Crabgrass Killer

Potassium cyanate offers from 95 to 100 per cent control over crabgrass. Mix the chemical with water in a galvanized steel sprinking can, as demonstrated above, and use the same container for spraying the solution.

Crabgrass May Be Destroyed

Crabgrass—the toughest and most persistent of all lawn weeds—has finally met its match in the form of weed killers whose basic ingredient is potassium cyanate.

The chemical, which is sold under a variety of trade names, offers from 95 to 100 per cent control over crabgrass. Although potassium cyanate is effective on crabgrass at any time of the year, best results are obtained by using it during the late spring, when the ugly weed first begins to sprout.

Safe and economical to use, potassium cyanate is mixed with water. A rule of thumb formula is to use two and one half teaspoons of the chemical with one gallon of water to cover 135 square feet of lawn. If crabgrass is particularly heavy, use five teaspoons of the chemical.

Oftentimes it isn't necessary to use a pressure sprayer. If the area to be covered is relatively small, prepare the solution in a galvanized steel sprinking can and spray it from the same container.

A potassium cyanate solution may temporarily discolor turf and lawn grasses but no permanent damage is done. Generally it is best to delay artificial watering of lawns until 24 hours after the solution has been applied.

Even though potassium cyanate is quick acting, more than one application of it is needed during the year on lawns where crabgrass is well entrenched.

FLASHBACK

Sometimes it's a fleeting moment, sometimes weeks, months and years in the limelight—Then they fade from sight—For instance, whatever happened to Alan Valentine?

The former president of the University of Rochester came into national prominence as a leader of the Democrats for Wilkie movement. Later he served the Truman administration briefly as economic stabilizer.

Where is Alan Valentine now? He has an office in Washington and is serving as president of the Committee for Free Asia, which is collecting funds to send agricultural seeds and other help to the Asian countries that are resisting Communism.

Flashback, a United Press spot-check on the people who made yesterday's headlines.

Second Phase Long Horn To Get Underway

By United Press
The second phase of Central Texas' exercise Long Horn got underway today along a 35-mile front with units of the U. S. 74th and 31st (Dixie) Divisions dug in along the banks of Cowhouse Creek.

The aggressor, enacted by the 82nd Airborne Division, is expected to attempt a bridgehead crossing of the creek. Meanwhile U. S. air might rapidly is approaching a balance with aggressor air strength.

Officials of the nation's biggest military maneuver breathed a sigh of relief as the make-believe "atomic war" resumed after a long week end lull.

Officers expect the outbreak of bombs, fuels and in one case, murder which plagued the operation during the so-called breathing spell to halt, and for the men to put their minds and energies back to the business of fighting an imitation war. And the 82nd has announced it will conduct a full investigation of some incidents where some of its men are accused of firing on 47th Division troops with makeshift bullets.

More than a million and a half members of the Girl Scout organization are celebrating their 40th anniversary during 1952. Founded March 12, 1912 in Savannah, Ga., by Juliette Low, Girl Scouting today exists in every state, territory, and U.S.A. possession. Slogan for the Anniversary Year is "Girl Scouts—A Growing Force for Freedom." Projects include enlisting services of 80,000 adult volunteer leaders and 500 qualified professional workers so that the thousands of girls who are asking for membership may join this fast growing youth movement.

Red Cross To Help Rebuild Tornado Area

LITTLE ROCK, Ark.—As the period of emergency mass care for victims of last week's southern tornadoes neared its close, the American Red Cross moved into high gear to rebuild the shattered lives and homes of the disaster sufferers.

For about three months, more than 150 trained disaster workers now in the stricken region will help the hurt and the homeless, the orphaned, the aged, the widowed, and the ill.

"Two categories of victims will receive special attention," James T. Nicholson, Red Cross Executive Vice President, said today. "One group will be survivors of the dead. Among these will be many dependent children for whose support and education we will make long-range plans where other resources are not available.

"The other category is the seriously injured. This disaster has caused an extremely large number of injuries—1,281 persons—of whom 781 are hospitalized. In spite of expert care, a number will be physically handicapped, needing medical treatment for months or years, and assistance not only for their injuries but for their livelihood as well. This we are prepared to give them where necessary."

