HEDLEY, DONLEY COUNTY, TEXAS, FRIDAY, MARCH 15, 1912

NO. 17

MOREMAN PLANS TO HAVE AMPLE GIN FACILITIES

The Informer man interviewed Mr. Moreman, the gin man, last Tuesday and found out that Hedley is indeed fortunate in having a gin to date ginner like Mr. Moreman. In speaking of his plans for the Hedley gin he said he has bought the machinery for the second gin of four stands. Has now four stands brand new, in operation; has the brick on the ground for the wall of his second boiler and engine as soon as the present cotton season is over will put carpenters to work tearing the sheet iron off the gin, enlarging the building and will put on drop siding. There will be two gins of four stands each under one roof, run by separate engines and boilers, so he can run both gins at one time, or one at a time as the work demands. If one gin or engine should break down the other can keep on working. He expects to begin the work of remodeling right away, and not wait to see what the coming crop will be. The gin here will cost him $12,000 or more, and says if the people will stand by him he will give them first-class gin service.

Knowing Mr. Moreman and his business methods as we do we believe that he will do everything in his power to take care of the gin business at Hedley, and his efforts should meet the approval of town and community, when he shows by his actions he means business.

The bollies have dried out to such an extent that the gin has been running all week and is looking like fall of the year business.

G. S. Patterson, a feed buyer of Clarendon, was here Saturday. He is a Panhandle booster and likes people alive to the many good things around them, such as good land, good crops, especially the extra good returns per acre even during a drouthy year. Mr. Patterson also believes that newspapers are the greatest factors in the upbuilding of any country, and that so many people do not realize it and do not push the enterprise as they should. He gave an example of a Donley county man riding the county over and even going to another state in search of hogs for sale, when he might have saved all that time, trouble and expense if he had been a subscriber of either of the two Donley county papers, as both have carried "hogs for sale" notices. A 2 bit want ad would have done the work for him.

McKNIGHT

Still the March wind does blow. The farmers in this part of the country are beginning to smile at the sunshine.

Glad to report that Mr. Moreman's little boy who had his leg broken some time ago, is improving very fast.

J. E. White's little boy David got hit in the eye with a rock the other day and it has given him considerable pain.

G. R. Cash has bought a home in Missouri; going from Arkansas there.

C. W. William's little son has been very sick with croup.

J. D. McCants has a new wind mill. He says there is nothing like a flowing well.

The young folks enjoyed a party at the home of J. C. Hickerson's Saturday night. They report a big time.

THE GIMLET.

HENRY S. BISHOP CANDIDATE FOR RE-ELECTION

The Informer is authorized to announce the name of Henry S. Bishop of Amarillo as candidate for re-election to the office of District Attorney 47th Judicial District of Texas, subject to the action of the democratic primaries. Mr. Bishop has served the district faithfully and well, even when the compensation did not pay the expenses. He is acquainted with the conditions over the district and is better qualified than ever to serve the people. He is honest, capable and conscientious in the enforcement of the law, and promises if elected to give his undivided time and attention (as he has always done) to the office. He will appreciate the generous support of the people of Donley county. Give his claims your earnest consideration.

Dr. N. F. Williams, the Clarendon veterinary, made this city last Saturday, and while here did some surgical work on a horse's broken shoulder. He understands his business and the people of this vicinity will appreciate his devoting every Saturday to this place. Dr. Williams was one of the prime movers in the Donley county fair last fall, and is already boosting for the fair this coming fall. The whole country should become interested and make people elsewhere sit up and take notice to the great crop-producing soil of Donley county.

J. H. Purvis of Fort Worth was here Tuesday looking over the field with a view to organizing a U. B. A.

TELEPHONE EXCHANGE GETS NEW SWITCHBOARD

W. S. McCrory has received a new switchboard for his exchange which he will install right away. His old board was getting too small for the number of subscribers he has. This exchange is, in our opinion, one of the best in the Panhandle in point of service and accommodation, and the adding of a larger switchboard is good proof of the town's growing qualities as well as the management's hustling qualities.

CEMETERY ASSOCIATION

The ladies of the Cemetery Association request that the community will meet with them at the cemetery next Monday evening March 18 and help to rake off and clean up the cemetery. It is in a very neglected condition and we hope that all will join us in trying to get it into better shape and to get a good fence around it.

Roy Lockerage's team ran away with his buggy Sunday night; broke single and double trees and neck yoke was about all the damage.

K. W. Howell and E. E. McGee of Hedley were up visiting Guy Taylor's folks Monday. SOME CROPS MADE AROUND HEDLEY

R. W. Scales says on his place they have had over 3100 bushels of grain threshed out. This consisted of about 2500 bushels kaffir, 350 maize and 260 of corn, a greater portion of which was his own grain. The amount was not all they raised as they kept back quite a lot for their own feed, and the entire crop of grain and cotton netted he and his renter quite a nice sum. The grain that has been sold has brought an average of over 65 cents per bushel. Mr. Scales says during the past three years (drouthy years elsewhere and short crops here in places) he has made more money farming than ever before. His land is sandy and does not require the moisture that tight land does.

SMITH-WOODS

Mr. John R. Smith and Miss Holly Woods were married at 4 p. m. Monday at Memphis, and came to Hedley Tuesday. Mr. Smith is the night man at the Moreman gin and Mrs. Smith has been living at Memphis several months. She left yesterday for Hillsboro to visit her parents until the ginning season is over here. They will probably make Hedley their home. May their married life be long and happy.

A. O. Sarvis and wife came down from Amarillo last week and are staying with his parents, Dr. and Mrs. Sarvis. Mr. Sarvis has been suffering with heart trouble for several weeks and disposed of his business in Amarillo so he could come and take treatment from his father.

Dr. Sarvis' spirited bay team got away from him just as he started to get in his buggy in front of the drug store Monday afternoon. They ran east to the lumber yard, overturning the buggy and reducing it to almost kindling wood and scrap iron.

A. C. Carson traded his farm near Hedley to J. S. Grundy for his livery business and other holdings there. They have both moved, Carson to Memphis and Grundy from there to the Carson place near here.

Mrs. C. C. Chance and children came in last Friday to join Mr. Chance who is manager of the Moreman gin. They will live in the Hedley house. The Informer in behalf of the town welcomes this estimable family.

Wood Bros' horse took a run with their delivery wagon Monday afternoon, created quite a bit of excitement and damaged the back to the extent of a demolished wheel and shaft.

