American Newsman Reported To Have Confessed In Court

There are no American, British or French representatives of Western News Agencies or newspapers in Prague. The trial of Associated Press correspondent William N. Oatis is being covered for the United Press by Ivo Berounsky, who is a Czechoslovak National employed by the UP in its Prague office. His copy is telephoned to Frankfurt, Germany, or London. It is not subjected to censorship, but as a Czechoslovak citizen, he is subject to Czechoslovak laws.

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia, July 2 (UP)—Associated Press correspondent William N. Oatis confessed at the opening of his trial today that he had acted as a spy.

He told the Communist State Court in Pankrac Prison that he used a number of Czechs as "informants."

"Did you carry out espionage?" the President of the court asked. "Yes," Oatis replied.

Oatis, an American, and three Czechoslovak employees of the AP are being tried on charges of political, military and economic espionage and complicity in the murder of a Czech officer.

The first of the defendants to testify, Oatis spoke firmly and clearly in English. He wore a neat dark blue suit and stood behind a semi-circular rail. His testimony was translated simultaneously.

He was not asked to plead to the charges against him, which carry a maximum sentence of death.

Oatis said both U. S. Military Attaché Lt. Col. George L. Atwood and his predecessor, Col. P. D. Ginder, had carried out espionage in Czechoslovakia.

Both kept records of all Czech army and air force officers and other military data, he said. Western Newsmen furnished information to the attaches, he added.

Oatis said he had been given secret information by Antonin Kratochvil, an official in the Office of Prime Minister Antonin Zapotocky; an engineer named Polak, head of the Defunct Pan American Airlines Office in Prague; Miroslav Gustav, a Pan American Employee; two waiters in the Swanik Alcon Hotel, and a former AP employee who worked in the Grand Hotel at Karlovy Vary (Karlovy Vary).

The only westerners in the courtroom were Vice Consul Rich-

PROPOSAL IS TURNED DOWN

By Edgar E. Clark
United Press Staff Correspondent
TEHRAN, Iran, July 2 (UP)—United States Ambassador Henry F. Grady announced today that Iranian Premier Mohammed Mossadegh has turned down a new American compromise proposal designed to ease this country's oil crisis.

But he added that future American efforts would be made to seek alternative suggestions that might keep Iranian's oil flowing to the west.

Grady told a press conference he offered Mossadegh the compromise in a half-hour meeting this morning. It involved endorsement of receipts by Tanker Captains for oil loaded at the big port of Abadan, and was designed to prevent shutting down of oil supplies for the west. The receipts would carry a stipulation barring any prejudice against the Anglo-Iranian Oil Company's legal rights.

The billion-dollar British owned Anglo-Iranian firm was nationalized by Iran over Britain's protest and has been the center of a growing dispute between the two countries.

Grady explained that Mossadegh thought the compromise over signing of the oil receipts would invalidate the receipts and allow firms taking the oil to evade payment.

"I am reporting this to London and Washington with the expectation that the London Embassy will present the situation to the company and see if there are alternative suggestions," Grady said.

"I am still trying in my naive way to see if I can do something about this oil problem."

Grady added that the U. S. Consul Basra, Iraq, had reported that the Anglo-Iranian Oil Company's Abadan Refinery was down to half production and its storage capacity was sufficient for only nine more days.

Soldiers Dead But No Shorts

SOMEWHERE IN KOREA, July 2 (UP)—This is the story of a knight with shiny white drawers.

The hero—Pfc. Roi B. Knight, 21, son of Mrs. Tabitha Knight, Portal, Ga., a mortar gunner with the 3rd Battalion of the 8th Cavalry Regiment.

One dark night recently Knight heard the steady clip-clop of horse hoofs on a valley floor below his position on a rugged hillside.

The Georgian went to take a look-see, with permission.

In the valley he worked along a ditch beside a dirt road. The sounds of horses and equipment became louder. Two hundred yards along the valley road he found a dozen Communist horse-drawn ammunition wagons. The horses were being watered.

Thinking fast Knight stripped off his clothes and hung his white shorts on a bush facing his mortar position. He scrambled back up the hill and reported to his commander. The officer heard him out and then pointed out Knight he had forgotten his clothes and was naked.

But, Knight was too busy. He "zeroed in" on his shorts and his company followed, pouring out a stream of explosive.

