Muleshoe Dropped By Portales Rams, 35-0

Duck Hunters Facing Shorter 1985 Season

A shorter duck hunting season and reduced bag limits appear to be on tap for the 1985-86 waterfowl seasons in Texas.

Bill Brownlee, migratory bird program director for the Texas

Allie Snyder of Tucumcari, and a former resident of Muleshoe, died September 6 at Trigg Memorial Hospital in Tucumcari.

Funeral services are scheduled for 11 a.m. tomorrow, Monday, at Ellis Funeral Home Chapel of the Chimes. Rebekah graveside services will be conducted at Muleshoe Cemetery under direction of Ellis Funeral Home.

Lazbuddie Young Homemakers are currently taking orders for Del Cerro pecans at $3.75 per pound.

They suggest that in order to secure your pecans for all holiday baking, call Joann McDonald at 965-2475.

Pat King said the Muleshoe Athletic Boosters will meet at 8 p.m. on Tuesday night in the Muleshoe High School cafeteria.

Film of the Muleshoe Mule/Portales Rams game will be shown.

Jennyshippers will meet Tuesday, September 10, at 12 noon in the Muleshoe Public Library back room for lunch.

Lunch will be $2 per person and guests are welcome.

Lazbuddie ISD will hold a public hearing concerning the 1985 tax rate on Monday, September 9, at 8:45 p.m. at the Lazbuddie ISD administrative office.

The tax rate for the past two years, 1983 and 1984, has been 95 cents. The proposed tax rate for 1985 is 93 cents. This is a decrease from the past years, however, it does show an increase in the effective tax rate.

Parks and Wildlife Department, said the Parks and Wildlife Commission will act on proposed regulation changes in a public meeting in Austin Friday.

The proposals have basically followed the framework mandated by the U.S. Fish & Wildlife Service, which notified the department that populations of mallards reached an all-time low of 5.5 million in 1985, and that continental pintail populations fell below three million for the first time in 31 years.

Under the new rule, the duck season in the eastern part of the state has been reduced from 60 days to 50, and from 83 days to 65 days in the High Plains Mallard Management Unit.

Bag limits under the 100 point system are reduced to five birds per day, with point values increased for most species.

"One of the more significant proposals is the raising of the point value of pintails from 10 to 35 points and mallard drakes from 20 to 35," said Brownlee. "Hen mallards will be increased to 100-point status, along with black ducks, mottled ducks and canvasbacks."

Brownlee said wood ducks, redheads, hooded mergansers and fulvous and black-bellied whistling ducks are to be 70-point ducks; teal, scaup, gadwalls, wigeons, shovellers and mergansers (except hooded) are expected to be 20-point birds. All other species will be 35 points.

A hunter has his limit when the point value of the last duck taken causes the total points to

Longhorns Take Big Advantage Of Interceptions

Interceptions provided the key to a Lazbuddie Longhorn win over the Melrose Buffalos Friday night for the season opener.

Todd Daniels returned two interceptions for Longhorn TDs in the first quarter to provide inspiration for the rest of his teammates for a 30-0 rout of the visiting New Mexico team.

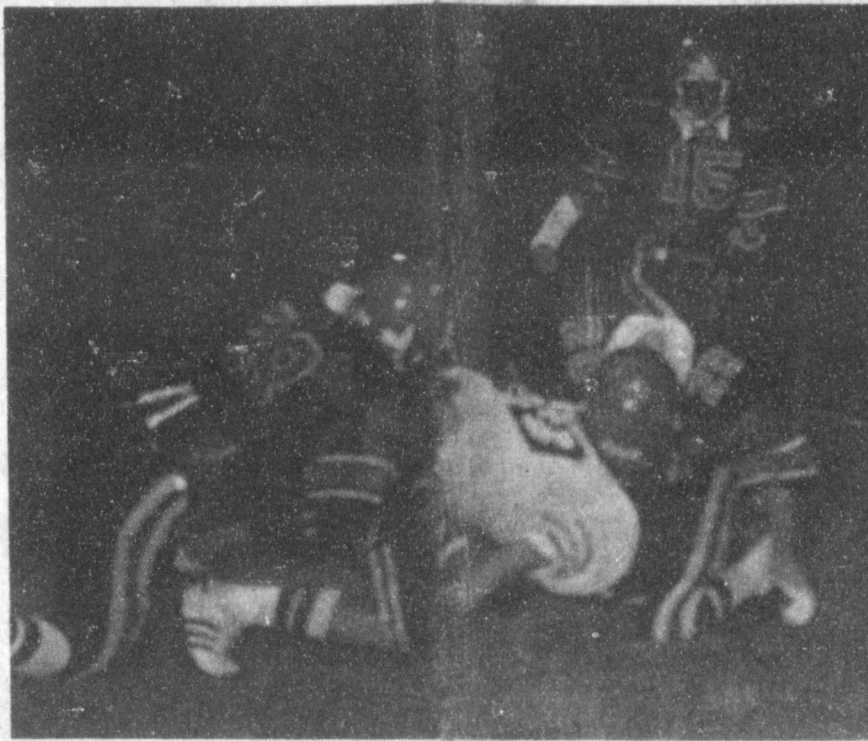

Daniels scored on his interceptions from 45 and from 35 yards out.

Paul Gonzales scored on a 35 yard pass from Tim Lust, and also had a 15 yard scoring run.

Lust slammed over from the one yard line to add another TD for the Longhorns.

Lazbuddie's defensive team put 'the frosting on the cake' with five interceptions and one fumble recovery.

OUCH AND DOUBLE OUCH--Curled around the ball is Todd Bessire, No. 33, who is going down beneath Rams Shawn Bucksath, No. 88 and Brad Heitman, No. 20. The Mules fell to the Rams, 35-0.

