State Dept. Executive Climbed To New Heights With Evita

BY PETER EDSON
NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON—(NEA)—When Assistant Secretary of State Edward G. Miller, Jr., was in Buenos Aires, he was led a rugged pace by Senora Evita Peron, wife of the Argentine president. She insisted that Secretary Miller inspect the new Polyclinic hospital now nearing completion. Since elevators weren't running, she made him climb seven flights of stairs—and look into every room. Evita emerged from the ordeal fresh as a daisy, Miller was fagged.

In all, Secretary Miller spent some seven hours with Evita during his visit, though they were never alone. The conversation never lagged. A year ago, Senora Peron had been hostile to the U. S. This time she was cordial, constantly expressed the need of the Argentine for friendlier relations with this country. Reason for her change was that she now felt United States policy had changed.

Argentine minister of interior recently stated that women could vote, and therefore could hold office. Senora Peron's candidacy for vice presidency, with her husband succeeding himself as president, is looking up. The Argentine constitution says the vice president succeeds to the presidency if president dies or resigns. So Evita might become first woman head of an American republic.

John Foster Dulles, special representative of the President in negotiating a peace treaty with Japan, carries in his pocket a letter from Gen. Douglas MacArthur. Text of the letter has just been made public by the State Department. It praises Ambassador Dulles, saying, "Under your able presentation you have given Japan a new appreciation of the great moral stature of the United States. . . ." It closes with, "Yours has indeed been a high order of universal service."

Ambassador Dulles explains that this letter is a kind of insurance policy. It protects him from attack by the ardent followers of General MacArthur. And if anyone should accuse him of following the Truman-State Department line, Ambassador Dulles can pull out the MacArthur letter and show 'em.

WORST thing hung on Reconstruction Finance Corporation by Senator Fulbright's investigating committee is, of course, the Lustron loan for $37,500,000. It resulted in a $25,000,000 loss to the government. RFC's alibi on this deal is that it didn't want to make this loan, but was forced into it by other government agencies and by Congress. First Housing Expediter Tighe Woods gave RFC a directive to make the loan because the government wanted to encourage the pre-fabricated housing industry at the end of the war. Then when RFC delayed the loan, and the authority for such projects was about to expire, Congress extended the emergency housing legislation so as to force making of the loan.

One of the biggest drawbacks to making an effective anti-Communist Pacific pact is that left wing labor unions control nearly all the Pacific ports. This is true not only on west coast of U. S., but in Hawaii, New Zealand, Australia, Philippines and southeast Asia mainland ports. Australia had a number of maritime strikes in past year. One attempted to block shipment of supplies to Australian troops in Korea. In case of war, similar dock and shipping strikes might tie up all movement of freight in vital areas.

Incidentally, Dr. Herbert Vere Evatt, former Australian foreign minister and present Labour Party minority leader, is now said to be playing awfully close to the Commie line. Some of his recent utterances have been considered strongly anti-American.

See DiMag's Talk of Quitting As Plea to Fans to Go Easy

BY HARRY GRAYSON
NEA Sports Editor

MIAMI, Fla.—(NEA)—Joe DiMaggio opened his 13th training season with the Yankees pinch-hitting and watching the extraordinary 18-year-old, Mickey Mantle, adjust himself to center field.

The day he arrived at the Phoenix camp the great DiMaggio indicated to the assembled baseball writers that this might be his last year. The Clipper came right out of his San Francisco home to say it. He didn't get it off his chest after a hard workout or an injury. This was a studied decision.

In the same breath, DiMag told what good shape he believed he was in. He never felt better, etc.

From this distance, one knowing DiMaggio, the fiery competitor and proud individual, is inclined to suspect he anticipates a tougher physical time each season.

He's 36, and this is his 20th season in organized baseball, including the three war years. He has been plagued by knees, arms, shoulders, heels and a gradual wear and tear.

A man of deep self-respect and a profound sense of obligation to his public, DiMaggio fears the opposite of the cheer when his spirit is willing and the flesh is weak.

