PHS principal announces July 1, 2006 retirement plans

Johnny McGregor, who has logged more than 30 years as an educator, will step down from the position of Post High School principal July 1.

McGregor's plans were announced

during Monday's regular meeting of superintendent Marlin Marcum said Post Independent School District he has a great deal of respect for District officials will immediately begin the process to fill the vacant position. After a selection procedure is established, the school board will "be very much involved" in the screening of candidates and the final selection, Marcum said.

The district should have a new principal hired by late April or early May, which will allow some transition time.

"We'll be looking for someone with experience, the same character and support skills for staff, and student management skills," the superintendent said. Board members will meet in a workshop session later this month or early next month as the process gets under way, Marcum said.

Trustees also discussed the ongoing plans for a new cafeteria. The project remains on schedule, Marcum said, and the board will consider many of the facility's specifications at the regular January

The project is expected to go out for bids in February; bid deadline will be in March. Construction should begin as soon as possible.

"Certainly by April," Marcum said. Construction on the project, which was shelved earlier this year after bids were almost 150 percent over budget, could take up to 18 months to complete. Marcum said district officials are hoping that the building boom under way a few months ago has slowed enough to provide the district with more palatable bids on the pared-down cafeteria.

"Hopefully that will get us a good

Board members also received the State of the District report. The primary items of concern within the report, Marcum said, included a possible reduction in the district's capacity to generate revenues; consistently increasing state standards, which results in added pressure of students and staff members; and a growing student population that fails to recognize the future benefits of education.

In other business, trustees:

· Discussed escalating costs for the operation of the school cafeteria. Much of the increase, which was about $40,000 in the last fiscal year, was triggered by state-prescribed changes in school menus, Marcum said. District officials are working to bring down the costs in the current fiscal year by providing more staff training and through the use of fewer processed foods. The board noted that meal prices in the Post ISD, which have not been increased in more than a decade, may need to be hiked to help boost cafeteria rev-

· Renewed its affiliation with the West Texas Food Service Co-op through the Region 17 Education Service Center.

 Approved one student transfer. · Reviewed test scores for the district. Marcum said the Post ISD is "making headway," but as state standards continue to climb, it is more and more difficult for students to achieve the goals set. Overall, however, the performance level of Post students on these tests is equal to or better than past performances. Additional data is expected soon, and improvement is expected in most

County awards bid for finishing LAH building

by Wes Burnett

A new contract to complete the emergency building facility at Lake Alan Henry was approved by the Garza County Commissioners' Court at its regular meeting Monday morning.

The contract was let to the lowest bidder, Michael Self's Rockin' S Welding, in the amount of $17,500. The court agreed to open a late bid, but that bid was $24,250.

The decision followed a meeting with Self, who responded to a call from Precinct One commissioner Mike Sanchez. After answering several questions about the construction and Self's bid, the court set a completion deadline of February 24. The facility is set to serve as an voting site in the March 7, 2006 primary election.

The court postponed payment or settlement with the original contractor until more details of invoices from Miller Construction are received. Commissioners had set a $200 per day penalty last July, notifying Miller of the decision. The late completion penalty fees began August 13 and continued until October 24, when the court terminated the original agreement with Miller Construction.

In other matters, the court approved a list of election judges (see related story) for the 2006 election cycle and heard a report from county clerk Jim of dollars to produce a competing Plummer regarding the March 7 primary election. Plummer said that he had completed inspection of voting sites and contacting owners of the six voting locations.

New book on Close City history

A history of Close City, written by Laverne Aten, with assistance from Onita Gunn and Bunny Smith, was presented to officials with the Garza County Historical Museum at the Caprock Cultural Association meeting held Nov. 11 at the Ragtown Ranch.

The book, which will be placed in the museum, describes and recognizes students who attended school at Close City. It contains numerous historic accounts of life in the community.

Aten lived in the community and attended school there. In later years she served as manager of the Close City Cotton Gin.

When Garza County was initially formed, C.W. Post considered developing Close City as the county seat. Instead, it was determined that the county seat should have a more centralized location, so the county seat was placed at the heart of the county. Fred Howell to file as treasurer candidate

Fred Howell announced this week he will seek the Republican Party nomination for county treasurer.

