wouldn't be paid any expenses beyond El Paso—the place where he received his subpoena ordering his appearance before the crime investigating group.

The committee will open hearings tomorrow at 9 a.m. when Cohen and six other persons were summoned to appear.

Meantime, an action-packed week lay ahead of the legislature, with work expected on taxes, spending, crime and prohibition. The House enjoyed a long Easter week-end while the Senate went to a "solo session" today.

THE LIFE STORY OF JESUS CHRIST

Copyright 1951 by Hallmark Productions, Inc.

SYNOPSIS

Jesus Christ, born to the Virgin Mary, wife of the aged Joseph, lived, taught and died for His fellow men. On the first Good Friday He breathed His last on the cross on Calvary and His body was taken by a friend and put into a sealed tomb, over which a guard was put.

CHAPTER 12

This is the day after the first Good Friday—the day after they crucified Our Lord. Early on this morn, Mary Magdalene and Mary the mother of James arrived at the tomb of Jesus. They brought fragrant herbs to place in the tomb.

They walked with them. They had heard Mary Magdalene's story, but were not wholly convinced that it was true. Finally, Jesus said: "O fools, and slow of heart to believe all that the prophets have spoken." He agreed to eat with them and finally they knew them, proving that His return was a mortal one. After they had dined, Jesus called Peter to Him and asked: "Lovest thou Me more than these?" Peter replied: "Yes, Lord, Thou knowest that I love Thee." Jesus said to him: "Feed My lambs" and a second time asked: "Lovest thou Me?" and to Peter's affirmative reply, He said: "Tend My sheep." A third time the Lord asked him the same question and Peter was grieved because He so questioned him and said to Jesus: "Thou knowest all things. Thou knowest that I love Thee."

Jesus reminded Peter that when he was young he went where he pleased and did what he wished, but that now he would have to go in ways which he had not chosen, that he would have to go to prison and to his death for his Master's sake. To all of this Peter, the one time fisherman known as Simon, agreed and then there he became the shepherd—the Vicar of Christ on Earth.

Jesus now addressed all His disciples. He said: "All power is given unto Me in heaven and in earth. Go thee therefore and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost; Teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you; and lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world."

Illustrated by actors and scenes in the motion picture, "Prince of Peace" Mother Mary and faithful women weep at door of sepulchrs.

When they arrived, the stone was rolled away and nearby was a figure of a young man, clothed in white, who said to them: "He is not here but is risen." The two rushed to the apostles and at first they refused to believe. Peter and John ran to the sepulchre and returned to tell the rest that the tomb was really empty.

Mary Magdalene remained at the tomb, weeping. Suddenly, she heard a voice say: "Woman, why weepest thou?" She looked up into the face of Jesus, but she did not recognize Him. "They have taken away my Lord," she answered, "and I know not where they have laid Him."

Jesus then called her by name and she recognized Him and cried: "Master." She fell at His feet, but Jesus said: "Touch Me not; for I am not yet ascended to My Father; but go to My brethren, and say unto them, I ascend unto My Father and your Father; and to My God and your God."

That evening, two of the apostles were walking through the country on their way to a place called Emmaus, discussing the momentous events of the past three days. Jesus appeared and After Resurrection, Mary Magdalene doesn't recognize Christ.

Him to be Jesus, "and he vanished out of their sight." The two rushed to join the other nine apostles and told them that Christ had arisen and they had seen him. Even as they spoke, Jesus appeared again, saying: "Peace be unto you." He showed them the wounds on His hands and feet so that they might know that it was He.

There is the word of the gospel that Jesus appeared before His apostles a third time at the shore of a lake, where He ate a meal of bread and fish with Jesus Christ, the Son of God, had fulfilled His task on earth. So then, according to the gospel of St. Mark, "He was received up into heaven and sat on the right hand of God. And they went forth, and preached everywhere, the Lord working with them, and confirming the word with signs following."

