Demolition of house yields remnants of Post's history

by Sheri Lewis

Demolition on one of the community's oldest homes was completed last week, but not without an effort to preserve pieces of the history it contained.

The house, located in the 100 block of Avenue I, was demolished by its owner, Family Harvest Church. The church plans to eventually use the site, as well as an adjacent property, to construct a new building, pastor Joey Hamlin said.

Because of the historic nature of the house – it is said to have been built almost 100 years ago and possibly lived in by the town's founder, C.W. Post - church officials said a year ago they wanted to donate the structure to someone interested in relocating and remodeling it. But Hamlin said firms contacted to investigate the feasibility of moving the historic structure determined the building could not be picked up and relocated.

"It was deemed immovable by a couple of moving companies," he said.

The idea behind salvaging the building's history-at least portions of it - remained important to Hamlin and the church. So arrangements were made for Chip Polk of the Ragtown Amphitheater to go into the house and salvage windows, doors, exterior rock and pieces of the house's original crown molding.

"We urged him to take anything that might be of historic value," Hamlin said. "We were concerned with the preservation of the history."

The salvaged pieces will be used to construct at least one of the replicas of historic Post buildings being created as part of the Ragtown project, he said. Plans call for the components from the house to be used in the Algerita Hotel replica.

Rock taken from the home will be used to construct a garden at Ragtown that will feature a statue of C.W. Post at its center.

"He (Polk) has a great imagination for that sort of thing," Hamlin said. "I'm sure he'll do it justice."

Demolition of the house was completed Saturday, but the church purchase for VFD use The Post City Council, during its Oct. 3 meeting, authorized the purchase of hydrogen sulfide monitors, but spurned a Garza County request that monitors be purchased jointly by the county and city.

City Council members agreed to purchase the monitors recommended for use by the Post Volunteer Fire Department, leaving Garza County to cover the cost of monitors to be utilized by constables and sheriff's department personnel.

Last month, county officials has no immediate plans to construct a new facility.

"We wanted to get the ground ready to build," Hamlin said. "Kind of like taking one step at a time. We don't plan on staying small for long."

The 9-year-old church has a Sunday morning attendance of about 60 to 70 each week, he said.

Eventually the church plans to undertake demolition at its adjacent site, the Broadway-fronted property that houses the former Terry Tires store. Following that demolition, plans call for the church to propose the annexation of the vacated alley that lies between its two properties, a move that would pave the way for construction of a new church building.

Local Boy Scouts observe campout, Court of Honor

For Boy Scout Troop 316, September was a month filled with preparations for an orienteering hike and campout at a local ranch.

The Scouts were given compass coordinates and distances to find their way to the campsite. Once they arrived, time was spent working on advancement requirements, fishing, hiking, camp cooking and fun activities.

Once the cookout was completed the Troop conducted a Court of Honor with family and friends attending to honor the young men on their earning rank advancements.

Scouts earning their first rank of Scout were Joshua Curtis, Elijah Garza, Cody Blacklock and Jonah Trinidad.

Fermin Rivera, Travis Morris and Seth Babb received the second rank of Tenderfoot.

Zach Hinkle received his third rank 2nd Class, while Dalton Thuett received his fourth rank of 1st Class.

A South Texas man was pronounced dead Friday following a single-car accident that occurred south of the city shortly after 1 a.m.

Ramiro Salazar Jr. of Sebastian was about 17 miles south of Post on U.S. 84 when the truck he was driving left the road, tearing up about 400 feet of fencing as the vehicle traveled across ranchland. The truck ended up straddling a draw, but never turned over, according to reports.

During Friday's meeting of Garza County Commissioners, County Judge Giles Dalby said the 42-year-old man suffered a heart attack.

As a result of the accident, several head of cattle were found wandering. Dalby said he sent one of his trucks out to help load up the cattle and herd them into one a pen until the owner could retrieve the animals.

PHS rating changed after appeal to TEA

Post High School's accountability rating was bumped from "academically unacceptable" to "academically acceptable" last week following the school district's appeal to the Texas Education Agency.

School district officials were formally notified of the change in an Oct. 6 letter from TEA commissioner Shirley Neeley.

Neeley indicated the change was made after agency officials recognized "coding errors" in the State-Developed Alternative Assessment II answer documents.

"Staff research concludes that ARD (admission, review and dismissal) expectation levels were not hand gridded on the answer documents for these students." Neeley wrote. "Failure to hand grid these expectation levels resulted in a default score of III."

Once the results were rescored during the appeal process, it was clear PHS "met expectations to the next higher accountability rating," Neeley said in her letter.

Post Independent School District superintendent Marlin Marcum said that as a result of the district's appeal, which was filed in August, state officials reviewed the data, which not only spotlighted a handful of "clerical errors," but the increases in PHS test scores in all other areas.

"I'm pleased," Marcum said Tuesday afternoon. "It's good for the school and it's good to recognize that our kids and staff are consistently improving."

DON'T "KEEP CARTER"

Aron D. Redekop was a Mennonite and a long-time resident of Seminole and raised a large family here. One son was killed before his death. I was raised in Seminole. My name is Alwina Redekop and my surviving siblings are: Helena, Kathryn, Anna, Margret, Maria and Wilhelm.

In 2001 Aron was killed in an automobile accident and left a will leaving his estate in equal shares to his children, and naming me, Kathryn, and Margret as co-executrixes of his estate.

That will was probated in April, 2002.

