Chamber of Commerce banquet to feature popular radio show host

The 1995 Post Chamber of Commerce banquet, set for Saturday, February 25, will feature popular radio show host Ray Stone. He has been closely associated with the Dallas Cowboy organization for the past 20 years and is producer of the "Dallas Cowboy Football Report," which airs daily throughout the southwest. Tickets for the banquet, which begins at 7 p.m., are $10 each and may be purchased at the Chamber of Commerce office in the south wing of City Hall or from any Chamber of Commerce director.

Directors this year are Jim Plummer, Marie Neff, Pat Bilbo, Glen Brown, Shane Smith, Kenny Ratke, Dee Pittman, Greg Williams, Marvin Butler and Linda Waldrip.

Stone's radio network includes more than 200 large and small market radio stations in Texas, New Mexico, Oklahoma, Arkansas and Louisiana.

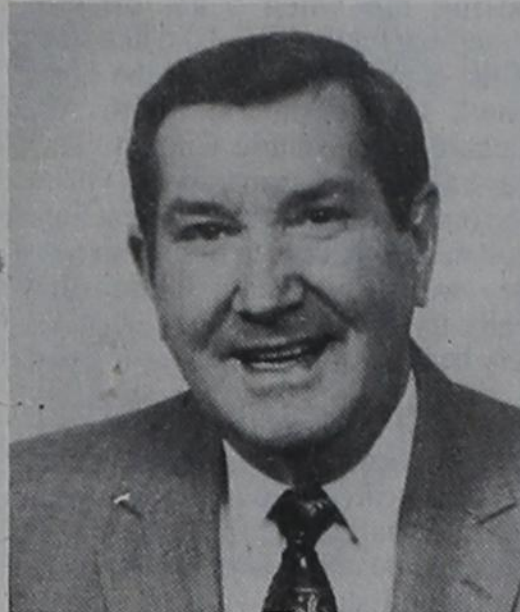

In addition to the Cowboy report, Stone also produces "Inside the NFL" and other major sports programs for national network radio.

His ability to provide in depth coverage of the happenings at Valley Ranch in a professional and positive manner has earned him the respect of the players and coaches, both past and present. This was most evident when he was selected to serve as the Master of Ceremonies for the "Tom Landry Week-end" in the Lower Rio Grande Valley when the Mission, Texas high school football stadium was renamed Tom Landry Stadium.

Stone also travels the U.S. each year speaking about the many humorous stories and encounters he has had during his 20 years of providing coverage of America's team and the NFL.

Here's what Roger Staubach says about Stone. "Yes, it's true what you are telling your audiences. I did crawl through the window of the 11th floor of the Cowboy offices and walk on the outside ledge to Tex Schramm's office to get him off the phone. Did eleven floors straight down scare me? Heck yes. And it sure scared old Tex to see me spread eagle on the outside of his office window. Keep talking Dallas Cowboys, Ray."

Girl Scouts continue to take orders for the cookie sale

The annual Girl Scout cookie sale continues through March 5, with deliveries expected beginning February 16. Those interested in purchasing cookies may contact any member of the Girl Scout troop, or call 495-2517 or 495-3057.

Criminal mischief investigation continues

The Garza County Sheriff's department continues to investigate criminal mischief charges related to an incident January 28 at approximately 11 p.m. in the 100 block of North Avenue F. According to investigating officers, several suspects trapped Daniel Martin on Avenue F by blocking his car in the front and back, then the suspects broke out windows in Martin's vehicle and tried to drag him out of the vehicle.

Martin managed to start his vehicle and drove away. No charges have been filed as of Tuesday, Jan. 31.

On January 26 at 12:54 a.m., officers stopped a vehicle driven by Abel Reyna in the 200 block of West 11th St. and the suspect ran from the deputies. After being apprehended, Reyna was charged with driving while intoxicated and eluding arrest. He posted bond in the Garza County Court.

Officers investigated complaints about gun shots in the 300 block of Jasper St on January 28. No one was injured and the case is still under investigation.

An accident January 27 resulted in damage to a fence off Hwy 380 West when a Brownfield resident lost a small trailer loaded with a driving lawn mower and other items. The two-wheel trailer came loose from the vehicle and rammed into a fence on Cecil Bland's property, causing an estimated $110 worth of damage. The driver was unaware of the missing trailer until he was near Tahoka. He returned later. The incident is still under investigation.

An accident at the intersection of West 10th and North Avenue S resulted in no injuries but one driver was cited for failing to maintain insurance, no current driver's license and failure to yield right of way at a stop sign.

