VOL. II

HEDLEY, DONLEY COUNTY, TEXAS, FRIDAY, SEPTEMBER 13, 1912

NO. 42

Hedley--Fastest Growing Town in the Panhandle

IMPORTANT NOTICE TO PATRONS

To the patrons sending children under the scholastic age:

This is to advise you that the crowded condition of our school makes it imperative upon the school board to stop all children under the scholastic age, unless you are willing to pay enough to employ another teacher. Such employment you would be expected to assume all responsibility as to paying said teacher.

We want the patrons to know that this step has been taken reluctantly on the part of the school board, as we had hoped that the condition would be such that we could let the unders go, but as above outlined it will be an impossibility, unless the patrons of the unders can pay the teacher. Of course we will furnish the room for such teacher.

So after this week you will please stop your children under the scholastic age, or comply with the above requirements.

HEDLEY SCHOOL BOARD,
By O. H. BRITAIN, Secretary.

Bring samples of your farm and garden products to the Informer office as we desire to display them for the benefit of the visitors to our town.

HEDLEY GETS FIRST BALE OF COTTON

C. Y. Tate brought in a bale of cotton to the gin Thursday morning early—the first bale of the season. It is too wet to gin however and will not be ginned before Saturday. A. J. Newman brought the first bale last year.

R. W. Scales is having a nice six room residence built in west part of town. J. B. Miller is the contractor. We are glad to see these new residences built for there has never been enough to supply the demand.

HON. EARLE B. MAYFIELD

Meridian, Sept. 6.—Hon. Earle B. Mayfield, successful candidate for R. R. Commissioner, who made his campaign on a platform of "more railroads and better service" and who has incessantly preached a gospel of "live and let live" brings to the Commission a spirit of progress, a disposition of fairness, a desire to co-operate and a resistless energy much needed in the work of that department of the government.

He is entering the Commission at the most trying time of its existence. Construction work is at a standstill and can hardly be stimulated by unreasonable bonuses; a pending car famine of mammoth proportions is upon us; our passenger service is in need of improvement and the people have cried out to the Commission thru the State democratic convention for relief. The services of Mr. Mayfield will be valuable to the Commission in modernizing its methods and adjusting its policies to Twentieth Century conditions.

He served six years in State Senate and is at present a member of that body. His faithfulness, fidelity and ability have won for him leadership in the Senate and merited the promotion he has received from the people.

RURAL CARRIERS EXAMINATION

The United States Civil Service Commission announces an examination October 12, 1912, at Hedley, Tex. as a result of which it is expected to make certification to fill a vacancy in the position of rural carrier at Hedley, Texas and other vacancies as they may occur on rural routes at Post Offices in Donley Co. unless it shall be decided in the interest of the service to fill the vacancy by reinstatement, transfer, or promotion. The usual entrance salary for rural carriers is from $600 to $1,000 per annum.

Application Form 1341, and full information concerning the requirements of the examination, can be secured from the secretary of the local examining board or the postmaster at any of the places named above, or from the U. S. Civil Service Commission, Washington, D. C.

Miss Ollie Cochran of Baylor-Belton College, and the Northwest Texas B. W. M. U., lectured at the church last Monday night. She is a splendid talker and interests the audience.

FINE RAINS VISIT THIS COUNTRY

Wednesday night there came to the Panhandle one of those sure-enough rains; and it wasn't needed in this section but was needed below us, and up on the plains, so we are not kicking at the overplus. In fact the rain was "ordered by Will Rains for last May but was lost in transit for these long months." Rained more last night and very cloudy today.

DONLEY COUNTY FAIR ITEMS

Have you gotten a catalogue? Get busy and send in your entries.

Entries in all classes are pouring into the office of the secretary, will be the greatest Fair ever held in the Great Panhandle of Texas.

In addition to the exhibits and races during the Fair there will be all manner of clean amusements, Ferris wheel, Merry-go-round, the Great and wonderful Electric Theatre, the world-renowned glass-blowers, a first class carnival company and from 10 to 12 other amusement features, all up to the minute. If you don't get action for your money it is your own fault. There will be also a free sensational act twice daily that will worth more alone than you pay for the whole show. Get the children ready and show them the great Midway and Coney Island combined at the Donley County Fair.