Aron was wealthy by our standards. He owned land and other properties in Mexico which was not included in the Texas will. He had bought homes for all his children. In Texas he owned two properties with homes; more than $100,000.00 in gold and silver coins; one business property in El Paso valued at $250,000.00, about 30 promissory notes (Letras) from Mennonites with more than $700,000.00 principal owed plus interest, and a 600-acre farm in Dell City.

Margret and I had some disagreements. Margret refused to give me copies of the names and addresses of the Mennonites from all over Texas that owed the notes (Letras) so we could collect the money owed.

In 2003 I filed a motion asking the court to order Margret to share the records or be removed from office.

The court listened to some evidence and declared she was going to remove us all as executors. "I've checked with several banks in the area, and I have selected the only bank with a trust dept. capable of handling this estate, and I'm going to appoint them Dependent Administrator," she said.

She heard a little evidence and wouldn't let me testify and I was the one who asked for the hearing. She said she had already made up her mind and made arrangements for the bank to take it over. My attorney asked for time to argue against what she was doing, and she said no, "it wouldn't do any good. I've made up my mind."

The truth was, we called the trust officer at the bank and he advised us that the bank didn't administer estates at all, that it was turned over to a private lawyer who does work for the bank. The administrator had a duty to liquidate the estate and distribute the money to the kids.

What has happened to the estate? Everything bad imaginable.

After three and a half years no effort has been made to sell either home in Gaines County. Both homes have been neglected and are deteriorating rapidly.

The business property in El Paso is not habitable because of neglect and has lost most of it's value.

We don't know what happened to the gold and silver coins.

No effort was made for three years to collect the $700,000.00 in notes (Letras) and now the statue of limitations has run and the notes are worthless. You can't collect if they're five years delinquent.

We have tried to communicate with the bank and the lawyer and they haven't replied to letters or returned phone calls, after three years.

The only thing they've done, except charge high fees for the bank and lawyer for three years, is sell the farm in Dell City for $440,000.00.

That sounds like a lot of money, but consider this: Water rights to that property were worth thousands of dollars per acre.

The bank, their lawyer, and the Judge were made aware that this farm was in the Hudspeth County water district, and the City of El Paso was working on a plan to purchase the 50,000 acres in the water district for up to $500 million.

Randy Armstrong of Seminole owned 9,000 acres 30 miles from the water district, and in 2003 he sold his place for $15 million to the City of El Paso.

In February, 2004 the bank sold, and the judge later approved, the 600 acre sale. On March 4, 2004 a huge headline appeared all across the front page of the El Paso Times. The City of El Paso was preparing to spend up to $500 million to acquire 50,000 acres in two blocks near Dell City, which included our farm. We sent a copy of that story to the judge but she approved the sale without replying.

The Redekops have not received a penny from the bank, but the bank and lawyers must be paying themselves large fees from the estate.

I believe, and at least three of my siblings agree that our father's estate has been stolen from us, and we will be campaigning to defeat the judge in the November election to keep this from happening to your family. The Judge is Carter T. Schildknecht, and you can see signs all over Seminole saying "Keep Carter."

We have not received a penny from the inheritance our Daddy intended to us. For more than three years nothing has been done to liquidate the estate, it won't be worth much the way it has deteriorated.

Four of my sisters are well past retirement age, late 60's and early 70's, and it appears they will receive nothing to be used for their care during their lifetimes, although the real value of the estate three years ago was 3 to 4 million dollars.

No matter who wins the election, we won't get our estate back, and if we ever get anything it will be a fraction of what it was worth when it was taken from us.

We have many Mennonite friends in Gaines County, and we urge you to make a change. If you want to manage your Daddy's estate and protect your inheritance, as he intends, vote for someone who won't appoint someone to run it for you.

The church dynamics...1Corinthians 12:4-6

The church dynamics...1Corinthians 12:4-6 Jesus Christ is the head or captain of the body. "Now there are diversities of gifts, but the same spirit. And there are differences of services, but the same Lord. And there are diversities of operations, but it is the same God which works all in all." (1Corinthians 12:4-6).

The above quoted verses 4-6 are a change of subject from the previous verses. A special thing about these verses is that the causes and affects are tied together very nicely. There are three different verses with three different affects and respective sources that cause the affects. This helps greatly in a more exhaustive study of spiritual matters.

In verse 4 the word gifts was the Greek word charisma and actually referred to freely given gifts. E.W. Bullinger notes that charisma is rendered "gift" with the exception of Romans 5:15-16 where it is "free gifts" (KJV Companion Bible, appendix 184(I)(2)).

There are different kinds of freely given gifts by the spirit of God, but it is the one and same spirit of God. The spirit of God refers to the spirit that is from God and is in God's saints during the present spiritual administration. One example is gift of healing (1Corinthians 12:9).

In verse 5 the word services comes from the Greek word diakonia which referred to the active service of a servant. There are different ways to serve, but it is the same Lord who is served. This is fantastic information considering that we have our Lord Jesus Christ as the perfect example of how to serve. Moreover, when we are serving in a ministry, we are serving our Lord Jesus Christ. Later in chapter 12 we will learn that there are many different members in the body of Christ.

