Post ISD appproves teacher pay increases for 2005-2006

by Sheri Lewis

Post Independent School District teachers will realize modest pay hikes later this year following action taken by trustees at their Jan. 12

School board members voted to adopt the new teacher pay scale as presented. The scale represents figures adopted some time ago by state

The pay raise will be retroactive to the beginning of the current school year, Superintendent Marlin Marcum said. Teachers eligible for the pay raise will receive a one-time lump sum on their May paychecks representing the amount they would have received over the past few months if the pay hike had gone into effect with the beginning of the 2005-2006 school year.

Marcum described the pay hike as "pretty miniscule," but noted that the increase will cost the district an additional $88,000.

In other business, Marcum's contract was extended by a year, bumping

The contract extension, which carries no salary increase, followed a board evaluation of the superintendent.

In other business, board members:

 Approved an increase in lunchroom charges for the 2006-2007 school year. New rates will be as follows: $2.25, adult lunch; $1.25, elementary lunch; $1.50, middle/high school lunch; $1.25, adult breakfast; 75 cents, elementary/middle/high school breakfast. Free and reduced price lunch costs will remain the same.

 Voted to reduce the mileage reimbursement rates to 40.5 cents per mile effective immediately. The board had previously raised that amount to 48.5 cents per mile when gas prices climbed, but decided a downward adjustment was needed to reflect the recent reduction in gas costs.

· Discussed the establishment of a budget parameter for the 2006-2007 school year; however, no action was taken. The board agreed that school district business should be conducted as usual until more information is made available from Austin lawmakers. Although no formal decision was made, Marcum said trustees did agree that they should probably maintain the same spending levels as observed in the current school year and that planned spending should not exceed

Decided to wait until May to review the board handbook.

· Reviewed samples and color boards for the new cafeteria and decided on various options pertaining to the planned structure. These decisions needed to be made, Marcum said, prior to the project going out for bids next month

Norman leads candidates in total contributions for primary election

by Wes Burnett

The semi-annual report required of all candidates and officeholders in the March 7 primary elections filed treasurer reports with Garza County clerk Jim Plummer last week. All but two of the candidates declared their intention to accept no more than $500 in contributions and no more than $500 in expenses.

Clinic logs first profitable month in almost 10 years

The Garza-County Health Clinic, after receiving a much-needed shot in the arm last year with the arrival of a new physician, finished the last month of 2005 in the black.

According to a report delivered to Hospital District board members Jan. 19, the clinic logged revenues of $46,226 for the month of December and expenses totaling $43,252, leaving a modest profit of $2,974.

This marks the first time since the clinic opened in October 1996, shortly after the closure of the local hospital, that the clinic has shown a profit, district administrator Shirley Taylor said.

The facility recorded 723 visits and 1,178 procedures in the final month of the year, according to reports.

In other business, the board sifted through a pair of loan offers devised to assist the district in the purchase of new X-ray equipment. Following consideration, the board voted to enter into a 72-month loan agreement with Citizens Bank in the amount of $40,000. The bank's rate was nearly one point lower than that offered by Government Capital Corp., Taylor said. (Continued on Page 2)

County judge candidates Phil Mathews and Lee Norman both submitted the more detailed reports required for candidates who intend to exceed the $500 limit.

Mathews reported no contributions, with expenditures of $283.62, listing the payment to Ammons Printing & Office Supply for printed campaign materials.

Norman reported $50 in contributions of $50 or less from individuals; total political contributions of $68.38 (other than pledges, loans or guarantee of loans); total political expenditures of $50 or less (unless itemized) of $18.38; total political expenditures of $188.38; total political contributions of $2,239.17 and total principal amount of all outstanding loans of $1,150.

According to the Texas Ethics Commission, candidates are required to file a Schedule A (Political Contributions Other Than Pledges or Loans) that exceed $50. Schedule A also includes "In-Kind" contributions, such as advertising discounts or advertising purchased by someone else with the candidate's prior consent or approval. There was no Schedule Aon file with the clerk for Norman.