Muleshoe Singles Planning Cookout For Next Sunday

Thursday night, when the Muleshoe Singles meet at their new meeting place, the 16th and D Church of Christ, the planning of a steak cookout will be on the agenda for the evening.

Singles planning to attend the Sunday, September 15 cookout at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Black are asked to attend the September 12, 7 p.m. meeting to help plan.

Discussed at the last meeting were plans to volunteer workers for the renovation of the Girl Scout Little House, followed by the group going to the Mule Putt Miniature Golf Course.

On August 24, around 14 members of the Muleshoe Singles went to Canyon to see "Texas," and the group will be planning a Halloween costume party.

Mistakes, Miscues, Rules Deadly Combination

Mistakes, miscues and playing under New Mexico rules, all combined to leave the Muleshoe Mules gasping and panting at a 35-0 loss to the Portales Rams in Greyhound Stadium near Portales Friday night.

Although the Rams took the initial kickoff after winning the coin toss, the Mules held the Rams after the first series and trapped Ram quarterback, Rodney Emerson on a fourth and desperation play, taking over on downs.

Judge Warns That School Is Mandatory

With school beginning for the year during the past week, Bailey County Judge Gordon H. Green has issued the following statement:

"The beginning of the school year seems to be an appropriate time to remind the public of the Compulsory Attendance Law of Texas."

"The Texas Education Code provides that every child in the state who is as much as seven years of age, and who has not completed the academic year in which his 16th birthday occurred, shall be required to attend school unless excused as provided by law. Any parent or other guardian who fails to require their children to attend school as required by law is subject to criminal charges. Each day the child remains out of school may constitute a separate offense.

"The Juvenile Code also provides that the unexcused voluntary absence of a child on ten or more days or parts of days within a six month period or three or more days or parts of days within a four-week period from school is conduct for which the Juvenile Court may assume jurisdiction over the child."

Judge Green concluded, "Unexcused absences will be reported by the school officials to the juvenile authorities and investigations will be made. All parents, guardians and school age children should understand and comply with the attendance laws."

He said this feast will be held at the Muleshoe High School cafeteria, 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. prior to the game.

In the first moves for the Mules after taking over, twice the Mules were in striking distance from the goal line, only to see their advantage wiped out by "blocking below the waist" penalties. Blocking below the waist is allowed in Texas, but not on New Mexico football fields.

Long penalties hurt the Mules who watched the possibilities of a touchdown fade with frustration evident from not only the players, but the many fans who were in Portales for the game.

Mule quarterback Mike Holt attempted to make a fourth down play that failed and the Rams took over on their own 37 yard line. The first ended with a 0-0 showing on the scoreboard.

Following the first quarter defensive show, the Rams broke loose in the second, scoring three times. Emerson passed to Lee Walker, who scrambled to the right corner of the goal line and scampered over with 9:39 left in the second. An Emerson to Danny Tipton added an additional two points.

Exactly five minutes later, Emerson added six more points from the 10 yard line when he went in standing up following a Mule loss of the ball near the goal line. A PAT attempt by Ray Aragon failed to reach the goal posts.

Pre-Game Supper For Home Game Set By Lions Club

Muleshoe Lions Club will be the host of a Chicken Fried Steak supper before the Muleshoe vs. Morton football game on Friday, September 13, at Benny Douglas Stadium.

