"The Showoff" sure to make an impression with audience

Christy Morris and Bill Woodard square off against each other in the Garza Theatre's production of "The Showoff" which began its three week run May 14. Morris continues her string of strong performances as the feisty Mrs. Fisher in the play written by George Kelly. As the mother of lovestruck Amy (Cherri Brooks) Morris is none too pleased with her daughter's selection for a husband (Woodard as the pompous Aubrey Piper).

Woodard carries off the roll of Aubrey to perfection. Dressed in his loud suits with carnation and all, Woodard is every mother's nightmare.

for a son-in-law. He has seen it all, done it all and knows it all. The only problem is he never seems to have the money or be in the right place at the right time.

Morris's husband is played by Dr. James Bell. Stage veteran Alison Hoefler is the lovestruck Amy's older sister Clara. Rick Fay plays the part of her husband. Jay-Dwayne Goswick rounds out the family, playing the Fisher's son Joe.

The play is a change from the Theatre's first productions this year. A subtle comedy that provides several intense dramatic scenes, "The Showoff" is worth seeing.

White River directors, Post council move to end protest over water rates

by John Cordson

A face to face meeting between members of the Post City Council and the White River Water District board of directors has resulted in the city agreeing to drop its protest over water prices charged by the district and the district turning back to city control water taps in the Cedar Hills development. Dan Lamb, Jim Schooler and Maxine Conoly from the Post City Council, Mayor Jim Jackson and interim City Manager Delbert Rudd met with the White River Water District board of directors in an effort to solve the longstanding differences between the two governing entities.

"We need to see this thing solved and get along," said council member Schooler.

"At the same time we as a council have the responsibility to the taxpayers of getting all of the revenue we can," continued Schooler, explaining the council's caution in removing the protest.

Prior to the Thursday, May 13 meeting at the White River water offices at the reservoir 32 miles north of town, the Post council has been paying the city's water bill under protest for a rate increase implemented by the district back in 1988.

The protest began when White River increased water rates charged to Post from 30 ¢ per thousand gallons to 45 ¢ per thousand. Members of the council at that time felt the increase was illegal and went against a contract between Post and White River signed in the early 1960's. Post was not the only city to have its water rates raised in 1988. White River also raised the rates it charged to the three other communities it provides with water. These include Ralls, Crosbyton and Spur. Post was the only city to protest the rate increase.

The city had also considered taking legal action trying to reduce the rates back to those in the original contract. The talk of a possible lawsuit has led to a belief that legal action had been filed against White River. This perception is incorrect. According to Rudd, formal legal action has never been taken against White River.

"As far as I know, we have never gone to the court house and said we want to bring action against White River," said Rudd.

After reviewing all the documents available concerning White River, several members of the council felt that the best thing to do would be to drop the protest from the monthly payment to the water district.

"We took everything at face value," said Lamb. "Doing the research the last two weeks we found out things weren't as they were presented."

According to Al O'Brien, the long time general manager of White River Water District, the rate increase that spurred the protest was merely the district passing on the cost of delivering water to its customers. He said that even at 45 ¢ per thousand, Post residents are getting a bargain. O'Brien said cost of delivering water to Post is closer to $1.06 per thousand than the rates the district charges. The difference is made up from recreation revenue generated at the lake by boaters and fishermen.

Mueller doubles up at Spring Art show

Local artist Bill Mueller doubled up the awards in the annual Post Art Guild's Spring Art Show, winning both the Best of Show and the People's Choice awards for his photograph "Double Double".

Joining Mueller with a Best of Show award of her own was Shirley White. White's entry, a pastel portrait entitled "Ruidoso Maiden" earned her a $60 cash award. White also received several purchase awards for her work.

Mueller also received a $60 cash award along with an additional $25 as the People's Choice. Mueller's prize winning exhibit was a color photograph of a lightning strike over a pair of windmills on the prairie.

The Post Art Guild's Spring Art Show concluded Sunday, May 16 with the afternoon awards ceremony at the Algeria Art Center. This year artists entered 200 exhibits ranging from photographs, painting, drawings, pottery and sculpture.