Don't put it off, do it now—enter your products. Entrance fee on livestock only. If you wish to enter a horse or cow for example, in the show classes fill out the entry blank that you will find inside each catalogue, if you want a box stall for your animal enclose $2.00 and $1.00 for an exhibitors ticket which will you to a box-stall for your animal all three days of the Fair and allows you to the grounds at any and all times during the three days and nights that the Fair is in progress. If you want an open stall for your animal it will cost $1.00 for the entire three days and your exhibitors ticket giving you admission to the grounds at all times will be $1.00. As the price of a single admission to the grounds will be 35 cents with no pass out checks issued, you can readily see the saving to you. The Association had this feature in view as well as to insure that the animals entered would receive proper attention during the time they are on exhibition with the least possible expense to the owner.

Last year Hedley was without representation at the County Fair, owing to disinterestedness and carelessness of our people. Where such a small effort can do so much good to our community it seems a pity that the Hedley country famed as it is for the superiority of its products should fail to take advantage of the opportunity to enter in competition with the rest of the county. Failure to do this can leave but one impression on the people from the various parts of the county as well as on the outside prospectors, and that is, "that Hedley has not the confidence in her products to place them side by side with the other displays." We know that this is not true, but it is hard to convince the outsider. Let us make such a complete showing this year that no doubt can remain in the minds of any one as to where the garden spot of Donley county is located. We can do it—will we?

The peaches were grown on the F. A. Finch ranch six miles south of Hedley and the grapes grew wild on the same place, but they were almost as large as the tame grapes and equally as fine in flavor.—Democrat.

Fear Defined One is Ignoble, but the Other is Noble By REV. FRANK CRANE, Chicago

THERE are two kinds of fear, centripetal and centrifugal. One kind draws me to you; the other pushes me from you. The noblest quality of love is always accompanied by fear. No man loves his wife duly unless he fears to do what would bring upon him her contempt or aversion. No woman loves her husband as she should unless there are pits of fear all around her love, things she is afraid to do. A proper self-respect is impossible without self-fear. This is Tennyson's meaning in the lines: "Dowered with the hate of hate, the scorn of scorn, The love of love." Many persons fall into grievous error by not understanding this. They think all fear is weakness, any timidity is ignoble. Hence, they imagine they should be bold and fearless toward their own conscience and have no fear of their own modesty. It should be remembered that the very finest quality of courage and the keen edge of true love is pure fear. The bravest soldier is afraid to run, the noblest lover is afraid to be unworthy. These two kinds of fear are brought out in the Bible. On the one hand "the fear of the Lord" is spoken of as a most commendable thing, the fountain of morals, "the beginning of wisdom." On the other hand, we are told that "perfect love casteth out fear," and we are exhorted not to fear God, but to "boldly approach."

High Cost of Rearing Children By PERCY E. WANG, Milwaukee, Wis.

I was attracted recently by a news dispatch purporting to be from Chicago, in which some three or four of the leading society women of that city were quoted as to the probable cost of rearing a child until it had attained the age of five years. The "guesses" ranged all the way from $2,000 to $5,000 a year. I have been married for fifteen years, and have seven children. The eldest is fourteen years of age, and the youngest one year. In the fifteen years my earnings have been approximately $8,000, or about $530 a year. According to the lowest estimate given, $2,000 a year, my seven children should have cost me $104,000, so I am shy to the tune of $96,000. My children are all healthy, and eat heartily three times a day. Four of them are going to school, and I have nothing to complain of in their grade showings. The point of the matter is this: Those who know the least about the rearing of children and the duties and responsibilities of wedded life are forever rushing into print to give people who do know something about it a few samples of their ignorance.

Money Only Excuse for Second Venture By MRS. E. E. NICBOLS, Berkeley, Cal.

Has a man the right to keep his widow unwed? A woman's faithfulness to marriage vows should extend beyond the grave if she has children matured, having homes of their own; if she has deep, lasting respect for the departed loved one and has enough on hand to live a comfortable single existence. A woman is only married to a man "till death do us part," but if money is no object, I cannot see why respect and love should terminate at the grave. Marriage should be held sacred for all time if possible. More love in the world and less friction is what we stand in need of to make home life ideal. If you have married the wrong one and do not feel that you want to make the best of a bad bargain, for your own welfare and the sake of the rising generation, realize it in time and separate before you unjustly blight the lives of helpless little ones. If you always bear in mind the sacred words of the ceremony which bound you together and try to live up to them, Reno, Nev., and all such places would soon be put out of business. One should marry the second time for financial reasons only. If the finances are established before or at the husband's death, to my mind, there is absolutely no excuse for a second venture on the rough sea of matrimony.