Howell serves as vice president of the Garza County Hospital District and has been actively involved in the local political scene for the past three years.

A West Texas native from Kermit, Howell graduated from Texas Tech University with a degree in accounting and holds a Master of Business Administration degree from the University of Dallas.

Howell spent several years with Arco Oil & Gas Co. and Arco Coal as financial director of International Coal Operations. Toys for Tots seeks help Donations to the Post Lions Club Toys for Tots campaign have been "pretty thin" this year, according to Shelly Duran, president of the sponsoring organization.

"We're still needing toys, donations," Duran said Monday. "Anything - any kind of toys. Whatever you can give will help. We always try to do what we can for the kids, but we need help."

Last year the program served 94 local youths, most under the age of 10 or 11. At least as many children are expected to be served by this year's Toys for Tots effort, Duran

"Our thing is just the children," she said. "We want to help as many children as we can."

New and unwrapped toys or used toys in good condition, as well as donations, will be accepted by the campaign until Dec. 21. Monetary donations in the form of checks may be sent to the Post Lions Club, Box 644. Toy donations may be dropped off at Rick & Carolyn's, one of the local businesses committed to helping with the campaign.

But on Monday, after meeting with Walton in a closed session, the council authorized a salary of $55,000 per year plus benefits, Pool said.

Walton is scheduled to begin his new duties with the city on Jan. 1. Walton comes to Post from Hearne, a city with a population of slightly less than 5,000 and an annual total budget of almost $7.7 million. When he took over the position of Hearne city manager about 2 1/2 year ago, the Home Rule city was in "dire financial and management straits," according to Walton's resume.

"I have made great strides toward solvency," the resume reads, "and through personnel changes alleviated much of the corruption in city government."

Two of Walton's greatest accomplishments while in Hearne resulted from a water and wastewater study he undertook.

"As a result, $6.2 million in water system improvements and a new wastewater treatment plant are under way without an increase in taxes or utility rates," he wrote in his resume.

An overview of Walton's employment history, according to the resume provided as part of his application to the City of Post, follows:

More than two years as city manager of Fritch.

 Almost four years as city administrator in Stratford (also served as interim director of public works for about six months of that time following the death of a fellow city staff member). Prior to taking the job as city administrator, served as Stratford's municipal solid waste manager for more than three years.

· Employed by Continental Airlines' general offices in Houston for approximately four years, serving as a supervisor/flight attendant crew scheduler; pilot scheduler/flight operations; and international crew planner and manager of international crew resources.

 Employed by Britt Airways in Terre Haute, Ind., as regional manager almost three years.

Walton previously was employed at the White Sands Missile Range, Range Control Center, in New Mexico where he worked as a guidance control technician; Sun City Service Corp., in El Paso where he was vice president of operations; and Continental Airlines, El Paso, where he was senior crew scheduler.

Walton also served in the U.S. Army and was honorably discharged in May 1969.

Not happy with city council decision

I'm writing to say I'm real disappointed that (interim city manager and longtime city employee) Delbert Rudd was not considered for city manager. He worked 22 years and did a lot for the city. He should have been given the opportunity. He might not have the education that the council expected, but he had the experience because he learned from the bottom. He lives here in Post, so the city didn't have to pay moving costs and high pay.

I worked 37 years in the medical field and when I started in 1954 I knew nothing, but I had Dr. Tubbs and Dr. Wilson teach me everything. I learned. I wasn't going to nursing school, but doing the work. That experience you never forget. That's why I know Delbert could have made a good city manger.

The city has good, loyal employees that will continue doing Delbert's job, but he will still be missed. Juanita Pantoja

How did he get the idea we need another newspaper?

As word spreads around town about another newspaper in Post, I can't help but wonder why someone would drive back and forth from Lubbock to open another newspaper when Post already has a well established newspaper. Is there that much news and advertising in Post for two newspapers?