It seems like a studied appeal to the fans, through the press, and without apology, that he senses an effort that might be out of reach at this late stage.

He can reach a peak now and then, but the fans might be relentless when, in the lull he fears, he's not the old DiMaggio.

Joe DiMaggio would like to bow out in style.

He doesn't want to be remembered as he was in the sere and yellow, as are altogether too many others.

ALBERT BENJAMIN CHANDLER really should resign before the expiration of his contract as commissioner, April 30, 1952, if for no other reason than to maintain his record.

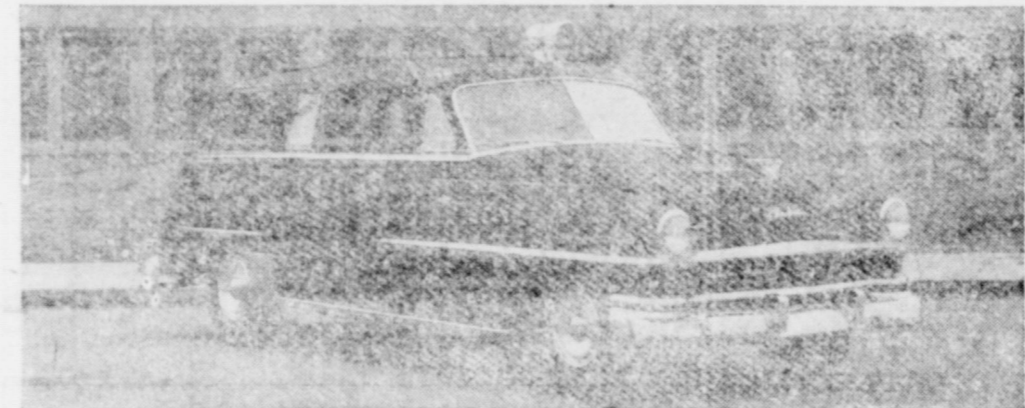

An unusual twist to a career that was all political until Happy Chandler landed what he believed to be a baseball plum is that he never served the full term for which he was elected or appointed. And for 18 years he held all the offices which the people of Kentucky could confer upon him—master commissioner in chancery, state senator, lieutenant-governor, governor and United States senator.

THE STORY: Uncompromising and hateful Lavinia Grenable rode to her death when her wheel chair, with the emergency brake saved by two, rolled off a terrace and into a ravine at her home. Witnessing the murder was Lisa, whose engagement to Court, Lavinia's oldest son, had been opposed by Henry Farwell. Lisa's father, who warned Lisa that Lavinia would make her miserable, but Lisa cannot forget that just after the violent death of Lavinia Grenable, she had seen her father on a ridge nearby and he had said nothing about being there. Also, Elizabeth Stratton, Lavinia's sister, has been acting suspiciously. The following morning, Angus Kent, who was with Lisa when Lavinia was killed, calls to warn the Farwells that the sheriff will question them. Angus calls the sheriff and asks to Geri Palmer, Lavinia's secretary, who seems to be crying.

LISA FARWELL followed Angus Kent back to the door. "Some people have queer taste," she reminded him. "Or maybe she wasn't really crying—she might have had the hiccups or something." She meant it as a joke, but Angus looked down at her.

"Try not to worry," he advised, disregarding her remark. "If you want me or need me, I'll be around."

Lisa watched him go down the long front walk to the road. The sun shone on his head and shoulders and for her the last trace of the old charm of Court Grenable's lithe darkness was completely dissolved, washed away by warm sunlight on a tall blond young man's head. With a little shiver of dismay she turned back to the house.

Sheriff Lane telephoned about 8:30 as Angus had predicted. Lisa and her father were to be at the Grenable house between 9:30 and 10 o'clock, not later.

Lisa was relieved when the time came for the thoughts crowding her mind were frightening her more than she wanted her father to know. She hadn't been able to bring up the matter of his telephone conversation with Elizabeth Stratton that she had overheard and she couldn't find the right words to tell him she had seen him on the ridge.