A check the next day showed—eight wagons, 20 horses, five soldiers killed. There was no sign of Knight's shorts.

Burglars Break Into Man's Home

HOUSTON, July 2 (UP)—Burglars broke into the home of A. V. Montgomery, owner of the RAE Film Service, and looted a small safe of $845 in cash and jewelry and old coins worth $425 last night, police reported today.

Montgomery said the thieves rolled the safe from the front room of his home to the kitchen and three forced it open while he and his wife were out visiting.

Delegates Will Meet July 7-8

Delegates representing 3,500 Legionnaires of the 17th Congressional District will meet in Breckenridge Saturday and Sunday, July 7 and 8, to elect a new district commander and a vice commander.

District commander Louis F. Jordan of Abilene, now on active duty at Fort Hood, expects some 250 Legionnaires and Auxiliary delegates to attend the convention.

Secretary of State John Ben Shepperd, a former National president of the Junior Chamber of Commerce and now State Legion Americanism chairman, will be the principal speaker on the joint session program Sunday, Jordan said.

Election of the district officers will be the top order of business activity. The successors to Jordan and district vice commander Clinton Cox of Stephenville will take office at the State Legion Convention in San Antonio August 17-18-19. Term of office is two years.

Delegates and alternates to the National Legion Convention also will be elected, Jordan said.

The 17th District at its spring convention in Mineral Wells went on record as endorsing the candidacy of Department vice commander Charles C. Gibson, Amarillo newspaperman, for department commander.

A. J. Buchanan, general chairman of convention arrangements, said that delegates will be entertained by a stag party Saturday afternoon and a dance Saturday night by the hosting Bernice Coles Post. A barbecue is slated for Sunday.

Department Service Officer William F. Booth, Dallas Regional Office of the Veterans Administration, will attend the convention.

Navada's Claim Clinched Today

LOS ANGELES, July 2 (UP)—Navada's claim to being the nation's divorce capital was clinched today.

The American Institute of Family Relations reported that Nevada last year had a divorce rate of 55.7 per 1,000 population, nine times greater than the 6.4 rate for Florida, the runner-up.

New York had the lowest rate—0.4 per 1,000. The institute based its figures on states' reports to the National Office of Vital Statistics.

Texas and Washington were not rated by the institute because the two states did not report to the national office.

The nation's divorce rate in 1950 was 2.5 per 1,000 a slight drop from the 1949 rate of 2.7. Ranked behind Florida were Oklahoma, 6.2; Idaho, 4.5; and Arkansas, 4.4.

"With the exception of Oklahoma, the five states at the top of the list generally are charged with attempting to encourage out of state divorces by requiring a short residence," report Dr. Paul Popenoe, editor of the institute's bulletin, Family Life.

"Oklahoma, therefore, probably ranks highest in percent of divorces granted to people with legitimate residence in the state."

Simmons Rites Held In Cisco

Funeral services for Noel C. Simmons, Sr., 53, Cisco oil field worker, were held Saturday at the Cisco Church of Christ.

Simmons died Thursday at the Graham Hospital in Cisco after an extended illness. He had been a resident of the Cisco area for more than 50 years.

Survivors include his widow, the former Irene Sublett of Eastland; two sons, R. G. and Noel Simmons, Jr., both of Cisco and a daughter, Mrs. J. M. Eudy of Moran.

BULLETIN

According to records at the Eastland County Courthouse, Mr. and Mrs. F. A. Wieser have sold the Gholson Hotel, Ranger, to Ralph Oakley of Austin on the 30th day of June, 1951. Records show that the hotel was purchased for a certain sum but revenue stamps indicate that the business was sold for a higher figure. L. A. Fabian, Amarillo, will manage the hotel.

Potential Due This Week On J. S. Hart 5

Potential tests are due this week on the Cooper and Hemphill No. 5 J. S. Hart in the Briggs Owens area about five miles north west of Eastland.

The well flowed at the rate of 30 barrels Friday after undergoing hydraulic treatment.

The Cooper Hemphill No. 4 Hart set pipe Friday at 3,425 feet after coring 27 feet of Lake Sand. Free oil in the hole was found in a drill stem test and gas came to the surface.

In the same area, the Bankline Oil Company is testing the lower Lake Sand on the C. E. Reynolds No. 9, 3424 to 3434 feet. The well is a direct north offset to the No. 6 Reynolds.