Candidates are also required to file a Schedule E (Loans) that exceed $50 from one person. There was no Schedule E on file for Norman in the clerk's office.

The Ethics Commission also requires the filing of Schedule F (Political Expenditures) which exceed $50 paid to any one individual or entity. There was no Schedule F included in Norman's file at the clerk's office. Candidate treasurers may file amendments for the reports.

The next filing date for candidate treasurers is the "30th day before election report," due no later than February 6. Other reports due in the future are the personal financial report (Febuary 13) and "8th Day Before Election Report" on February 27.

Candidates who declare under the $500 limit must file a report within 48 hours after their contributions or expenses exceed $500.

Judy's Jabberin'

by Judy Ballentine Bush

Hello, Hope this week's Jabberin finds everyone feeling great and enjoying their week. We have had so many folks suffering with the flu or flu like symptoms. I have never seen so many sick people. I just know if we could get some rain or snow the allergy problem would go away and maybe some of this other stuff.

I was thrilled when Rick and I and Ronnie and Trish Metsgar were coming home from Lubbock Saturday evening and had to turn on the windshield wipers. We saw a little sprinkle and some sleet. Sure got our hopes up. GETWELL I understand James Dye is coming home today (Tuesday) after having some foot surgery. Hope you are up and out real soon James.

Also to Mike Gonzales a big get well. I hear that he is back at Golden Plains after being released from the hospital. Mike, you are in my prayers and I know you will be back out and about soon. STOCK SHOW I wanted to say congratulations to all of the kids who were involved in the stock show this past weekend. We did not get to attend in Post as our grandchild Kaylan was showing in Gail, but I kept up and know the kids did really

I just think this is such a good thing for the kids to be involved in. Lots of good learning lessons and good friendships come out of the stock shows. Anyway, congrats to all of the winners and thanks to all of the parents that makes it a success each year I know I'm female, but the following is just too cute. Sent to me by my HUSBAND! County gets 'very good' financial report from auditor

by Wesley W. Burnett

The Garza County Commissioners' Court tackled a full agenda Monday morning, including a "very good report" on the county's financial position in an audit presented by Joe F. Hays, CPA (see related story this issue).

The court accepted a $12,500 grant from the Texas Department of Public Safety to assist the Justice of the Peace Courts in automated reporting of traffic convictions. Justice of the Peace Dee C. Justice presented the report.

Constable Daniel Yarbro presented an annual report of JP 1 & 2 activities (see related story this issue). Yarbro also introduced Nextel Spring representatives, recommending switching cellular phone service to Nextel for all county law enforcement. Yarbro said that Sheriff Cliff Laws agreed with the change.

Yarbro explained that the current service has some "dead" spots in various points in the county, while a testing of Nextel services found no dead spots. The new service also provides GPS and walkie talkie service between units. Yarbro explained that the change would actually save the county money, and provide more expanded service.

Nextel representatives Christina Smith and Griff Thomas answered questions and explained the various options available. The court agreed to a two year contract, which provided new "military" styled telephones for $39.99, compared to the full charge of $99.99. There are a total of 17 law enforcement telephone units.

The court rejected a bid of $2,059.99 from Tasha Phergson for property at 412 W. 12th Street. County Attorney Les Acker explained that a total of $26,265 is owed on the property for Garza County taxing authorities. Tax Assessor Collector Judy M. Bush explained that occupants of the house at the location had been served notice of eviction. The property, valued by the appraisal district at $19,700, had been included in a previous foreclosure action, with no bids being received.

A public assistance application was approved in the amount of $255 for a family needing help with rent and utilities.

Engineer Rich Oller presented a report on bridge repairs on County Road 378, explaining that the culverts are expected to be installed at the site within the next week or two. Oller gave copies of the contract with Joe Marts for replacement of the bridge at that location. Oller said that the road would have to be closed for 60 days when the culverts are actually put in place. After they are set, Oller said that the bridge would be set for one lane until the project is completed.