Lisa only knew she was ready to deny it if anyone questioned her.

On the way over to Grenable's she said casually, "Angus said if we wanted him he'd be around." Henry Farwell turned sideways in the car to look at his daughter carefully. Unexpectedly, he smiled, and for just that moment his round face resumed its customary genial confidence.

"That is good to know," he said calmly. But she wasn't at all sure if he meant what his words said on the surface.

THE Grenable house looked as ungrainy and menacing in the morning sunlight as it had seemed to be yesterday evening, and not even the grey yellow of the early forsythia bush on the east corner lessened its prevailing grimness.

Lisa parked the car near the police car in the bend of the drive and they followed the flagstone path to the side entrance.

As Lisa and her father passed under the whispering oaks and elms to the house she wondered vaguely if all the lives and all the years could return to haunt these terraced lawns, what their testimony might add to the summation of hatred for Lavinia Grenable.

Geri Palmer met them at the door. "Come in," she said pleasantly. "I'm Geri Palmer, Mrs. Grenable's secretary."

"Yes, I know!" Lisa said. Lisa had seen Geri before, shopping in Hilton and once with Court when he had driven Geri to the station to catch a train to Chicago on her day off.

With her bright hair, the color of burnished copper, her slow, sure smile, along with a figure that was almost statuesque, Geri Palmer was not a woman one could easily forget, Lisa thought.

Geri was smiling now, momentarily erasing the lines of weariness that had seemed at first to be around her mouth.

Geri led them toward the sun-room which was so filled with people that Lisa had a childish impulse to run away and hide, but she felt her father's steady hand against her elbow and together they went in.

Oddly, her eyes searched first for Angus, and found him standing near the front windows talking to a deputy sheriff and then she felt a hand on her shoulder and turned to look up into Court's face.

THIS was the man she had thought she loved. But that was yesterday. Today she was another person and Court had become a stranger to her.

He was no longer the dashing Court Grenable with a ready smile and teasing speech and a way with his women. He was a dark, thin-cheeked man with too thin lips and nervous hands that lighted cigarettes one after the other as he talked.

"It's a mess, Lisa," he muttered. "It's all such a mess."

His eyes were pleading with her. He was bewildered, shaken, and she suspected as she looked at him, afraid. And yet there was no grief in him for his mother. Lisa should have known he would feel no sorrow, but still she had expected a little in him for he had been Lavinia's favorite. Court had understood or rather tolerated Lavinia when the others would not. But it was more than his lack of sorrow. Another thought plagued her.

She thought, "Last night didn't do this to him. It gave him this weariness and worry, but not, and the thought stunned her, "this look of weakness!"

She sat down beside him and folded her hands tightly on her lap and remembered that this was the man she was going to marry.

Ike Will Need Sharp Shears To Cut NATO Red Tape

BY PETER EDSON
NEA Washington Correspondent

WASHINGTON—(NEA)—General of the Army Dwight D. Eisenhower assumes his new supreme command in Europe handicapped by one of the biggest bundles of red tape ever devised by the bureaucratic brain of man. Tactical problems and the building of an army that can hold the Russians should be the least of his worries. Just weaving his way through the diplomatic channels of communication with the 12 NATO—for North Atlantic Treaty Organization—countries will bother him most, if he lets it.

Fortunately, General Ike has a reputation for being able to brush his way through civilian confusion to get at the heart of his problems. Fortunately also, some effort is being made to simplify the chain of command. But as the table of organization now reads, there is all this diplomatic hierarchy above, and way down at the bottom is the so-called "supreme" commander.

His powers stem from the North Atlantic Treaty itself. This is stated in only the most broad, general terms. So General Eisenhower is saddled with the complicated intergovernmental organization that was set up to put this treaty into effect.