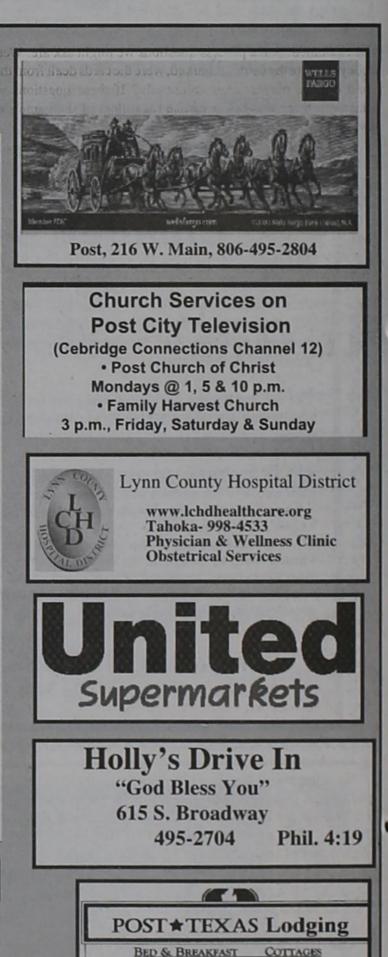

There may be many members, but there is only one Lord.

In verse 6 the word operations and work comes from the Greek word energema and energeo respectively. This word is the origin of our English word energy. A study of the various tenses of this word will shine light on the church dynamics. It is often used with the Greek word dunamis which referred to inherent power or ability to exert inherent power without considering whether it is actually exerted.

Energema is used in Philippians 3:21, "Who shall change our vile body that it may be fashioned like unto his glorious body, according to the working whereby he is able even to subdue all things unto himself." The word able was the Greek word dunamai which was simply another tense related to dunamis. The word working was the Greek word energeia. The ability to exert this inherent power originates from God who is the giver of his spirit.

As a side note, it is interesting how the above three verses distinguish between God who is the giver and the spirit which is the gift. It also distinguishes between God and our Jesus Christ. The gifts are directly related with the spirit that is from God, while the exerting of inherent power is related to and originates directly from God who is the giver of the spirit. Moreover, the different services are directly related to our Lord Jesus Christ who is seated in heaven at the right hand of all authority from his Father who is the one true God.

Democrats plan to trumpet the income and wealth gap for political gain in this year's elections. According to The Wall Street Journal article "Democrats' Risky Strategy," Democratic candidates blame Republicans for economic inequality.

"Prove it." That's when I give him my certificates of performance, the $30. Google founders Sergey Brin and Larry Page are multi-billionaires. Just as in the case of my mowing my fellow man's lawn, they became very wealthy by serving their fellow man. The difference is they served their fellow man far more effectively than I and hence received more "certificates of performance," enabling them to make greater claims on what their fellow man produces.

Happy Birthday Fox News

Association 2006

by Bill O'Reilly

This week marks the tenth anniversary of the Fox News Channel (FNC), and because of an early gift by President Clinton, the operation is getting maximum exposure. As you may know, Mr. Clinton became very annoved when Chris Wallace, the anchor of "Fox News Sunday," pressed him as to why Osama Bin Laden did so much damage on Clinton's watch without being held to account.

The president responded that Mr. Wallace was conducting a "right-wing hit job."

Having lived through the past 10 years anchoring a news analysis program on FNC, I found Mr. Clinton's annoyance amusing. The Bin Laden question is certainly valid, and while Larry King would not have asked it - most other CNN correspondents, I believe, would have. So what's the real beef here?

To understand what's going on we begin with the founder of CNN, Ted Turner, who greeted the arrival of FNC a decade ago with the quote: "We'll squash them like a bug."

This strategy might sell because, in addition to envy, many people erroneously use income inequality as a measure of fairness. Income is a result. As such, results cannot establish whether there is fairness or justice.

Let's look at it. Suppose Tom, Dick and Harry play a weekly game of poker. Tom wins 75 percent of the time. Dick and Harry, respectively, win 15 percent and 10 percent of the time. Knowing only the poker game's result permits us to say absolutely nothing as to whether there has been poker justice. Tom's disproportionate winnings are consistent with his being either an astute player or a clever cheater.

To determine whether there has been poker justice, the game's process must be examined. Some process questions we might ask are: Were Hoyle's Rules obeyed, were the cards unmarked, were the cards dealt from the top of the deck, and did the players play voluntarily? If these questions yield affirmative answers, there was poker justice regardless of the game's result, with Tom winning 75 percent of the time.

Similarly, income is a result. In a free society, for the most part, income is a result of one's capacity to serve his fellow man and the value his fellow man places on that service. Say I mow your lawn and you pay me $30. That $30 might be seen as a certificate of performance. Why?

I go to the grocer and ask for 3 pounds of steak and a six-pack of beer that my fellow man produced. In effect, the grocer asks, "Williams, you're asking for something that your fellow man produced; what did you do for your fellow man?" I say, "I served my fellow man by mowing his lawn." The grocer says,

Their greater income is a result of their pleasing millions upon millions of their fellow man. They created wealth by producing a product that improves the lives of millions upon millions of people all around the globe. Should people like Messrs. Brin and Page, who have improved our lives, be held up to ridicule and scorn because they have a higher income than most of us? Should Congress use the tax code to confiscate part of their wealth in the name it. of fairness and income redistribution?

For the most part, income is a result of one's productivity and the value that people place on that productivity. Far more important than income inequality, there is productivity inequality. That suggests that if there's anything to be done about income inequality, we should focus on how to give people greater capacity in serving their fellow man, and we should make sure there's a climate of peaceable, voluntary exchange.

Think back to my poker example. If one is concerned about the game's result, which is more just? Taking some of Tom's winnings and redistributing them to Dick and Harry, or teaching Dick and Harry how to play poker better?

If only we had real justice

by Wesley W. Burnett

When it comes to collecting money, the state and national judicial system can not be trusted to secure the rights of individuals, if those individuals are the subject of the collectors. This intolerable situation is particularly obvious in the justice and municipal courts.