The Post Dispatch has served the citizens of Post with years of dedication to keep us updated on events taking place. For those who are shut-ins and cannot attend events or for any reason, we all have the privilege to watch them happen in our home due to the hard work of The Post Dispatch, Wes and Tim Burnett. I do appreciate those who manage the The Post Dispatch and I want to thank you for all that you have accomplished, especially for adding our local TV station and radio.

For those of you who may recall, when KPOS was sold and we no longer had our local station, Mr. Burnett worked deligently for months until he accomplished (and not knowing anything about radio) a successful local radio station for our listening, but he did not stop there, Mr.Burnett continued until he could bring us our first and only TV station so that we may keep up with all events in our community.

How can anyone compete with that?

I continue to wonder what is motivating a new paper starting up here to compete with our local newspaper. Sincerely, Sandy Smith

On God's Word

By Timothy W. Burnett

The risen Christ teaches his disciples

Continuing with the first day of the week, some time after Jesus walked with two of his disciples to Emmaus, we will cover the different times he showed himself to his 12 chosen disciples. The records are found in Mark 16:14-18; Luke 24:33-49 and John 20:19-29.

Luke's Gospel shows that the two men returned from Emmaus to Jerusalem, found eleven of the 12 chosen disciples along with others. Immediately the disciples told the two about how the Lord had risen and that he appeared to Simon Peter. Next the two men told what happened while on the way to Emmaus, and how they suddenly knew the Lord when he broke bread. While they talked Jesus suddenly stood in the midst of them and told them to be peaceful because they were terrified and frightened thinking they had seen a spirit. It's possible that the two men from Emmaus were the first to see Jesus vanish from their sight. This time they saw him arrive in the room in the

In order to help them feel better he showed them his hands and feet and allowed them to touch him so they could see that he was not a spirit. Because they still didn't believe him, he ate a broiled fish and some honey. Next he started teaching them out of the scriptures like he did for the two from Emmaus. He showed them how the scriptures spoke of his sufferings and how he would be raised from the dead on the third day. He also exhorted them to preach in his name, among all the nations, about repentance and remission of sins. He told them he would send the promise of his Father to them, and to wait in Jerusalem until they would be endued with power from on high.

The record of John tells a similar story in which Jesus popped in to see his disciples. It's difficult to determine if this is the same as, or similar to the above event in Luke. John's record shows that eleven of the 12 chosen disciples were present in the room. Jesus arrived and stood in their midst and told them to be peaceful. He also showed them his wounded hands and side.

John 20:24 reveals the missing disciple was Thomas. Later, the disciples explained to Thomas that Jesus had visited them, but he didn't believe their story. Just like the others, he would not believe until he touched Jesus' hands and side. Eight days later Jesus arrived again and let Thomas touch his hands and side. Alas, Thomas also believed and Jesus said, "because you have seen me, you believed. Blessed are they who have not seen and have believed" (John 20:29). John tells us that Jesus did many more signs in his disciples' presence which are not written in his Gospel.

The record in Mark contains added information about Jesus' time with his disciples. Verse 17 says, "And these signs shall follow them that believe. In my name shall they cast out devils. They shall speak with new tongues. They shall take up serpents. And if they drink any deadly thing, it shall not hurt them. They shall lay hands on the sick, and they shall recover." This is fantastic information for all Christian believers even today!

Next week we will focus on John 20:22 where it says, "And when he had said this, he breathed on them, and said unto them, 'receive the Holy Ghost."

Opinions

And thereafter, dead-end jobs

by Walter E. Williams

Certain jobs are derisively referred to as "burger flipper" or "dead-end" jobs. I'd like someone to define a dead-end job. For example, I started out as a professor of economics at California State University, Los Angeles and the financial component of a low-pay, low-skill job is not nearly as important then at Temple University and for the past 25 years at George Mason as what they learn on the job that can make them more valuable workers in University. It seems as though my employment might qualify as a dead-end the future. job, for all I'll ever be is a professor of economics.

Those who demean so-called dead-end jobs probably aren't talking about my job. They're mockingly referring to jobs such as clerks at Wal-Mart, hotel workers, and food handlers and counter clerks at McDonald's. McJobs is the term applied to these positions. The term has even found its way into Merriam-Webster and the encyclopedia Wikipedia. Putting down so-called dead-end jobs is a destructive insult to honest work.