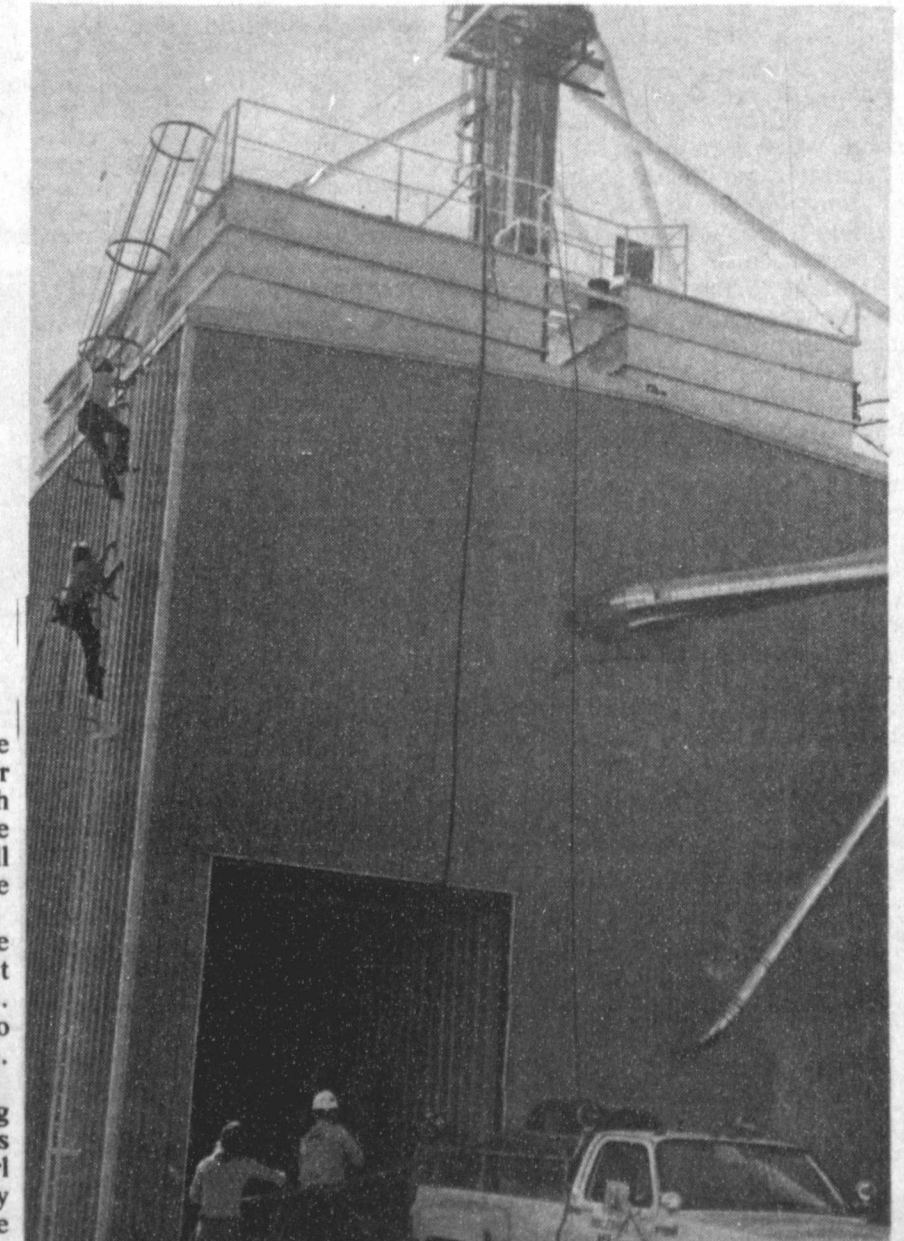

A Lions Club spokesman said the menu will consist of generous portions of Chicken Fried Steak 'tender as a mother's love,' home grown green beans and mashed potatoes, freshly baked peach cobbler, tea and coffee.

He said this feast will be held at the Muleshoe High School cafeteria, 5:30 to 7:30 p.m. prior to the game.

Come on out and be a Mule booster and support our local Lions Club.

CHAMPIONSHIP FLIGHT WINNERS--Winners of the Championship Flight in the Jennyshippers Scramble at the Muleshoe Country Club Thursday afternoon included Jeanetta Precure of Muleshoe and Judy Smith of Clovis, first place; Sharron Hughes and Alice Vinton of Farwell, second place and Jackie Perkins and Jean Allen of Amarillo, third place.

CORN DRYER FIRE--Members of the Muleshoe Fire Department were called to Griffiths and Sons Elevator Thursday morning shortly after 11 a.m. to fight a fire in a corn dryer behind the main elevators and adjacent to the railroad tracks. Little damage was recorded in the corn dryer fire, according to fire officials.

TSTA Files Law Suit To Stop Teacher Testing

The Texas State Teachers Association filed a lawsuit in District Court in Travis County in which it asked the Court to stop the implementation of the portion of the law that requires testing of currently certified teachers.

The suit was filed against the State of Texas, the State Board of Education, the Texas Education Agency, the Commissioner of Education, the National Computer Systems, Inc., and the IOX Assessment Associates. It names nine counts of state violations.

In filing the lawsuit, TSTA President Charles Beard, elementary teacher of Beaumont, said his organization realized that its position was contrary to current popular opinion.

"Government based on popularity polls has not always been educationally sound nor politically just," Beard said. "I offer, for example, the decades of segregated classrooms in this state which were rationalized by the politically popular 'Separate But Equal Clause.'"

At a Capitol news conference today Beard said it is ironic that while state and local political leaders cast doubts about the quality of teachers, over 71 percent of the parents of children attending a public school rated the schools with a grade of A or B, according to the Gallup Poll released yesterday.

"It is also ironic that the people who know teachers best—the Texas PTA—are on record opposing competency testing retroactively of currently certified teachers," the TSTA president said.

"The major goal of this suit is to stop the indictment of over 200,000 educators simply because some people suspect there may be a few incompetents within the profession.

"If there are illiterates within this profession, they can easily be discovered simply by reviewing the mountains of paperwork teachers are required to submit every week or by observing teachers in class. To spend nearly $7 million to do the job of our building principals is a shameful waste of our state resources," he said.

Beard said the 'insult of testing, coupled with the frustration associated with the career ladder, is fueling a devastating teacher shortage throughout the state.

He added, "At present, the Houston Independent School District is attempting to recruit people 'off the street' to teach school with no more than three days training on paperwork and three days with students. The damage caused by the teacher shortage will last far longer than any benefits to be gained by a paper and pencil test.

"TSTA wants only good teachers in our state's classrooms, and we have long contended that on-site observations with written and oral evaluations are the only effective means of assuring teaching quality.

"Finally, our lawsuit serves notice that the teachers of Texas are tired of being flogged and flogged for the incompetence of others. We're fed up with serving as the goat for politicians. We're fed up with the lack of support of some other so-called 'professional' organizations and teacher unions who quit or sold out when the going got tough.

"TSTA is not concerned with our popularity rating as we pursue this lawsuit. Regardless of the alleged 'PR value' of letting this mindless and demeaning exercise go forward without objection, we're not going to take that comfortable road. We're going to go forward and do what we believe is right and just. And it is surely right and just to do all in our power to bring what we consider a wrongful act before the available tribunals for judgment," he concluded.

Texas A&M professors proving methanol to be a viable alternative fuel

COLLEGE STATION — For 10 years, Drs. Bill Harris and Richard Davison, Texas A&M University chemical engineering professors, have been showing the world that automobiles can run on methanol (wood alcohol).

Now their graduate students are perfecting computer controls that will make use of the fuel even more efficient.

