Lone Star Sponsors Exhibit Of Prize Oil Painting Here

seven nationally prominent Texas artists will be exhibited publicly at the Lone Star Gas Company in Eastland on July 23 and 24, according to an announcement by Hubert Westfall, district manager for the gas company.

The paintings, Mr. Westfall said, include portraits, landscapes and still life and each is typical of the Southwest.

Among the seven paintings to be seen at the display is one by Fred Darge of Dallas, a native of Germany whose works have won for him many cash awards and other acclaim at art exhibits throughout the county. This Darge painting, titled "In the Canyon," is a colorful and interesting description of what is remindful of the Big Bend Country of Tex-

The bombers left fires raging n the Red east coast port of Wonsan, to follow up yesterday's 153rd consecutive day of Naval shelling of the big supply base. The heavy air-sea attacks pointed up declarations by UN officials at the advance truce camp that the Reds are "getting the worst of this stalemated war and we intend to see that it gets even tougher." They said UN aggressive pressure against the Reds would continue up to the nour of a cease-fire.

Will Japanese Peace Treaty Help End Aggression in Asia?

BY PETER EDSON

WASHINGTON—(NEA)—Completion of a cease-fire arrangement with the murder weapon. He had in Korea will have no effect whatever on conclusion of the peace in Korea will have no effect whatever on conclusion of the peace On the contrary, the fact that there is an armistice in Korea may in part be due to American determination to go ahead with the Japanese peace treaty. Reasons for this belief are simple.

Russia's ultimate goal in Asia is to have a Communist Japan. Russia is believed to have planned, started and supported the Chinese aggression in Korea as the first step towards domination of Japan. Now that the Russians realize that Japan will be allied with the anti-Communist powers in the Pacific, through peace treaties, the Korean adventure may have been called off, at least temporarily, as not worth the cost in men and materiel.

If the treaty is signed by September, it may not be ratified for another six months. The Senate, with a calendar already crowded by domestic affairs, may not be able to take up the treaty this year. If Senate Foreign Relations Committee hearings are postponed till the next session of Congress, ratification by the United States may not come before early 1952.

TEXTS of the treaty agreements will not be made public until they are signed. While the United States has not surrendered any of its objectives in the negotiations with Japan and the allied powers, the form of the treaty has been altered in preparation. Present indications are the there will be several basic agreements.

First value me peace treaty with Japan, signed by all the World War II powers except Russia and the Communist satellites. Jacob Malik, Soviet delegate to the United Nations, has declared that Russia will not accede to the American-Japanese treaty. Russia has proposed that the treaty be negotiated by Russia, Red China and the United The United States has rejected this proposal.

The second part of the Japanese treaty will consist of an American-Japanese security agreement. The United States will be given the right to station troops in Japan. But there will be no obligation for the United States to protect Japan.

The United States has already given guarantees for defense of the Philippines. Other, similar agreements are expected to be made with other Pacific powers. Japan and Nationalist China, for instance, will be expected to conclude a treaty of their own. Ultimately, however, hoped to draw all these separate agreements together into a

NEGOTIATION of the Japanese peace treaties has done a great deal to strengthen the ties between the United States, Britain and France. At one stage of the proceedings, it was feared that this issue might lead to a serious breach.

The French were at first opposed to making any peace treaty with Japan for fear it would antagonize Russia. The French were told that no precedent for the treaty with Germany would be set by the treaty with Japan. If France didn't wish to go along on the Japanese treaty, the United States would break with France on this issue. France came along.

The British, fearing Japanese trade rivalry, wanted Japan kept economically weak. It was pointed out that the United States had poured $2 billion into Japan to keep the country from going Communist, while the British had contributed relatively nothing. From this position of power and strength, the United States was able to convince the British that cooperation would be better then rivalry in insuring the British that cooperation would be better then rivalry in insuring future peace in the Far East