We frequently hear from people who bring to our attention the flagrant disregard for the law, both from those who are sworn to enforce the law, as well as those who are sworn to administer justice under the law. Those who have been targets of this aggressive collection process know all too well that the entire system is one big extortionate conglomerate, a corporate structure which is geared to collect money ... and that system has a foracious appetite.

Take for instance a simple traffic citation. First, let's admit that most victims are honest, hard-working, law abiding, peaceful citizens, forced off the roadways for some pretense of violating the transporation code. Whether it be for "speeding" or a broken tail light, it makes no difference, the collection gig is in high gear.

As has been recently exposed by retired DPS officers, there is a quota, perhaps not officially named as such, but those who don't write enough tickets to satisfy the DPS "work load" standards will face consequences. We don't know if county officials operate under the same standards, but they too realize that collecting fines is a bit part of justifying their jobs.

When the stop is made, victims are then subjected to "search and seizure requests" ... politely of requested of course. "Got any weapons or drugs in your car?" Most citizens have no idea of their rights, and meekly submit to the 'request," thinking, "I've got nothing to hide." But by agreeing to the request, the victim has abdicated his or her property rights.

Whatever was the "probable cause" for the beginning of this process, and any additional violations the officer finds, then goes onto a "citation," followed by the standard request to sign the citation, agreeing to appear in at a certain time to a certain court.

What most people do not realize is that by signing the citation, the statutory limit in their favor begins. According to the State of Texas Code of Criminal Procedure (Article 45.018), the court is required to send a copy of the complaint to the defendant no later than the day before the stated court hearing by and sign it. This system puts the courts squarely in the corner of the charging officer, making a mockery of the "fair" and "impartial" position of the court. The court is charged with administration of justice. But when it comes to collecting money, most of the municipal and county courts are truly joint partners in the corporate collection process. "After all," one county official told me a few years ago, "all that money goes into the general fund and helps keep down property taxes."

Of course, that is exactly correct ... and certainly points out the real reason for all those hundreds of traffic citations issued every month to travelers in Garza County (and all other counties in Texas). When the complaint does not get sent to the victim in time, courts routinely ignore the right of due process.

A fundamental American judicial principal, the right of due process, is based on the rule of law. That means that the court is required to follow the law ... not ignore the law until some irrate or well informed citizen demands it. Courts which follow the law would have very little traffic money flowing into the coffers.

Why? Because the vast majority of enforcement agents don't bother to fill out those time consuming, picky, picky, nit-picking complaint forms. Why should they? The courts are just as eager to collect money as are the enforcers. If the courts followed the law, the citation would become null and void before the scheduled hearing if the arresting officer failed to provide a complaint in time for the victim to get a copy prior to the hearing.

In the case of those who don't live in Garza County, that would mean at least seven to 10 days prior to the hearing due to delivery time. If the courts followed the law, they would not go out of their way to help the enforcers fill out, or even remind them to fill out the nasty little complaint forms. They'd be impartial, and uphold the rule of law, making sure that the rights of victims are secured. Just imagine what would happen if every victim understood the law and insisted that the "people's" courts and enforcers obeyed the law. Unfortunately, the "people's Courts" are in reality more like the "king's courts" which drove many of our ancestors to rebel against the government of their day. I am reminded of the famous words of Thomas Jefferson who emphasized that when government fails to secure the rights of individuals, then the people have a duty to change the government. He said that after the U.S. Constitution was ratified. Think about that the next time you or someone you know is targeted by this grand government collection scheme and its extortionate behavior.

That squishing sound you hear is Mr. Turner's prediction ground into pulp FNC hammers CNN in the ratings all day, every day. That is not making the liberal Turner and his fellow travelers very happy, and that is the heart of this matter

For decades the left in America was treated with deference by the electronic media. As I chronicle in my book "Culture Warrior," nearly every past and present network anchor and commentator is either a committed liberal or leans left. Just look at what Walter Cronkite and Bill Moyers have done since they left CBS News; both men allied themselves with the far left and are proud of

So there was certainly room in America for a network that gave equal time to the conservative point of view and actually hired, God forbid, some rightleaning commentators. To those used to getting information from enterprises like CNN, PBS and NPR, this sudden departure from liberal orthodoxy was shocking and terribly annoying. There was a new kid in town, and his game plan allowed the right to be heard as well.

As Fox News gradually began dominating the cable news landscape, bitterness grew, along with FNC's ratings. The media establishment was aghast; it was being openly challenged and, worst of all, it was losing influence to a bunch of outspoken barbarians. So the attacks intensified.

Hollywood put out a hit movie about FNC, liberals like Howard Dean openly disparaged the network, and the far left blogs did everything they could to damage those working at the network. It was, and is, very nasty.

But think about it, what is the beef? Even if FNC is a conservative think tank, which it is not, there are five other networks that give enormous benefit of the doubt to the left. So what if one operation leans right? Shouldn't there be room in this country for one newsroom that doesn't think like Ted Turner?

Last week on my program, I challenged Democrat strategists James Carville and Paul Begala to give me one example of an unfair presentation on FNC. They could not cite one. Certainly, Chris Wallace's questioning was professional. The liberal Alan Colmes balances the conservative Sean Hannity, and the rest of the FNC cast is evenly split between the right and the left. The guest list is the same way.

That's why FNC is so lively and, yes, so loud. We embrace robust debate and want to hear all sides. We challenge the powerful and do it with panache and a sense of humor. Like us or not, Fox News has changed the entire broadcast news business and provides a trusted service to far more Americans than every other cable news channel.