About seven miles southwest of Eastland, Hickock Production Co. apparently had a well in their No. 2 Silas Hill. Bottomed at 3,414 feet, the well flowed when opened after hydraulic Friday.

Ike's Political Colors May Show

WASHINGTON, July 2 (UP)—Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower's political boomers expect him to return to civilian life in mid-winter as a candidate for the Republican Presidential Nomination.

They have agreed in the meantime to keep the Ike-for-president movement on a strictly informal basis. This strategy was adopted here about a fortnight ago in a meeting of Eastern and Mid-Western Eisenhower boosters.

The meeting took place in the office of Sen. James H. Duff, R., Pa. Among those present were Republican National Committeeman Harry W. Darby of Kansas and Herbert Brownell, who managed Gov. Thomas E. Dewey's successful bids for the GOP Nomination in 1944 and 1948. Dewey proposed Ike for president last spring.

East and west have disagreed on campaign strategy. Brownell and other Easterners wanted to bring the Eisenhower campaign forcefully into the open in a manner which would put the pressure on Ike to identify himself as a Republican.

Car Strikes A Texas Bridge

ROUND ROCK, July 2 (UP)—A 20-year-old Ford Hood soldier was fatally injured last night when the car in which he was riding struck a bridge north of here.

Norman V. Starkey received fatal injuries when a 1947 convertible crashed in to a bridge 150 feet north of Round Rock on U. S. Highway 81.

Private First Class Billy Ray Jackson, also 20, driver of the car, was hospitalized at Georgetown. State Police did not report the cause of the accident.

ORDERS HAVEN'T CHANGED WITH PROPOSED ARMISTICE

By Earnest Hoberecht
United Press Staff Correspondent
TOKYO, Tuesday, July 3 (UP)—United Nations and Communist Troops fought grimly on today with orders to "kill the enemy" while their leaders attempted to arrange a cease fire meeting.

A message from UN Supreme Commander Matthew B. Ridgway, accepting a Communist proposal for a meeting in the Kaesong area, was expected shortly.

But an 8th Army spokesman said that meantime: "Our orders have been to kill the enemy wherever we find him. These orders have not been changed."

"Mercilessly annihilate the enemy and shoot down his planes," the North Korean Communist Radio admonished Red Troops. A Red communique said 1,900 UN troops were killed or captured on the Eastern Front Saturday and Sunday.

Allied Artillery and planes kept up a drum fire of death all along the front while patrols stabbed into the enemy lines.

It was predicted at headquarters that Ridgway's reply to the Communist suggestion for a meeting near Kaesong might be sent between 6 and 8 a.m. today (2 and 4 p.m. Monday CST).

Ridgway, it was suggested, would accept the Kaesong Area as the meeting place. But he was expected also to suggest that talks begin sooner than the July 10 to 15 period suggested by the Communists.

There was no big scale action on the front. The war as a whole seemed petering out. But men were still dying and the 8th Army spokesman said UN forces would keep killing Communists until an actual cease fire order came.

KANSAS SOLDIER AWARDED THE MEDAL OF HONOR TODAY

WASHINGTON, July 2 (UP)—M-Sgt. Stanley T. Adams, Olathe, Kan., has been awarded the Medal of Honor for leading a 13-man force in a night bayonet charge that routed more than 250 attacking enemy in Korea, the Army announced today.

During the engagement, enemy hand grenades bounced off Adams body and he was wounded by machine gun fire.

Adams is the 26th Army hero to be awarded the nation's highest military decoration for bravery in the Korean War.

Capt. Charles T. Bailey, Scottsboro, Ala., Adams' company commander, said his leadership and action "undoubtedly saved the entire battalion from disaster."

Houston Police Investigating The Attack

HOUSTON, July 2 (UP)—Police today were investigating a mysterious attack on a pretty 20-year-old red-haired carhop who was found unconscious on a residential street yesterday.

Officers said she either was beaten with a heavy weapon and rolled from a car, or was thrown from an automobile while it was traveling at a high rate of speed. She was still unconscious.

The victim was identified as Mrs. Billie Adelle Hale, who came here from Hawkins, Tex., a week ago and got a job at the Do Drop Inn. She and her two-year-old daughter were living with a sister here.