At the top of the heap is the Council of Foreign Ministers for the 12 North Atlantic Pact countries. The Council meets only on call. The last meeting, in Brussels last December, picked General Eisenhower as supreme commander and prepared a paper on organization of his headquarters. This paper was never made public. No future meeting of the Council has been scheduled.

While the Council of Foreign Ministers is not in session, the Council of Deputies sits permanently in London. Charles M. Spofford is American representative and chairman of the group. Theoretically, General Eisenhower gets his political directives from the Council of Deputies, but through circuitous channels.

Below the Council of Foreign Ministers or their Deputies is a Defense Committee. It is made up of the Ministers of Defense of the 12 countries. Secretary of Defense George Marshall is U. S. member. Under the Defense Committee is the Military Committee. It is made up of the Chiefs of Staff of the 12 countries—all generals and admirals. Gen. Omar Bradley is U. S. representative.

But these 12 Chiefs of Staff can't be in session all the time. They have what's known as "The Standing Group" to represent them and work at the job full time. The Standing Group has three members—Air Marshal Tedder of Britain, General Ely of France and Vice Adm. Gerald Wright of the U. S., representing General Bradley.

Under The Standing Group, you finally get down to General Eisenhower, the Supreme Commander. The Standing Group has offices in the Pentagon, in Washington. As a short cut, General Eisenhower might report to the Council of Deputies in London through The Standing Group in Washington. This is about as direct as the lines of responsibility could be drawn. But everybody in between has to be kept informed to keep noses from getting out of joint.

Also, off at the side is a Finance Ministers' Committee and a Defense Production Board and a Shipping Board which have to be cut in on the picture for their responsibilities.

General Eisenhower is not working for the U. S. government, President Truman, the Department of State nor the U. S. Department of Defense directly. He is an international citizen, employed by 12 governments.

He can have no U. S. political adviser at his headquarters. If he had one, he would have to have 12. He does have a Military Liaison Staff. It is made up of 12 bright young men through whom he can communicate directly with the 12 NATO member governments, and vice versa. Douglas MacArthur II is the U. S. member of this staff.

THE STORY: Uncompromising, hateful Lavinia Grenable rode to her death when her wheel chair, with the brake saved in two, rolled off a terrace and into a ravine at her home. The engagement of her oldest son Court to Lisa Farwell had been opposed by Henry Farwell, Lisa's father, who wanted his daughter to marry Andrew's choice, either. Strange and with a little clutch of fear Lisa thought, she approved of me for Court. Why?

Elizabeth Stratton captured Lisa's attention for the moment. She was sitting very still and deathly white beside Geri Palmer and Lisa saw Geri pat the older woman's hand once.

Elizabeth tried to smile, but nothing resulted. She sat there in the needlepoint chair by the door, Lavinia Grenable's sister, and the naked terror in her eyes was like an advance admission of her guilt.

Lisa saw it and Henry Farwell knew it and before very long the police, if they hadn't already, would seize upon it, too. Lisa wanted to go to Elizabeth, for she had been very close to the Farwells during the years and Lisa herself was named after the other woman. As unlike Lavinia as love from hate, the thin core of devilry threading through Lavinia's nature had been equally matched by the sweetness in Elizabeth.

But Lisa was afraid to cross the room to her side, knowing the very act of comfort would mean danger by bringing attention to her manner.

Lisa felt caught in the web of discord woven by these people in the Grenable house. Watching them, Lavinia's children, her sister, her secretary, she was struck with the tragic lack of grief in all of them. And she knew that even to offer sympathy to Court would be like lamenting the passing of a catastrophe.

She looked around for Andrew Grenable and hesitatingly asked thank her many friends who remembered her with cards, flowers and visits while in the hospital.

Mrs. Milton J. Gaines returned to her home here Tuesday after having been a patient for the past two weeks in a Cisco hospital. Mrs. Gaines is still unable to have visitors at this time and wished to

Movie Star Calls His Joining Red Party, "Stupidist, Most Ignorant Thing I've Ever Done"

WASHINGTON, April 10 (UP)—Sterling Hayden, six-foot four-inch movie star and Marine hero, testified today he joined a Hollywood Communist Cell in 1946 when he came back from war imbued with the notion of righting the world's wrongs.