Oller also addressed the Lake Alan Henry emergency building project, explaining that new drawings were being prepared to include changes requested by the court.

A proposal by Judge Giles W. Dalby to enter into a contract with Oller to serve as the county's engineer at an annual fee of $25,000 was tabled until the next scheduled meeting (February 13). Commissioners Gary McDaniel and Glenda McClellan requested additional information to determine whether the county had enough engineering needs to justify the retainer. Commissioner John Valdez agreed. Commissioner Mike Sanchez pointed out that there is another bridge (CR 386) that needs to be replaced.

The court agreed to continue a grievance committee made of five elected officials and four grand jurors. Clerk Jim Plummer had the names of grand jurors on slips of paper for a drawing. The court authorized Plummer to contact those whose names were drawn and to work through the entire grand juror list if the first six are unable to serve.

The four names drawn by deputy treasurer Jana McCallister were Iris Copeland, Robbie Williams, Debbie Martin, Guadalupe Garcia and alternates Frederico Reyna and Clay

Plummer also reported on primary election plans, including a meeting of the county election board February 10 at 2:30 p.m. in the courtroom. He also recommended renting space at Grub's Bait & Grill at Lake Alan Henry for voters in that portion of Precinct 4. Plummer said that he investigated the cost of a portable building, with an estimated cost of $7,475.

Plummer also informed the court that Democrat Party Chairman Lewis Earl had signed an agreement that the Democrat Party does not intend to use any county services related to the March 7 primary election. Department Transporation's Tracy Cumby offered recycled asphalt for county use. The value is estimated at $15,650. The court accepted the material, with plans to divide into four equal parts for each precinct. Cumby said that the material is located on FM 212 in Lynn County and needs to be moved to facilitate the work.

Cumby also said that the culverts being used on CR 378 repairs are valued at $17,320. Assisting Cumby in the presentation were Texas Department of Transportation's Jim Combs and Carlton Jolly.

(Editor's Note:) The DVD recording of the entire (unedited) meeting is aired on Post City Television (Cebridge Connections Channel 12) at 9 a.m. on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday.

On God's Word

By Timothy W. Burnett

The Promise of the Father comes...Acts 2:1-4

We will now look at the events recorded in Acts 2:1-4. With help from God, the apostles had just chosen a replacement for Judas. It occurred on a special day called Pentecost while in the temple at Jerusalem.

All of the disciples were in the same place. Starting with verses 2-4, "And suddenly there came a sound from heaven as of a rushing mighty wind, and it filled all the house where they were sitting. And there appeared unto them cloven tongues like fire, and it sat upon each of them. And they were all filled with the holy ghost and began to speak with other tongues as the Spirit gave the words." While every body sat in the temple, a sound from heaven suddenly broke the silence. To understand what that sound was it helps to remember that earlier, Jesus Christ told them to wait for the promise from God. The promise was to be God's gift of the holy ghost. Given this, we can safely conclude the sound represented holy spirit. It is impossible for spiritual things to be directly perceived by our five senses and science. So the sound had to be miraculously provided by God. It is interesting to note that the word spirit came from a word that referred to wind. So it is quite fitting that God would the sound of wind. A vision of cloven tongues like fire was given to them. And the tongues sat upon each of them. They had already been taught earlier that speaking in tongues would be available. So when the time was right, God gave them the perfect cue to start speaking. It was a vision of cloven tongues sitting upon them. Isn't that so cool! They saw the vision and immediately acted on it. To speak in tongues simply means to speak in languages which are foreign to the person speaking. Please understand that they were not possessed into speaking in tongues. They freely started speaking by their own cognition and according to God's will. And as they started speaking, the Spirit gave

A study of the words "sat upon" also shines more light. It came from an earlier word that referred to a continuous pressing downward upon something. It presumes that the thing being pressed down can not come out. For those who wish to study this in more detail, it is the Greek word "epi." It is used in Acts 10:44 where Peter ministered the holy ghost to gentiles, "While Peter yet spoke these words, the holy ghost fell on all them which heard the word." How did they know it fell on them? "For they heard them speak with tongues, and magnify God." This shows that speaking in tongues is directly tied to the holy ghost permanently pressing downward upon somebody. In this record Peter had to teach them, but in Acts 2:4 the disciples had already been taught about speaking in tongues. They just didn't know when to start. This is why God gave the vision of cloven tongues pressing downward upon each of them.