How dead-end is a McDonald's job? Jim Glassman, an American Enterprise Institute scholar, wrote an article in the Institute's June 2005 On The Issues bulletin titled "Even Workers with 'McJobs' Deserve Respect." He listed some well-known former McDonald's workers. Among them: Andy Card, White House chief of staff; Jeff Bezos, founder and CEO of Amazon.com; Jay Leno, "Tonight Show" host; Carl Lewis, Olympic gold medalist; Joe Kernan, former Indiana governor; and Robert Cornog, retired CEO of Snap-On Tools. According to Glassman, some 1,200 McDonald's restaurant owners began as crew members, and so did 20 of McDonald's 50 top worldwide managers. These people and millions of others hardly qualify as dead-enders.

The primary beneficiaries of so-called McJobs are people who enter the workforce with modest or absent work skills in areas such as: being able to show up for work on time, operating a machine, counting change, greeting customers with decorum and courtesy, cooperating with fellow workers and accepting orders from supervisors. Very often the people who need these job skills, which some of us might trivialize, are youngsters who grew up in dysfunctional homes and attended rotten schools. It's a bottom rung on the economic ladder that provides them an opportunity to move up. For many,

Some demagogues charge that jobs at Wal-Mart and McDonald's only pay the minimum wage. That's plain wrong, as are many other things said about jobs that start at the minimum wage. According to the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics: Sixty-three percent of minimum wage workers receive raises within one year of employment, and only 15 percent still earn the minimum wage after three years. Moreover, only three percent of all hourly workers and two percent of wage and salary earners earn minimum wages. Most minimum wage earners are young -- 53 percent are between the ages

Furthermore, only 5.3 percent of minimum wage earners are from households below the official poverty line; 40 percent of minimum wage earners live in households with incomes of $60,000 and higher, and over 82 percent of minimum wage earners do not have dependents. My stepfather used to tell me that any honest work was better than begging and stealing. As a young person, I worked many jobs from shining shoes and picking blueberries to delivering packages and washing dishes. Today's tragedy for many a poor youngster is that the opportunities I had for learning the world of work and moving up the economic ladder have either been destroyed through legislation or demeaned by today's do-gooders.

Don't Complicate Immigration Reform

Ron Paul's

Texas Straight Talk A Weekly Column www.house.gov/paul

Congress is poised to consider an immigration reform bill this week, but as usual the devil will be in the details. A sensible bill would bolster enforcement of existing immigration laws, reject any form of amnesty, and address the underlying welfare state that adds to the problem. I fear, however, that Congress will bow to the president and accept some sort of amnesty. Even worse, I fear Congress may use the immigration bill to create a national employment database that has nothing to do with border control and everything to do with monitoring American citizens and employers. Most Americans understandably want Congress to do something about illegal immigration, which has become a national embarrassment. One important solution is better enforcement of the laws we've got-- which plainly call for illegal immigrants to be arrested and deported. Congress can pass any law it wants, but unless federal agencies enforce those laws they are meaningless.

The ultimate responsibility for our immigration mess, therefore, lies squarely with successive presidents, not Congress. For decades our chief executives simply have lacked the political will, the manpower, or the desire to police our borders and deport lawbreakers. It's been nearly impossible politically for presidents or candidates to suggest the obvious, namely that illegal immigration mocks the rule of law and creates huge social and economic problems. But the tide is turning, and a majority of Americans will demand real action on immigration by the next administration. Real immigration reform will be difficult, but it need not be complicated.

First, enforce existing laws by controlling the borders once and for all. We must recognize that true national defense means defending our own borders and coastlines. This is the primary constitutional responsibility of the federal government. This means it's time to stop spending hundreds of billions of dollars on overseas military adventures and countless alphabet soup domestic agencies. Borders should be the number one national priority, plain and simple. Does the federal government have something better to do?