Many People Have Been Deceived by Eggs By Geo. W. Marr, Louisville, Ky.

I value hens. There was a time when I felt a deep respect for these alleged benevolent and sacrificing creatures, but now I turn my head and ignore them until after death. The hen is a mystery; also she has a guilty conscience; she can look no person in the eye and feel justified in doing so. "A clear conscience fears no accusation," so spoke a wise Roman, and I have no doubt that he directed his remark to the hen as well as to the general public. Ever since I can remember, and long before then, I was told, people have been deceived by eggs. There is hardly a person living who could not speak evil of them. I do not wish to criticize the infant egg, but I must say that the adult egg is wicked. Indeed, it's a wicked egg whose virtue must be searched for with a candle. Science made eggs the national breakfast food; therefore, their consumption is growing. (This statement may be ambiguous, but it is better so.) The more I see of eggs the less highly

In the PUBLIC EYE

BHAVSINHJI, MAHARAJAH OF BHAVNAGAR

The publication of the history of the Rajkumar college of Kathiawar in western India has drawn into prominent notice the movement for the education of the chiefs and princes of India which was commenced half-a-century ago on the model of the English public schools. The work, which has been sumptuously got up, gives a complete record of the growth of the movement up to date and serves as a book of reference both with regard to the daily work carried on in that seminary and the two generations of youths who have passed through its portals. In this way it amply testifies to the success which has been achieved by the institution since its foundation, of which many of the reigning chiefs of western India themselves furnish living examples. As a rule the present generation of these princes may be regarded as a notable improvement upon their predecessors of half-a-century back, for although it may not be possible by the methods of western education to inculcate in them a higher degree of the ordinary courtesies of life which are inherent in the oriental of the noble type they are doubtless better fitted than their forefathers were to realize and discharge the obligations that lie upon them as responsible administrators. As leaders of society in their own territories some of them have set noble examples in the way of social and educational reforms by breaking through old customs and superstitions which have cramped the lives of their women for centuries. The compiler of the history himself has been one of them, and the bestowal of the coveted distinction of the crown of India on the Maharajah of Bhavnagar by his majesty at the Imperial Durbar was a fitting recognition of her husband's efforts to elevate the status of Indian women. Besides being a successful administrator the Maharajah Bhavsinhji is fond of literary pursuits as the history of his alma mater testifies, and he deserves to be congratulated on the many-sided proofs he has been giving of the benefit he derived from his training there. He is, moreover, a keen lover of music, a fearless rider, and an excellent shot.

VICE PRESIDENT SHERMAN TO TAKE REST

Although the family and physician of Vice President Sherman declare he has so far recovered from his recent illness that his condition is no longer dangerous, it is certain he will not return to Washington during this session of congress and will take no active part in the campaign. For the first time in thirty years he has been forced to give up all attention either to business or politics and is compelled to take a thorough rest cure. For a time his family feared the notification of his nomination, which will take place at Utica, N. Y., August 21, would have to be deferred. This was after Mr. Sherman was stricken with heart trouble, the first time in his life there had been detected any weakness of that organ, at his summer home at Big Moose lake, June 26. He was removed immediately to his home at Utica, as it was believed the high altitude had an injurious effect. For a time his condition was such as to alarm his friends, but for the last few days he has been decidedly better, and has been able to take automobile rides every day. He is permitted to see his friends, but only in the afternoon, and all business matters are tabooed. The local committee is going ahead with the arrangements for the nomination, and if his improvement is as marked as it has been for the few weeks, there is no reason to think the arrangements will have changed. "I am not at liberty to say much about Mr. Sherman's condition," Dr. H. Peck, his physician, the other day, "but I can say there has been decided improvement. I see now no reason why the notification cannot place on August 21, as arranged. That is a month from now, and the every reason to believe he will be much improved. I shall, however, him taking any part in the campaign this year."