In Acts 2:4 we see the first record of people being baptized with holy spirit and getting born-again not of corruptible seed, but of incorruptible seed, by the word of God which lives and abides forever (1Peter 1:23). These are the ever abiding words from God which sprang out of them as rivers of living waters when they started speaking in tongues. They were saved from having to endure the terrible day of tribulation that is still to come in the future. They became God's dearly beloved children who will one day live in heaven with our Lord Jesus Christ. Guess what? Contrary to popular belief, this precious salvation is still available today. Praise God for His rightly divided word which does not change!

Opinions

And thereafter, In Government We Trust

by Walter E. Williams

hurricanes? The primary lesson is that we shouldn't have much faith in a federal bureaucracy like the Federal Emergency Management Agency (FEMA). They amply demonstrated their incompetence, but what's our response? We'll give them more money and more authority. That's not smart.

The FEMA fiasco is discussed in several articles in the December 2005 issue of The Freeman: Ideas on Liberty magazine, published by the Foundation for Economic Education, the nation's first free market think tank (fee.org). Hillsdale College professor of economics Robert Murphy points to some of FEMA's stupidity in response to Hurricane Katrina, which includes "delaying firefighters two days in Atlanta hotels to receive sexual-harassment training and watch videos on the history of FEMA while people were dying in New Orleans."

By contrast, private firms like Wal-Mart, Sam's Club and Home Depot had trucks on the road immediately after the hurricane. Stores even gave away items like chain saws and boots for rescue workers, sheets and clothes for shelters, and water and ice for the public. Wal-Mart was so efficient that there was talk among some Louisiana officials of letting Wal-Mart take over FEMA's job and a suggestion that Wal-Mart CEO Lee Scott run FEMA. Freeman editor Sheldon Richman says the latter suggestion misses a very important point. Wal-Mart was effective because it was not a government agency. If Mr. Scott were in charge of FEMA, he wouldn't do much better than its former director, Michael Brown. Government cannot achieve the efficiencies of a business. Trying to get government to be as efficient as business is as hopeless as trying to teach cats to bark and dogs to meow.

Dwight Lee, University of Georgia professor, penned an article with the instructive title "Mitigating Disaster: Abolish FEMA and Let Gas Prices Rise." I've written several columns about the surge in gasoline prices and criticized the "pricegouging" demagoguery. Professor Lee has an insight that I overlooked. He asks

What lessons should we have learned from last summer's deadly and destructive whether it would have been a good idea, in the wake of supply disruptions of Hurricanes Katrina and Rita, for Americans to continue using gasoline as if there hadn't been those supply disruptions. After the hurricanes, more gas was suddenly needed to bring rescue personnel, evacuate the homeless, clear rubble and a host of other things to get the reconstruction efforts underway. If gas prices had remained what they were before the hurricanes, Americans would have continued using the same amount of gas. Professor Lee says, "The higher gas prices motivated tens of millions of drivers to conserve gasoline, allowing more to be available where it was badly needed." What's more, we didn't need a government edict; we voluntarily cut back on gasoline consumption.

Professor Lee explains that the waste, delays and incompetence are an inherent part of all federal programs and we'd be better off without FEMA. He gives many reasons why private or local disaster relief will produce a better outcome. However, Lee omits a question that I always ask when people assert that this or that government program is an absolute necessity. My question is, what did we do before? In 1871, a fire virtually destroyed Chicago. In 1900, a category 4 hurricane wiped out Galveston, Texas, and killed as many as 12,000 people. In 1906, an earthquake leveled San Francisco. Loss of life was estimated at nearly 3,000 people, and the damage estimated at the time was $400 million -- about $8 billion in today's dollars. After those massive disasters, each city recovered. I'd like to have an explanation, from those who'd argue that federal disaster relief and an agency like FEMA are the only ways to recover from a disaster, how these cities recovered.