As the soil around Hedley is adapted especially to the raising of peanuts a peanut factory would be quite the thing to get located here. Even without a factory the peanut could be made one of the money making crops, either to sell or feed hogs. Come to think of it, diversification in this country could be done to the greatest advantage, and the farmers who diversify are always the ones "living at home and boarding at the same place. Eating Problem

Should be Pleasure and Not Penance

By DR. CHAS. E. PAGE, Boston

SO MUCH depends upon the individual's inclination that the question of eating cannot be settled by a mere yes or no reply nor indeed by the experience of any number of individuals, that is to say, so far as regards the feeding of the thousands who are accustomed to eating three times a day and would not take kindly to the proposed change. Eating, like every other natural function, should be a pleasure and not a penance, and the average person would regard it as a punishment to omit any one of his regular meals, and hence the enforcement of the regimen would not lead to good results.

In my private practice I favor the three-meal plan, but always with the qualification that in case of lack of appetite, or in face of any actual illness, the meal or meals should be omitted until convalescence, and the return of normal hunger. Personally, I eat three or four times a day with pleasure and satisfaction, and without experiencing any sort of inconvenience, day in and day out, and year after year. I take breakfast at a hotel about eleven o'clock, and am apt to lunch there about three. Dinner at home about seven (if I get there), and by "leaving a place," or need for it, I find a moderate supper at ten to twelve sends me to bed to sleep like a well-nursed babe.

It remains to be said, however, in this connection, that whoever has already had a sufficient day's ration at any hour of the day, cannot with safety or ultimate satisfaction eat again on going to bed. But, rightly managed (meaning moderate meals of really wholesome food), nothing fits anyone, from the bottle-babe to the octogenarian, for good sleep and a fresh awakening, like a moderate supper on retiring. All animal kind naturally sleep after eating. We should never eat when tired, nor get tired shortly after eating, on penalty of great risk from an attack of indigestion.

In my treatise, "Practical Guide to Health," published some years ago, occurs the following on diet, appetite, etc.: "Learn to distinguish between hunger and mere appetency; you may have the latter without hunger, but not hunger without appetite. Never eat without an appetite; never a mouthful. It is a species of self-abuse which is inexcusable for sick or well. There is no pleasure in it, and it prevents the speedy return of a normal appetite. This does not mean, however, that one must wait till ravenously hungry by any means; we should always eat when we need food, if we can get it. The system should always be kept fairly well saturated, so to say, with nutriment; but this should never be carried to the point of incipient nausea by any means. If the rule be rightly interpreted, this is about the way to put it: Eat when you are hungry, drink when you are thirsty and go to bed when you are sleepy; that is, never wait till you are exhausted for want of food, drink or nervous repose. Better eat too much than too little, habitually; but enough is better and, in the long run, more agreeable than excess."

General Grant Knew How to Fight

By Former United States Senator William E. Mason

I have known one man to hate another man because of the color of his hair. Another one said to me: "I hate a man who parts his hair that way." Another one said to me of a very good man: "I can't like him, he eats with his knife." I knew a preacher, who was a great theologian and thought his theology was religion, who couldn't help quarreling with everyone he met of a different theology. He was quarreling all the time and thought he was "fighting the good fight."

I have known lawyers who constantly quarreled with opposing clients and counsel, while neglecting the fight due their own client. I have known merchants so busy quarreling with competitors as to neglect their own business. I have read of soldiers who were strong on dress parade, splendid in tactics and communications and orderly in retreat.

The greatest soldier of all history was Grant and he could fight without quarreling. He "demanded" things and the things he "demanded" were "immediate and unconditional surrender." When the demand was complied with there was neither bickering, scolding nor quarreling. He fed the starving enemy and gave them back their horses to cultivate their fields. Nor was Grant the only great man there. General Lee knew how to fight, but not to quarrel. He was great in defeat, and securing the best he could for his men, he surrendered, without quarreling with his foe or cursing his enemy. The field whereon Grant and Lee met on that day was in the highest sense the "Temple of Liberty." Thank God, the jingle of gold was not heard there, nor was the place desecrated by jangling words or petty disputes.

This is what is meant by "Blessed is he who can fight without quarreling."

Pretty Colors by Nature's Paint Brush

By L. M. RICARD

Nature paints in the most striking colors and shades and tints with a delicacy never achieved by the brush in the hands of the artist. The highest ambition of the manufacturer of paints is to produce colors which look like nature's. They never succeeded.

Grass has a green of its own. So has the leaf and so has the distant ocean. None of these has ever been reproduced and put in cans with a price label on them.

Winter apples now repose on the shelves of the paint chemists. Honor awaits the man who can combine colors to produce the tints of red of the Baldwin and Northern Spy. They come pretty near it, that is all.

If all the paint grinding works in the world were multiplied ten thousand times they couldn't turn out pigment enough in a year to do what nature does in a change from season to season.

Nature's brush is busy everywhere all the time. In the life of a leaf it applies the brush day by day, following with its tints from budding time until it flutters from the branch.

It touches the valleys and the hills, the growing grains, the flowering plants. Never is it idle.

SAVING THE BABIES

How One City Is Conserving Lives of Infants.

Expert Finds Examples of Gross Carelessness and Ignorance in the Care of Youngsters Among Both Whites and Blacks.

Richmond, Va.—That there are hundreds of thousands of American babies sacrificed yearly on the altar of incompetent motherhood has been proven conclusively by the officers of the department of health of this city. That tens of thousands of these infants may be saved, may be raised into strong men and women, has also been conclusively proven by Dr. Ernest C. Levy, chief health officer of Richmond, and his able assistants. For the sake of the nation, for the sake of humanity, and for the sake of the happiness of mothers and fathers, Dr. Levy has proven that municipally supervised babies stand a better, far better, chance of living than do unsupervised babies be they even of the families of the very well to do citizens.

Retaining the expert services of Miss Elizabeth Detwiler, a trained nurse specialized in the care of babies, Dr. Levy planned the active campaign for the saving of infant life in Richmond. Two great sections of the city were chosen for the initial campaign, one section in which whites of the laboring classes lived, the other tenanted by blacks. In these sections of the city the infant mortality for years had been exceedingly high. Securing two more trained nurses, a house-to-house canvass for babies was made in these two sections. It took but a few weeks for the nurses to recognize the great need for the supervision of the care of babies in these sections of the city.