Youth Hurt In Freak Gun Accident

FORT WORTH, March 26 (UP) A young hunter, shot in the abdomen by an "empty rifle," was carried across a part of the Trinity River to a waiting ambulance yesterday with the help of some 35 men who formed a human chain.

Wilbur Peacock, 21, was reported in critical condition today after the freak accident that took place as he and friends were ending a day of river bottom hunting.

The 35 men stripped their undecolored and clasped hands to form a steady line down a 40-foot embankment and across the river as ambulance attendants waded over in the swift current.

The rescue took more than an hour and was watched by hundreds of persons who had been attending stock car races nearby.

Peacock and three young companions went to the river bottoms yesterday morning to hunt. Peacock, Bobby Deaver, 18, Clarence Deaver, 15, and Gene Daniel, 19, had captured a possum and killed a snake, and had started home. They thought they had emptied their rifles, they said. They were on a little island in the river and Peacock started to hand the guns to Clarence on a rickety bridge above him.

Clarence couldn't reach the first rifle, and after the boys agreed the guns were empty, Peacock put a forked stick in the trigger guard and started to hand a rifle to Clarence. The gun discharged, hitting Peacock in the stomach.

THE sick dread that had been gnawing at Paul Twing spread and penetrated, growing heavier, deeper, crushing and dragging all at once. He felt that he was going to throw up but he couldn't move. He was frozen where he was, holding on to the bar and staring straight ahead with dead eyes.

The bartender stopped in front of him "Another one?" Paul managed to nod. When the glass was full, he snatched it up and poured it down his tear-parched throat.

"You know," the man at his right insisted, "I'm getting into game with the Twing kid ain't no game at all. Ten to one it's that kid's uncle dressed up like a dame just like he dressed the kid up like a boy."

Paul nodded. "You wait and see," he went on. "You pick up your paper tomorrow morning, and you'll see. I betches they'll have him in the clinic and he's this here mysterious dame they been yapping about. You wait and see."

"Sure," Paul paid for his drinks and left. Mary Jenkins and Judy had almost been caught, but they hadn't been. They were still free. At least an hour ago—at six o'clock—they were free.

Then why hadn't they come to the park at five? What did it mean? Was it some kind of a gag—a trap? Did they really have to play all this time and were holding back the information trying to lure him in? But now? It couldn't be that they thought he knew where the room on Eighty-first was or they would have been quiet about that and let him walk in there. What then?

His head was light. He felt dizzy. He didn't know if it was from the liquor or from the torturing anxiety. All he knew was that if May and Judy were still free they needed him and right away.

If there was any slim chance of evading capture, he had to find them tonight—now.

Only one possible thought presented itself. The park. Perhaps they did get to the park. Maybe they were waiting for him. Maybe something had kept them from going there at five but they were there right now! He stood in the middle of the street considering it.

For a few moments while he had watched the policeman phoning he had entertained the thought that the police knew he was to come there and were closing in on him. Now it seemed childish—crazy.

If that had been the case, they would have been there in force and would have grabbed him on the spot. If it was a trap, it meant May and Judy had been found. In that case he didn't give a hoot for his own liberty!

Sudden, burning urgency gripped him. He had to get back to the park right away. Every fraction of a second counted.

Wildly he looked about for a cab. None was in sight. He started running. It was twelve blocks. How long would they wait if they had come this late and not found him? Would they wait at all? Ten more blocks. Wait! May! For God's sake wait!

The first two blocks he traveled fast, dodging pedestrians, darting across intersections and weaving through the traffic. Fortunately, the streets were not crowded and traffic in the street was not too thick to slow him down. Then Paul Twing realized he was still far from the park and he was getting tired.

It was no longer conjecture but a certainty in Paul's mind that they were there—not only that they were there but that they were about to leave. Faster! His lungs were pulsing sacs of pain, his throat raw as he gulped in great breaths of air, but he pressed himself on straining every muscle in his body to increase his speed. Six more blocks.