"We realized a long time ago that there would be an eventual gasoline shortage with or without supply problems from the Middle East. But we also realized that you couldn't just walk out one day and junk all the gasoline-powered autos," said Davison. He and Harris have put more than 80,000 miles on an assortment of vehicles sporting the sign "Experimental Vehicle Methanol Fueled."

Today, they are directing the research of several graduate students who are perfecting an inexpensive add-on system they developed to allow gasoline-powered automobile engines to also run on alcohols. The Davison-Harris system uses exhaust heat to vaporize the methanol, producing a clean-burning fuel that actually improves engine performance and reduces engine wear.

Angels Of Mercy Of West Plains Medical Center

We all know that nursing is a stressful profession. What most lay persons don't realize is that some areas of the hospital are more stressful than others. Such is the case with the OB Dept. OB by nature is either an extremely pleasant place to be, because the parents have a new addition to their households, or an unbelievably depressing area, such as when an infant does not survive. In either case, the OB Dept. is one of the most stressful areas of the hospital to work. Our OB Dept. is "covered" by two LVN's who alternate taking 24 hour call. One of these nurses is Dee King LVN. Mrs. King is a 1970 graduate of South Plains College at Leveland. When comparing her OB practice to the nursing practice she has had in other areas, such as Medical Surgical, she says "While working in Med-Surg is 'all right', the OB is without a doubt the best area to work in". That statement is typical of OB nurses. They love their OB dept above all else!

SANDHILLS PHILOSOPHER

Editor's note: The Sandhills Philosopher on his Johnson grass farm on Sandy Acres this week discusses cultural exchanges and camels, we think.

Dear editor:

One way to improve international relations, some specialists say, is to have more cultural exchanges between nations. This has its problems.

For example, everybody knows the saying, "The straw that broke the camel's back." Well, I was listening to a TV interview by satellite between David Brinkley in Washington and the top member of the Soviet Central Committee in Moscow, Chairman Arbatov, I think his name is.

Mr. Arbatov spoke pretty good English, far better than professional football announcers, but apparently there's something lacking in the cultural exchange he got from America. In answer to a question, I think it was about Star Wars, he said "that might be the final straw that will break the spine of the camel."

It just doesn't have the right ring to it.

Incidentally, that saying about a straw breaking the camel's back has always puzzled me. All the camels I've seen looked like they had broken backs to start with.

I don't know if the Russians have the phrase, "I'll cross that bridge when I come to it," but Washington politicians couldn't get along without it. Ask them a question whose answer, whether yes or not, most likely will lose 50 percent of the votes on one side or the other and they'll pussyfoot by not crossing that bridge till they come to it.

I have an idea for putting Muleshoe on the map.

While I've never personally seen a politician who could cross a bridge before he got to it, if you can find one let's bring him here. Pick out a bridge around here, line up some TV cameras and let him have at it. If he succeeds, I believe it'd be the lead story on the evening news. You'll have the only bridge in the world somebody crossed before he got to it.

Yours faithfully,
J.A.

What Children Need To Know Staying Home Alone

With the beginning of the school year, many youngsters will be staying home alone after school while parents are at work.

"Once parents have decided their child is mature enough to stay alone, it's their responsibility to teach safety habits," says Dorothy Taylor, a family life specialist with the Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service.

"Even children who have stayed by themselves in past school years probably need to review safety precautions," she adds.

Taylor advises parents to cover the following areas of home safety with their youngsters:

Have at least one home fire drill to be sure there are two escape routes. Instruct children that they must not try to put out a fire, but should get out of the house immediately and go to a neighbor's to get help in calling the fire department.

Review phone procedures and have emergency numbers visible and attached to the phone or wall. Have the child check-in by phone with a parent or other responsible adult at a set time each day. Make sure the youngster has other numbers to call if they get lonely.

Make sure that children know to keep doors locked and not admit anyone.

Teach children to keep keys out of sight at school or when walking down the street. Never write names and addresses on keys. It's a simple matter to replace lost keys, rather than giving access to your home.

Have nutritious snacks within easy reach for children.

Have a first aid kit available and instruct your child on using it.

Encourage your youngsters to spend their time in a variety of activities including reading, playing games, exercising, doing homework or chores and watching television.

Establish basic home safety rules about using the stove, microwave or other appliances, and climbing on furniture or ladders. Teach them to never play with matches, guns or sharp knives.

Designate a set area, such as a fenced back yard, where the child is allowed to play. Set as a rule that friends are not allowed to come over and play until parents return home.

"In all safety talks, emphasize what children can do to protect themselves, rather than the bad things that might happen to a person," Taylor says.

A calm, matter-of-fact approach to this new responsibility can help children mature and develop a sense of personal security and safety, the specialist explains.

Parents Can Be Influence For Schools

If your child is having trouble adjusting to school, parental attitudes may be one possible problem, the Texas Medical Association says.

Sometimes parents are afraid to let new people care for their children. Children pick up such signals and become anxious also. Parental stress about busing or other problems also can make a child feel uncomfortable.

Doubts and fears of parents and children can be eased by visiting the school and talking with the teacher. Such discussions can familiarize everyone with the child's schedule and upcoming activities. A visit also can give parents an early opportunity to inform the teacher about the child's special abilities, problems, or complicating situations, such as a recent family divorce that may have upset the child.

Another important discussion can be between parent and child. It can help to reassure the child that he or she can handle new circumstances just as in the past. Getting frequent updates about the child's progress and attitudes can help parents keep in touch with problems.

Persistent problems may mean the child has a learning disorder. To find out about possible problems quickly, tests can be done to determine hearing, sight, or learning handicaps that can cause the child years of frustration and failure if undetected, TMA says. The teacher often can give recommendations about available testing.