Examples of gross carelessness and ignorance in the care of youngsters were found among both the whites and the blacks. Scores of young mothers were found who had to leave their children many hours a day to careless boarding mistresses who were really criminally negligent in the preparation of the bottled food given their charges; many children, struggling infants of but a few months of age, were left to the care of grandmothers who had had no experience with bottle babies and who did through ignorance everything the wrong way, and some of the infants were found to be starving.

The nurses, therefore, quickly classified the hundreds of babies they saw, planning to see some of the healthy, well-cared for babies once a month and the sickly ones once or even twice a day. By concentrating their attention on the care of the babies who were really in desperate need of assistance, Dr. Levy's little first-aid-to-the-infant corps was able to obtain remarkable results in keeping alive and well children who, had they been left to the sole care of their mothers, would have died within a few months of starvation or disease.

In regard to the care of children, the work of the Richmond department of health is simply one for the conservation of the human race. Miss Detwiler, whose expert advice is at the disposal of the mothers of Richmond day and night, says, in regard to her work among the mothers in the districts visited by the city nurses: "In our work here we started with four definite objects, viz., to give babes a chance to be born without serious prenatal handicaps; to make mothers understand how to feed their infants properly; to give mothers a chance to carry out the instructions given them, and to provide well for infants who have lost their mothers, either by death or desertion.

"Wherever it was possible, we insisted on mothers giving their babies food supplied by nature. When this was not possible, especially women who had to work in factories, we insisted as far as possible on half breast and half bottle feedings.

HAPPY IN A SHED-LIKE HOME

Aged Kansas Woman Can't Keep Warm in Old Shack—To Have New House.

Kansas City.—There is happiness in the little Kansas City, Kan., shack of loose boards and boxes that Grandma Bass calls home. The little woman, 78 years old, must sit shivering beside an old broken stove, but she does not complain. She is happy in the promise of the Kansas City, Kan., police that they will build her a new home, a home that at least will keep out the cold. And the haunting fear of the poorhouse, which she has had constantly with her the last two years, has vanished.

Formerly Grandma Bass was used to much better things. Even after the death of her husband several years ago thoughts of becoming a public charge did not enter her life. With the income she obtained by sewing and the money a son brought home for his work at the packing houses the little woman managed. Then the son developed tuberculosis and three years ago was forced to leave. He went up the Missouri river, where he now is, living outdoors, attempting to regain strength.

Grandma Bass was not at home when visitors called. No smoke was coming from the tin stovepipe, which was stuck through a hole in the side of the little board and box shack, and the visitors could see no door at which to knock. Presently the visitors found one large board leaning against the shack in such a position that it was concluded it might be the "door." At the top the board was nailed to the wall. When it was pulled away a hole was revealed which led into a small dark room.

In the room, which had no floor other than the bare earth, was a table with broken legs, an old commode and a box which serves as a chair. Another small room adjoined the front one, and in it was an old bed on which were a thin blanket and a tattered comfort, and a broken bowled stove. A small pane of glass set in securely in the side of the wall served as a window. The snow was drifting through the holes in the roof of the shack and the wind was blowing through chinks and holes in the walls.

The visitors started to leave. Up the railroad tracks a half-mile they came upon Grandma carrying a basket.

"Don't you nearly freeze in that little house?" she was asked.

"Well, it gets pretty chilly sometimes," she answered. "But I've got used to the cold. Once I would not believe I could stand living as I now live, but circumstances force a person to get used to everything," she said smiling.

HOW HE FOUND THE CULPRIT

Tennessee Man Who Started a Skunk Farm Had Trouble Right at the Beginning.

Louisville.—A farmer of Tennessee started a skunk farm a year ago and stocked it with twenty fine animals. He was beginning to count up his returns at $2 per head when he began to miss his animals. As the fence was skunk-tight he started out one night to learn how the animals got away and was pained to observe two enterprising darkies tolling his skunks into a bag with soft music on a banjo. It is said that the discovery of the peculiar love of music on the part of the skunks disconcerted the farmer for a moment but he succeeded in planting 27 No. 6 shot in the seat of the pants of one of the banjoists as he went over the fence. The skunk stealing stopped.

Fighting Parson Feared.

Banning, Cal.—Many Indians of the different reservations of Riverside county are concerned over the announcement received from Denver that the Rev. Charles C. Brannon, the "fighting parson" of the Methodist faith, had been appointed chief special officer of the Indian service in place of Mr. Coggeshall, who takes an Indian agency in New Mexico. The Rev. Mr. Brannon has been shot at many times and never hit; he has had many fights and was never "licked," and will have the task of suppressing illegal sales of liquor among the Indians, thereby taking the place made vacant some time since by "Pussy-foot" Johnson's resignation.

FIFTY CENTS DID WHAT A HUNDRED DOLLARS COULDN'T

Brooklyn Man Discovers He Could Have Saved $99.50 on Injured Leg.

Imagine spending One Hundred Dollars for preparations to heal a wound on the leg, and then finding that a fifty-cent jar of Resinol did the trick! That is just what C. M. Waggoner, of Brooklyn, N. Y., did. He tells briefly his experience in the following letter: "A few years ago I seriously injured my leg, and tried everything I saw advertised. Finally, I was advised to try Resinol Ointment, and in a very short time the wound was completely healed. One small jar of Resinol Ointment did what one hundred dollars' worth of other remedies had failed to do.

C. M. WAGGONER, "Brooklyn, N. Y." Resinol Ointment instantly relieves eczema, scalds and burns, tetter, milk crust, ringworm, barber's itch, all eruptions and irritations of the skin; pimples, itching, blackheads, boils, chilblains, chaps, etc. Try a fifty-cent jar of Resinol Ointment, and you will be more than satisfied with the expenditure. RESTORED TO HEALTH.

After Suffering with Kidney Disorders for Many Years.

Mrs. John S. Way, 209 S. 8th St., Independence, Kans., says: "For a number of years I was a victim of disordered kidneys. My back ached constantly, the passage of the kidney secretions was irregular and my feet and ankles badly swollen. Spots appeared before my eyes and I was very nervous. After using numerous remedies without relief, I was completely cured by Doan's Kidney Pills. In view of my advanced age, my cure seems remarkable.

Mean People.

Henry Russell, the head of the Boston opera, was describing his foreign tour in search of talent.

"They were mean people," he said of the singers of a certain city. "I could do no business with them. They thought only of money."

Mr. Russell smiled.

"They were as bad as the man who discovered the Blank theater fire."

"The first intimation the box office had of this fire came, at the end of the third act, from a fat man who bounded down the gallery stairs, stuck his face in at the ticket window and shouted breathlessly: "Theater's afire! Gimme me money back!"