Up and down Main Street

By Wanda Mitchell

As we go through life, we find that everything that is beneficial is a two way street. Relationships, school, work — anything that pertains to everyday living is a two way street. If this were not true, you would simply go as far as you could and then hit a dead end. This is true of your Chamber of Commerce. In order for your Chamber to be effective and be of help to you, you must be willing to participate both financially and physically with your Chamber. When we receive a call at this office asking for information about where a person can buy a product, I immediately look for a membership list. Membership has its rewards and this is surely one of them. If you expect help from us, then you must be willing to help, too. It's a two way street.

What did you like best about the Super Bowl? If you were a 49er's fan, you liked the score. I liked Tony Bennett. I would have chosen better material for him but he still sounded great. I was watching a movie on T.V. the other night and my grandson called and said "Nana, Tony Bennett is on Channel 10." I switched but it was almost too late. I do, however, want to thank Mitchell for remembering that his grandmother is a fan and to keep calling me when I am missing something really good. I did like some of the commercials during the Super Bowl. Loved the one with Ann Richards and Maurizio Cuomo. They may have another career ahead of them. The one with the frogs was great but it took me a long time to figure out what they were advertising. I think they really try out all their new ideas at a very healthy price on the Super Bowl.

Post students can cover books with propane

Post Middle School students had another surprise gift awaiting them when they return from their holiday; new, educational book covers courtesy of the Texas Railroad Commission and the Texas Education Agency (TEA).

Staff at the two state agencies teamed up to design the cover, which features a two-color collage of Texas showing the varied uses of propane fuel, also known as LP-gas. About 650,000 students in 1,300 schools across Texas will receive the free book covers.

"As well as protecting textbooks, the book covers teach students about an important Texas product," said Barry Williamson, Railroad Commission chairman. "About a third of the U.S. supply of propane is produced within our state."

According to Railroad Commissioner Carole Keeton Rylander, the book covers are only one part of the Commission's plan to teach students about propane and other alternative fuels. In partnership with TEA and the General Land Office, the commission's Alternative Fuels Division contracted with the Pasadena Independent School District to develop new curricular materials on alternative fuels for middle-school science classes.

"These young people who will be making tomorrow's energy decisions will learn that Texas and the nation have a wealth of alternatives to meet the energy needs of the future," Rylander said.

The educational package is expected to reach schools by this fall. Activities and experiments will illustrate energy topics, such as production, conservation, efficiency, composition, consumption and safety. The unit will also discuss the relationship of alternative fuels to environmental protection and dependence on foreign oil.

Remember to get your tickets for the Chamber Banquet on February 25th and for The Rotary Club Chili Supper February 10th. And remember, too, TAKE PRIDE AND TAKE PART IN POST!!!!!!

Rainbows and clouds !!

By Rev. Jim Graham

There are many magnificent, awe-inspiring natural phenomena. But none is so beautiful as the rainbow wrapped around the neck of a dying storm. To pass through the darkness and blackness of an hour when thunders roar and flash and then the noise subsides, the lightning ceases, the dark clouds break through and a rainbow appears in all the dazzling colors of the spectrum, is an experience that inspires the soul. But before the rainbow there must be storms. Storms produce rain and rain makes rainbows possible. Clouds must always precede rainbows.

It is indeed a strange fact that there is no accepted, agreed-upon, scientific theory of what makes a rainbow possible. Several theories are proposed. We do know that the first rainbow appeared following the flood, the great deluge. God hung the beautiful, the circular rainbow in the heavens as a covenant of divine promise. In the book of Revelation we have pictured the last rainbow, which is encircling the throne of God.

Life in this temporal existence is so constituted that the choicest things are the costliest, and the most valuable, the most expensive; the most pleasurable, the most painful.

Liberty follows slavery; freedom follows bondage; pleasure follows pain; joy follows sorrow; and happiness follows duty.

The glory of the stars is revealed by the darkness night; tempered steel comes from hot furnaces; pure gold is the result of fire; the fragrance of costly perfume comes only from crushed flowers.

Rainbows always follow, never precede clouds.

That is God's offer. He always leaves us in the sunlight. In the glory of the six creative days recorded in the first chapter of Genesis, each description ends. "And the morning and the evening were the first day, second day, etc. "No, that is only the way most people quote it. But the record actually reads, "And the evening and the morning." "God always leaves us in the light. The dark always precedes the bright. God's rainbow always follows the clouds.

In this mortal life there are many areas where clouds gather, thunders roar, and lightnings flash. There are hours of darkness, distress, sorrow, bereavement, remorse, and guilt. But there is also a rainbow for every cloud.