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Dillon, operators of the drive-in, said they had been taking Mrs. Hale home at closing time, but at 1 a.m. Sunday when they offered her a ride she declined and said she would ride with a friend.

They told police she left with a man about 24 years old. An hour later she was found. Her skull was fractured, her clothes were ripped and muddy and her face and body were covered with bruises and scratches.

No Burglar, Just Early Executive

HOUSTON, July 2 (UP)—It wasn't a burglar at the South Texas National Bank this morning—just an absent minded and early executive.

At 7:09 a.m. Police cars went scurrying to the bank when an ADT burglar alarm sounded.

"It was a mistake," the ADT District Office reported later. "An executive of the bank went down early, unlocked the door and walked in. He had forgotten to notify us. So the alarm sounded when the door opened."

Bailey, an eyewitness, said the enemy struck about 11 p.m. on the night of Feb. 3, driving a wedge between companies B and C of the 24th Division. Adams, with Company A, was in a platoon holding an outpost 200 yards in advance of his company.

Bailey said about 250 enemy attacked this platoon position about 1 a.m. after 45 minutes of holding action, the platoon leader ordered a withdrawal.

Adams realized, Bailey said, that the ground his platoon just vacated would be a perfect approach to his company's positions and would split the other two companies.

Adams leaped up and called to the other men to follow him with fixed bayonets.

"He was so intent on his mission that he did not notice that only 13 men were following him," Bailey said.

"As he approached within 50 yards of the nose (of a ridge), the enemy observed his approach and opened fire. He was immediately hit in the leg with a sub-machine gun slug and driven to the ground."

Ignoring the wound, Adams jumped up and "continued his dash toward the enemy."

"The enemy began throwing hand grenades, several of which bounded from his body before exploding," Bailey said. "Four times he was slammed to the ground by the blast of these grenades, but each time he was quickly back on his feet and driving toward the enemy."

Adams and his 13 men finally drove into the enemy, slashing with bayonets and pounding with rifle butts until the enemy troops broke and ran. Then, Bailey said, Adams covered his 13 men with rifle fire as they moved back to newly-prepared positions.

Later, 50 enemy dead were counted in the area of the engagement.

Adams, 29, a World War II Purple Heart Veteran, was born at De Soto, Kans. His wife, Wava June Adams, now resides at Kansas City, Mo.

Slammin' Sammy Snead Is Favorite To Take The PGA Golf Championship

By STEPHEN SNIDER
United Press Sports Writer

OKMONT, Pa., July 2 (UP)—Slammin' Sam Snead says his game isn't what it used to be but he was a heavy favorite to reach the finals of the PGA Golf Championship today in a 36 hole match against 29-year-old Marine Charley Bassler of Catonsville, Md.

The sterner clouter from the West Virginia hills was the last of the tournament pro still alive in the 33rd PGA title scramble, for the other semi-final match tired old Ellsworth Vines of Los Angeles, the former tennis champ, against Chunky Walter Burkema of Franklin, Mich., a twice wounded GI who now prefers the quiet life of a teaching pro to pressure on the tournament trail.

Snead, worried about his game since he broke his hand last winter, he downed battling Jackie Burke of Houston, in the quarter-finals, 2 and 1.

"I'm winnin'", he shrugged, "But every day the work gets harder."

Bassler promised to make it plenty tough today. The handsome Marylander, who saw Pacific action at Pelelu and Okinawa, Cooly knocked over Al Brosch of Garden City, N. Y., on the 36th green in the quarter-finals. He's the gent who eliminated Ed Furgol and then Jim Turnesa on the opening day of match play last Friday.

Snead fired a record-tying 68 at Burke on the morning round and was four up at lunch time. But the plucky young Texan, displaying an amazing putting touch that admittedly gave Snead the shakes, whittled that lead to one as late as the 33rd hole. Snead erred on the 34th but so did Burke and the Texan's best chance of getting even slipped away.

Bassler put together 74-73 against Brosch and never was worse than even after losing the first hole of the morning round. Bassler was two up as late as the 32nd but Broach drew even on the 34th with a birdie two. The New Yorker lost the 35th, however, with a bogey as he put his send on a trap to go one down. They

Herbie Flam Plays Well

WIMBLEDON, Eng., July 2 (UP)—Young Herbie Flam of Beverly Hills, Calif., fired the latest salvo in the U. S. tennis fight against Australia today when he net top-seeded Frank Sedgeman in a vital Wimbledon quarterfinal.