THE DOCTOR HABIT

And How She Overcame It.

When well selected food has helped the honest physician place his patient in sturdy health and free from the "doctor habit," it is a source of satisfaction to all parties. A Chicago woman says:

"We have not had a doctor in the house during all the 5 years that we have been using Grape-Nuts food. Before we began, however, we had the doctor habit," and scarcely a week went by without a call on our physician.

"When our youngest boy arrived, 8 years ago, I was very much run down and nervous, suffering from indigestion and almost continuous headaches. I was not able to attend to my ordinary domestic duties and was so nervous that I could scarcely control myself. Under advice I took to Grape-Nuts.

"I am now, and have been ever since we began to use Grape-Nuts food, able to do all my own work. The dyspepsia, headaches, nervousness and rheumatism which used to drive me fairly wild, have entirely disappeared.

"My husband finds that in the night work in which he is engaged, Grape-Nuts food supplies him the most wholesome, strengthening and satisfying lunch he ever took with him." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

You success as a farmer depends upon your selection of a farm. We are offering substantial farming homes, so reliable in their nature and on such easy terms, that any thrifty farmer can make the land pay itself out in a short time. We are selling a wonderfully fine body of land as owners, guaranteeing perfect title, to the homeseeker—consequently no selling commission increases the price to the purchaser, who gets the last dollar of value in the land.

Good crops were raised in this section last season when so many localities made short crops. Send to us for free illustrated booklets, giving complete information. The farmer who is now working land that he can sell for high prices can re-invest in lands just as productive, just as certain, getting a big increase in acreage in this wonderful new country. The re-ter can here become owner of a home of his own. It is a solid opportunity for the rich farmer to become richer and for the farmer with small resources to become independent. Terms, one-fifth down, balance in 1, 2, 3, 4, 5, and 6 years—Prices $12 per acre and upward—Notes payable on or before maturity.

Newspaper is the Medium.

"The importance of this whole question of publicity to the consumer is growing on the manufacturer. He sees his competitor or some man in another line turning the trick of publicity and he sits up and thinks. He is gradually realizing that localized, crystallized publicity in the home is what pays best and that he can only get that through the newspaper."—The Daily Club.

LAWYER CURED OF ECZEMA

"While attending school at Lebanon, Ohio, in 1882, I became afflicted with boils, which lasted for about two years, when the affliction assumed the form of an eczema on my face, the lower part of my face being inflamed most of the time. There would be water-blisters rise up and open, and wherever the water would touch it would burn, and cause another one to rise. After the blister would open, the place would scab over, and would burn and itch so as to be almost unbearable at times. In this way the sores would spread from one place to another, back and forth over the whole of my upper lip and chin, and at times the whole lower part of my face would be a solid sore. This condition continued for four or five years, without getting any better, and in fact got worse all the time, so much so that my wife became alarmed lest it prove fatal.

"During all this time of boils and eczema, I doctored with the best physicians of this part of the country, but to no avail. Finally I decided to try Cuticura Remedies, which I did, taking the Cuticura Resolvent, applying the Cuticura Ointment to the sores, and using the Cuticura Soap for washing. In a very short time I began to notice improvement, and continued to use the Cuticura Remedies until I was well again, and have not had a recurrence of the trouble since, which is over twenty years. I have recommended Cuticura Remedies to others ever since, and have great faith in them as remedies for skin diseases." (Signed) A. C. Brandon, Attorney-at-Law, Greenville, O., Jan. 17, 1911.

Although Cuticura Soap and Ointment are sold everywhere, a sample of each, with 32-page book, will be mailed free on application to "Cuticura," Dept. L, Boston.

Needed Reform.

Benham—We need a reform in our banking system.

Mrs. Benham—Yes; it's a shame that a wife can't overdraw her husband's account!—Judge.

SILOS AND ENSILAGE

Affords Dairyman Beneficial Solution of Feed Problem.

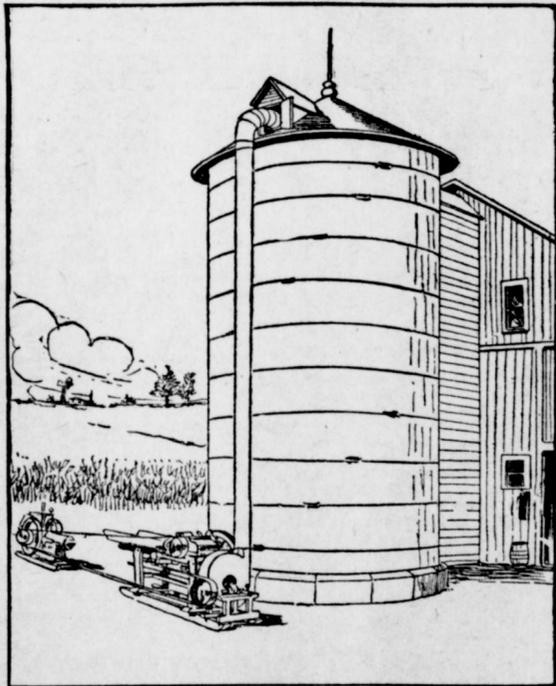

Not Only Does Away With Devoting Much Land to Pasturage, But Furnishes Cheap Supply of Succulent Food All Year.

(By GEORGE P. GROUT, Minnesota Experiment Station.)

It does not pay to devote high-priced land, for long periods, to pasturage and the production of hay. The land can be put to more profitable use. In order, therefore, that dairymen may continue profitable, instead of depending, as in the past, wholly upon the pasture for the chief food supply of their herds, many of our farmers are turning toward the silo as affording a beneficial solution of the feed problem. It is doubly beneficial in that it not only does away with the necessity of devoting so much land to pasture; but also, by making available a cheap supply of succulent and highly-relished food all the year round, it deprives stall-feeding of some of its objectionable features, while keeping the milk flow at a higher level. During the past two or three years more silos have been built than in all previous years combined. The more prosperous farmers are often supplied, not merely with one, but with two good silos.

The economic value of this method of handling feed being generally recognized, the only real obstacle to the general introduction of the silo seems to be the first cost of the structure and of the machinery for filling it. More stock can be kept and profitably fed, per acre, when ensilage is grown, than by almost any other method of feeding.