1. From the dark cloud of sin there is the glorious rainbow of salvation. John 3:16.
2. From the dark cloud of inner pollution there is the rainbow of complete cleansing. 1 John 1:9.
3. From the cloud of need there is the rainbow of unlimited supply. Phil 4:19.
4. From the cloud of weakness there is the rainbow of strength. 2 Cor. 12:9-10.
5. From the cloud of loneliness there is the rainbow of good cheer. Mt. 14:27; John 16:33; Mt. 28:20.
6. For the cloud of man's perplexities there is the cloud of God's guidance. Ps 23:3-4.
7. For the cloud of suffering there is the rainbow of comfort.
8. For the cloud of misunderstanding there is the rainbow of his understanding.
9. For the cloud of human want there is the rainbow of divine plenty.
10. For the cloud of temptation there is the rainbow of deliverance. 1 Cor. 10:13; 15:51-55.

WHAT A HOPE!
11. Our final cloud—death—shall be transcended by the rainbow of immortality and his glorious spectacle shall encircle the throne of God.

Clouds? Yes. But also glorious rainbows. But the rainbows come only to those who endure the clouds.

Raindrops permits the sun to made natural rainbows; so teardrops permit God to make spiritual rainbows.

For every cloud that God permits to darken your sky, he has a rainbow. To him that overcomes the clouds are given the rainbows.

No cross—no crowns.

No clouds—no rainbows.

Texas begins to assert its rights as a state

by Wesley W. Burnett

There is, to my surprise, encouraging news coming from Austin these days... our legislators are actually taking the issue of the 10th Amendment seriously. State Senator Jane Nelson, Republican of Flower Mound, has introduced a resolution to reaffirm the authority of Texas under the 10th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution.

And then there's the recent Senate passage of Sen. John Whitmire's bill to delay implementation of the auto emissions testing, in hopes that the U.S. Congress will face the reality that its continuing violations of the 10th Amendment is creating a revolution among the states.

Now add Pampa's Democratic State Representative Warren Chisum to the list of revolutionaries working to clip the wings of the mighty federal government. Chisum has introduced legislation to restrict federal law enforcement officers in their quest for abusing citizens' rights.

Chisum's bill, labeled Texas House Bill #HB361, forbids any federal law enforcement official from arresting any Texas citizen without first getting written permission from the sheriff of that county where the arrest is to take place. Chisum informed the Fort Worth Star-Telegram, reported in a Dec. 22, 1994 article, that the siege and U.S. government abuses at the Branch Davidian home near Waco was a driving force behind the legislation. He also is reported to have said that he wants to raise the issue of states rights under the 10th Amendment to the U.S. Constitution.

With limited exceptions, Chisum's bill says, "a federal employee not listed under article 2.122, code of criminal procedure, may make an arrest, search a person or the person's property, or seize an asset of a person in this state only if the federal employee has written permission to do from the sheriff of the county in which the activity occurs or by a designee of the sheriff."

Wow! Just imagine the impact of this law on the "Rambos" from BATF, FBI and IRS. Before they can burst into your house, they have to first get permission from the sheriff. Hey, I'm for that. I trust Sheriff Kenny Ratke's common sense and idea of fairness much more than any federal agent hiding behind the shield of impunity as a government employee.

Had this law been in effect at the time of the raid on the Branch Davidians, the McClellan County sheriff would have walked up to the Mount Carmel house, knocked on the door, and presented the warrant to David Koresh and that would have been that.

But Chisum's bill does more... it requires the federal agents to abide by the U.S. Constitution as specified in the 10th Amendment. "Pursuant to the Tenth Amendment to the United States Constitution, a federal law purporting to give a federal employee the authority of a sheriff in this state is not recognizable in this state." And then the bill adds a special penalty clause for violating citizens' rights: "An attorney representing the state in a county in which a violation of this Act occurs shall bring a prosecution in the case and may not refuse to prosecute as an exercise of prosecutorial discretion. An attorney representing the state who fails to bring a prosecution as required by this section engages in official misconduct and is subject to removal from office."

That is tough language, but it is right and it should be approved by the legislature and implemented immediately.

Chisum adds even more restrictions in the proposed law by insisting that the request to the sheriff from a federal agent "must contain: (1) the name of the intended subject of the arrest, or seizure; and (2) a clear statement of probable cause for arrest, search or seizure and an address or location where the intended arrest, search or seizure will be attempted; and (b) a description of specific assets or goods to be seized, if applicable."

And then the law tightens the noose by saying, "Permission under this section is valid only if countersigned by the sheriff or the sheriff's designee and only for 48 hours after the time of signing by the sheriff or designee. A sheriff or sheriff's designee may refuse to sign a request for permission under this section for any person."