No matter what the cause of poor performance in school, it is important to help the child before troubles last too long. Help may be something as simple as aiding the child with homework. Or it may involve getting medical attention. But TMA urges parents to take action to help keep the child from falling far behind in class.

There is no fear without some hope, and no hope without some fear.

-Baruch Spinoza.

CHILDREN'S EATING PROBLEMS-- A child's eating habits can be a source of constant worry for parents. If you think your child overeats, under-eats, is overweight or too thin, it's a good idea to check with your family doctor. A physician can use growth charts and medical tests to determine your child's growth rate. If your child is found to be growing well with no weight problems, stop worrying. Dr. Dymple Cooksey, a nutrition specialist with the Texas A&M University Agricultural Extension Service, says children often go eating jags, eating mostly one or a few foods for a few days. "Eating jags are usually temporary, so continue offering good nutritious food in a pleasing way," she says. When a child doesn't eat much this may be a normal "Slow-down" stage of growth. Eating will increase as nutrient needs increase, says the specialist.

Federal surveys indicate the total number of breeding ducks is at the lowest point in the 31 surveys have been conducted.

Officials noted that all but one of the 10 duck species most important to hunters declined, with only green-winged teal being slightly more numerous than last year.

The declines in duck numbers are a result of nesting habitat loss and dry weather conditions, the USFWS said.

In the third, the Rams added two more TDs, one of one yard by Emerson and another by Emerson at 4:43 of the third, for five yards.

Mules buckled down going into the fourth, and although both teams threatened a couple of times, neither team managed to make it over the goal line, and the game ended at the 35-0 score.

Despite the wide variance in the score, the two teams were nearly equal in stats, with the Mules having 206 rushing yards to 132 for the Rams; but the Rams had 106 yards in the air to 56 for the Mules.

Penalties in the first half of the game contributed to a Mule downfall, with a total of 85 yards of penalties to 45 for the Rams.

The Mules had a slight edge in first downs, with 16 to 15 for Portales.

Muleshoe completed five of 13 passes, while the Rams completed six of 14 passes.

Next Friday night, the Mules will host Morton. The Morton Indians took their first victory of the season Friday night from Denver City, at a score of 28-6.

Reports

ABORTION LAW TAKES EFFECT

AUSTIN — Texas' new abortion law became effective Sept. 1 and with it an experiment that may well determine state abortion policy for years to come.

The law, which will be administered by the Texas Department of Health, requires extensive reporting by all abortion clinics operating in the state and calls for more stringent licensing regulations, which will be promulgated by the health department.

Supporters of the new abortion law, and we include ourselves, believe the reporting requirements will give Texans a much better idea about what types of abortions are being performed in the state. We also believe the tougher licensing requirements will ensure all abortions are performed with minimal risk to the women involved.

There are those, of course, who are bitterly disappointed with the law. Some feel as though the state has absolutely no business regulating abortions while others believe the state should prohibit abortions entirely. For those people, a little history would be instructive.

Texas for more than a century banned most abortions. Then, in 1973, the U.S. Supreme Court overturned Texas' abortion law in its historic Roe vs. Wade decision. The court ruled the Texas law and, thus, all state abortion laws were unconstitutional.

The court said all women have a right to an abortion during the first trimester of their pregnancy. The justices said women have the same right during the second trimester, though states are allowed to establish health and safety regulations to govern those second trimester abortions.

Only in the last three months of pregnancy, the court said, could states prohibit abortions in all but life-threatening pregnancies.

As we all know, the Supreme Court's decision touched off a wave of controversy that remains with us today. Many people maintain women have an inalienable right to terminate pregnancy. Others say abortion is tantamount to murder and never should be condoned.

The bottom line, however, is that states are limited in what they can do to prevent abortions. Texas for 12 years had been doing nothing; now, we've exercised some of the rights remaining under Roe vs. Wade and are beginning to regulate health and safety standards.

If, as many of us suspect, abortion clinics report a large number of second-trimester abortions, the Legislature in 1987 may stiffen regulations to the maximum allowable under federal law.

We personally are not comfortable with legalized abortions, but the law is the law. It is important to remember there is nothing we in Austin can do at this stage to change that law.

People who want the abortion law changed must for the time being look to Congress, where a constitutional amendment banning abortions must be introduced. Anti-abortion laws were struck down at the federal level, and that is where they must be restored.

If you have any questions about abortion law or other issues, please write us at P.O. Box 12068, Austin, TX, 78711.

State Fair Theme "Something New For You"

The State Fair of Texas is once again preparing for its annual run, complete with a Lone Star-sized array of entertainment, sports, livestock and creative events.

The 1985 State Fair opens at noon on Thursday, Oct. 3, and runs through Sunday, Oct. 20. It has a theme of "Something New For You."

In addition to its usual assortment of favorites, such as evening parades, an outdoor ice show, a three-ring circus, fireworks displays, fashion shows, Midway rides and exhibits, this year's State Fair boasts an impressive line-up of special events and new attractions.

Literally and figuratively topping the list of new items at the 1985 Fair will be the "Texas Star," currently under construction and expected to be the tallest ferris wheel in North America. At 212 feet it will be the same height as a 20-story building. More than 15,000 red, white, and blue light bulbs will be attached to the framework of the ferris wheel and will be used to present a spectacular computerized light show.

The Great American High Dive Team will give several performances each day at a specially-built diving platform and pool near the Grand Avenue gate, and "Starship 3," a helicopter acrobatics act will perform daily over the Lagoon.

The national touring company of the Broadway hit musical "42nd Street" will perform Oct. 1-20 in the Music Hall at Fair Park. Dolores Gray and Barry Nelson will star in the song- and dance-filled show based on the extravagant movie musicals of the Depression era.