The silo practically increases the producing capacity of the farm at least ten per cent., and often more. A 160-acre farm with a silo will produce as much revenue as one of 180 acres without. Therefore, the first cost of a silo—like that of a dwelling house, a barn or a team—should be considered part of the initial investment; and, if one's capital is limited, it is better to buy a farm smaller by ten per cent., rather than dispense with a silo. The producing value of a silo on $50 land would be equal to that of twenty acres added to the 160-acre farm, or $1,000; on $100 land, it would be $2,000. This is a low estimate; for the stock-carrying capacity of the farm will often be increased fully 25 per cent. by the adding of a silo. As compared with its producing value, the cost of constructing the silo is small.

A Modern Silo.

Round wooden silos cost from $1.50 to $3 per ton of capacity; those of stone, brick or cement, from $2 to $4. It has been shown by actual experiment in Minnesota that—working co-operatively in the purchase of materials, etc.—a number of farmers in a locality may erect on each of their farms a stave silo, of 140 to 150 tons' capacity for about $275.

RICE IN THE UNITED STATES

Acreage of Crop in Louisiana and Arkansas Has Increased 700,000 Acres in Two Years.

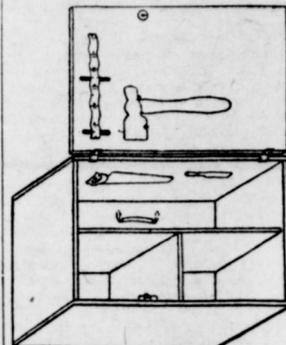

The acreage of rice in Louisiana and Arkansas has increased approximately 700,000 acres in the past two years. Many of the farmers in this area, as well as in other areas which have been planted in rice for the first time in the last few years, know but little regarding the preparation of the land for irrigation, the proper amount of water to apply, and the best method of applying it, but are taking to rice culture like a duck does to water, and are making a success of the business.

The United States is growing practically the equivalent of all the rice it uses. Some rice of special varieties is being imported for Oriental in the United States who prefer those varieties. The islands of the Caribbean sea and the Philippine islands get rice from the United States.

EXCELLENT PLACE FOR TOOLS

Very Satisfactory Repository Can Be Made of Large Air-Tight Box, Arranged to Suit.

It is almost an impossibility to keep tools bright in a blacksmith shop without some neat compartment where they can be protected from the direct fumes of the coal smoke. Nothing is more disgusting than to go for a saw that has been hanging up in the blacksmith shop for a few days and find it covered with rust, unless it is to attempt to use a plane or a hatchet that has been left unprotected in the same manner. Such experiences are not looked for the second time. While it is best to remove the bright tools, especially those used for working wood, to some good dry place other than the shop, yet it is not always convenient to do so. A very satisfactory housing for such tools is made from a good, large tight box that can be fitted with a tight door. The size of the box is not particular, but a box 4x3x2 feet is a good size. The compartments can be arranged to suit the builder's fancy. The main object should be to make the housing tight.

TO DESTROY BERMUDA GRASS

Tennessee Experiment Station Eradicates Crop in Practical Manner—What Did the Work.

At the Tennessee experiment station some Bermuda grass was killed in a very practicable manner. This grass is highly valued there, but it was desirable to get rid of it so that another crop could be put on the land. In the late summer hairy vetch was sown on the Bermuda sod to help loosen the soil and make a crop.

In the spring this vetch was harvested for hay, and the land was disked up and sown early to cow peas. Just as soon as the peas began to lose their leaves they were cut for hay. Then the land was plowed deep and left in the furrow until in February, when Canada field peas and oats were sown heavily. The crop was removed for hay, the land was plowed deeply and peas were sown again.

The operations of the previous year were repeated, and by the following spring the land was free from Bermuda. The freezing of the roots while the land is in the furrow, and the almost constant shading of the land in the spring and summer are the things that did the work.

Grit for Confined Fowls.

Keep plenty of grit and oyster shells before the poultry at all times, especially when they are confined in the winter time when they cannot obtain the necessary grinding material.

Alfalfa on Stiff Land.

Alfalfa can be grown on stiff lands with great success, but is not a success on sandy soils unless the land is limed and inoculated.

Some Useful Hints for the Girl Who Sews

Girls who have been taking domestic science courses at fashionable boarding schools declare that to get along without a variety of dainty aprons is an impossibility, especially if the embryo housekeeper wishes to preserve the fronts of her frocks from spots.

One girl who sews almost as well as the cooks is making several aprons of plain lawn cut into half ovals, scalloped all round with a color and embroidered with washable floss in outline or shadow stitch. By this means she expects to have luncheon pinafores to accord with every house frock—white embroidered with pale blue; pink, mauve or yellow and dark blue; green and brown relieved with white.

Charming little aprons of half oval, half round, diamond or oblong shape are to be made of finest handkerchief, scalloped all round and hand embroidered with white in imitation of the work done in the Madeira Islands.

All of the ruffle bordered aprons are fascinating, particularly the round ones which have bowknot and leaf designs embroidered on the lower curve and girde belts which fit firmly, have embroidered fronts and tie in a little bowknot at the back. The same model is pretty when the hand embroidery and ruffle are omitted and the hemstitched edge is finished with an inch wide frill of Valenciennes or Cluny lace.

Bretelle aprons are always coquettish and nearly always become a slender, girlish figure, but they are more difficult to make than pinafores, because the center panel with its square little bib should be carefully curved to fit into the figure at the waist line and on to it should be attached the narrower side panels, which are shaped above the waist into straps crossing the shoulders and then across the top of the back, where they are joined, so that the apron may be adjusted by drawing the bretelle portion over the head and then securing it about the waist with pink, blue or white satin ribbon sashes.

Nearly all of the bretelle aprons have cunning little hip pockets headed with fine muslin embroidery or lace edging to match the bordering of the pinafore, bib and shoulders, and if a girl wishes to make this sort of luncheon apron exceptionally elaborate she may have the bretelles entirely of all over lace and let them run into narrow panels from the waist to the lower edge.

Practical aprons, meaning the sort which are to be put on over the frock when preparing salad dressing and really messy concoctions, are made of striped galatea, percale, gingham or madras, and are put on as easily as is an ulster, for they fasten with flat buttons down the left front from shoulder to hem, have big sewed in sleeves with band cuffs and a deep patch pocket on each hip. To make one take as a model any narrow skirted, one piece house frock which closes in front, allowing, however, for slightly wider seams and wider shoulders, so that the garment will go over even a velvet frock if desired.

It has been wisely said that whoever has once mastered the art of the simpler forms of Irish crochet work has at command an endless variety of ways in which to utilize the product of the tiny steel hook. Above all, the roses of fine imported Irish lace thread can be applied in so many dainty and original ways that the girl of wisdom finds them an invaluable resource when designing for herself those small accessories which give the keynote of a costume.