In White County, Ark., thousands of dollars worth of strawberries for which the region is famous may be lost. The crop will be ready to harvest in two or three weeks, according to the growers, but many shelters for housing berry pickers and the transportation to bring them to the farms were destroyed.

This week, Red Cross chapter officials in the tornado area are appointing local advisor committees on rehabilitation to work with the Red Cross disaster workers, who include social caseworkers, building advisers, accountants, doctors, and nurses. Local committee members will review individually each application for rehabilitation and advise on each Red Cross rehabilitation plan. Use of these local committees in relief operations is standard Red Cross practice, Mr. Nicholson said, for they are indispensable in interpreting local conditions to the Red Cross workers and explaining Red Cross functions and the limitations on them to prospective beneficiaries and to the public.

Red Cross disaster relief is always a direct grant—never a loan Mr. Nicholson said. It is a gift of the American people, with no obligation of repayment by the individual or the community. The disaster-caused needs of the individual or family, rather than extent of loss, are the basis upon which assistance is given. A person who has lost heavily in a disaster but who is able to stand the loss financially, without unreasonable hardship, is not eligible for Red Cross aid. The relief funds are expended to meet actual needs which the sufferers cannot meet from their own resources. Thus, two neighbors who have suffered practically identical losses may receive widely different help from the Red Cross, depending on their respective abilities to meet their own disaster-caused needs, Mr. Nicholson explained.

Red Cross rehabilitation assistance includes rebuilding or repairing of homes; replacement of furnishings; medical and nursing care; repair and replacement of farm equipment, supplies, and livestock; and rehabilitation of small family-owned businesses and other specific needs.

According to Red Cross estimates, 3,743 families were affected in the tornadoes, of whom an estimated 2,246 will register for rehabilitation aid. Red Cross surveys show 1,117 homes destroyed and 2,218 damaged.

Ft. Worth Man's Mysterious Death Is Investigated

FT. WORTH, April 2 UP—The 32-year-old co-owner of a Fort Worth plumbing company, Glen T. Pearson, died shortly before midnight last night from mysterious gunshot wounds.

Pearson's wife found him on their front porch late last night, fatally wounded. He was taken to a hospital where physicians said he died from loss of blood. Officers today are checking a report of a night watchman at an apartment development who said he fired at a prowler on the grounds. Blood stains were found, but watchman Ralph Thomas Ingram said the man he fired on disappeared.

The Automobile Is Darling But Dangerous

...says a news commentator and here's what he meant: The Automobile outpaced War as a mass killer in February of this year when its fatality toll exceeded for the first time in history the toll of the nation's military dead since 1775. That's the sorry angle but the other angle is darling. Americans can't get along without the automobile and we intend to keep it. But we must be more careful in its use and keep it insured—just in case!

Ice Capades To Be In Ft. Worth On April 18-22

FORT WORTH, April 1 (Spl.)—The 12th annual edition of Ice Capades, the greatest show on ice, will be presented April 18-22 in Will Rogers Memorial Coliseum in Fort Worth.

In addition to such stars as lovely Donna Atwood, Bobby Specht and the "Old Smoothies", the Fort Worth show will present the new world's Figure Skating Champion, Jacqueline du Bief of Paris, France, who is successor of Sonja Henie and Barbara Ann Scott.

A show designed for the entire family, the ice extravaganza combines beauty, color, daring skill, and comedy. The result is a production dazzlingly beautiful, technically brilliant.

Featured with the 1952 show will be an elaborate staging of Walt Disney's "Cinderella", starring the incomparable Miss Atwood as the rags-to-riches princess. In this production, four mechanical, full-size horses, as well as the famous pumpkin carriage, are seen.

To delight children of all ages, a "Jingles Parade" number features that merry old gentleman popular in all seasons, Santa Claus, as well as skating Christmas trees.

New comedy acts with the poker-face comics, the Maxwells, and after an eight years absence from the show, the lovable tramp, Joe Jackson and his bicycle, will be seen in the Fort Worth production. Jackson and Lynam are featured in such comedy numbers as Charleston Champs in a "Juke Box" production. For additional novelty there is Tricxie, back for her second consecutive year doing new juggling tricks.