Now here is the best part... "An arrest, search, or seizure attempted in violation

Will the GOP lead a revolution — or a retreat?

by Stephen Chapman

The GOP revolutionaries, who took over Congress roaring like lions, may soon be lapping from a nice saucer of milk. All the bold preaching about mercilessly slashing government down to its few essential functions has given way to stammering, "Yes, but" and "On the other hand" about every program with a constituency larger and more intimidating than a string quartet. Republicans are in danger of proving to voters, once and for all, that what they offer is not a choice but an echo.

On the first day of hearings about public broadcasting, which soaks up $286 million in taxpayer dollars every year, the recipients armed that some small rural stations might shut down — and Newt Gingrich, who had vowed to "zero out" this subsidy, promptly backed off. "If the real problem is small rural stations," he said, "maybe part of the answer is to give the money directly to small rural stations."

If the real problem is small rural stations, maybe part of the answer is tell rural residents that one price they pay for clean air, uncrowded roads and bucolic tranquility is doing without some amenities that can be sustained only where there are large agglomerations of people and concrete. Maybe public TV and radio won't survive in every backwoods hamlet from the Gulf Coast to the Bering Sea, but where does the Constitution guarantee us all access to "Car Talk?"

"Small" and "rural" are two adjectives that apparently turn Republicans spines to vishu. As in "small business" — which unlike its larger cousin is supposedly virtuous enough to warrant government assistance.

At a recent news conference, the new head of the House Small Business Committee, Kansas Republican Jan Meyers, was asked if she favored big cuts for the Small Business Administration. Reports The Wall Street Journal: "Flanked by small business lobbyists, she took a long breath, then responded: 'Well, I don't think so.' Later she said some cuts would be needed but rejected the idea of scrapping the agency, insisting that 'it is a tremendous advocate for small business.'"

Yes, it is. And why on earth should American taxpayers be financing that? If Republicans are truly attuned to the concerns of the people running hardware stores and gas stations on Main Street, why do they have to pay bureaucrats to all them the concerns of those people?

And if small business needs an advocate, why not let small-business people say for it? In fact, they already have several in Washington, in the form of such groups as the National Federation of Independent Business, the U.S. Chamber of Commerce and the Small Business Legislative Council.

Besides, the SBA does far more than simply advocate. It extends loan guarantees to small companies whose chief qualification is that no one would care of lending them money without a federal promise — a practice that gives SBA one of the highest default rates in Washington. It also provides cheaper loans to homeowners who had the foresight not to waste their money on such frivolities as flood and earthquake insurance. Closing down these programs and the SBA itself would save $800 million a year.

That is pocket change next to agricultural subsidies, which by a conservative reckoning consumed $16 billion last year — all for the thoughtful purpose of helping farmers from the normal storms and stresses of a capitalist economy. You would think such a large pot of money would be an obvious target for GOP budget cutters, but only if you forget that the new Senate majority leader is Kansas' Bob Dole, a faithful footman for the farm lobby.

And if you forget that the new chairman of the House Agriculture Committee, Pat Roberts — of, yes, Kansas — who notes that all those dollars add up to a petty 0.6 percent of federal outlays, Roberts also fumes that you critics of farm spending are "agriculture know-nothings" who "complain about agriculture with your mouths full." His syllogism, as I understand it, goes as follows: "farmers feed you, so shut up."

But farmers earn their daily bread as well as ours only with the indispensable help of ignorant and wicked urbanites who furnish them with machinery, tractors, fuel, pesticides and fertilizer — generally without the benefit of lavish subsidies from the Treasury. And plenty of farmers prosper without federal aid. Republicans have an abiding faith in free markets, which for some reason ends at the cornfield's edge.

GOP members of Congress have talked incessantly about scaling back the federal government, but it remains to be proven that their backbones are as strong as their tongues. If Republicans lack the nerve to make Republican constituencies like farmers and small business swear off federal cash, or to end welfare for Barney and Big Bird, they may as well go home to the voters and confess that in Washington, everything has changed but nothing has changed.

of this Act is unlawful, and an individual taking part in an unlawful arrest, search or seizure may be prosecuted for kidnapping, trespass, theft or any other penal law of this state, as appropriate, and if the action results in the death of another, for murder or manslaughter."

Federal agents, if confronted with this law, will be a lot more careful about abusing the rights of citizens if they know they will face criminal charges for their violations. No more "no-knock" break-ins... no more warrantless searches... no more theft of property... the feds will have to follow due process just like the Constitution demands.

I sincerely hope that county sheriffs in Texas will get behind this legislation. I hope they will take a close look at their obligations as protectors of the people of this state... not only to protect us from the non-government criminals... but to shield us from the illegal activities of agents of the federal government.