For articles of fine linen or of any wash material the roses of the Irish thread are, naturally, the sort to use. But on silk or cloth those crocheted from a twisted silk made charming and unique variants from passementerie. A girl who loves to experiment with such useful arts has just finished for herself a little girde which is the admiration of all who see it. The foundation at the back is a shaped piece of crinoline or some such stiffened lining about eight inches wide. This is covered with the white crepe de chine of which the girde is made and trimmed with "up and down" rows of white silk roses. To each end of the shaped back section the soft front pieces of the girde are shirred, and these are long enough to join in a graceful knot in front and to fall sash-like almost to the edge of the dress skirt, where they are finished with a triplet of alken crocheted blossoms apiece, from the center of each of which hangs a tassel of the same white silk.

This same girl has crocheted more elaborate motifs of pale rose silk for her sister's pet dancing frock of the same shade and a set of handsome black silk—unlike anything to be found in the shops—for a well beloved aunt, whose dinner gown they will shortly adorn most attractively.

Gloves Are Larger.

Golf, tennis and other athletic exercises have caused the hands of girls and women to grow larger than formerly. Despite that fact they still wear the same size gloves. The reason was explained the other day by a dealer in women's gloves. He said that gloves were made to deceive not so much the wearer as the persons who looked at them. The gloves are made in so-called "full sizes," and when a woman asks for a 5½ glove, knowing that her hand is too large to get in it the saleswoman invariably hands her out a 5½ glove, and it always fits. The extra sizes have been made to please the women and, perhaps, to get their trade. Though young girls who play golf, and who have rather large hands, gloat in the fact that they wear a No. 7 glove, they usually long for smaller sized gloves when they get older, and when they inquire for them in the glove shop they invariably get them.

IN VOGUE

Plain, flat revers will be a predominant feature in spring suits. Taffetas will be used a great deal in millinery during the coming season.

Draped toques of satin and changeable taffetas are extremely fashionable.

The liking for glowing red tones is evidenced in the newest gowns from Paris.

Pearl decorations have a wonderful popularity; they "belong" everywhere.

First hats for spring are either small and close or large and high trimmed.

There is a new cutaway coat, 36 inches long, single breasted, perfectly plain sleeves and very snug in fit.

There is a new sleeveless coat with a cape back crossing in front like a fichu. Puffings and ruchings of taffeta are used on frocks or serge.

Fichus continue to be fashionable. Tulle either plain or fringed, is the favorite material for making these pretty, cloud-like trimmings. They are used frequently to trim negligees of crepe de chine or soft satin.

HAD THROAT TROUBLE SINCE CHILDHOOD

All Treatments Failed. Relieved by Ferrus.

Mrs. Wm. Hohmann, 2764 Lincoln Ave., Chicago, Ill., writes:

"I suffered with catarrh of the bronchial tubes and had a terrible cough ever since a child. 'I would sit up in bed with pillows propped up behind me but still the cough would not let me sleep. I thought and everybody else that I had consumption.'

"So reading the papers about Ferrus I decided to try, without the least bit of hope that it would do me any good. But after taking three bottles I noticed a change. My appetite got better, so I kept on, and I was never discouraged. Finally I seemed not to cough so much and the pains in my chest got better and I could rest at night.

"I am well now and cured of a chronic cough and sore throat. I cannot tell you how grateful I am, and I cannot thank Ferrus enough. I have cured where doctors have failed and I talk Ferrus wherever I go, recommending it to everybody. People who think they have consumption better give it a trial."

The many freezings of the ground this winter ought to put the soil in fine shape for plowing and planting.

Natural advantages have killed more towns than they have ever built up. It takes constant courting of the trade territory to keep a town growing.

The women should be and are a potent factor in town building through their labors for civic attractiveness. An ugly town does not impress one as being a good place to live in.

Town building in the majority of instances should begin in the country. Without the support of a strong agricultural community no town can grow with any degree of permanency. Hedley has the country to back her up, and needs to get to pulling.

The Cemetery Association requests the people of the community to meet at the cemetery for purpose of cleaning off the ground. Let every one who possibly can be there to help for it is badly needed.

Photographer Strawn was down from Clarendon Tuesday with a lot of views he had taken around Hedley; one especially being good, that was a view of the 500 or more bales of unginne cotton piled up around the Moreman gin. We expect to have a cut made from this and print in the Informer so our readers in other portions of the country can see how cotton is done here.

Rev. Atticus Webb, superintendent of the Fort Worth District of the Anti-Saloon League, will lecture at the Bond hall at 2:30 p. m. Thursday March 21. Everybody invited to hear him. No admission charge will be made.

The coal miners have struck in several of the old countries and it seems very likely that the next few days will see a similar condition in the United States. Already business has been sadly crippled in Great Britain and the other countries, and if the strike continues long the whole world will suffer.

BURNING DAYLIGHT

SYNOPSIS.

Elam Harnish, known all through Alaska as "Burning Daylight," celebrates his 25th birthday with a crowd of miners at the Circle City Tivoli. The dance leads to heavy gambling, in which over $10,000 is staked. Harnish loses his money and his mine but wins the mail contract. He starts on his mail trip with dogs and sledges, telling his friends that he will be in the big Yukon gold strike at the start. Burning Daylight makes a sensational rapid run across country with the mail, appears at the Tivoli and is now ready to join his friends in a dash to the new gold fields. Deciding that gold will be found in the up-river district Harnish buys two tons of flour, which he declares will be worth its weight in gold, but when he arrives with his flour he finds the big flat desolate. A comrade discovers gold and Daylight reaps a rich harvest. He goes to Dawson, becomes the most prominent figure in the Klondike and defeats a combination of capitalists in a vast mining deal. He returns to civilization, and amid the bewildering complications of high finance, Daylight finds that he has been led to invest his eleven millions in a manipulated scheme. He goes to New York, and confronting his disloyal partners with a revolver, he threatens to kill them if his money is not returned.

A long session of three hours followed. The deciding factor was not the big automatic pistol, but the certitude that Daylight would use it. Not alone were the three men convinced of this, but Daylight himself was convinced. He was firmly resolved to kill the men if his money was not forthcoming. It was not an easy matter, on the spur of the moment, to raise ten millions in paper currency, and there were vexatious delays. A dozen times Mr. Howison and the head clerk were summoned into the room. On these occasions the pistol lay on Daylight's lap, covered carefully by a newspaper, while he was usually engaged in rolling or lighting his brown-paper cigarette. But in the end, the thing was accomplished. A suit-case was brought up by one of the clerks from the waiting motor-car, and Daylight snapped it shut on the last package of bills. He paused at the door to make his final remarks.