The 1993 Citizen's award went to Julios and Esobelle Stelzer. They selected a painting by Gloria Lee. The $125 painting was titled "After the Rains." The Stelzers donated the remaining money from the $300 Citizen's Award back to the Post Art Guild for the Algeria Art Center. Individual award winners included:

Letters to the Editor

Dear Editor,
I would like to commend the City of Post employees, supervisor - Mike Sanchez and acting city manager Delbert Ruddle for the prompt and outstanding work they have done in preparing the pool for the summer. Opening the season poses a lot of extra work on this group of men. Not only was the work accomplished for this year but the long range planning between our Parks and Recreation board and the city will provide the new chemical changes we will be required to have in the near future. Looking ahead saves the taxpayers money and the inconvenience of a possible shut down if a change is not planned for in advance. You all receive ONE AT-BOY from your town!

Sincerely,
Theresa Harp

'LOPES CATCHER Jim Riley Simpson tags out a Ralls runner in the 'Lopes 11-10 loss to the Jackrabbits Monday afternoon in Lubbock.

'Lopes fall in game against Ralls

by John Corlsen
 Post Bold Gold baseball moved into its second season within a season Monday yesterday as they played Ralls in a district playoff game to determine the league champion. Both teams tied with identical 5-1 league records which forced the special playoff held in Lubbock May 17.

Ralls scored three runs in the bottom of the sixth inning to pull ahead of Post 11-9 heading into the final frame. Post managed to cut into that lead by one run before losing 11-10 to the Jackrabbits. Post led much of the game, twice by four points 5-1 and 9-5. The 'Lopes were unable to hold the lead though and Ralls earned top billing as both teams move on to bi-district action this coming Thursday.

Post will take on New Deal in Lubbock at O'Bannon Field located off of the Brownfield Highway.

In the Ralls game, two crucial two base errors let the Jackrabbits back in the contest. Pete Torres gave coach Fred Postell five strong innings before he was replaced by Phil Leininger in the middle of the sixth. Between the two 'Lope pitcher, Ralls was only able to collect four hits in scoring their 11 runs. Five Antelope errors and several bases on balls hurt the 'Lopes effort.

Post batters pounded Ralls pitching for 13 hits including a couple of doubles and a triple by Bodie Simpson.

Post set up the special playoff game by knocking off both Tahoka and Idalou early last week.

The 'Lopes hosted Tahoka Tuesday. After falling behind 8-6 on two Bulldog runs in the top of the seventh inning, the 'Lopes rallied for three runs of their own in the bottom of the inning to take a 9-8 win.

The 'Lopes used the same scenario Friday in Idalou as they held back a Wildcat rally for a 9-7 win. Post scored four times in the top of the seventh to take a 9-4 lead and then had to hold on as the Wildcats tallied three times in their half of the inning.

Public Notice

On April 16, 1993, Southwestern Bell Telephone Company (SWBT) filed an application with the Public Utility Commission of Texas (Commission) for approval of a new optional service, Network Subscriber Information Interface (NSII). NSII is a new service feature developed primarily for the provision of Voice Messaging Service (VMS). It will give a VMS provider (as SWBT's customer) the ability to receive originating call information from SWBT's central office and to activate and deactivate a Message Waiting Indicator (MWI) on the line of the VMS provider's patron. NSII also gives the VMS provider the ability to activate and deactivate an intermittent dial tone on a patron's line in multiple offices. The VMS provider will be able to perform these functions in multiple offices through a connection to a single Message Node office. The Message Node will be a pre-designated central office and will interconnect with all central offices within the Message Node Service Area. Upon approval of this application, NSII will be available to customers where facilities are available. Available facilities are not currently deployed statewide. The proposed effective date of this service is June 20, 1993.

SWBT estimates these new services will increase its annual revenues during the first year by approximately $2.4 million. VMS providers and Telephone Answering Services and their subscribers are the types of customers likely to be affected by approval of these services.