School choice flaws

by Sheldon Richman

Some advocates of what is euphemistically called "school choice" argue that their reform would be a crucial step along the road to the separation of school and state. Some of us have dissented. Knowing how government works, we've had a hunch that vouchers and tuition tax credits would most likely lead to greater regulation of private schools. The cry of "accountability" for schools receiving "public money" would be irresistible.

Events are not only supporting our prediction; they are even worse than we might have expected. In Florida groups that support tuition tax credits for private schools have been lobbying, so far unsuccessfully, for legislation to impose standards on schools wishing to participate in the scholarship programs. Associations of private schools are in the forefront of the lobbying coalition. According to Jenny Rothenberg, a promoter of corporate tax credits in Tampa, the lobbyists' efforts to have government adopt standards is a response to misconduct, including mismanagement and fraud, by three former scholarshipfunding organizations. "Among the coalition's accountability recommendations are required standardized testing for tax credit scholarship recipients and teacher qualification requirements that allow for formal education or special knowledge of the subject," Rothenberg writes. The chairman of the new Florida Association of Scholarship Funding Organizations says, "Forming the association is giving taxpayers confidence that the program can operate under strong accountability practices."

But isn't something wrong here? School choice was supposed to shift decision-making power from government to parents, which would then make schools accountable to them rather than to bureaucrats. As Roy Cordato of the John Locke Foundation says, "I thought parents were supposed to be capable of choosing between good and bad private schools." Something doesn't add up if the scholarship organizations and schools are running to the government

No doubt this is a public-relations move. Bad behavior gave the Florida movement a black eye, and it is seeking to rehabilitate itself. But enlisting the government is a bad idea. And another motive should not be ruled out, namely, that the schools lobbying for standards realize that any bureaucratic burdens will be harder on smaller and not-yet-started schools than on larger established schools. It's common practice for people to use the government to stifle their competition.

As Rothenberg points out, school-choice advocates have turned to the government elsewhere. It happened in Wisconsin, where School Choice Wisconsin won so-called accountability legislation. The organization proudly brags that the law has "weed[ed] out schools that aren't ready for prime time but doesn't pose an unnecessary burden for other schools in the program." In other words, politicians and bureaucrats, not parents, determine who may and may not offer education. That's the way to the separation of school and state? One key to the puzzle is that most advocates of school choice do not want the separation of school and state. That makes the coalition for vouchers and tuition tax credits somewhat awkward, considering that its components want to move in different directions. How does that work exactly?

The school-choice movement offers yet another lesson in how not to roll back the power of government. In contrast, advocates of liberty should always proclaim their objectives and - very important - not look to the government for help. The idea that government could be removed from schooling by getting it to finance private-school tuition was always convoluted. Tuition tax credits escape one flaw in vouchers: they let taxpayers keep money that otherwise would be taken from. But they share another flaw: they too open the door to more regulation of private schools. It's unrealistic to think that won't happen. Now we know that the schools themselves will ask for it.

Vermont Justice

by Bill OfReilly

Ralph Page is a problem. The 35-year-old Vermont man has twice been convicted of drunk driving, and now faces charges of theft and assaulting his girlfriend. He's a typical low-level offender who shuffles around causing trouble and clogging ur the justice system.

On Jan. 17, Page ambled into Judge Patricia Zimmerman's courtroom to answer charges that he punched a woman in the face. Apparently, Page did not like hearing the charges against him and screamed out, "this is f---ing bull----." That annoyed Judge Zimmerman, who promptly found Page in contempt of court and sentenced him to 60 days in a Vermont jail.