A sharp pain in his right side made him wince—made him all but double up, but he kept running. People stopped and looked at him as he dashed, up Amsterdam Avenue.

At One Hundred and Fifth Street he turned up to Broadway. He was beginning to stumble. His legs had grown heavy and unsteady. His heaving chest felt as though it were going to burst open—as though a hundred knives had been thrust into it.

To the labored rhythm of his strained breathing he kept repeating, "Gotta keep going! Gotta keep going! Gotta keep going!"

BROADWAY. Broadway and One Hundred and Fifth Street. Just another street! It wasn't a run anymore. Movement was made possible only by his leaning so far forward that his feet were impelled to get themselves under his weight.

With his right hand he guided himself—supported himself along the store fronts and buildings that he staggered past. His breathing had become painful sobs. People on the street gave him a wide berth. They looked back at him over their shoulders. A sick drunk!

Through stinging, throbbing eyes he could see the park. The pale glow of the lampost light accented the dark shadows of the sparse greenery.

At the corner Paul lunged diagonally across the intersection. Fortunately no cars were coming at the moment for he could not have heard or seen them. He was beyond thinking. It was just a question of covering the few remaining feet that separated him from his objective.

He staggered up the curb and looked down the block long bench bordered path. A sailor sat cunched up close to a girl. No one else. Paul swayed and propelled himself along the broad base of the triangle to the foot of the other path. No sign of May and Judy.

Fireman Braves Rugged Flames

KILGORE, March 26 (UP)—Fire Chief W. J. McBride braved a rain of hot oil last night to choke off a spectacular 12-minute fire at an oil well in the downtown business district.

Protected by torrents of water from fire hoses, McBride extinguished the 100-foot-high flames by turning valves that stopped the flow from the well.

Jimmy Allen, a switcher employed by the M. V. McVey Company, operator of the well, was burned critically. Attendants at the Roy H. Laird Memorial Hospital said he received second and third degree burns over more than 50 per cent of his body.

The roaring fire spread to the K. Wolens Department Store, adjacent to the well but McBride said damage was "slight" to both the store property and to the Masonic Lodge quarters upstairs.

McBride said the fire started when a connection blew off a flow line, carrying oil from the well to a heating unit for the purpose of raising its temperature enroute to storage tanks.

Firemen used powerful streams of water to sweep the flames off all around the derrick as McBride waded in to the cutoff valve.

"It was hot in there," he said, "But not too hot."

Ticking In Head Doesn't Stop His Getting Drafted

OKLAHOMA CITY, March 26 (UP)—Draft Officials don't care what makes Jack Husband tick. They've marked his physically qualified anyway.

Husband has a "tick-tock" in his head that's been ticking merrily away for at least 11 years.

More than 200 doctors have examined him without finding the origin of the staccato ticking. Selective Service Doctors had no better luck but decided he was qualified for service anyway.

The ticking noise is loud enough for another person to hear if he holds close to Husband's.

"I thought everybody ticked until somebody told me different," Husband said.

He found out that he had something exclusive while wrestling with another boy when he was nine years old. He's now 20.

"What's that?" His wrestling partner asked. He had disclosed the metallic ticking in Husband's head.

For a few days he was afraid to tell his parents, Dr. and Mrs. Roy H. Husband of Donna, Tex.

When he finally confided in his mother, he was whisked off to the first long line of examinations by specialists in several cities. None of them could tell him what made him tick.

Husband, now a student at Southwestern State College in Weatherford, Okla., said he's used to the noise.

Once, when he went for an airplane ride, the noise stopped. "The silence nearly drove me crazy," he said.

The ticking seems louder in Husband's left ear. It can be heard from four inches away is audible over a telephone. A recording has been made of it.

Husband has one problem. He wants to be a Navy pilot and "how am I going to stand it when I go up in an airplane and I don't tick any more?"