PRINCE KATSURA OF JAPAN VISITS CZA

The present visit to Russia of Japanese statesman, Prince Katsura, is a momentous development in completing the final details of the defensive alliance pact between Russia and Japan. The actual agreement between former enemies was concluded some time ago and probably will be soon. The agreement consists of parts, one dealing with the definition of the spheres of influence of Russia and Japan in Mongolia, Manchuria, which is similar in character to the Anglo-Russian accord of August 31, 1907, regarding Persia. The second part deals with the duty of the two nations in joint defense in case either power is attacked. The Russo-Japanese agreement of July 4, 1910, providing for the maintenance jointly of the status quo in Manchuria, was a direct result of the ill-fated neutralization scheme for Manchurian railroads, and the present one was the outcome of an entanglement which taught both nations the necessity for a close union of forces. London advices assert that the new agreement is an exemplification of the treaty of Portsmouth between Russia and Japan. It is said that so the articles will be expunged and restated in a form confirming to her Liao-Tung peninsula lease, allowing both signatories greater freedom in Manchurian development and sanctioning the building of a strategic railway. The opinion prevails that Japan will have confirmed all of her territory south of the parallel 44, east of longitude 116, giving her partial influence over and enabling her to dominate Peking, while Russia will complete liberty of action in all of the Chinese territory outside the wall and west of the Japanese zone. Also that Japan formally accepts the Russian twelve-mile limit in territorial waters and supports the construction by Russia of the Kiakhta railway in Siberia.

Legs raw with itching, burning eczema

PITTSBURGH, Pa., May 23, 1912.—"A friend of mine had big red blotches form all over his legs, body and arms. It was pronounced a very bad case of eczema. After two months' treatment he was suffering untold tortures, and would awake at night and find himself scratching, with hands all over blood. His legs were raw with raw meat, itching and burning. For two months he slept scarcely any, but would get up and walk the floor. He says he simply felt as if he were burning up. After the case had lasted six months he began the use of Resinol Soap and Ointment. He was cured, and his skin was as clear as crystal." (Signed) W. D. BUCHANAN, 903 Deely St.,

POPULAR SYMBOL OF VALUE

Young Man Evidently Was Lacking in His Appreciation of the Country's Statement. There is plenty of food for cynical thoughts in the national capital, as is shown by the following incident which happened on a Washington street car: A worldly young man, prone to criticize, was gazing at the advertisements which decorate the interior of the car. One advertised a new kind of collar for men. The dome of the capitol was represented encircled by one of the collars, and on the senate and house wings of the building were placards giving prices and sizes. The placard on the senate end of the capitol read, "Quarter size," and that on the other end said, "Two for a quarter." The worldly cynical young man turned to his companion. "That," he remarked, "just about expresses my opinion of some of these here congressmen."—Judge.

SYNOPSIS.

Enid Maitland, a frank, free and unspoiled young Philadelphia girl, is taken to the Colorado mountains by her uncle, Robert Maitland, James Armstrong, Maitland's protegee, falls in love with her. His persistent wooing thrills the girl, but she hesitates, and Armstrong goes on in business without a definite answer. Enid hears the story of a mining engineer, Newbold, whose wife fell off a cliff and was so seriously hurt that he was compelled to shoot her to prevent her being eaten by wolves while he went for help. Kirkby, the old guide who tells the story, gives Enid a package of letters which he says were found on the dead woman's body. She reads the letters and at Kirkby's request keeps them. While bathing in mountain stream Enid is attacked by a bear, which is mysteriously shot. A storm adds to the girl's terror. A sudden deluge transforms Enid into raging torrent, which sweeps Enid into a gorge where she is rescued by a mountain hermit after a thrilling experience. Campers in great confusion upon discovering Enid's absence when the storm breaks. Maitland and Old Kirkby go in search of the girl. Enid discovers that her ankle is sprained and that she is unable to walk. Her mysterious rescuer carries her to his camp. Enid goes to sleep in the strange man's bunk. Miner books breakfast for Enid, after which they go on tour of inspection. The hermit tells Enid of his unsuccessful attempt to find the Maitland campers. He admits that he is also from Philadelphia. The hermit falls in love with Enid.

CHAPTER XIV. (Continued).

Having little else to do, she studied the man, and she studied him with a warm desire and an enthusiastic predisposition to find the best in him. She would not have been a human girl if she had not been thrilled to the very heart of her by what the man had done for her. She recognized that whether he asserted it or not, he had established an everlasting and indisputable claim upon her.

The circumstances of their first meeting, which as the days passed did not seem quite so horrible to her, and yet a thought of which would bring the blood to her cheek still on the instant, had in some way turned her over to him. His consideration of her, his gracious tenderness toward her, his absolute abnegation, his evident overwhelming desire to please her, to make the anomalous situation in which they stood to each other bearable in spite of their lonely and unobserved intimacy, by an absolute lack of presumption on his part—all those things touched her profoundly.