He told the House UN-American Activities Committee he found out quickly how wrong his idea was and dropped out of the cell in December, 1946, only seven months after joining.

Hayden revealed that he had submitted to the committee staff a list of people who he believed "by no means" are Communists in Hollywood. He would not tell reporters how many he listed.

And then he reeled off names of the cell members from the movie lots of the film capital. Most of them, he said, were "back lot" workers such as carpenters and "grips" but he said one of the Hollywood Communists was former Actress Karen Morley, who dropped her career to become a labor organizer. "I only knew their first names and everybody called everybody else comrade," he said. Hayden, a towering he-man type in staccato phrases, said it was his admiration of the Partisans of Yugoslavia, tough Communist-led fighters against the Nazis, that impressed him so much he decided when he came back to join the Red party. But his membership lasted only from June to December, he said.

Hayden, identifying Karen Morley as a Communist, said she tried in vain to get him to rejoin the party. Hayden said he knew Actor Howard Da Silva who refused in a committee hearing on March 26 to answer most questions put to him on grounds they would incriminate him. Asked if he had any knowledge that Da Silva is a Communist, Hayden replied, "Only in his behavior before this committee."

Hayden said that a month after the outbreak of the Korean War he wrote FBI Chief J. Edgar Hoover stating that he had been a Communist for several months in 1946 and asking clearance by the FBI so that he would be eligible for further military service in case of war.

He asked Hoover to allow him to refer prospective employers to the FBI when he had to make out job applications carrying questions on Communist Party membership.

He said Hoover replied that the FBI could not do that.

Hayden urged the committee to find some way that people who had made "mistakes" and become Communists could clear themselves again.

Hayden said joining the Communist party was "certainly the stupidist, most ignorant thing I've ever done."

Hayden said that when he returned to Hollywood after the war he was disturbed over the state of the world as a result of his service in Yugoslavia with the native Partisan Forces.

HAYDEN BEFORE COMMITTEE—Sterling Hayden, screen actor and ex-Marine, testifies before the House Un-American Activities Committee in Washington. Hayden was asked before the committee to tell what he knows about Communism in Hollywood. (NEA Telephoto).

ARMED FORCES NEWS IN PARAGRAPH

Non-commissioned officers of the Army will once more wear the traditional large chevrons which were in use at the end of World War II. The Army also announced the renewed use of overseas bars to denote service in Korea. Individuals will be entitled to wear one bar for each six months of such service, as in World War II.

Soldiers fighting in Korea are being granted special five-day recreational leaves in Japan on a small group rotational basis.

United Nations identification shoulder patches in Korea now include the famous Black Diamond of New Zealand.

Thailand Army nurses have received courses in air evacuation techniques from U. S. nurses at Haneda Air Base, Tokyo.

Eight helicopters took off at the same time from the USS Valley Forge, December 27 in the largest mass take-off of such craft in Navy history.

In one 24-hour period an Army post office in southern Japan processed and forwarded world-wide nearly 90,000 pounds of mail from Korea.

An all-request radio program for U. S. Army troops is beamed to Korea each night from Japan by the Armed Forces Radio Service.

The Marine Corps Band was organized in 1798 and has played for every president except George Washington.

The house in which the incumbent commander of the Marine Corps always lives is one of the oldest public buildings in Washington still in use.

On September 20, 1814, after the national Capitol had been destroyed by the British, Congress moved into Blodgett's Hotel and was guarded by Marines.

HAWAII IS TRULY PARADISE SAYS WAR CORRESPONDENT

By H. D. QUIGG
United Press Staff Correspondent
HONOLULU, April 11 (UP)—
This I wouldn't believe.
Even if you told me I was here I'd probably deny it. Hawaii is just too incredible to be believed.