I think Chisum is a brave man for introducing this legislation. I think he may sense that for too many years we have allowed the almighty federal government to treat us as sub-citizens... whereas in fact, we are citizens of the state (or republic) of Texas... guaranteed freedom from tyranny and extortion by a federal government and its agents.

Although our state senator, John Montford, argued on the senate floor against Senator Nelson's resolution, perhaps we can influence our state representative David Counts to support Chisum's bill. Senator Montford is quoted in the January 25, 1995 edition of The Dallas Morning News as saying, "I don't want to send a mixed signal. You are not asking the federal government to put back on the states the issue of long-term care, are you?"

Montford misses the point entirely. It is not a question of asking the federal government anything... it is that the U.S. Congress has absolutely no authority to guarantee "long-term care." It also has no Constitutional authority to demand auto emissions testing or shutting down a business because of suspected asbestos contamination or any of a jillion other silly rules issued by its overzealous agents.

The federal government was created by the states to serve the people, not to steal from them. The federal government was designed to be the agent of the people and answerable to the states. Individual states are not required to submit themselves to the federal government for approval.

It doesn't matter one whit how the federal government feels about this issue... the people of Texas have had enough. And if Senator Montford is concerned about the feds refusing to pay Texas for this or that program, then he might want to study Colorado's plan to collect federal highway tax funds, keep that portion which belongs to Texas, and send what's left to Washington. Or maybe, not send any at all. Or, as free people, we might just want to tell Congress to keep the money and give us our freedom. Perhaps Gov. George Bush has said it best, "Texans can take care of Texas," thank you.

Senator Nelson is to be commended for her efforts at restoring the rights of Texans. Her action and the action of the Texas Senate in approving the 10th Amendment resolution, puts Texas alongside Colorado, Missouri, Hawaii and Illinois, and 12 other states that are considering similar legislation.

As Walter Williams pointed out (The Post Dispatch, Dec. 28, 1994), "The 10th Amendment movement may be America's last chance to peacefully get Congress to obey the Constitution."

Who has most influenced your life?

by Robert Fulghum

Class, this is an exam. And there's only one question: "Who, outside your immediate family, has most influenced your life?"

My bet is one part of your answer will begin with, "Well, there was this teacher..." And I'll wager that your description will include these qualities:

First, the teacher was tough. Nobody ever talks about "easy" or "snap course" when speaking of these teachers. "I never worked so hard in a class in my life" is what I hear. Great teachers have high standards — both for their students and for themselves. I remember realizing that my most influential teacher worked harder than I did and spent longer hours preparing for class than I spent doing homework. When I became a teacher, I saw the same truth among my colleagues. Theirs was a serious professional calling, not just a job.

Respect. The great teachers consider their students in the same light a great coach view young athletes. The only issue is how to enable players to succeed. My own master teacher made a practice of giving students the actual final exam for the course during the first week of class. He wanted us to realize that we already knew a great deal about the subject. His job was to help us make sense of what we knew, expand it and make use of it beyond his class.

Responsibility. The great teachers believe learning is a shared obligation. The last question on that final exam given the first day was: "What do you want to know?" He felt we should feel responsible for our education and not be sheep corralled in a teacher's pen. If he wasn't satisfied with an answer, he would ask the student to leave the class and not come back until he or she had a reason for being there.

On the last day of class, on the final exam, the teacher asked the same question, with a twist: "What do you want to know NOW, as a result of this course?" He felt he was responsible for the quality of that answer, and if an answer was thin, he had failed. He wanted our evaluation of his teaching.

Life. The great teachers see course content in the context of the lives they and their students live outside the classroom. My master teacher studied and taught history because he felt obligated to help make history and to engender in his students the same obligation. He was active in the civil-rights movement, wrote opinion columns for the local newspaper and brought the morning paper into the classroom to connect the past and future to the present. He wanted us to understand that historical figures were people like him and us — kinfolk — as were all those who came after him and us. He'd pound the daily paper and say, "This is history — our story."

I am still a teacher. And so are you. Without realizing it, others look to us for information and example. We know this because we are still students — still looking to others to inform and inspire us. I submit that our understanding of the way in which we teach and learn is directly affected by the experiences we had with great teachers. Because they taught more than courses. Their real subject was life and how to live it.

Great teachers are still at work. Their stories are seldom in the newspapers. They don't have discipline problems in class or immoral relationships with students outside class. Their view of what they are doing is deep and long and large. They are in the construction business — building life, community, country and culture. About this time of year, they and their classes are in high gear, focused on learning, heading toward a goal line — not the last day of class, but the long goal of being educated, useful participants in the human enterprise.

