OUR DEMOCRACY

—by Mat

WHAT FREEDOM BRINGS

FREEDOM, AS WE HAVE COME TO KNOW IT IN AMERICA, BRINGS INDEPENDENCE OF MIND AND SPIRIT, SECURITY FROM OPPRESSION, THE OPPORTUNITY TO LIVE WHERE WE CHOOSE AND WORK WHERE WE WILL.

MATERIALLY, FREEDOM BRINGS GREATER REWARDS FOR INDIVIDUAL ENDEAVOR. THAN ANY REGIMENTED SYSTEM HAS EVER BEEN ABLE TO PROVIDE. THIS MEANS HIGHER LIVING STANDARDS FOR ALL OF US.

AND FREEDOM BRINGS WITH IT THE OBLIGATION TO MAINTAIN OUR DEMOCRACY AS A FORCE FOR SPIRITUAL ACHIEVEMENT AND MATERIAL ACCOMPLISHMENT

Relations Were Economic Only

McALESTER, Okla., Aug. 10 (UP) — A pretty 16-year-old bride's testimony that she slept with her betrothed before their marriage but their relations were strictly platonic had officials in a quandary today.

Mrs. Caroline Hardy testified yesterday at the arraignment of Warran L. Hardy, 24, of Oklahoma City on charges of violating the age of consent law.

Mrs. Hardy said she slept in a hotel room bed with Hardy before they were married "but only because two rooms were too expensive." She swore their relations were platonic.

Puzzled officials, not sure whether they had a case left against Hardy, returned him to jail under $3,000 bond.

Hardy also is charged with perjury in swearing that Caroline was 20 when he applied for a marriage license.

Awning Care
Awnings are cool and pleasant, whether on windows or in the garden over the children's swing or sandbox. Keep fibers and colors fresh by soap and water scrubbing. A long-handled sudsy brush will do the job, and an awning can be rinsed by aiming the hose spray over it.

ORDERS AND JUDGMENTS
The following orders and judgments were rendered from the 91st District Court last week:
Pearlie Cozart v. M. L. Cozart, order of dismissal.
Hickok Producing & Development Co. v. Lawton Hearick, et al, judgment.
W. E. Rice v. Fannie Annie Rice, judgment.

KILLER'S PACE

BY JULIUS LONG
COPYRIGHT 1951 BY NEA SERVICE, INC.

THE STORY: I (Jim Marshall) am trying to prove that Rose Bidault, murdered after her acquittal of a murder charge, innocent but in doing so I am forced to shoot a man in self-defense. I have been investigating Al Nanabarro, a night club operator, whose friend Frank Merica died suddenly some time back.

XXXI

AFTER I took Louise back to the club, I called the office and found Paul Walte waiting for me. We exchanged information. I told him what had happened to me and he informed me that Merica had decided to peek me up for the murder of Rose Bidault, in spite of the fact Merica had told me he didn't figure me for the job.

"Somebody changed his mind," said Paul, and he went on to tell me what he'd learned about the Fifth Street First National holdup. Rod Grange had been offered a deal before his trial because it looked as if he had been working for a silent partner on this and a number of other jobs, seven in all. But no one could pin the other jobs on LaGrange and so he got off with a single rap. I had an idea that Al Nanabarro was the silent partner.

I hung up the phone and set out to see Merica. At headquarters no one stopped me till I walked into Merica's private office. Merica looked up with astonishment. The expression on Sergeant Cost's face was also one of amazement, but not for long. A gleam showed in his eyes. I followed them to a fat, perspiring man sitting to the right of him.

"Meet Carl Prater," said Merica, eyeing me for effect. He got it. I gave the fat man a double take. He was bald, forehead-faced and baggy under the eyes.

"I don't have to tell Mr. Prater who you are," said Merica. "He picked your picture out of the files."

Prater reddened still more and nodded. Merica clapped his palms together with an air of finality.

"All right, Mr. Prater, tell Jim Marshall what you saw."

Prater took a deep breath. "I drove to the Bidault place this afternoon because I wanted to talk to Mrs. Bidault about my vault company. She'd inherited 50 percent of the stock. Just as I parked behind another car already parked there, I heard three shots. I ran into the house. The door was unlocked. There was nobody downstairs and I started up the stairway.