Sounds like a great recipe for success and I, for one, am glad President Clinton could be a part of it. As with all our guests, Mr. Clinton had his say, was challenged, and is free to think whatever he wants written on the citation.

The citation is considered by many officials as the same as a complaint, and it will be unless the defendant specifically demands a copy of the official complaint. The complaint, according to Article 45 is not the same as a citation . a complaint has a formal set of rules and must include specific information, most often not included on the citation.

Here's where the corporate conglomerate takes over. Relying on the ignorance of most victims, the courts process the citation as if it is a complaint. Most victims get letters from the courts informing them that a complaint has been filed against them, then provide an "easy" way to pay and not be required to appear.

This "easy" out even allows for "no contest" plea ... even though fines generally are more than $100, sometimes up to $300 ... most victims, even if they feel they are not guilty, pay up because they realize the cost of hiring a lawyer to defend them could be twice or more costly. The courts do not regularly inform victims that they have the right to order a copy of the formal complaint. That would really gum up the collection efforts.

At times they are faced with a citizen who understands his or her rights, and then the courts routinely call or send a note to the arresting officer and get a hurry up complaint filled out in time to meet the deadline. Often, court officials actually fill out the complaint for the arresting officer, who merely has to stop

No wonder there is such distrust of the judicial system.

Local EMS urges ostcityradio.com use of seatbelts to save lives

by Sheri Lewis

Local EMS administrator and paramedic Rodney Tidwell said he cringes every time he is called to the scene of an automobile accident.

"It's just a scary, scary thing," he said. "I don't think people understand the importance of seatbelts. Seatbelts are not going to save everybody, but there's a lot greater chance of getting out of an accident alive if you have your seatbelt on."

The following statistics, Tidwell said, prove it:

• Motorists who are not wearing seatbelts are 95 percent more likely to be thrown from their vehicle during an accident.

· Motorists are 25 times more likely to be killed or seriously injured if they are thrown clear of an accident than if they remain belted inside the vehicle.

• Seventy-five percent of crash deaths occur within 25 miles of home in what Tidwell described as "familiar, safe territory."

• More than 50 percent of all injury-producing accidents occur at speeds of less than 40 mph.

"I've worked accidents where people should have been killed, but were virtually uninjured because they were belted in," Tidwell said. "A lot of people don't think about it. The serious accidents don't only happen out there on the highway. They happen here in town as well. People think, 'I'm not going to put my seatbelt on. I'm just going up here to the store.' How do you know you're not going to be blasted by an 18-wheeler on the way to the store?"

The use of seatbelts - or the lack thereof - has weighed particularly heavy on Tidwell's mind in recent weeks as the number of teenagers killed in automobile accidents on the South Plains has spiked.

In the past five weeks, seven area teens have died in vehicular accidents. None of the accidents involved alcohol, Tidwell said, and none of those who died were wearing seatbelts. 6 1K

"It's crazy, but these young kids don't understand," he said. "I know it's a hassle (to put on your seatbelt) sometimes, especially if you're just going a few blocks. But I always think, 'What if something was to happen?"

Tidwell said he has talked to local coaches and teachers and asked them to emphasize to their students the importance of using seatbelts.

But it's not just teens that need to be buckled when they're riding in a car, SUV or pickup.

Tidwell said statistics shows that of every 100 children who die in automobile accidents, an estimated 80 would have survived had they been properly restrained. "That just blows my mind," he said. Texas law requires anyone sitting in the front seat of a vehicle to wear a seatbelt; additionally, all children under the age of 17 must wear a seatbelt or be seated in a child safety seat, regardless of where they are seated in the vehicle, according to the Texas Department of Transportation Web site. Children younger than five years of age and less than 36 inches tall must be in a child safety seat. . To help local residents ensure their children are traveling safely, the local EMS, the Post Volunteer Fire Department and Texas Trauma Services Area B, which serves Garza County, will host a free car seat clinic from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. Oct. 31 at the fire department. Clinic operators and volunteers will work with local parents who stop by the clinic to ensure they have child safety seats installed correctly and are using them properly.

"Oliver!" leaves a song in your heart

Although the novel "Oliver Twist" by Charles Dickens is a very somber tale of the evil treatment of orphans in 19th century England, the musical adaptation currently playing at the Garza Theatre leaves audiences with a song in their hearts and a smile on their lips.

Oliver (Taylor Blevins) is an angelic-looking orphan who has beautiful manners and a sweet disposition. Despite this, he incurs the wrath of the overseer of the workhouse where he lives because 🌑 he asks for more food. He is sold to an undertaker whose wife thinks she is being kind and generous by giving Oliver a few scraps of food originally intended for the dogs.

Oliver again gets into trouble and runs away. He encounters the Artful Dodger, who tells Oliver a kindly man named Fagin will take him in. In reality, Fagin takes in boys to train them to be pickpockets for him.

Through all his misadventures, Oliver retains his sweet and trusting spirit and is eventually rewarded.

Food may be scarce for the orphans, but the play is a musical feast with delightful choreography. The play opens in the workhouse with an assembly of orphans waiting to be fed while dancing, roughhousing and singing, "Food, Glorious Food."

Although Oliver soon gets into trouble, the audience can't be sad for long as they are quickly treated to a hilarious courtship scene between the workhouse overseers.

Throughout the play pathos is juxtaposed with comedy, and the excellently rendered musical numbers reflect the change in mood. The live orchestra in the newly opened orchestra pit helps make the play a truly magical experience.