Korea was nothing like this. Not for an instant.
True, both places have air to breathe, but the Korean air is not scented with orchids. It seems impossible that less than a month ago I was in Korea.
On some license plates in Honolulu there is the simple legend:
"Paradise—Hawaii." It's an understatement.

Outside the screen of the porch on which I'm sitting birds are squawking romantically. The dust-less wind is whispering soft somethings to the coconut trees.

Take it from a guy who has visited many countries on every continent. Hawaii is the only true never-never land on this earth.
The sky is the skyiest, the surf is the surfiest, the double rainbow are the bowiest, the moonbows are the gossamerest. When it rains it just seems like heavy-handed humidity.

The expression "out of this world" was invented for Hawaii.
I'm sitting here barefooted, wearing shorts, and chomping lotus of course.

The tourist trade is booming.
Slowly my porch a little native Hawaiian boy is telling a visiting kid: "My father has never been in the Waikiki Water. Your old man is normal, son. I've lived in New York 14 years, and I've never been to Coney Island or the Statue of Liberty."

You have to see Hawaii to believe in it. Hawaii is the place where, during the last war, this correspondent was awakened one morning from a deep dream of peace by a steady plunkety-plunk, plunkety-plunk.
Looking out the window, I beheld a lady beating the whey out of
of a punching bag.

Turned out she was a lady taxi driver, getting in shape for the day's work.

Hawaii is the place where the weather beams strike on Doris Duke and J. Akuehead Pupule.

Hawaii is the place where the big juke box hit is "Kan Kan

But, don't get me wrong. "Para-

The place is plain paradise. It's

Cop Quits Job Calls City A Speed Trap

FORT WORTH, April 10 (UP)— Police Sergeant E. G. Williamson resigned today from the Hal-torn City Police Force, declaring the suburban city was "a speed trap where officers have to write $200 worth of tickets daily to support city government."

The charges were denied by Police Chief Marvin Humphreys, who said he had decided before Williamson resigned to fire the officer because "he was causing friction in the department."

GOOD NEWS everywhere you look in the NEW PLYMOUTH

NEW "SAFETY-FLOW RIDE"—stability and safety never possible before! Even when you unexpectedly encounter violent bumps, dips, waves, or holes in the road, you enjoy a smooth and steady motion. You have complete control of the car at all times. "Safety-Flow Ride" comes from new Oriflow shock absorbers working with other engineering features.

NEW ELECTRIC WINDSHIELD WIPERS, unlike vacuum wipers, clean at a fast, constant speed, even when the engine is under a heavy load. They're standard equipment and with them you're not required to buy a vacuum booster. You enjoy better vision all around, with narrower front corner posts and a 15% larger rear window.

NEW BUMPERS, GRILLE, HOOD. The low-sweeping new hood permits a better view of the road close to the car. Individual grille units are replaceable, so you don't need a whole new grille if only one part is damaged. Also, all four fenders are bolted on; they cost less to repair or replace than fenders which are parts of the body.

NEW INSTRUMENT PANEL AND HAND BRAKE. The new vertical-grain dash harmonizes with a variety of rich interior fabrics and trim. The new "T-handle" hand brake pulls easily, sets positively, and releases at a turn of the handle. The ignition key does three things at once: turns on the ignition, starts the engine, and puts the automatic choke in operation!

NEW ENGINE FEATURES. A new radiator pressure cap increases cooling capacity when you need it most and also helps keep the water or anti-freeze from boiling away. A new by-pass cooling system, standard on all models, gives fast warm-up and yet circulates the coolant so that the engine is fully protected under all starting and driving conditions.

AND MORE GOOD NEWS—AT YOUR PLYMOUTH DEALER'S
This doesn't even begin to tell you the Plymouth Value Story. Your Plymouth dealer wants to tell you more, and he'd like to demonstrate the sensational new "Safety-Flow Ride." So why not stop in, or phone him, today or tomorrow?