Ice Capades will be presented nightly April 18 through April 22 with matinee performances on Saturday, April 19, and Sunday, April 20. Tickets priced at $2, $2.50 and $3 may be ordered by writing to Texas Ice Events, Will Rogers Memorial Coliseum, Fort Worth.

Foreign Aid Would Be Twice That Spent On Public School

WASHINGTON—The proposal to jump foreign aid spending to $10.5 billion next fiscal year means that the United States would shove out for that aid twice as much as is spent for public school education during the year.

The Administration is asking for a $7.9 billion appropriation for foreign aid, in fiscal 1953, although when the new fiscal year begins July 1 about $7.9 billion will still be unspent from earlier appropriations.

The Chamber of Commerce of the United States, which has been leading the fight for government economy, asks that foreign aid spending be held to $5 billion in the coming fiscal year. It gives its reasons for that stand as follows: "If the new sum of $7.9 billion is appropriated, a total of $15.8 billion would be available.

"The President actually intends spending about $10.5 billion of that total during the year, leaving $5.3 billion available for spending in future years.

"The Chamber has supported the principle of foreign aid. But it recognizes that such assistance cannot be unlimited. The built-up for foreign aid has been extremely rapid, jumping from $4.5 billion last year to $6.5 billion this year, and with another jump of $10.5 billion planned for next year. "No one knows how long the cold war will last. But it appears likely that we are in for a long pull. Therefore, like a long-distance runner, we must conserve our economic breath for what may lie ahead. Rather than strain our resources to the utmost now, we should spread our foreign aid over a longer period of lower expenditures.

Mrs. Allen D. Dabney, who had been visiting for several days in Dallas and Fort Worth returned home Saturday, accompanied by her son, Allen D. Dabney, Jr., and family of Fort Worth, who spent the week end here in the Dabney's home.

Summer School For Mothers Of Pre-School Deaf Children Set For May 27th, June 7th, Austin

You will recall that last year we cooperated with the State School for the Deaf in arranging for a school for the mothers of pre-school deaf children. This same project will be repeated this year.

A summer school will be held at the Texas School for the Deaf beginning May 27 and closing June 7. Actual instruction will not start until May 28, but mothers and children will be expected to arrive sometime on May 27.

Any mother and pre-school deaf child who is a resident of the state will be potentially eligible to attend this school. Mothers who attended the same school last year, of course, will not be eligible this year, since it is assumed that they will carry on from their experience of last year. Any child who has considerable degree of deafness, is eligible to attend provided he is not over eight or nine years of age. Precedence will be given those children who will become six years of age by September of this year. However, any pre-school child is eligible. Difference in planning for age groups will make it impractical to accept children of more than eight or nine years of age. Any seven, eight or nine year old child may already have been in school other than the

THE STORY: Alma Conroy, jewelry designer, has learned that her husband, entrusted with money by the firm where both are employed, has lost or spent $200 of this money while on a spree. In order to replace it, Alma takes some discarded jewels of her own to a gold-buying firm but upon her arrival, she finds the proprietor murdered.

XVI

INSTINCTIVELY Alma let out a smothered scream which was lost in the thunderous music which was still pouring from the radio. Then she called out wildly.

"Help! Help!"

There was, apparently, no one near enough to hear her, and with a super-effort she fought down her rising panic. She must not yell, like that, she must keep her head—do something!

Where were all the people who belonged in the outer office? Would they ever come back? Struggling against the shock and the nightmarish feeling of unreality she tried to think clearly. What ought she to do? Find some other office on the floor and tell what had happened? Ring for the elevator man, call the police? That was it, of course!

The right thing to do was to call the police! But if she did she ought to stay there—right where she was with that—that thing lying on the floor!

Besides if she called the police, she would be questioned. The box of old trinkets she carried would be examined, her need for selling them tried into. Her name would come out in the newspapers—Tommy's name too. And Trumbull's.

That was almost the worst aspect of the whole wretched situation: The House might be involved, for this dead man, who looked as if he must be important, possibly the very person who had dealt with The House in years past, would be connected with that fact, and the whole revolting publicity would come about because she, Alma Conroy, had come to sell jewelry because her husband who also worked at Trumbull's was in trouble!