Did you have one of those teachers? Have you ever let this teacher know what he or she meant to you? If not, maybe it's time you did. Teachers need respect and approval and praise, too.

Are you one of these teachers? If so, thanks. Big thanks. And thanks again. Copyright 1995 Robert Fulghum. Distributed by Creators Syndicate, Inc.

Letters to the Editor

Good Samaritans abound in Post

On January 14, 1995 my daughter Catherine Brown and friend Scott Martin were involved in a roll-over in Post on their way to school at Colorado State University. Many people from Post came to their aid; most of the names I do not know except for Benny and Paula Jackson. Benny was the first at the scene and pulled them from the truck. He then gathered all their belongings, and he and Paula brought them to the hospital in Lubbock that night. They purchased hamburgers and sat with Catherine and Scott for the evening.

Thank you, Benny and Paula and all the people who cared for my daughter and her friend during this potentially disastrous time. Post, Texas and its citizens will always be special to us.

Joy and Jim Brown

Letters to the editor are encouraged and solicited from our readers. Letters will be edited for brevity, spelling, grammatical errors and legal considerations. Letters must be signed, but names may be withheld from publishing if requested.

Do Republicans have guts?

by Walter E. Williams

The November elections gave Republicans a mandate to get government out of our lives and pocketbooks. Their Contract with America says they're going to introduce a balanced budget amendment to the Constitution. But balanced budgets alone are no protection against a heavy-handed, big spending government. Here's the why. Americans will produce close to a $7 trillion gross national product this year. If federal government spending consumes $1.5 trillion of it, there's no getting around the fact that Americans must privately consume $1.5 trillion less. In this real economic sense, the federal budget is always balanced.

For the most part, unbalanced federal budgets are an accounting fiction. Say tax revenues account for $1.2 trillion of the $1.5 trillion of total federal spending. That leaves us with the impression there's a $300 billion "deficit." But where did that $300 billion come from? After all, it was spent this year, along with the $1.2 trillion. Santa Claus and the tooth fairy didn't kick in that $300 billion; neither did future generations. They're not even born yet, so how could they have produced what we're spending now?

The inescapable fact is if government spends $1.5 trillion of a year's economic output, citizens must privately spend $1.5 trillion less. There are several ways government can force Americans to spend $1.5 trillion less privately. First, it can take away part of our spending power through taxes. That's the $1.2 trillion. Second, it can enter the bond market, driving up interest rates, and thereby soak up money that would otherwise go for private investment and consumption. The higher interest rates reduce our ability to make credit card purchases and buy homes, cars and manufacturing equipment. The third method to reduce our purchasing power is the underhanded method of inflation. You can call this monetary policy; I call it legalized counterfeiting.

Rather than a constitutional balanced budget amendment, Republicans should try to enact a spending limitation amendment. There's nothing thrilling about a high, but balanced, federal budget. Former Rep., now Sen. Jon Kyl introduced one last year that says, "A fiscal year's expenditures shall not exceed 19 percent of that year's gross national product." Why 19 percent? Kyle argues that 19 percent of the GNP is the average federal revenues collected over the last 40 years despite good or bad economic times or tax rate increases or decreases. That's the Kyl's reasoning, and it's not all that bad. But I like 10 percent better. My reasoning is that if 10 percent is good enough for the Baptist church, it ought to be good enough for Congress.

While waiting for Congress to enact a spending limitation amendment, we should support Rep. Dick Armey's flat 17 percent income tax proposal. There's a $13,000 individual deduction, $17,200 for a single head of household and $26,000 for a married couple and a $5,300 deduction for each child. Businesses would subtract expenses from revenue and pay 17 percent of the difference (profits) as taxes. Both individuals and businesses would be able to file tax returns on a postcard.

Armey's proposal would result in an instant increase in our GNP. Americans spend over six billion hours annually simply complying with the tax code in activities such as record keeping, tax planning and preparing tax returns. If those same hours were spent producing useful things, they would be equal to the combined output of our auto, truck and aircraft industries.

Armey's tax simplification makes good economic sense. The problem is in the political arena. Congress would lose its ability to trade tax favors for votes and campaign contributions.

Tahoka clips Antelopes

The Post varsity boys' basketball team dropped a 69-53 decision January 24 to Tahoka, as Cody Bain scored 19 points to lead the team. Alvin Reed hit the boards for 16 points, followed by B.J. Hart with six, Travis Hair with five, Jerry Crawford got three and two points each were scored by Eric Hanna and Chris Ashley. On January 27 the Antelopes lost to Lubbock Christian High School 84-56. Bain led the team again with 18 points, followed by Reed with 10. Hart got nine, Ashley scored seven, Russ Bird got six, Crawford got four and Brad Lawson was credited with two points.