"I suppose that may seem crazy, as I told you, Inspector Merica, seeing that Mrs. Bidault had just been set free. But I figured like everybody else that she was guilty and I thought maybe she'd shot herself."

"A thorough job of suicide," I commented. "Three shots."

"Shut up," said Merica. "Go on, Mr. Prater."

"UPSTAIRS I saw a dead man on the floor just inside the doorway of one room. Marshall was going through a lady's handbag. He took some money out, turned about and went into a bedroom. He turned away from me and didn't see me. I saw him take a watch from a wrist in the bedroom—the wrist looked limp and I figured he had killed both Mrs. Bidault and the other man. I ran downstairs as fast as I could without making any noise.

"Of course I should have come here in the first place. But I was afraid. This man Marshall is supposed to be very clever, and he works for the cleverest criminal lawyer in the state!"

"In the country?" corrected a voice from the doorway as Star Williams entered blandly. He smiled benignly at the perspiring Prater and warmly to Merica.

Merica eyed him sternly. "This glorified leg-man of yours has stuck his neck out. Prater's just told about seeing him take the money that was in Rose Bidault's handbag and the watch from her dead body. He planted them both on LaGrange."

"So this is Carl Prater!" said Star, looking down his nose at the still perspiring fat man. He shot me a sardonic glance.

"Yes, this is Mr. Carl Prater," said Merica. He eyed me coldly.

"Well, Marshall? Do you admit that you planted the money and watch on LaGrange? I'll have to warn you that anything you say will be used against you. The charge will be tampering with criminal evidence. Your lawyer knows that's a crime—"

STAR chuckled softly. "You are referring to those admirable shots Nick Ricardo took in court today? Yes, Andy Tanner has filed disbarment charges against me and made his boast that I've tried my last criminal case. However, Inspector you know how many times Tanner has made virtually the same threat."

Merica nodded. "There has to be a first time for everything."

Star chuckled. "Indeed there is, Inspector, including your getting called on the carpet for a premature arrest. Do I understand that you are booking Jim for murder?"

"I am."

"Then," said Star stifling a yawn. "I'll have him out on a habeas corpus in an hour. I've already phoned Magistrate Pecora and made arrangements for a hearing if one should be necessary."

Merica eyed Star with suppressed anger.

"I won't nail Marshall on the murder rap, but I am going to hold him for tampering with the evidence. Try and get a habeas corpus on that one!"

Star placidly returned Merica's gaze. Merica knew he had the advantage; so did Star. I said quickly:

"Inspector, do you remember the Frankie Martin case?"

It was as if someone had stuck Merica with a pin.

Tri-Purpose Pans Are Time Savers

COLLEGE STATION, Aug. — The use of tri-purpose pans save time, energy and food. Eliminate the usual transferring of food from refrigerator container to cooking pan, and then to serving dish with utensils which can do triple duty, says Mrs. Bernice Claytor, Home Management Specialist for the Extension Service.

Square or rectangular utensils without handles or knobs save space in the refrigerator. Metal pans generally can take the sudden change in temperature in the move from the refrigerator to range. If you use glass, pottery or enamelware, it is safer to put such containers when cold into the oven, rather than on top of the stove because the oven heats them more evenly. Let the food and cold utensil heat up together.

Mrs. Claytor says be sure the glassware is made to stand high heat if you are using it on top of the stove. Oven glassware isn't manufactured for this purpose.

If time permits, take the dish from the refrigerator long enough before cooking to take the chill off. Otherwise, slip an asbestos mat under it and use low heat until the utensil no longer feels cold.

Budget Punch for Al Fresco Dining

"LET'S eat out" is still the cry— the backyard or the terrace or the park across the way beckon as long as summer lasts, and that means that Mother must plan meals that are easy to tote and serve and require a minimum of waste.

Canned Florida citrus juices fill all these bills, and even better, they help her stretch her food dollars. Canned citrus juices are 20 percent lower in cost now than a year ago, and that, coupled with the refreshment and nutrition which they offer, make them important items on a shopping list today!

A Florida punch made by combining the flavors of orange, grapefruit and tangerine juice goes well with hot dogs or sandwiches, and is good nourishment for everyone in the family. Active summer sports deplete the body's store of Vitamin C more rapidly than normal, which indicates the need for frequent replenishment of this element.