The annual State Fair Rodeo, set for Oct. 18-20 with two shows daily, will attract top competitors from the Professional Rodeo Cowboys Association tour, and the Cotton Bowl World Class Championship Wrestling on Sunday, Oct. 6, will pit the Von Erichs against a variety of opponents.

Football games in the Cotton Bowl during the Fair will include the Texas-Oklahoma classic on Saturday, Oct. 12, the Grambling versus Prairie View game on Saturday, Oct. 5, and a Dallas Independent School District tripleheader on Friday, Oct. 18.

The Rodeo, "42nd Street," the wrestling competition and the football games require separate tickets. Football tickets must be arranged through the schools involved, while tickets to the other three events are sold by Rainbow Ticketmaster. For Rainbow Ticketmaster information, call (214) 787-2000 or (Dallas-Fort Worth metro) 787-1500. When purchased in advance, tickets for these events include admission to the Fair.

Other attractions, except Midway rides, are free upon admission to the Fair. Admission is $4 for adults, $1 for children aged 5 to 11, and free for children under five each day and for senior citizens each Tuesday.

Additional activities include 'Circle' Sure Sign Indicating Snuff Epidemic

A small harmless looking circle on a hip pocket is the first symptom of a major health-threatening epidemic. The circle, made by carrying a snuff can, is a more obvious symptom than a chewing tobacco pouch. But both show that the user is sucking on chemicals that can cause cancer, the Texas Medical Association says.

Bad breath, discolored teeth and white patches of skin called leukoplakia inside the mouth or throat are a few other signs of the epidemic that has spread to many groups of young people and adults.

Some people start using chewing tobacco and snuff as a replacement for smoking. But they merely are trading one set of health hazards for another, TMA says. Chewing tobacco is one of the risk factors for developing oral cancer which includes cancer of the tongue, lip, or throat. Last year 456 Texans died from oral cancer.

Chances of gum and tooth disease increase and users' teeth wear away quicker than non-users' teeth. Tobacco juice chemicals may slow wound healing, especially in the mouth. The juice also can irritate or cause stomach ulcers.

Other unhealthy effects come from the drug nicotine that is absorbed through the mouth lining or swallowed. Nicotine makes arteries smaller and speeds up the heart rate. Pumping more blood through a narrower opening may increase blood pressure which heightens the risk of stroke or heart attack. Pressure may increase even more because tobacco users may use too much salt since nicotine can dull taste buds. Too much salt also may increase blood pressure.

These additional effects mean that dippers and chewers are at risk. Even though they are not sending up bad health smoke signals by puffing on a cigarette, they still are risking their health.

outdoor concerts by George Strait, the Judds, Little Joe y La Familia and an assortment of other performers. The annual Parade of Champions, an all-day competition to determine the best high school bands in Texas, will be held on Saturday, Oct. 19.

The Fair's Creative Arts Department expects record participation in its wide range of food and hobby contests, including two new food contests. They are "One Potato, Two Potato," which uses potatoes in entrees, side dishes or desserts, and "Stuff Yourself," which concentrates on beef, pork or poultry dressings.

Livestock events will be featured daily, with competition categories ranging from various breeds of cattle and horses to goats, rabbits, sheep, swine, pigeons, donkeys, mules and sheep dogs.

Several of the museums located on the grounds of the Fair will have special exhibits. They include "The Robot Exhibit: History, Fantasy and Reality" and "Halley's Comet: The Long-Haired Visitor" at The Science Place; "A Centennial History of the Dallas Morning News" at the Hall of State, and "East Africa: Its Land, People and Wildlife" at the Museum of Natural History.

Exhibit buildings at the Fair offer thousands of square feet of educational and commercial displays. An exhibit by Armour in the Food Pavilion of the Tower Building will feature Daniel and the Dixie Diggers, an animated band, and the Automobile Show will give Fair-goers their first looks at the 1986 models.

One new convenience for persons attending the Fair this year will be DART bus service from several Park and Ride facilities around Dallas County. Buses will follow regular schedules and charge $4 for a round trip. Information on DART bus schedules is available at 979-1111. Parking on the Fair grounds is $3 for those who prefer to drive.

The gates of the Fair grounds will open at 7 a.m. and close at midnight each day. Buildings are open from 10 a.m. to 10 p.m., and most museums are open from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m.

The Scientists Tell Me . . . Consequences Will Be Extensive For Reduced Irrigation On Plains

By Robert L. Haney
TAES Science Writer

During the past 40 years, irrigation development using groundwater from the Ogallala Aquifer has transformed the Great Plains of the United States into one of the most productive agricultural regions in the Nation.

Now, declining water tables combined with increased energy costs threaten the economic feasibility of continued irrigation, and reductions in the number of acres being irrigated are already beginning to occur in parts of the Texas High Plains, according to Dr. Don Albrecht, research scientist in the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station.

"Because of the extensive dependence of the region's economy on irrigated agriculture," Albrecht says, "understanding the impacts of reduced irrigation is critical."

"One means of establishing the potential impacts of irrigation reduction is to understand the historical impacts resulting from the past growth of irrigation in the Great Plains."

"An in-depth study, done with a colleague, Dr. Steven Murdock, head of the Department of Rural Sociology in the Experiment Station, examines some of the consequences of irrigation development in 294 nonmetropolitan counties in eight states in the Great Plains, from 1940 to 1980."

"Based on these findings, an attempt is made to suggest some of the changes that may occur in the characteristics of farming and rural communities, if farmers in this area are forced to convert from irrigated to dryland farming."