"There's three several things I sure want to tell you-all. When I get outside this door, you-all'll be set free to act, and I just want to warn you-all about what to do. In the first place, no warrants for my arrest—save? This money's mine, and I ain't robbed you of it. If it gets out how you gave me the double cross and how I done you back again, the laugh'll be on you, and it'll be sure an almighty big laugh. You-all can't afford that laugh. Besides, having got back my stake that you-all robbed me of, if you arrest me and try to rob me a second time I'll get gunning for you-all, and I'll sure get you. No little fraid-cat shrimps like you-all can skin Burning Daylight. If you win you lose, and there'll sure be some several unexpected funerals around this burg. Just look me in the eye, and you-all'll save I mean business. Them stubs and receipts on the table is all yours. Good day."

As the door shut behind him, Nathaniel Letton sprang for the telephone, and Dowsett intercepted him.

"What are you going to do?" Dowsett demanded.

"The police. It's downright robbery. I won't stand it. I tell you I won't stand it."

Dowsett smiled grimly, but at the same time bore the slender financier back and down into his chair.

"We'll talk it over," he said; and in Leon Guggenhammer he found an anxious ally.

And nothing ever came of it. The thing remained a secret with the three men. Nor did Daylight ever give the secret away, though that afternoon, leaning back in his stateroom on the Twentieth Century, his shoes off, and feet on a chair, he chuckled long and heartily. New York remained forever puzzled over the affair; nor could it hit upon a rational explanation. By all rights, Burning Daylight should have gone broke, yet it was known that he immediately reappeared in San Francisco possessing an apparently unimpaired capital. This was evidenced by the magnitude of the enterprises he engaged in, such as, for instance, Panama Mail, by sheer weight of money and fighting power wresting the control away from Sheftly and selling out in two months to the Harriman interests at a rumored enormous advance.

CHAPTER X.

Back in San Francisco, Daylight quickly added to his reputation. In ways it was not an enviable reputation. Men were afraid of him. He became known as a fighter, a fiend, a tiger. His play was a ripping and smashing one, and no one knew where or how his next blow would fall. The element of surprise was large. He balked on the unexpected, and, fresh from the wild North, his mind not operating in stereotyped channels, he was able in unusual degree to devise new tricks and stratagems. And once he won the advantage, he pressed it remorselessly. "As relentless as a Red Indian," was said of him, and it was said truly.

He was a free lance, and had no friendly business associations. Such alliances as were formed from time to time were purely affairs of expediency, and he regarded his allies as men who would give him the double-cross or ruin him if a profitable chance presented. In spite of this point of view, he was faithful to his allies. But he was faithful just as long as they were and no longer. The treason had to come from them, and then it was "Ware Daylight."

The business men and financiers of the Pacific coast never forgot the lesson of Charles Klinkner and the California & Altamont Trust Company. Klinkner was the president. In partnership with Daylight, the pair raided the San Jose Interurban. The powerful Lake Power & Electric Lighting corporation came to the rescue, and Klinkner, seeing what he thought was the opportunity, went over to the enemy in the thick of the pitched battle. Daylight lost three millions before he was done with it, and before he was done with it he saw the California & Altamont Trust Company hopelessly wrecked, and Charles Klinkner a suicide in a felon's cell.

So it was that Daylight became a of alcoholic inhibition thwart his consciousness. The office became immediately a closed affair. It ceased to exist. In the afternoon, after lunch, it lived again for one or two hours, when, leaving it, he rebuilt the wall of inhibition. Of course, there were exceptions to this; and, such was the rigour of his discipline, that if he had a dinner or a conference before him in which, in a business way, he encountered enemies or allies, he abstained from drinking. But the instant the business was settled, his everlasting call went out for a Martini, and for a double-Martini at that, in a long glass so as not to excite comment.

Into Daylight's life came Dede Mason. She came rather imperceptibly. He had accepted her impersonally along with the office furnishing, the office boy, Morrison, the chief, confidential, and only clerk, and all the rest of the accessories of a superman's gambling place of business. Had he been asked any time during the first months she was in his employ, he would have been unable to tell the color of her eyes. From the fact that she was a demiblonde, there resided dimly in his subconsciousness a conception that she was a brunette. Likewise he had an idea that she was not thin, while there was an absence in his mind of any idea that she was fat. And how she dressed, he had no idea at all. He had no trained eye in such matters, nor was he interested. He took it for granted, in the lack of any impression to the contrary, that she was dressed somehow. He knew

Another time it was a book of Wells, "The Wheels of Chance."

"What's it all about?" Daylight asked.

"Oh, it's just a novel, a love-story."

She stopped, but he still stood waiting, and she felt it incumbent to go on.

"It's about a little Cockney draper's assistant, who takes a vacation on his bicycle, and falls in with a young girl very much above him. Her mother is a popular writer and all that. And the situation is very curious, and sad, too, and tragic. Would you care to read it?"

"Does he get her?" Daylight demanded.

"No; that's the point of it. He wasn't."

"And he doesn't get her, and you've read all them pages, hundreds of them, to find that out?" Daylight muttered in amazement.

Miss Mason was nettled as well as amused.

"But you read the mining and financial news by the hour," she retorted.

"But I sure get something out of that. It's business, and it's different. I get money out of it. What do you get out of books?"

"Points of view, new ideas, life."

"Not worth a cent cash."

"But life's worth more than cash," she argued.

"Oh, well," he said, with easy masculine tolerance, "so long as you enjoy it. That's what counts, I suppose; and there's no accounting for taste."

Despite his own superior point of view, he had an idea that she knew a lot, and he experienced a fleeting feeling like that of a barbarian face to face with the evidence of some tremendous culture. To Daylight culture was a worthless thing, and yet, somehow, he was vaguely troubled by a sense that there was more in culture than he imagined.

Again, on her desk, in passing, he noticed a book with which he was familiar. This time he did not stop, for he had recognized the cover. It was a magazine correspondent's book on the Klondike, and he knew that he and his photograph figured in it, and he knew, also, of a certain sensational chapter concerned with a woman's suicide, and with one "To Much Daylight." After that he did not talk with her again about books. He imagined that erroneous conclusions she had drawn from that particular chapter, and it stung him the more in that they were undeserved. He pumped Morrison, the clerk, who had first to vent his personal grievance against Miss Mason before he could tell what little he knew of her.