The proposed recurring monthly rate and nonrecurring installation charge is as follows:

Rate Element	Recurring	Nonrecurring
NSII	$6,000.00	$2,000.00

Persons who wish to comment on this application should notify the Commission by June 10, 1993. Requests for further information should be mailed to the Public Utility Commission of Texas, 7800 Shoal Creek Blvd., Suite 400N, Austin, Texas 78757, or you may call the Public Utility Commission Public Information Office at 512-458-0256, or 512-458-0221 teletypewriter for the deaf.

Bullock: Criminal Justice Reform is on the Fast Track

Lt. Governor Bob Bullock recently said sweeping reform of the state's criminal justice system is on the fast-track and will do more than any government action in the last 20 years to make Texas a safer place to live.

"For the first time, we have made distinction between violent and non-violent offenders and tailored the punishment and facility to fit the crime," Bullock said. "This cost-effective, sensible approach is long overdue, badly needed and has the support of everyone from state prosecutors and crime victims to county officials and Mothers Against Drunk Driving."

"I applaud the work of Sen. John Whitmire, Rep. Allen Hightower and all those responsible for this reform."

The package of bills by Whitmire will be heard and voted on Tuesday by the full Senate. Representatives Hightower and Allen Place are sponsoring the bills in the House of Representatives.

The $700 million criminal justice plan follows two years of work by the Punishment Standards Commission, which led to revisions in the state penal code. The package of reform measures were worked out by Senators, Representatives and staff members from the offices of the Lieutenant Governor, Governor and Speaker of the House.

The proposal establishes a new system of state jails to which judges could sentence non-violent offenders for up to two years.

From the Pulpit

The end is near

Did you see the cartoon by Dirk West (AJ, April 30) of the guy holding his sign "THE END IS NEAR! VOTE AGAINST EVERYTHING!" The response of Dirk West to this character is "How You Vote is Your Business—Be Sure to Vote—You Know He Will!"

What I got from this cartoon is that if you don't want an important decision left up to the "End is Near" character, then you better go to the voting booth. My suspicion, however, is that the "End is Near" character probably won't vote. His view would more likely be "Why bother? The world is coming to an end."

After Waco, I don't feel quite as comfortable with the "End is Near" people. I still believe, of course, that the earth will end sooner or later. The earth is physical. Like us, it's a depreciable item—it's not going to be around forever.

I also would agree that it's good advice to live each day as if it were your last. Otherwise, we could end up like the "fool" in Luke 12:19 who decided to take life easy and forget the rest of the world—only to be told "Fool, this night your soul will be required of you!" But notice that this passage emphasizes living your life as if everyday were your last by doing good in the worlds—not by retreating from it.

My biggest problem with the "End is Near" folks is that they ignore Mark 13:32: (Jesus speaking) "But of that day or hour (the end of time) no one knows, not even the angels in heaven, nor the Son, but the Father alone."

Not even Jesus knew, but the "End is Near" folks do? Gimme a break.