Second, we must end birthright citizenship by constitutional amendment, if necessary. House Joint Resolution 46, which I introduced earlier this year, begins the process in Congress. As long as illegal immigrants know that their children born here will be citizens, the perverse incentive to sneak into this country remains strong. Citizenship involves more than the mere location of one's birth. True citizenship requires cultural connections and an allegiance to the United States.

Americans are happy to welcome those who wish to come here and build a better life for themselves, but we rightfully expect immigrants to show loyalty and attempt to assimilate themselves culturally. Birthright citizenship sometimes confers the benefits of being American on people who do not truly embrace America.

Finally, we must end welfare state subsidies for illegal immigrants. Some illegal immigrants-- certainly not all-- receive housing subsidies, food stamps, free medical care, and other forms of welfare. This alienates taxpayers and breeds suspicion of immigrants, even though the majority of them work very hard. Without a welfare state, we would know that everyone coming to America wanted to work hard and Immigration admittedly is a difficult issue, and nobody wants America to become an unwelcoming fortress. On the contrary, we need to attract the best and brightest people by remaining an entrepreneurial society that rewards initiative and hard work. But we must gain control of our borders not only to strengthen our national security, but also to preserve our national identity.

Twas the night before solstice

by Bill OfReilly

Way back in 1822, Clement Clarke Moore wrote the poem that is now known as "Twas the Night Before Christmas," and it was first published in the Troy Sentinel. Moore, the son of the New York bishop who had presided at George Washington's inauguration, had no idea his verse would become world-famous, beloved by people everywhere.

But because there is mention of a certain "Saint Nicholas" in the poem, it may, alas, have to be revised in order not to offend Americans who don't believe in saints, or even Christmas, for that matter. We cannot be having any exclusionary poems now, can we?

So with apologies to Clement Moore and everybody else, I humbly submit this updated poem for your consideration:

"Twas the night before Solstice, and all through the land, the ACLU was watching to keep things in hand. The children were nestled all snug in their beds, while forces kept Christmas out of their heads. When out on the lawn there arose such a clatter, I sprang from my bed and heard desperate chatter. Someone had seen my manger display, And wailed very loudly, "Go away, go away." How could I be so crass, so utterly wrong, So show the infant Jesus and sing him a song? And then, in a twinkling, I heard on the roof An ACLU lawyer, looking stern and aloof. "No manger! No caroling!" he said with a snort. "And if you don't comply immediately, I'll take you to court!" He was chubby and plumb, a right surly old elf, And I laughed when I saw him in spite of myself. He dallied no more, but went straight to his phone, Lamenting the manger, in a most pitiful moan. But I, in the spirit, said nothing unkind, Christmas is forgiveness, whatever you find. A wink of his eye and a twist of his head, Soon gave me to know I had nothing to dread. Christmas will survive, the folks will demand it, Even if secular lawyers will not understand it. Then I heard him exclaim, as he drove out of sight, Happy Solstice to all, and to all a good night!" Veteran TV news anchor Bill O'Reilly is host of the Fox News show "The O'Reilly Factor" and author of the book "Who's Looking Out For You?" Treasurer Ruth Ann Young filing for re-election

Ruth Ann Young announced this week she will file as a candidate in the Democratic primary, seeking a fifth term as Garza County treasurer.

"I am announcing my candidacy for re-election," Young said. "I am currently serving my fourth four-year term.... For the past 15 years I have maintained my treasurer's certification through continuing education through V.G. Young Institute at College Station A&M University, as well as workshops sponsored by Texas Association of Counties. These workshops relate to issues that are duties of the office of treasurer, such as unemployment, worker's compensation, labor laws, employee health insurance, new GASB statements and accounting principles."

Young said that all records in the treasurer's office are audited annually and have been found to be in compliance with governmental auditing standards. All county funds are kept and closely monitored in interest-bearing products, including banking accounts, CDs and/or investment pools authorized under the Public Funds Investment Act.