Nothing wrong with that, but listen to this: That 60-day sentence is the same amount of jail time another Vermont judge, Edward Cashman, awarded 34-year-olc Mark Hulett. But it is here where the Vermont justice system collapses. Incredibly Hulett pled guilty to a variety of felony sexual assault charges against a 6-year-old girl. Over a period of four years, Hulett, a friend of the girl's mother, confessed to raping the child in her own home. It was a methodical and brutal series of actions on Hulett's part, and it has devastated an innocent little girl.

But when it came time to sentence Hulett, Judge Cashman suspended all but 60 days of a potential life prison stretch, because Cashman wanted Hulett to ge "treatment." At sentencing the judge said: "I keep telling prosecutors, and they won' hear me, that punishment is not enough."

So here's justice in the state of Vermont: Cursing at a judge merits the same prisor time as repeatedly raping a 6-year-old girl.

If Hulett had committed the same crime in Florida, he would now be serving 25. to-life in the penitentiary because that state has passed mandatory minimum sentences for felony battery on children. But Vermont has no such minimums. So Mark Hulett, child rapist, is set to walk free on March 4.

The philosophy of our nation is "equal justice under the law." Obviously, the abused little girl and her family did not get justice by any measure. Clear-thinking people understand that true justice requires that the punishment fit the crime.

But Judge Cashman does not understand that. His sympathies are with the rapist and he did not even attempt to hide that fact. Because of Cashman's outrageous sentence, you would think Vermonters would be calling for his gavel and robe.

You would think. But you'd be wrong.

Most of the state's liberal newspapers are supporting Cashman. The far-lef Brattleboro Reformer editorialized: "Lengthy jail terms, without rehabilitation wil not accomplish anything."

Really? How about keeping child rapists away from children? Doesn't a length; prison term accomplish that?

Vermont's shameful story is being played out in other places as well. But it is ir this tiny state, the second least populated behind Wyoming, that a horrendous violation of human rights is taking place.

Yet we have heard nothing from former Vermont Governor Howard Dean, or Sens. Leahy and Jeffords, or social activist Ben Cohen of Ben and Jerry's Ice Cream which is based in the Green Mountain State.

Also, the ACLU is silent as well.

Meantime, an abused little girl will likely live out her life in anguish and confusion, her low-income family is devastated, and the crazy left media believes Judge Cashman is the victim of unreasonable "demagogues."

They say the skiing is great this winter in Vermont. But I'm not going. There's something in the air there that I cannot abide.

Generous donations were made by Glenda McClellan in memory of Mason McClellan, and Big Country Electric, to the GCJLA scholarship funds. Scholarships will be presented to local graduates in May.

Other various donations were made in support of the association and show. Ag Texas donated bottled water for the concession stand. Family Cleaners cleaned the curtain backdrop for pictures and donated safety pins for exhibitor cards. Jerry's Barbeque donated baked potatoes for the concession stand and B&A LP Gas serviced the heaters for the shows. Brady's, Rocker A, Palmers Construction, and Strawn Transport donated ice for the concession stand collected by Post FFA boys. Cindee Jackson donated film and developing on the pictures. We appreciate everyone for their donations and support of our program. Assisting with weigh-in was Billie Williams, Fred Postell, Jeff Williams, Ja D. Young, Ray Mason, Barry Morris, Nancy Morris, Danny Robertson, Delton Robinson, Rusty Morris, Dionn Heckaman, Bobby Heckaman, Junior Stelzer, J. C. Stelzer, Milton Williams and Ronnie Dunn. Ring help included Milton Williams, Junior Stelzer, Ronnie Dunn, Jimmy Blanton, Benny Arguello, Jason Porter, T.J. Gaydos, Rusty Morris, Steve Miller, J. C. Stelzer, and Randy Babb. Ray Mason, Gary Blevins, Kurt Stevens, Mike Babb and Milton Williams assisted in the sale ring. The G.C.J.L.A. Concession Stand Committee included Chairman Kim Reiter, Traci Blanton for Southland FFA; Kim Reiter, Jaquita Blevins, and Nita Jo Heckaman for Garza County 4-H and Cindee Reiter and Amy Morris for Post FFA. Saturday's lunch was prepared by cooks Junior Stelzer and Royce Hart with Kim Reiter coordinating the concession stand and buyers meal. Post FFA provided beans, Southland FFA provided salads and Garza County 4-H provided desserts. FFA and 4-H families provided treats for the concession stand