Chiefs edge 9th grade boys

The Post freshmen boys' basketball team lost by four points in overtime to Crosbyton Monday night. Jaime Hernandez led the team with 17 points. Ty Haney was credited with six points, five went to Russ Moore, Sam Woods and Anthony Gomez each got two points, John Paul Perez and Slade Bevers were credited with one point.

J.V. boys lead district play

The Post junior varsity boys' basketball team continues undefeated in district play following a 43-32 win over Tahoka January 24. David Perez and Jeremy Josey led the team with 13 points, followed by Jay Childers with six, Todd Terry with five, Josh Grisham with four and Seth Pennell with two points. The January 27 contest with Lubbock Christian High dropped the team to a 14-5 season record as LCHS edged the junior varsity Antelopes 52-50. Tax 'n Facts

by Terri S. Cash, CPA

Nanny Tax Bill Effective Beginning 1994

Congress has passed what is commonly referred to as a "Nanny Tax" reform bill. In accordance with the new bill, individuals (including farmers) who hire domestic employees such as baby-sitters, maids or housekeepers, yard workers, and in-home-day-care workers are required to withhold and pay employment taxes if a worker's wages equal $1,000 or more during the year. The old law had a wage threshold of $50 per quarter and a separate rule for farmers.

This wage threshold increase is effective for wages paid after 1993. Thus it applies retroactively back to the beginning of 1994. Employers may have already filed Form 942 (Employer's Quarterly Tax Return for Household Employees) for domestic employees that received less than $1,000 in wages in 1994. Taxpayers who submitted payments under the lower threshold during calendar year 1994 will be eligible for refunds of the excess paid.

There will be no loss of social security wage credits for 1994 wages not required to be reported under the new higher threshold. A 1994 W-2 form for such an employee (i.e., on that was paid $50 or more in a quarter but less than $1,000 during the year) is still required.

For 1995 and later years, wages paid to a domestic employee under 18 years of age are normally exempt from social security taxes. The exemption to this rule is for individuals whose principal occupation is household employment.

Beginning in 1995, social security taxes and where applicable federal unemployment taxes will be paid with the employer's Form 1040. Thus, the 1995 taxes won't be due until April 1996. However, for employers (e.g. sole proprietors) who have other employees not performing domestic service, the IRS has been given the authority to write regulations that will require them to include their domestic employees on the quarterly payroll return for their business.

Even though payroll taxes related to domestic employees will be reported on the employee's Form 1040 beginning with the 1995 return, such taxes will not be subject to the estimated tax penalty until 1998.

We keep up with the tax changes. Please contact us if we can assist you!

Changes in 1995 crop insurance

In the past, for agricultural disasters, the Federal government provided two separate programs - The Federal Crop Insurance Program and Ad HOC Disaster Payments.

The new law, the Federal Crop Insurance Reform Act of 1994, combines the old USDA Crop Insurance program and The Disaster programs administered by ASCS into one program. In the past, producers who suffered losses due to a disaster might have received either crop insurance or disaster assistance, and some producers received both. Under the new law, producers will be protected under the new, improved Crop Insurance Program.

Under the new law, producers are required to obtain at least the catastrophic level of crop insurance coverage to participate in other USDA programs, including commodity price support and production adjustment programs; farm operating, farm ownership, and emergency assistance loans; and the conservation reserve program.

Catastrophic coverage will be based on a producer's actual production history, and payments will be made for individual losses at 50 percent of yield and 60 percent of price. To obtain catastrophic coverage, a producer will only have to pay a processing fee of $50 per crop per county. For more than one crop, the total processing fees will not be more than $200 per farmer per county or more than $600 per farmer total. The CFSA office or a private crop insurance agent may sell the catastrophic coverage.

For producers desiring "Additional" crop insurance coverage, private insurance agents still provide 65 percent and 75 percent yield protection options for an additional cost.

The only crops insurable in Garza County are cotton, grain sorghum and wheat. To protect producers of noninsurable crops, the new crop insurance program creates a noninsured assistance program. These benefits are similar to those provided under catastrophic coverage, except

Norwest to buy

Pending approval by federal regulatory agencies and shareholders of Comfort Bancshares, the transaction is expected to close in the third quarter of 1995. Terms of the agreement are not being disclosed.

Norwest has 27 banking stores in Texas and also recently agreed to purchase The First National Bank of Bay City, with one location in Bay City; United Texas Financial Corporation, with six locations in the Wichita Falls area; and New Braunfels-Bancshares, with one location in New Braunfels.

NAP benefits are triggered by area-wide losses. There is no premium or fee required for NAP coverage. Farmers needing additional information on crop insurance should contact the CFSA office, formerly ASCS, at 208 W. Main.