The play is filled with memorable characters, from the pompous Mr. Bumble to the villain Fagin, who is somehow likeable, to the purely evil Bill Sykes and the kindhearted woman who is in love with him. Outstanding performances were given by the entire cast.

With 34 cast members, 21 musical numbers, dance scenes and numerous scene changes, the play ran flawlessly on opening night.

Director Jay Young, choreographer Heidi Kloes, orchestra and conductor Jacob Miller and the entire cast and crew deserve many accolades. For several days I have been humming songs from the show and smiling in remembrance of funny and poignant scenes, and I imagine anyone who sees the play will be doing the same. Sandra Alexander

Sometimes you just gotta say, "Wow!"

I was one of the persons lucky enough to be in the audience Friday night for the first performance of the play, "Oliver," at the Garza Theatre. I was just blown away by the multi-talented cast assembled for this play in my small town. The directors, contributors and citizens of Post can be extremely proud of the professionalism of the productions at the theater. I have been to numerous plays throughout the last few years and have always gone away feeling very entertained. The acoustics at the theater are awesome, and the building is very well maintained. For those of you who haven't been to the theater in a while or have never been, I urge you to see this production. The live orchestra music, the talent and the scenery are wonderful. My congratulations to Jay Young, the cast and crew of "Oliver"... it was great.

USDA extends emergency livestock grazing on conservation acres

Texas farmers and ranchers impacted by drought have been granted an extension for emergency livestock grazing on Conservation Reserve Program (CRP) acres. The new, proposed, extended deadline for Texas livestock producers is November 30, 2006, according to USDA announcement released last Friday. The traditional deadline for emergency grazing on CRP acres is September 30, 2006.

The USDA's Farm Service Agency (FSA) state committee and Natural Resources Conservation Service (NRCS) state technical committee must agree on the need for the emergency grazing extensions before they are finalized. Once approved, producers may graze on CRP land until the extended November 30th deadline.

"Extremely dry weather conditions have created significant hardships for agricultural producers in Texas," said Victor Ashley FSA State County Executive Director for the Garza-Borden County FSA. "This emergency relief measure will provide feed and forage to producers who have lost hay stocks and grazing lands because of drought."

In mid-July, USDA also announced that CRP rental payments will be reduced by only 10 percent instead of the standard 25 percent on CRP lands that are grazed in 2006.

CRP is a voluntary program that offers annual rental payments and cost-share assistance to establish long-term resource-conserving cover on eligible land. USDA may allow producers to graze or hay on CRP acreage under certain conditions such as during times of drought or other natural disasters.

Farmers and ranchers can graze no more than 75 percent of the stocking rate. They also can only graze 75 percent of a field or contiguous field that is enrolled for wildlife habitat.

In total, 30 eligible states were granted an extended deadline for emergency livestock grazing on CRP acres. These states are: Alabama, Arizona, Arkansas, Colorado, Florida, Georgia, Idaho, Illinois, Iowa, Kansas, Kentucky, Louisiana, Michigan, Minnesota, Mississippi, Missouri, Montana, Nebraska, Nevada, New Mexico, North Carolina, North Dakota, Oklahoma, South Carolina, South Dakota, Tennessee, Texas, Utah, Wisconsin and Wyoming. New deadlines vary by state.

Conservation Reserve Program payments for eligible producers

County Executive Director for USDA's Farm Service Agency today announced that on Oct. 2, 2006, FSA will begin issuing some $142 million in Conservation Reserve Program (CRP) payments to eligible producers in Texas. More than $1.7 billion in CRP payments are being made on 36 million acres across the country.

Program is celebrating its 20th anniversary this year of working cooperatively with America's Victor Ashley, Garza-Borden that we, and numerous wildlife cause producers may have mulspecies, depend on for survival," said Ashley. "These payments represent an investment in the nation's land that will pay dividends in the form of a cleaner environment today and for generations to come."

The payments announced today are annual rental payments earned on the 4.0 million acres enrolled in fiscal year "The Conservation Reserve 2007. Producers holding 25,399 contracts on 18,334 farms will receive an average of $7,764 per farm or $35.21 per acre. The farmers and ranchers to conserve number of contracts is higher and preserve the soil and water than the number of farms be-

> Voting machine demonstrations set

Garza County and District Clerk Jim Plummer will be conducting public demonstrations of the new voting machines in the month of October prior to the 2006 General Election.

The machines were purchased by Garza County to comply with the Help America Vote Act (HAVA) of 2002. HAVA is designed to enhance the voting experience for those with disabilities such as blindness, vision and physical impairments. They were first used in Garza County in the March, 2006 Primary.

According to state law, each polling place in all elections must have at least one accessible voting machine. Garza County officials have complied by procuring the Election Systems & Software AutoMARK voter assist terminals.

With the AutoMARK system, voters can choose to mark the ballot with a pen or use the voting machine. If the voter chooses to use the machine, the ballot is inserted into the AutoMARK, the voter is then prompted to vote via the touch screen display. After casting the ballot, the ballot is discharged from the machine. The voter then places it in the ballot box.

An audio function, which allows blind voters or those with impaired vision to listen to the choices through headphones then cast votes by use of a touch pad. A zoom feature enables the voter to increase the size of letters on the screen. This may be especially helpful for voters who are sighted but have limited vision. Also, a sip/puff tube port is available for voters who are not able to use the tiple contracts on a single farm. This payment announcement does not include rental payments for 1 million acres recently enrolled under CRP general sign-up 33, held from March 27 to April 28, 2006. Payments for new CRP acreage will be issued starting in October 2007.