The other two surviving Yanks, Dick Savitt of Orange, N. J., and Art Larsen of San Francisco, met one another in the second round bracket match. In the lower bracket, Ken McGregor of Australia played Lennart Bergelin of Sweden and Eric Sturges of South Africa faced Armando Viera, of Brazil, the upset conqueror of 17-year-old Ham Richardson.

Flam, the second ranking player in the U. S., was a decided underdog against the pigeon-toed Sedgeman, who was one of the chief tormentors of the Americans when Australia copped the Davis Cup last season. But young Herbie has played confident, almost flawless tennis in this tournament and could uncork an upset.

halved the closing hole and that was the match.

IT'S A STEEL—There's just no reason to have the shapely girl up there except to make you look at the picture. When you do that, you're supposed to notice that she is standing on a sheet of solid steel, supported by a wooden block resting on a sheet of stretched steel. That's supposed, according to the Wheeling, W. Va., manufacturers, to prove that the stretched metal is stronger than the solid. The expanded steel is made by slitting and stretching sheet steel.

THE STORY: Tim Reese, a crippled veteran, who has kept "Jean Paul" an exclusive gown shop in business with his designs, has fallen in love with the model Jean Roland, one of the owners of the firm. Jean leads Tim on as a beautiful woman, although actually her interest is purely mercenary. Then Tim learns to his surprise that she is actually a designer. He goes to New York to surprise Jean. He watches Jean win the award for "The Dress of the Year" at an exclusive fashion show, and he sees Paul Panciera, Jean's partner, accept a gold mannequin as "the designer." Tim is surprised when he receives no credit. Tim sends a note to Jean, and she, realizing a serious situation confronts the firm, meets Tim. She manages to ease Tim's troubled mind and the tense situation.

XXII
TIM REESE, in tranquil good spirits, nibbling cheese and sipping fine red burgundy that Guillo had produced as a special compliment to Jean Roland, began to relax. Tim talked now and Jean listened.

He told her of his cure, of his adventures that night, of his dreams, especially of his dream of a Jean Roland Shop with her in charge and with him as designer.

At this, Jean's eyes shone. Gone immediately was the concern that had troubled her since that moment earlier when the bellboy had led her to Tim in the lobby and she had discovered Tim was no longer a far-off person in a wheelchair.

At that first sight of Tim she had realized that Paul Panciera would no longer be able to pose as the designer genius of "Jean Paul," that, indeed, from then on Mr. Panciera might very well be Jean in the way.

Jean had made her decision quickly, audaciously, in that moment in the lobby. Now, as she heard Tim tell of his dream of a gown shop of her own, she knew how wise her decision had been.

She was very close to him and her voice was soft, personal, as she said, "Suppose we call the shop 'Teresa's,' darling? That is how we met and how it all began."

Tim looked at her, pleased and grateful, and lost himself completely. Now, when he talked again, his dream seemed no longer a dream, and time tinkled magically away to music, as the gnomish young pianist conjured from the keys the haunting pathos of Debussy.

Before long, even Jean was enchanted.

PAUL PANCIERA was waiting for Jean when she returned to the apartment late that night. He sat in an easy chair by the fireplace. On the table beside him stood the miniature gold mannequin awarded him at the Ball.

Neither spoke for a moment. He watched her carefully as she removed her wrap. Her movements were light, almost gay.

"Your mood eludes me, sweet," he said. "I gather, however, this time the young man did not give you the—what is it you call it?—the willies."

JEAN did not answer. She went to the mirror, scrutinized herself and appeared pleased with what she saw. Mr. Panciera, his eyes never leaving her, got to his feet, went to her.

"What did he do?" he asked her. "Wheel you around in his chair all night?"

Again she did not answer. "I hope I am not harassing you, but the evening proved very difficult after you left, with everybody questioning me about your disappearance, and my curiosity is, I think, quite legitimate." His smile was ironic. "I could hardly explain you had run off with a man in a wheelchair."

She turned away from the mirror and he could see the amusement in her eyes.

"He doesn't use a wheel chair any more, my love," she said.

It was Mr. Panciera's turn to be silent as he considered Jean's words. He had not expected this and it promised complications which he did not like to think about.