"Between 1940 and 1980, the development of irrigation had a major effect on agricultural and population changes in the Great Plains. Agricultural production increased much faster in the counties experiencing extensive irrigation development than in counties without such development."

At the same time, irrigation resulted in a more labor-intensive and energy-intensive form of agriculture that has retained profitability on smaller-sized farming units.

Perhaps most important, the development of irrigation created a system of agriculture that has been more resistant to farm consolidation, and as a result, more persons have been able to remain in agriculture.

In addition, this more productive agricultural base resulted in allied and secondary growth, and as a consequence, high irrigation counties have experienced population increases, while most other counties in the Great Plains have had population declines.

Projections indicate that irrigation reductions would have major implications for both the structure of farming and population trends in the region.

"The future portrayed in two irrigation-reduction scenarios we analyzed is not an optimistic one," Murdock says, "but neither is it inevitable. A number of measures are possible that can alter, or at least delay, such a future."

"Foremost among these are several forms of improved irrigation technologies that allow yields to remain constant while reducing the amount of water pumped.

"These improved irrigation techniques include more efficient water application techniques, (such as the Low Energy Precision Application—LEPA system); systems that hold more water on the field so it may be utilized by the crop, (such as furrow diking); and scheduling irrigation so that water is available during the most critical stages of growth of a particular crop."

"In addition, researchers are attempting to develop more drought-resistant plant varieties that need less water."

"Such technologies, if implemented by a large proportion of Great Plains farmers, have the potential of maintaining production at current levels while reducing the amount of water used. As such, the life of the Ogallala Aquifer could be extended."

"However, these improved irrigation technologies and plant varieties are beneficial only to the extent that they are adopted by a large number of farm operators. In some cases, the adoption of new irrigation techniques and plant varieties may not be economically feasible for farmers in either the long or short term."

"This situation would obviously hinder their use in reducing the need for irrigation. Also, it is critical that information on new irrigation techniques and plant varieties be made available to farmers so that they are in a position to adopt those that are appropriate.

"Although the analysis suggests impacts from reduced irrigation that are perhaps more negative than those that will actually occur, they do point to the urgent need for the development of more efficient irrigation technologies and more concerted policies of effective water use and conservation."

"In addition, more extensive research is needed on all aspects of the consequences of irrigation reductions and on potential avenues for mitigating these consequences."

"For Texas and other parts of the Great Plains, such developments are essential to the continued viability of its agricultural base and the continued viability of its agriculturally dependent rural communities," Murdock concluded.

What To Do If Your Child Is Missing

When a child is discovered missing, immediate, rational action is imperative. It is likely the abductor will move and act quickly in the first few hours after taking a child. Minutes may mean miles; saved seconds could save your child's life.

The following is adapted from an action plan recommended in the Favor furniture polish "Operation: Missing Fingerprints" Children's Safety Kit compiled by Johnson Wax in cooperation with Child Find, Inc., a national, non-profit search organization.

If your child has disappeared:

1. Call where the child should be.
2. Think where the child might be. Check all logical places such as play areas and neighborhood stores and schools. Call relatives and friends the child may try to visit.
3. Call police and request that a report be filed immediately.
  - Provide complete information, including detailed physical description of the child and last-known whereabouts.
  - Insist that this information be entered into the National Crime Information Center (NCIC) computer. Verify its entry by asking to see a teletype printout.
  - Tell police all of the facts surrounding your child's disappearance, including family conflicts and upsetting incidents.
  - Inform them of neighborhood transportation stations the child may use.
  - Ask police to patrol the area in which your child was last seen exactly 24 hours and one week after the disappearance to interview regular passers-by who may have been witnesses.
  - Contact a local search and rescue team to enlist their expertise. Organize willing and capable community members to help search through locked or normally inaccessible areas such as basements, roofs and garages.
4. Register and receive additional help from either of two non-profit, national organizations that use toll-free telephone numbers: CHILD FIND, INC., 1-800-I-AM-LOST; or NATIONAL CENTER ON MISSING AND EXPLOITED CHILDREN, 1-800-843-5678.
5. Look for clues at home, such as notes, missing food and clothing and unfamiliar numbers on telephone bills.
6. Talk to the child's friends, teachers, counselors and others who may know of places or people your child may visit, or plans your child may have.
7. Ask people in the area such as mail carriers, store keepers, neighbors and building employees if they have seen your child.
8. Inform local hospitals, drug treatment centers, shelters and churches that your child is missing.
9. Make the public aware of your child's disappearance.
  - Provide local newspapers, television and radio stations with the facts and a photograph.
  - Have flyers printed with your child's picture, description and telephone number. Post them throughout the community in store windows, shopping malls, hospitals, churches, etc.
  - Advertise in out-of-town newspapers if you suspect your spouse may have abducted the child.
10. Keep phones that your child may try to call attended around the clock.
11. Investigate private investigators carefully before hiring them. Get references and check with the state licensing bureau, Better Business Bureau, and Consumer Protection Office. Be sure the investigator has a proven record of success in similar cases.

The Scientists Tell Me . . . Agriculture Must Improve Marketing And Production

By Robert L. Haney
TAES Science Writer

Increased food production to feed the world's hungry has been emphasized in recent years but food processing and distribution costs often account for two-thirds of the retail cost of food, according to Dr. Donald Farris, professor and agricultural economist with the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station.

"The future well being of the world societies depends not only on progress in increasing food supplies, but progress in food distribution," Farris told the XIX International Conference of Agricultural Economists the last of August.

"In some countries, there is little incentive to improve quality, storage and distribution or to adopt output-increasing technology because of artificially low prices that will not justify the extra expense," he said.

"Likewise, there are situations where protected markets or producer support prices are so high that much higher purchased inputs and more intensive production and marketing methods are used than is common, where these artificially high prices do not exist.