Other CRP payments are made throughout the year, including a 50-percent reimbursement of expenses for establishing cover and incentive payments for enrolling eligible conservation practices, such as wetland restorations and conservation buffers. In fiscal year 2007, these payments are anticipated to total about $195 million nationwide.

Under CRP, producers voluntarily retire environmentally sensitive cropland for 10 to 15 years. Land to be enrolled must be either highly erodible, contribute to a serious water quality problem, provide important wildlife habitat or provide substantial environmental benefits if devoted to certain specific conservation

For more information on CRP, producers should contact the local Farm Service Agency (FSA) office at 806-495-2801 or visit FSA's Web site at http://www. fsa.usda.gov.

They say you can tell a lot about a person by the way she spends her spare time and by the causes she chooses to support. Well, I don't have much spare time, but I want you to know how I choose to spend the time I do have.

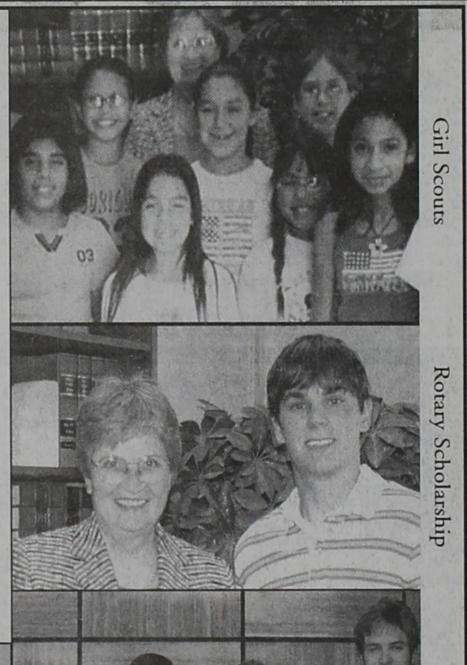

Because I'm a mother and a grandmother, or perhaps because I taught kindergartners for twenty years before attending law school, I especially enjoy activities that support and encourage our young people. I feel strongly about giving back to the community and helping those who need it.

Making judicial decisions requires applying the existing law to the facts in each case, while using common sense and good judgment to make those decisions. So, I think you have a right to know about the person who sits on your bench making those decisions that affect our lives and the lives of those around us.

This is all a part of the person I am. I respectfully ask for your support and your vote to trust me to continue working as your judge, making decisions in the public administration of justice.

Italian operas slated at TTU

Two rare Italian operas have been included in the plans for the Texas Tech Music Theatre's fall Graduate Opera Project.

Chrisoph von Gluck's famed opera "Orfeo ed Euridice" and Vincenzo Bellini's bell canto favorite "I Capuleti e I Montecchi" are scheduled to be performed at 7 p.m. Oct. 20 and 21 in the Allen Theatre, located in the Student Union Building on the Tech campus.

The operas have been abridged to an hour in length; both will be performed in Italian. A translation of English supertitles will be projected above the stage.

"The Graduate Opera Project was founded two years ago by our new voice faculty member, Dr. Kathryn Barnes-Burroughs," said Gerald Dolter, director. "Our population of graduate students has quadrupled since 2002. We have many fine singers under our tutelage these days, and they are mature enough vocally to handle more demanding operatic literature."

"Orfeo" was written for three solo voices and is an opera known for its "clarity and purity," Dolter said. "I Capuleti e I Montecchi" is the story of Romeo and Juliet.

Tickets for the Graduate Opera Project are available at all Select-a-Seat locations. Unreserved general admission tickets cost $13.50 for adults, $11.50 for senior citizens and $7.50 for students. Cost includes a service charge. For tickets or additional information, call Select-a-Seat at 806-770-2000.

Members of the Women's Culture Club are helping investigate the mystery of Burnham.

Research into this lost town between Post and Snyder got the attention of Randall Dodson, Resource Library director for the Caprock Cultural Association, when he discovered a large amount of documents in the old abstracts that was recently donated to this library development by the Garza County Abstract Company. The Women's Culture Club wanted to learn more about this lost town.

Items found for Burnham were 1) A map of he survey and layout, with businesses and residential lots. Burnham was planned to be about the same size as Post. 2) One photograph showing a large two-story building, assumed to be a hotel, with several other rectangle buildings. And 3) About 100 pages of property transactions from 1910 to 1930 in Burnham.

It was a complete surprise to club members that this town ever existed; however, recently several people have said, "Yes, we knew about it." The property transactions list was made available to the local tax office. The tax office didn't have some of the years that Randall found and they said the information will really help them find ownerships.

In our September meeting, club members colored in property transactions made in Burnham to show a timeline of activity and interest. These maps really tell a story of early history of Garza County. When the maps are completed and research done, they will be a visual look at a town the "didn't make it.