"I see. A miracle. He walks now." He watched her even more carefully. "Will he be having him around very much, do you suppose?"

"Very much, I'm sure." It was a moment before he spoke again. "It could prove very awkward, couldn't it?"

She smiled coolly. "I don't imagine he'd be very happy standing around watching you take the bows for his creations."

"His being around could prove very awkward for ME—is that your point?"

"That's about it, sir." She, still smiling, pointed to the gold mannequin on the table by the fireplace. "I'm afraid he wouldn't care to have you decorate your apartment with his trophies."

HE picked up the mannequin, held it up shining in the light. "It is a lovely thing. It seems a pity to waste it on such a primitive person."

She laughed softly. "I was under the impression it belonged to him."

"And my talent for discovering genius counts for nothing?"

"Just about." "Your mood, sweet, still eludes me. Do I get the subtlety of hints that you may not be—let us say eager in helping me to solve the problem?"

It was evident she was enjoying his predicament. "I'm not sure I want it solved."

Brush-Off of Harry Matthews Is Year's Big Boxing Mystery

BY HARRY GRAYSON
NEA Sports Editor

NEW YORK—(NEA)—The biggest mystery of the fight racket, or what's left of it, was: Why the brush-off of Harry Matthews? Knowing well that matchmakers have their feuds and favorites, I took the case right to the top brass.

"Why not match Harry Matthews and Ezzard Charles, and get rid of these matches for the Senior Championship?" I asked James D. Norris.

"You can't do business with Jack Hurley," said President Jim Norris of the International Boxing Club, who controls the champions, arenas and ball parks.

It was recalled that Manager Hurley's only objection after Matthews' smashing Madison Square Garden victory over Irish Bob Murphy last March 2 was his having to settle for $2250 as the Idaho Hot Potato's share of the broadcasting and television take.

Matthews weighed 175½ pounds chopping up and belting out Freddie Beshore in Milwaukee the other night. Not a few schooled observers would give him a grand chance against Charles, whom he wants most.

So why not the stylish Matthews and a fresh light-heavyweight and heavyweight deal?

"Not with Hurley," said Norris, in no uncertain tone. It was obvious the big fellow had bowed his neck.

"Suppose Matthews won the heavyweight championship?" he asked. "Where would we be with Hurley?"

CHAMPIONS, especially the heavyweight, have been tied up by overlapping contracts since the days of the great Tex Rickard, and regardless of how poor the cauliflower crop, the One Big Happy Monopoly doesn't intend to run the risk of any of them slipping from its grasp, paving the way for a new major promoter.

Norris and Hurley are well acquainted.

"Just because the New York Managers' Guild made the mistake of selling out for peanuts is no reason why Matthews has to go along," squawked Hurley.

DAUL PANCIERA nodded slowly. "I thought I saw that in your eyes." He paused and then went on, "The gentleman tonight, I gather, turned out to be much more attractive than the 'poor gink' I think you called him—the gink up at Cedarbrook." His irony curled his lips ever so slightly. "Am I to assume that this is an infatuation—even love, possibly?"

Jean Roland was beginning to be annoyed now. "Assume what you like."

Mr. Panciera sighed. "Poor youth, poor helpless youth. To break his heart upon a stone. He spoke carelessly but nonetheless pointedly. "—I think perhaps I shall have a little talk with the young man in the morning. Where is Tim Reese staying?"

"Not far from here, but much too far for you," Jean said sharply. He smiled tolerantly. "Perhaps, then, you would prefer to ask him over here?"

"What would you talk to him about?"

ness, possibly." He shrugged. "We might even, if you would stay mildly sane, talk over some satisfactory arrangement for the three of us."

She shook her head firmly. "You may be sure I shall not ask him over. You might take it into your head to talk about me."

He smiled his ironic smile. "Could it be it has occurred to you that he and you might make a very profitable combination? Could it ever be avarice, sweet?"

ANGRILY, she turned away from him and went quickly to the passageway that led to the rear of the apartment. She returned almost immediately in a heavy coat.

"Now, now, I wouldn't be so impetuous," he reproved her. "It is good to see iniquity if I feel the fight would be better made in the morning. Does he know you reside here?"

"What do you think?" She stopped, faced him. "No. It's simply I'm tired of your manners. Your artificiality, is getting on my nerves. And, I might add, your conceit is also."