"These and many other factors cause a substantial distortion in the efficient use of agricultural production and marketing resources.

"Some of this distortion is by the design of the society, some of it is due to lack of understanding of how to design markets to perform well (given the society's goals), and much of it is due to powerful special interests or inefficient government.

"I want to discuss the problems of improving agricultural market performance under a variety of political and economic conditions within the framework of the industrial organization concepts, relating to how 'market structure' and 'market conduct' influence 'market performance' of an industry.

"I will provide evidence of substantial market distortions among industries in different countries and suggest approaches to deal with different kinds of market performance problems.

"For example, a food price survey of major capitals shows that a standard 'basket' of 15 important food items had almost twice the price in Tokyo and Bern compared to Washington, D.C.; on the other hand, Brazilia and some other Latin American capitals had still lower prices.

"By any generally accepted criteria, agricultural and food markets around the world vary in their performance from very good to terrible.

"Typically, agricultural markets are unstable due to weather variation and international events. Often they are altered in one or more structural or conduct dimensions to reduce this instability. For example, the U.S. has since the mid 1930's set minimum prices on many storable agricultural products.

"Currently this is hurting our exports. The European Economic Community (EEC), with high cost producers, maintains a minimum price protected by a variable import levy that increased U.S. wheat and corn prices 54 percent as soon as they entered the EEC in 1981/82.

"Japan establishes an upper and lower stabilization price for livestock that is protected by tight import quotas for beef. This results in beef prices so high that the average Japanese consumer buys very little beef while many U.S. beef producers were losing as much as $100 per animal sold in the Summer of 1985. International markets for beef with all their barriers were simply not able to absorb very much of our surplus.

"Markets are often altered due to differences in various governments' goals for the market system. I recognize that it is not the objective of some governments to have a free and open market. It is not enough to say, 'what you need is free markets and free trade.' Few governments, in fact, are willing to let the free market system be the sole allocator of supplies and profits. Others modify markets to allocate products on the basis of need to redistribute income.

"More dialogue and inquiry appears to be timely concerning designing markets for good performance, because the success of more market oriented economies in Asia has even convinced Communist China to make increased use of open markets.

"Western European successes have had its influence on some Eastern European countries in the Communist Block, to make increased use of open markets.

"European economists have pointed out how the more market oriented agricultural policies of Hungary and Yugoslavia have resulted in more progress in agriculture than in other Eastern European countries, where there is more state control of agriculture. They argue that market incentives improve management and increase the use of technology, resulting in greater productivity.

"Likewise, government control of agriculture in many African countries had been associated with declining per capita output, even before the recent drought. There are indications that recent crises in African agriculture have stimulated more interest in allowing markets to operate more freely.

"Understanding the role of different policies in making a market system work, to achieve societies' goals, merits our attention. My purpose is to consider the alternative goals and objectives for markets and suggest alternative market structure and market conduct guidelines to achieve good performance, given the nature of the industry and specific market performance problems.

"My discussion will focus on the 'market economies' in the world, but some of the ideas apply to centrally planned economies, because even these must deal with incentives and controls to achieve some performance standards for the food production and distribution system."

Farris then explained how market performance, a broad concept used in the field of industrial organization, can be applied to agricultural markets to improve their performance.

Farris also discussed a wide variety of policies that can change market performance and suggested some alternatives that can change market structure or conduct to improve performance.

He pointed out that common tools used to alter market structure are: change market entry restrictions; cooperatives; marketing orders and marketing boards; and in socialist countries—government ownership. Tools used to change market conduct are: establish rules to ensure a free and open market; price or production controls; import or export tariffs and quotas; group or industry advertising and promotion programs.

These tools are used for various purposes—often to stabilize prices or increase the income of farmers, but also at times to reduce food prices to consumers. When these changes significantly distort the market, the general economy is usually the loser.

His discussions were much too complex and lengthy to report here but his conclusion covered these major points:

"Regardless of the economic philosophy of the country, policies that encourage or move each industry toward a general free market equilibrium, domestically and internationally, will improve overall market performance and help the economy provide a higher level of living for citizens. Economic theory and abundant evidence can demonstrate that.

"The problems with altering market structure or market conduct to get improved performance is that vested interests feel they will be worse off and oppose change. Sometimes it is a problem with distortions in the general economy, such as soft currency, often leading to government control of trade to protect a scarce supply of foreign exchange.

"The overriding distortions in markets are caused by trade barriers, but there are many domestic market performance problems that require a variety of specific policy solutions.

"Most of these domestic improvements also relate to policies that widen the market and expose both privately- and publicly-owned industries to more competition. Where that is not acceptable, their performance standards should be monitored.

"In cases of excess competition (poor profits or low wages) in industry with few or no acceptable alternatives, a direct subsidy may improve performance over the alternative of creating more unemployment and an even larger subsidy," Farris concluded.

ABOUT YOUR HOME

By April Rhodes

One of the most nutritive meats available is liver. Beef and pork liver have a stronger flavor and are more suited to moist-heat cookery, like braising. Calves liver can be broiled.

One way to be neighborly is to share flower cuttings and garden plants.

It is easy to create your own menagerie of stuffed animals for small children. Fabric is available for the back and front with step by step instructions. All you do is cut out, stitch and stuff.

Petroleum jelly is available in baby-fresh scents. The jar is wide-mouthed, unbreakable and is decorated with whimsical nursery animals.

Cheese grates easier when chilled. After grating a block of cheese, keep it in a covered container.

Make tasks for younger children like a game. Set the kitchen timer and if the task is finished before the bell rings give the child a reward.