Living on the Edge of the Caprock

By John R. Senter, CEA-AG

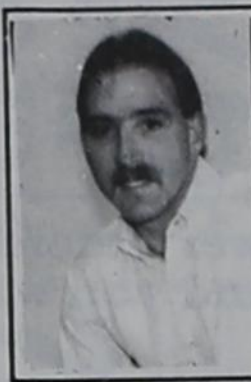

It is the ho-hum time of year between winter and spring and the time of year puts many home owners in the "neutral" mode between raking leaves and garden planning. However, there is one part of the home landscape that deserves special consideration this time of the season. Tree care and planting at this time of year are ideal - not only to help relieve some of the want to feeling of avid yard laborers but giving your trees some needed help as well.

According to Extension plant pathologists, this is the ideal time to examine your trees for dead, diseased or weakened limbs and branches. Should any of these be found, feel free to trim or prune until you have removed any of these type of branches. This not only helps the health of your tree in the early growing stages, it also will help reduce the spread of diseases which might be present.

This is also a good time to transplant any trees into your landscape to help add beauty or shade to your lawn. Make certain to select trees that fit our area of the state and ones that are suitable to the situation you wish to utilize them in. Don't get caught in the thinking that the biggest trees are always the best buy. In most instances smaller trees of the same kind or specie will be more hardy and have a higher survival rate than their taller counterparts. Remember, when trees are dug and sent to your favorite nursery, it is virtually impossible to get all of the critical feeder roots in the digging process. Therefore, what you can end up with is a tree that is the same height above ground, being fed by less of the all important feeder roots under ground. This situation can stress a tree and even result in poor planting survivability, not to mention the fact that in a lot of cases, smaller trees are easier on your pocketbook.

County

Also don't forget that this time of year in tree care can be an ideal time to apply fertilizer. A good dose of nitrogen fertilizer can stimulate and benefit your favorite tree and add a needed boost as we get into spring growing season. Ammonium sulfate or cow manure are just two of the choices with high nitrogen content. Use caution when using manure as this form of fertilizer can bring unwanted weed seeds with it. Keep in mind that fertilizers are in actuality salts so watering them after application is important. The rule of thumb to follow in applying fertilizers is one-quarter pound for every diameter inch of trunk still holds true. Use caution to place the fertilizer in the drip line of the tree, don't forget that this is where the majority of the feeder roots are located. Fertilizers applied close to the base of the tree do very little good because they are not readily available to those important roots which are responsible for uptake of water and nutrients. If you have questions or concerns about fertilizers, pruning or selection feel free to call our office.

If you had a chance to attend the recent Garza County Junior Livestock Show, I hope that you were impressed and pleased as the folks who have commented to me. The weather was nice, the stock was of utmost quality and the young folks who poured their hearts out in the contests were exemplary. It is vital to note that this event could not have been successful without the dedication, work and commitment of the GCJLA officers and directors. The painstaking hours and attention to detail made this a show to remember. If you were one of the supporters that remembered and supported the sale, pat yourself on the back you are one of the reasons that this show is one of the best on the plains.

Finally, the success of the 4-Hers would not have come to be was it not for the dedicated parents that make the projects possible. Special thanks to Jr. Stelzer, Larry McDougal, Urda Wulfjen, Milton Williams and Todd Taylor for their help in assisting 4-H exhibitors before and during the show. A special thanks to the number of members who took time to drop a card or note in the mail, it means a lot.

Dr. C. Alvin Jones named assistant dean at TTUHSC

C. Alvin Jones, M.D., has been appointed assistant dean for the Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center's new Office of Rural Affairs.

School of Medicine Dean Darryl Williams, M.D., said Jones' main responsibility will be to evaluate how Texas Tech can increase the effectiveness of medical care in rural West Texas.

"When you consider we have roughly 2.5 million people spread across 135,000 square miles, you realize health care delivery in West Texas is a very complex issue," Williams said. "Dr. Jones, through this new office, will further strengthen our commitment to providing communities the health care education and manpower they need."

chair of Family Medicine's Division of Rural and Community Medicine, said his first task will be to assess the region's specific health care needs. From this analysis, Jones will help design solutions by developing rural networks to provide continuing education, medical consultation and actual physician support when rural physicians leave their communities on vacation or business. Ultimately, Jones said he hopes to encourage Texas Tech residents to choose to begin their medical careers in these communities.

"For the first time there will be one office designated to be sensitive to the needs of these doctors and their communities," Jones said. "Rural doctors and patients are in a complex health situation, and I am eager to begin to find out how we can provide some real solutions."