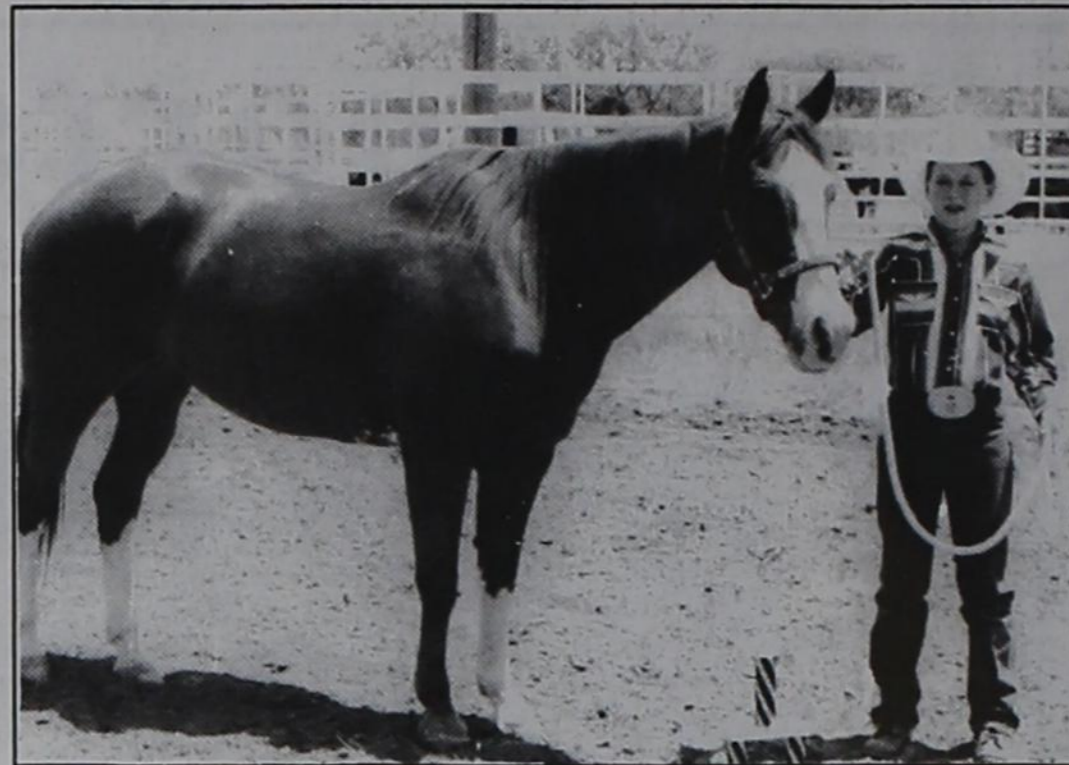

—So what about the end of times in the Book of Revelation? The author, John, was writing in exile with the Roman Army successfully smashing the world. His writing style was "apocalyptic," full of images of numbers and animals representing good and evil. This style is not unique to Revelation (for example, the identical style is in Daniel 7). The apocalyptic style was used by Biblical writers almost exclusively during times of extreme persecution. In the opinion of most mainline theologians, John was writing about what would happen if the Romans (not the Russians or Chinese) succeeded. The answer, which still true no, is that the world can do its worst, but God is still the ruler. The Book of Revelation was not intended to out-prophecy Jesus. If Jesus didn't know when thing would end, neither did John in Revelation. I believe in the Second Coming; I just don't know when. In the last analysis, whether God comes for us or we go to God, the individual has only a short time on this earth. We should not waste it in fear and seclusion. The big question is in what we do with the time that is given to us.

Financing Agriculture

Dear Friends;

The money for financing agriculture for the most part comes from the investments made by farmers and local businesses. In this community, agriculture plays a large role in the success of our local economy.

It would make sense to do your investing here at the bank that makes AG loans. By investing with us, you are making more money available for agriculture and that helps us all.

Sincerely yours,

Charles Hardin

Planting slow to begin on high plains

by Shawn Wade

High Plains cotton producers aren't taking any chances with the 1993 crop according to Lubbock-based Plains Cotton Growers (PCG).

With the memory of the 1992 crop fresh in their minds area producers seem to be taking a "wait a little longer" approach to 1993. The majority will be content to wait for the arrival of the areas optimum planting period instead of trying to get a jump on the growing season. Typically the bulk of the area's cotton is planted in the two weeks between May 5 and May 20.

Extension Cotton Specialist Kater Hake of Lubbock says there are several reasons why producers are holding back. One of the biggest is that in general the area remains on the deficit side of the moisture scale, especially in predominantly dryland areas south of Lubbock.

"Moisture levels have been creeping up over the last few days due to scattered showers across the area," says Hake. "However, we still don't have enough moisture to plant in most of the dryland areas."

Hake also reports that some early planted cotton in the Gaines County area is not doing very well. He expects most of this cotton to eventually need replanting.

With planting activity yet to begin on a large scale, several notable exceptions to that "wait a little longer" approach have already been observed.

According to Dr. John Gannaway, cotton breeder at the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station (TAES) north of Lubbock, planting has been completed for the 1993 Plains Cotton Improvement Program (PCIP) cold tolerance nursery.