"He is so natural, isn't he, and so modest. One of nature's own gentlemen. How I suffer in comparison."

"You do! And I'm in love with him, if that's what you want to know!" She went swiftly to the door.

"Dear, dear." He sighed, shook his head sadly. "Love, Love at last. You, such a prettily coiled steel mechanism, in love. Truly I live in an age of wonders."

She opened the door. Swiftly he stepped forward, closed it.

"No." He was cool, authoritative now. "No. It would hardly be good business for you—or for me, for that matter—if you should be seen tramping through a hotel lobby at this hour of the morning. It could hardly be described as in good taste, to put it mildly. Nor

CONTEST IN THE BAG—Claiming that too many judges of "beautiful legs" contests are "distracted" by beautiful faces or shapely figures, finalists in the sixth annual "Beautiful Legs" contest at Palisades Park, N. ## Two Games Are Made To Halt

The weather and a time limit curfew halted a pair of Big State League games last night.

Rain washed out league-leading Gainesville's home appearance against Sherman-Denison, but it took a 11:55 p.m. curfew to halt the Texarkana at Wichita Falls game with the score tied at the end of the 12th, 5-5.

Texasarkana shot the game into overtime with a three run flurry in the top of the ninth, and from then on neither team could dent the plate.

In the games which went to decisions, cellar-dwelling Tyler nipped Temple 5-4 and Austin capitalized on a big seven-run fifth inning to eke out an 8-7 win over Waco.

TO THE RESCUE—After a fearful struggle as he sat atop the 386-foot Ambassador bridge, Harry Sandlin (arrow), 24, was finally subdued by maintenance men and brought down from his lofty perch. It took over one hour to get Sandlin, an unemployed factory worker, down from the bridge which spans the Detroit River. (NEA Telephoto.)

Cattfish Waters Are Opened Up

AUSTIN, July 1—Some of the best cattfish waters in the state have been opened to trotline fishing under a new law, according to the Executive Secretary of the Game, Fish & Oyster Commission.

Under the act, trotlines with a maximum of 30 hooks are permitted from the mouth of Bull Creek in Lake Austin to the headwaters of Buchanan Lake in San Saba and Lampasas Counties. Not more than 30 hooks in the aggregate may be used by one person at any one time. Throw lines and rod and reel equipment are limited to six hooks each.

The Executive Secretary pointed out the law affects Lake Travis, Roy Inks Lake, Buchanan Lake and most of Lake Austin, and all other waters of the Colorado River within the boundary prescribed.

He said this area abounds in the three principal kinds of fresh water cattfish. They are the flat-head or yellow cat, the blue channel cat and the southern channel cat.

The law also specifies that none of the devices authorized in the measure "shall be attached to any other trotline or fishing device by use of buoys, jugs or other means."

The law also makes it unlawful "to place or set any trotline in the vicinity of any boat dock, boat or bathing pier, or bathing beach or any place commonly used as a swimming and bathing area."
Fines up to $200 are authorized for violations.

Hollywood Film Shop

HOLLYWOOD, (UP) — If horses could blush, El Rio would have the reddest face in Hollywood.

El Rio is slinking around the set of "Callaway Went Thataway," his nose plastered with make-up base, rouge, powder and suntan oil. Not the sort of thing a horse could be proud of.

The pinto pony, son of a tough movie horse named Dice, who burned up the range while Gregor Peck and Jennifer Jones warmed up the celluloid in "Duel in the Sun," had this indignity visited upon him because he got his nose sunburned.

His tender, pink nose was so sore he couldn't whinny without whining after one day of shooting outdoors in the southern California sunshine.

It never had occurred to the movie-makers at Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer studio that horses could be so delicate.

Now, El Rio reports every morning to his own personal make-up man, just as do such MGM glamour queens as Lana Turner, Ava Gardner and Kathryn Grayson.

If horses do talk, it's a safe bet the pinto takes a man-sized ribbing when he goes home at night to Ralph McCutcheon's San Fernando Valley ranch. There he is bedded down with his dad and two other "horse he-men" of the screen—Beauty and the Palomino California.

The Gold Mannequin

By Myles Connolly

COPYRIGHT 1951 BY NEA SERVICE, INC.