HOLIDAY NEWS

I know everyone will be having guests and gatherings over the holidays, please call me and let's share your celebrations with everyone. SENT TO ME BY DIANE GRAVES

A GLASS OF MILK

One day, a poor boy who was selling goods from door to door to pay his way through school, found he had only one thin dime left, and he was hungry. He decided he would ask for a meal at the next house. However, he lost his nerve when a lovely young woman opened the door. Instead of a meal he asked for a drink of water. She thought he looked hungry so brought him a large glass of milk. He drank it slowly, and then asked, how much do I owe you?

You don't owe me anything, she replied. "Mother has taught us never to accept pay for a kindness.'

He said "Then I thank you from my heart." As Howard Kelly left that house, he not only felt stronger physically, but his faith in God and man was strong also.. He had been ready to give up and

Many years later that same young woman became critically ill. The local doctors were baffled! They finally sent her to the big city, where they called in specialists to study her rare disease.

Dr. Howard Kelly was called in for the consultation. When he heard the name of the town she came from, a strange light filled his eyes. Immediately he rose and went down the hall of the hospital to her room.

Dressed in his doctor's gown he went in to see her. He recognized her at

He went back to the consultation room determined to do his best to save her life. From that day he gave special attention to her case. After a long struggle, the battle was won. Dr. Kelly requested the business office to pass the final bill to him for approval. He looked at it, then wrote something on the edge and the bill was sent to her room. She feared to open it, for she was sure it would take the rest of her life to pay for it all. Finally she looked, and something caught her attention on the side of the bill. She read these

Landtroop gets endorsement from Congressman Conaway

U.S. Congressman Mike Conaway of Midland (District 11) announced earlier this week his endorsement of Jim Landtroop, Republican candidate for state representative, District 85.

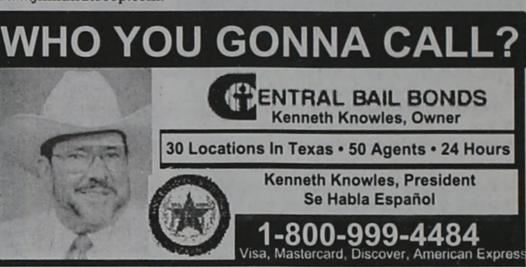

"Jim Landtroop will be a young and enthusiastic force in the Texas House of Representatives," Conaway said. "His business experience and values of faith and family will be a strong voice for this area in Austin. I look forward to working with him on common issues between the state and federal government, like agriculture, energy and preserving the quality of life in our rural communities."

Landtroop began his grassroots campaign in early spring and has traveled all around the district meeting the constituents. He announced his intention to run in late October and has garnered more than 350 supporters, according to a press release issued this week.

"I am honored and humbled to receive Congressman Conaway's endorsement," Landtroop said. "Mike is a great asset to West Texas and serves in Washington with integrity and distinction. I look forward to working just as hard for the people of House District 85 in Austin."

District 85 and District 11 share the common counties of Reagan, Irion, Sterling and Glasscock. Other counties Landtroop seeks to represent are Howard, Borden, Terry, Lynn, Garza, Crosby, Kent, Stonewall, Fisher, Jones, Hale and Floyd.

For more information on the Landtroop campaign, visit www.jimlandtroop.com.

Custom-sculpted Santa presented to UMC Health Systems by Teri Dolls

Teri Dolls, a Post-based company, recently presented UMC Health System with a custom-sculpted Santa.

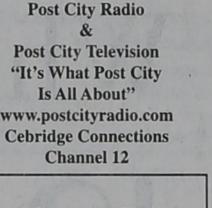

The 6-foot Santa is being displayed during the holiday season in the UMC Children's Hospital.

"This is a wonderful addition to the Children's Hospital," said Greg Bruce, UMC division director. "Santa brings Christmas joy to all who see him. It is impossible not to smile when you see Santa."

Theresa and Evangelina Doggett of Teri Dolls made the presentation earlier this month.

Theresa has been designing Santas since 1998. Her first work, a part of a previous business venture, was featured in the Neiman-Marcus Christmas Book. In 1999, the company was commissioned to design 10 Millennium life-sized Santas for Neiman-Marcus.

In addition to the UMC Children's Hospital, the Dallas Cowboys, Texas governor's mansion and the White House are home to Teri Dolls Santas.