In 1992 the PCIP nursery was initially planted with over 200 experimental lines. Only seventeen lines survived until harvest. In order to take advantage of their ability to withstand cold temperatures these lines have been put on an accelerated release schedule to get them in the hands of commercial breeders as soon as possible. The 1993 nursery was planted April 20.

Gannaway also notes that two demonstration plots have also been planted for the Texas Farmer-Stockman Show, October 12-14, 1993, in Lubbock. One plot will feature 10 PCIP breeding lines for producers to observe. The second will contain a number of cotton varieties providing both a historical look at the cotton grown on the Plains and highlighting the diversity of materials available to car cotton breeders.

• White River

"Recreation is making all of the bond and interest payments," said O'Brien. "Everybody can't understand why we don't charge the cost."

The agreement reached at the special meeting between White River and Post must be ratified by the entire Post Council at its June meeting scheduled for Tuesday, June 1.

The Cedar Hills concession by White River returns the taps back over to Post. According to Rudd, there are approximately 11 taps in the subdivision located west of Post just under the caprock on the Tahoka Highway.

Apparently, Post turned the maintenance and water revenues generated from Cedar Hills over to White River in the late 1970's. According to O'Brien, the city manager at that time asked White River if they wanted to take over the subdivision.

"He asked if White River wanted to take it over," said O'Brien. "The lines and meters were already in, all we had to do was drive up and read the meters so we took it over."

O'Brien said that even though White River was servicing Cedar Hills, the water district had never formally voted to take in the area.

"I don't think the White River board ever voted to take it over, they just did it at the request of a former city manager there in Post," said O'Brien.

The White River board voted unanimously to return Cedar Hills to Post. Control of the subdivision returns to the city on June 1. Rudd and Mayor Jackson the only thing that will change concerning where and how Cedar Hills residents pay their water bills is the address.

By returning Cedar Hills to Post, the city council hopes to head off future controversy with new water taps near the city. "It kind of worked itself into a problem (Cedar Hills under White River control)," said Schooler. "People building homes were asking why should they have to tie onto city lines if people in Cedar Hills didn't have to."

A third area the council addressed during the special meeting concerned water sold for water flooding of oil wells. There has been a disagreement for some time between Post and White River over the water district selling water for flooding within Post's market area. In this area, the council also changed its mind after reviewing records and receiving an explanation from the White River Board.

According to the water district, the revenue generated from water flooding was a major component in the district's financial package put together when the White River dam was built.

"Water flooding does provide a major portion of the income for White River. According to figures O'Brien provided the Dispatch, the water district brings in almost $42,000 a month in water revenues. Of this amount, one oil company pays a little over $11,000. Post's average water bill hovers around $9,000 per month, making it the largest municipal user served by White River. Crosbyton and Spur run a close second, using about $4,000 of water each month and Ralls is the smallest user, averaging $3,700 a month in water purchases.

Water flooding also helps keep the water rates down to the four communities served by White River. "If water flooding were to quit tomorrow, we would have to go up on our rates because we don't have the reserves," said director Charles Gray of Ralls.

Tax 'n Facts
by Terri S. Cash, CPA
SELLING YOUR HOUSE

Taxwise, selling your house just used to mean rolling over the net gain on the sale to the next house or, if you were over 55, taking the one-time exclusion of $125,000 of your gain tax-free. Some new wrinkles have been ironed into the tax law; these are not proposals by the new administration, but were passed last October.

The first issue is real estate taxes. At a closing, generally, the buyer of a property will pay the taxes—often to the seller—for the time that he or she, the buyer, will occupy the house. Now that payment has to be reported, usually by the attorney who handles the closing. Why? So both parties can't claim the same tax paid.

Here's another, regarding seller-financed sales. If the buyer claims a deduction for mortgage interest paid to the seller or any other individual, the buyer must list the seller's taxpayer number, and the seller list the buyer's number. The reason is to make sure the seller declares the income from the loan. Beware: this rule is retroactive on old loans.

Whatever you do, it seems to be tax time. Make it easier on yourself: talk to the folks at Mason, Warner & Co., P.C.