"She comes from Siskiyou County. She's very nice to work with in the office, of course, but she's rather stuck on herself—exclusive, you know."

"How do you make that out?" Daylight queried.

"Well, she thinks too much of herself to associate with those she works with, in the office here, for instance. She won't have anything to do with a fellow, you see. I've asked her out repeatedly, to the theater and the chutes and such things. But nothing doing. Says she likes plenty of sleep, and can't stay up late, and has to go all the way to Berkeley—that's where she lives. But that's all hot air. She's running with the University boys, that's what she's doing. She needs lots of sleep, and can't go to the theater with me, but she can dance all hours with them. I've heard it pretty straight that she goes to all their hops and such things. Rather stylish and high-toned for a stenographer, I'd say. And she keeps a horse, too. She rides astride all over those hills out there. I saw her one Sunday myself. Oh, she's a high-flyer, and I wonder how she does it. Sixty-five a month don't go far. Then she has a sick brother, too."

"Live with her people?" Daylight asked.

"No; hasn't got any. They were well to do, I've heard. They must have been, or that brother or hers couldn't have gone to the University of California. Her father had a big cattle-ranch, but he got to fooling with mines or something, and went broke before he died. Her mother died long before that. Her brother must cost a lot of money. He was a husky once, played football, was great on hunting and being out in the mountains and such things. He got his accident breaking horses, and then rheumatism or something got into him. One leg is shorter than the other, and withered up some. He has to walk on crutches. I saw her out with him once—crossing the ferry. The doctors have been experimenting on him for years, and he's in the French Hospital now, I think."

All of which side-lights on Miss Mason went to increase Daylight's interest in her. Yet, much as he desired, he failed to get acquainted with her. He had thoughts of asking her to luncheon, but his was the innate chivalry of the frontiersman, and the thoughts never came to anything. He knew a self-respecting, square-dealing man was not supposed to take his stenographer to luncheon. Such things did happen, he knew, for he heard the chaffing gossip of the club; but he did not think much of such men and felt sorry for the girls.

The Cocktails Served as an inhibition.

successful financier. He did not go in for swindling the workers. Not only did he not have the heart for it, but it did not strike him as a sporting proposition. The workers were so easy, so stupid. It was more like slaughtering fat, hand-reared pheasants on the English preserves he had read about. The sport, to him, was in waylaying the successful robbers and taking their spoils from them. The grim Yukon life had failed to make Daylight hard. It required civilization to produce this result. In the fierce, savage game he now played, his habitual geniality imperceptibly slipped away from him, as did his lazy Western drawl.

He still had recrudescences of geniality, but they were largely periodical and forced, and they were usually due to the cocktails he took prior to meal-time. In the North he had drunk deeply and at irregular intervals; but now his drinking became systematic and disciplined. It was an unconscious development, but it was based upon physical and mental conditions. The cocktails served as an inhibition. Without reasoning or thinking about it, the strain of the office, which was essentially due to the daring and audacity of his ventures, required check or cessation; and he found, through the weeks and months, that the cocktails supplied this very thing. They constituted a stone wall. He never drank during the morning, nor in office hours; but the instant he left the office he proceeded to rear this wall her as "Miss Mason," and that was all, though he was aware that as a stenographer she was quick and accurate. He watched her leaving one afternoon, and was aware for the first time that she was well-formed, and that her manner of dress was satisfying. He knew none of the details of woman's dress, and he saw none of the details of her neat shirt waist and well-cut tailor suit. He saw only the effect in a general, sketchy way. She looked right. This was in the absence of anything wrong or out of the way.

"She's a trim little good-looker," was his verdict, when the outer office door closed on her.

The next morning, dictating, he concluded that he liked the way she did her hair, though for the life of him he could have given no description of it. The impression was pleasing, that was all. She sat between him and the window, and he noted that her hair was light brown, with hints of golden bronze. A pale sun, shining in, touched the golden bronze into smoldering fires that were very pleasing. He discovered that in the intervals, when she had nothing to do, she read books and magazines, or worked on some sort of feminine fancy work. Passing her desk, once, he picked up a volume of Kipling's poems and glanced puzzled through the pages.

"You like reading, Miss Mason?" he said, laying the book down.

"Oh, yes," was the answer; "very much."

Girls

Read About These Three Girls. How Sick They Were and How Their Health Was Restored by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Appleton, Wis.—"I take pleasure in writing you an account of my sickness. I told a friend of mine how I felt and she said I had female trouble and advised me to use Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, as she had taken it herself for the same trouble with wonderful results. I had been sick for two years and overworked myself, and had such bad feelings every month that I could hardly walk for pain. I was very nervous and easily tired out and could not sleep nights. I had dizzy spells, and pimples came on my face. But I have taken your Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and it has restored my health. I think it is the best medicine in existence."—Miss Cecelia M. Bauer, 1161 Lawrence St., Appleton, Wis.

A SCHOOL TEACHER'S GRATITUDE:

Geneva, Iowa.—"I have been teaching school for some years and I have neglected my health because I was too busy with my work to attend to myself properly. I suffered greatly every month and was on the verge of a nervous breakdown. I wrote you about my condition and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and the Blood Purifier as you recommended. These remedies have done wonders for me and I can highly and widely recommend them to every suffering woman."—Miss Minnie Shaver, R. F. D. No. 1, Geneva, Iowa, c/o Sam Erickson.

A COLORADO GIRL'S CASE:

Montrose, Col.—"I was troubled very much with irregular periods. Sometimes two months would elapse. I suffered severe headache, was weak and nervous, could eat scarcely anything. I took both Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and Blood Purifier and the result was wonderful. I feel like another person. I think your remedies are the best on earth and cannot express my thankfulness to you for what they have done to me. I help my neighbors when they are sick, and I shall always recommend your medicines."—Miss Ella McCandless, Montrose, Col.

Is it not reasonable to suppose that a medicine that did so much for these girls will benefit any other girl who is suffering with the same troubles?

Does it not seem the only sensible thing to give such a medicine at least a trial? You may be sure that it can do you no harm, and there are lots of proof that it will do you much good.

For 30 years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has been the standard remedy for female ills. No one sick with woman's ailments does justice to herself who will not try this famous medicine, made from roots and herbs, it has restored so many suffering women to health. Write to LYDIA E. PINKHAM MEDICINE CO., (CONFIDENTIAL) LYNN, MASS., for advice. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.