It was a grim picture, but what was she to do except her obvious duty? Could she telephone the police anonymously?

For a long moment she stood looking at the telephone her heart beating wildly with fear and doubt. Then, just as she was about to take the phone out of its cradle, a bright object in a far corner of the room caught her eye. Something small and gleaming.

Even at that distance its shape was instantly familiar. She went cold all over and her hand froze in mid-air over the telephone. The few steps which it took to cross the office felt leaden and endless. She picked the thing up, seeing it through a sickening fog of terror. But she had not been mistaken. It was one of the gold and moonstone cuff-links she had made for Tommy and which had been missing from the shoe-box that morning.

How had it got here? Even while she asked herself the question she remembered a sickening fact. That morning Tommy had put on a shirt which required links!

Suddenly everything in the picture was changed. With her old, unbreakable instinct to protect Tommy, Alma slipped the cuff-link into her purse and, galvanized into action, made for the door. Now it was impossible to telephone the police, anonymously or otherwise. She must get away and get away fast. Nobody must know that she'd been in the place, and she must leave without being seen if possible.

THE corridor outside was still empty and she walked through it swiftly, but with as much composure as she could muster, the radio blaring after her.

At the far end of the hall she found a stairway and ran down three flights. Then, after leaning against the wall of the stair-well while she caught her breath, she forced herself to walk quietly to a different elevator from the one she had come up in, and pressed the down signal. A few moments later she was mingling with the crowds on the sunny street.

Alma walked rapidly for several blocks without the faintest idea of where she was going or what she was going to do. The shoe-box was still clutched tightly under one arm, while inside her purse the tell-tale cuff-link seemed to burn; she felt as though it must, in some mysterious manner, show through the thick folds of the leather. For the moment the urgent necessity for raising money for Tommy was completely wiped out of her mind by the storm of doubt and suspicion which her adventure had aroused.

What had Tommy been doing in the Mammoth Company's offices? Surely, surely he could not have been alone! He couldn't have done this thing—he couldn't! But he was involved. People who were mixed up in murders were—accessories, yes, that was the word.

EVEN at its worst the situation seemed utterly inexplicable. Why on earth should Tommy wish to kill Mr. Wheeler? He didn't even know the man so far as she was aware. Why should Tommy have gone there at all? The price he might have got for those cuff-links would have been a mere fraction of the sum he needed.

No, he would hardly have gone there to sell them, especially in view of her promise to get the money. It wasn't like Tommy to exert himself when he could get someone else to do a job for him. All at once, the false strength which had carried Alma Conroy this far, began to fail her. She couldn't think clearly and she had to have help and advice. Turning to Papa Victor Blanchard was out of the question. The shock would kill him.

Weathermen Say New Floods Due For Midwest Area

By United Press

Weathermen warn there may be new floods in store for the Midwest, following the first flood spell of the spring season.

At least 2,000 persons are reported homeless in midwestern states. And in one area, Havre, Mont., Martial Law was declared after high water flooded between 50 and 100,000 acres of land.

Melting snow and rain are swelling the Missouri River and other streams, raising the danger of new floodwaters.

so that without fail, community resources will be evolved, to the end that transportation funds will be made available.

I know that each of you realize how valuable this project is and that you will take immediate steps to search out in the community possibly eligible mothers and children. Some of you may find a short news item in your local paper indicated. In many communities, I am sure you will contact other agencies, informing them of this opportunity.

This will require immediate emphasis, since planning for the project has just now been completed and little time remains.

House Leader Believes Ike Should Quit

WASHINGTON, April 2 (UP)

—House Democratic leader John McCormack said the Eisenhower report "confirms" his belief that the general should take off his uniform and come home. He accuses Eisenhower of reviewing his position as commander for "political reasons."

At the same time, backers of Sen. Robert Taft said the Ohio Republican could not have been referred to when Eisenhower spoke of "strong voices in America" who were against the Atlantic Pact and the idea of collective security.

They said Taft urged cooperation with Europe, even if he did vote against the pact. As for pro-Eisenhower men, they are hailing the report as a masterpiece of statesmanship.