Postings - by Jim Cornish: It's pretty obvious the sales tax and federal revenue sharing are making the new community-youth center financially possible. We phoned City Secretary Wanda Wilkerson to check on the amount the city received for its one per cent sales tax in 1975. Wanda reported: "Over $72,000," which is a 68 per cent increase over the $43,070.25 in 1974.

The Garza County Heritage Association, this community's non-profit corporation, accepted the responsibility of the future of the Algerita Hotel and its ownership from the city this week.

Candidate's for this year's FHA Sweetheart contest are: Lesa Haley, Kathy Manuel, Cindy Kirkpatrick, Kerri Pool, Patricia Bilberry, Karen Williams, Tiana Shiver, Vickie Darling, Nan Hair, Kim Mitchell, Donna Josey, Karla Duren, Jennifer Miller, Kim Lott, Jodine Tipton,

Say it with flowers from Aunt B's

Say it with flowers this Valentine's Day. Say it with a little help from Aunt B's Floral

Located at 117 E. Main in downtown Post, Aunt B's offers a bevy of beautiful gift ideas, starting with fresh cut flowers, floral arrangements and plants.

The shop also carries an assortment of gift items, including frames, photo albums, jewelry and crosses. For the young and the young-at-heart there are oh-so-cute stuffed animals and colorful balloons. And to satisfy the sweetie with the sweet tooth, Aunt B's handles floral orders for weddings - boutonnieres and bouquets, for example - as well as baby corsages and homecoming mums.

The shop also offers monogramming for customers who want to add a special touch to jackets, shirts and blankets they bring in.

When she's not busy with Aunt B's, Miller said she's busy mothering her four daughters, ages 13, 12, 6 and 2. Husband, Steve, pitches in to help with the business whenever possible.

With Valentine's Day just around the corner, however, Aunt B's is sure to be a hectic place in coming weeks. Miller suggests that those interested in ordering flower deliveries for the special day should place their orders no later than Feb. 13 to ensure snack baskets and fruit baskets also are available.

"We have something to celebrate every event," said Beverly Miller, the shop's owner. "New baby, weddings, birthdays, anniversaries, get well soon -- and we offer

Texas Treasures is the place for Valentine Day gifts

Looking for that perfect gift for your Valentine's Day sweetie? Look no further than Texas Treasures Located at 203 E. Main Street, Texas Treasures is open Mondays through Saturdays to offer some of the most unique jewelry and gift items available in Post

"We have a little bit of everything," said Sue Trammell, who owns the business along with her husband, Jack. "We carry a broad variety of things - from affordable to the more expensive. Something for all budgets. The shop offers a stunning assortment of sterling silver and turquoise jewelry, much of it crafted by Native Americans. "We go to market in Dallas and buy native items from Native Americans in New Mexico or in the Four Corners area," Trammell said.

Other popular Texas Treasures offerings include beautiful Lee Middleton baby dolls; precious Reborn Babies, which are like weighted newborns, both "lovable or-collector items," by Misty Waddell of Amarillo; and Horsehair Pottery by Maria Zuni Plum. The shop also carries Linen Tree cards, Rada knives, Candle Delights candles and some Fiesta Ware pieces.

Texas Treasures has operated in its downtown location for three years, but the Trammells have been in the business for much longer. The couple started out doing road shows almost every weekend for about 10 years, covering a radius of 200 to 250 miles, before opening a booth at Old Mill Trade Days when it began. The Trammells still maintain a presence at Trade Days.