Here we've moved all the fixings for dinner to the backyard, and even used an enamel pail for our punch bowl! Dressed up with smilax or other greens or fronds of flowers which the children will love to make, it does duty nobly without adding to dish washing chores.

Florida Punch

- 1 46-ounce can Florida orange juice
- 1 46-ounce can Florida tangerine juice
- 1 46-ounce can Florida grapefruit juice or blended orange and grapefruit juice
- 1 No. 2 can Florida tangerine juice
- 1 quart gingerale

Combine all ingredients. Add ice; chill.

BOSTON BANKERS THRIFTIER THAN PHILADELPHIA LAWYERS

BOSTON, MASS., Aug. 9 (UP)—If thrifty old Ben Franklin were alive today he'd readily agree that when it comes to handling his money Boston bankers have it all over Philadelphia lawyers.

Franklin, who coined the phrase "time is money," left Boston and Philadelphia each $5,000 in his will. With an assist from father time, Boston has run Ben's request into more than a million dollars—nearly five times the present amount of Philadelphia's Franklin fund.

The man who ran away from his brother's Boston printing shop to win fame in Philadelphia originally set up the separate funds to aid struggling young tradesmen. He wanted "young married artificers" in both the city of his birth and his adopted town to borrow from the funds to start their own business.

But even while his young fellows get a start, Franklin still had a weather eye on the honest dollar. He stipulated that the money be loaned out at 5 percent interest and predicted that the capital would grow to $655,000 in each city within 100 years after his death.

Boston came closest to fulfilling Franklin's expectations. By 1890, a century after his death, Ben's home town had nearly $400,000 on hand. Philadelphia lagged far behind, and is still lagging. At the last accounting, Boston had $1,043,980 to Philadelphia's $209,031.

According to one Boston banker who has supervised the Franklin fund here, the difference can be attributed to the fact that "Boston has kept the politicians out of it."

"They tried to get in on the fund once but we fought them to the Massachusetts Supreme Court and won," he said.

The politicians may have had a case at that because Franklin wanted his requests managed by the "selectmen" (now city councilmen) and protestant clergy of each city. In Philadelphia the board of city trust controls the fund, but in Boston it has remained under direction of the privately-operated Franklin Foundation.

However, city and state officials will ultimately decide how both funds will be spent when they terminate in 1990. The far-seeing philosopher-statesman-journalist-inventor fixed it so that the funds will be divided separately between the governments of Massachusetts and Boston and Pennsylvania and Philadelphia 200 years after his death.

Actually the value of Franklin's request to Boston is much more than the million dollars now in fund. About two-thirds of the capital on hand at the end of the first century was to be used for public works in each city. The present funds were started with what was left over.

Boston used its share to build the Franklin Technical Institute Building, a school for tradesmen. The present value of the building and equipment is about $1,000,000. Philadelphia gave its smaller first century share to the Franklin Institute, a museum and scientific foundation.

Escape Plan Getting Very Little Help

HENRYETTA, OKLA., Aug. 9 (UP)—Few people believe an American newsman can be rescued from a Czechoslovakian prison by "cloak and dagger" methods, but at least two persons may be willing to try, Editor J. Leland Gourley of the Henryetta Free-Lance said today.

Gourley said he is disappointed by the response to his appeal for funds to finance an undercover liberation for William Oatis, associated press correspondent jailed behind the iron curtain on spy charges.

"People don't believe it can be done," the editor said "But I have received letters from two Europeans who say they are willing to try."

One of the letters, Gourley said, came from Frankfurt, Germany. The writer said he is a German citizen who wants to discuss the Oatis rescue mission further, but not by mail.

The other letter came from England. The writer said he is a Czech who fled from his native country after the Communists came into power.

"I make herewith an offer to you and U. S. departments," the letter said. "Let me find two more men, hard trained men with principles, men without fear, men who can die if necessary. I will go back illegal to my own country with them and we will find Oatis and have him home or die."

Gourley said he will send the letters to associated press.

The Free-Lance "Free Oatis" fund has received only one contribution from outside Oklahoma, Gourley said. It was $25 from the San Jose, Calif., Newspaper Guild.

S-Sgt. Joe Collins of Biggs Field arrived this morning to spend the week-end here with his family, Mrs. Collins and little daughters.