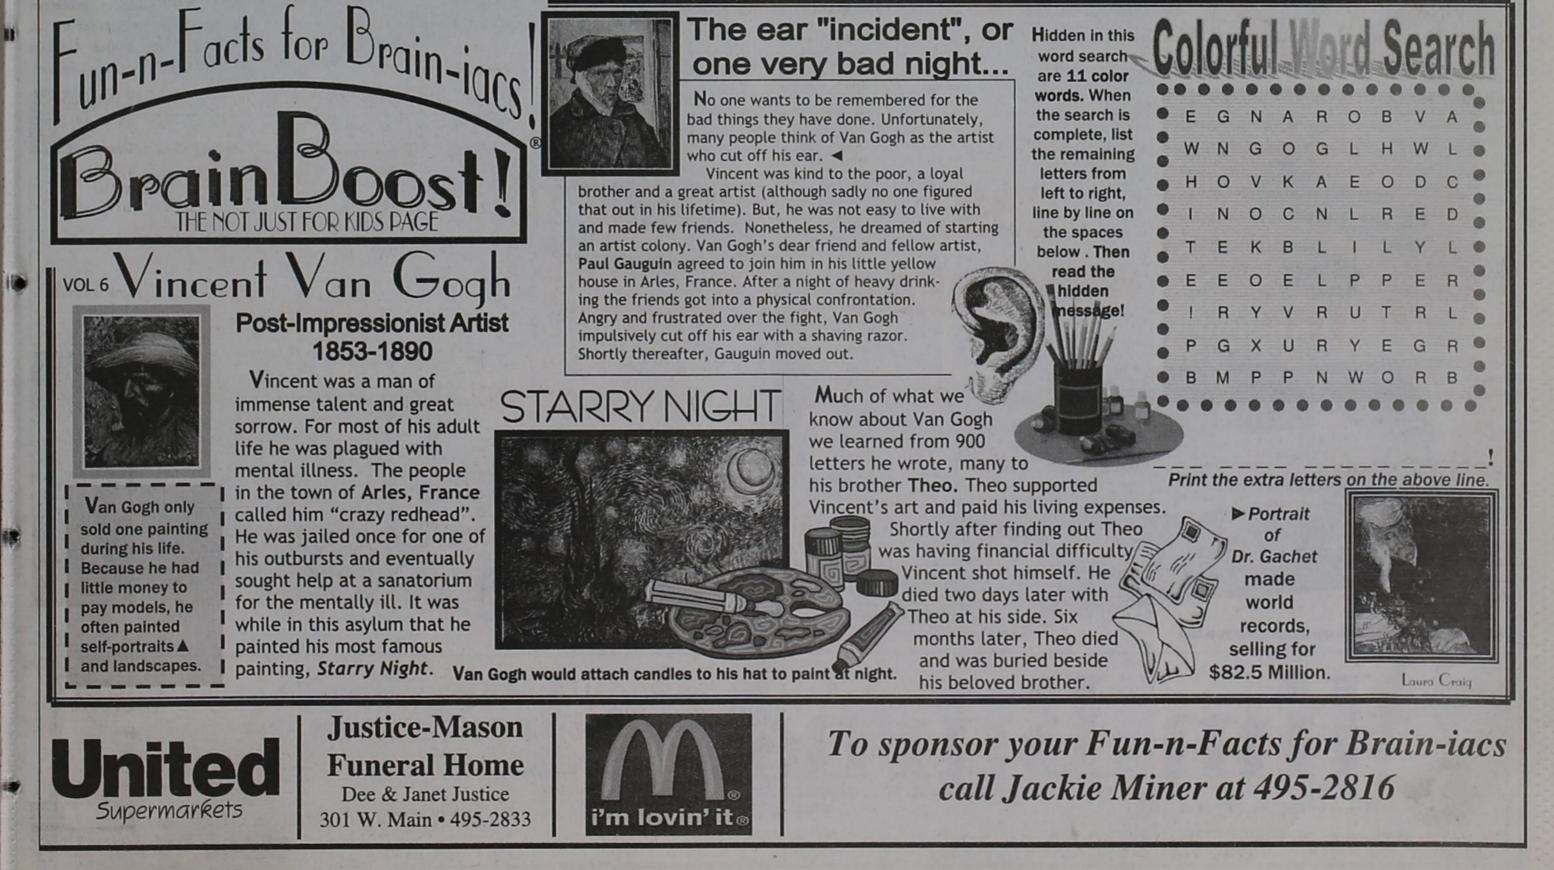

be located in the new Heritage House when it is completed.

Jan Acker, Dorace Wilson and JoAnn Mock are in the picture, locating properties and studying the map of Burnham. Peggy Smith and Barbara Lee Newcomb are helping Randall decide just how to show a visual account of the activities of Burnham.

More about Burnham, its origin and its demise - the why, when and how will be topics during regular meetings of the Woman's Culture Club. Anyone interested in learning more about this is invited to contact a club member about times and dates of meetings. Get on a list to be contacted when programs The Resource Library is to about Burnham are scheduled. Programs plans will be the subject of the October meeting.

Sweet returns from Honduras ministry

Travis Sweet, minister of the Post Church of Christ, participated in an evangelistic campaign in Agua Dulce, Honduras, Sept. 12-19.

Agua Dulce is a village in the mountains east of the capital city of Tegucigalpa.

During the campaign, Sweet worked with Elias Roque and Cesar Tabors, ministers with Churches of Christ in the capital. Sweet conducted services in the church in Agua Dulce, as well as helping to conduct Bible studies in individual homes in the village and surrounding area.

Following services one night, Roque's van, a 1974 Toyota, became stuck in a ditch alongside a muddy road. Mud was up to mid-wheel on the driver's side of the van, which was carrying 21 people. Everyone but the driver had to exit the vehicle to help push and pull it from the ditch, but all were delivered home safely.

Members of the Roque family, who reside in Tegucigalpa, served as Sweet's hosts. Tegucigalpa has a population of one million and is located in a valley about 4,000 feet above sea level.

Sweet plans to make a return trip to Honduras in 2007. He has been in the country 10 times to assist with evangelistic campaigns.