THE STORY Tim Reese, a crippled veteran, has learned to walk again. A surgical operation made possible by his merage ratings as a fashion designer for "Jean Paul," an exclusive design shop, was successful. Tim, infatuated by the model Jean Roland, who is one of the partners of the shop, goes to New York and sees her win an award in the "Dress of the Year" and hears Paul Panciera, Jean's partner, take all the credit for designing it. But Tim is so much in love with Jean that she is able to allay Tim's suspicions and then she begins to see merit in a plan to operate a firm in partnership with Tim, with Mr. Panciera out of it. Returning to her apartment, she has a quarrel with Mr. Panciera and throws him out. The next morning Tim gets out of bed and in his exuberance walks for the first time without his crutches.

XXIV

THE sharp cold after the snow had made the city streets slippery and Tim Reese, who would have made but clumsy progress at best, walking without canes, was now compelled to move even more slowly and with more care, finding it necessary occasionally to steady himself against a building or a street post.

People on the street, puzzled at the uncertainty and awkwardness of his pace, turned to watch him, little suspecting that they were watching a man who was learning to walk all over again.

Jean Roland and Tim had planned to be together for lunch, but Tim, beside himself with happiness at discarding the canes, decided the good news should not wait. He would go to the shop and walk in on her.

He wanted to show her how swiftly they were moving in the direction of his dreams. The shop was quiet, without customers, while the employees leisurely made ready for the day. Tim found Miss Major in the office.

"Wonderful! He said as he entered the office. "Wonderful evening."

He was as offhand as he had been when he left her the evening before.

Miss Major obviously did not believe him. "Was Miss Roland surprised?" she asked blandly.

"Surprised and delighted. We had supper together."

"Really?" Her cynical disbelief was sharp and unmistakable. "I suppose she is expecting you now."

"Nope. This is another surprise. Where can I find her? Do you know?"

Miss Major was very bland. "You do not know where to find her?"

"We have a date for lunch but—" He leaned over the desk. "Have you ever been in love, Miss Major?"

"If I had been," Miss Major answered coolly, "I wouldn't therefore make a fool of myself."

TIM laughed. "But that's just the point. When you're in love you make a fool of yourself. That's the fun of it. I just plain forgot to get Miss Roland's phone and home address."

Miss Major smiled a bland smile. "She'll be in around 11."

"Holy mackerel! That's a hundred years from now! You call her and tell her Tim Reese wants to see her. Will you, please?"

"You're sure she'll know the name?"

Tim was disconcerted. "Don't you know the name?"

"Sorry." She shook her head mechanically. "Never heard of it."

Tim was more disconcerted. "How long have you worked here, Miss Major?"

"About five months."

"And you never heard of Tim Reese?" It suddenly struck him as entertaining. "I may not be a very great figure in the dressmaking business, but heck," he laughed, "I figured I ought to be known around here at least."

MISS MAJOR sat up quickly, a sharp inquisitiveness lighting up the blandness of her face. "Are you a designer, Mr. Reese?"

"After a fashion. I designed that gown that won the award last night, although you'd never know it to read the papers this morning."

"Oh!" Miss Major stood up abruptly, her blandness gone. "You're YOU!"

"Yup. I'm me." Tim was amused.

"I'm terribly sorry, Mr. Reese." She was humbly apologetic. "I had no way of knowing who you were. Your name is never used here to my knowledge. Mr. Paul Panciera takes credit for all the designs."

A small smile of satisfaction came over her face. "In the trade, we've always known Mr. Panciera could not be the designer of those creations that have made this house so successful, but we could never find out who the designer was. You were kept a great secret, Mr. Reese."

"Well, the secret is out," Tim chuckled. "And maybe Mr. Panciera is too."

Miss Major moved quickly back behind the desk, got out a pen and paper. "Your name is Tim Reese," she wrote it down carefully. "And your address, Mr. Reese—?"

"Miss Roland can always give you that."

"I know, but I have, if you don't mind, Mr. Reese, a very special reason of my own for asking for it now."

This is How it Works Out—

Insurance operates on the theory that the worst never happens, and it seldom does. Insurance says: "You will have no losses for a whole year." You challenge, buy adequate insurance and wait. Who wins? The law of averages gives the premium to the company, but a full year's protection and satisfaction to you. And, like the story, it ends well, everybody is happy but the poor fellow who wasn't insured the year the law of averages went hay-wire!

If It's Insurance We Write It.