Although she did not recognize the fact then perhaps, she loved him from the moment her eyes had opened in the mist and rain after that awful battle in the torrent to see him bending over her.

No sight that had ever met Enid Maitland's eyes was so glorious, so awe inspiring, so uplifting and magnificent as the view from the verge of the cliff in the sunlight of some bright winter morning. Few women had ever enjoyed such privileges as hers. She did not know whether she liked the winter crowned range best that way, or whether she preferred the snowy world, glittering cold in the moonlight; or even whether it was more attractive when it was dark and the peaks and drifts were only lighted by the stars which shone never so brightly as just above her head.

When he allowed her she loved to stand sometimes in the full fury of the gale with the wind shrieking and sobbing like lost souls in some icy inferno through the hills and over the pines, the snow beating upon her, the sleet cutting her face if she dared to turn toward the storm. Generally he left her alone in the quieter moments, but in the tempest he stood watchful, on guard by her side, buttressing her, protecting her, sheltering her. Indeed his presence then was necessary, without him she could scarce have maintained a footing. The force of the wind might have hurled her down the mountain but for his strong arm. When the cold grew too great he led her back carefully to the hut and the warm fire.

Ah, yes, life and the world were both beautiful to her then, in night, in day, by sunlight, by moonlight, in calm and storm. Yet it made no difference what was spread before the woman's eyes, what glorious picture was exhibited to her gaze, she could not look at it more than a moment without thinking of the man. With the most fascinating panorama that the earth's surface could spread before human vision to engage her attention, she looked into her own heart and saw there this man!

Oh, she had fought against it at first, but lately she had luxuriated in it. She loved him, she loved him! And why not? What is it that women love in men? Strength of body? She could remember yet how he had carried her over the mountains in the midst of the storm, how she had been so bravely borne by his arms to his heart. She realized later what a task that had been, what a feat of strength. The uprooting of that sapling and the overturning of that huge Grizzly were child's play to the long portage up the almost impassable canon and mountain side which had brought her to this dear haven.

Was it strength of character she sought, resolution, determination? This arm had deliberately withdrawn from the world, buried himself in this mountain, and had stayed there deaf to the alluring call of man or woman; he had had the courage to do that.

Was it strength of mind she admired? Enid Maitland was no mean judge of the mental powers of her acquaintance. She was just as full of life and spirit and the joy of them as any young woman should be, but she had not been trained by and thrown with the best for nothing. Noblesse oblige! That his was a mind well stored with knowledge of the most varied sort she easily and at once perceived. Of course the popular books of the last five years had passed him by, and of such he knew nothing, but he could talk intelligently, interestingly, entertainingly upon the great classics. Keats and Shakespeare were his most thumbed volumes. He had graduated from Harvard as a civil engineer with the highest honors of his class and school and the youngest man to get his sheepskin! Enid Maitland herself was a woman of broad culture and wide reading and she deliberately set herself to fathom this man's capabilities. Not infrequently, much to her surprise, sometimes to her dismay, but generally to her satisfaction, she found that she had no plummet with which to sound his greater depths.

Did she seek in him that fine flower of good breeding, gentleness and consideration? Where could she find these qualities better displayed? She was absolutely alone with this man, entirely in his power, shut off from the world and its interference as effectively as if they had both been abandoned in an ice floe at the North Pole or cast away on some lonely island in the South Seas, yet she felt as safe as if she had been in her own house, or her uncle's, with every protection that human power could give. He had never presumed upon the situation in the least degree, he never once referred to the circumstances of their meeting in the remotest way, he never even discussed her rescue from the flood, he never told her how he had borne her through the rain to the lonely shelter of the hills, and in no way did he say anything that most keenly scrutinizing mind would torture into an allusion to the pool and the bear and the woman. The fitness of his breeding was never so well exhibited as in this reticence. More often than not it is what he does not rather than what he does that indicates the man.

It would be folly to deny that he never thought of these things. Had he forgotten them there would be no merit in his silence; but to remember them and to keep still—aye, that showed the man! He would close his eyes in that little room on the other side of the door and see again the dark pool, her white shoulders, her graceful arms, the lovely face with

She said in her heart—and I am not one to dispute her conclusions—that she would have loved him had he been one among millions to stand before her, and it was true. He was the complement of her nature. They differed in temperament as much as in complexion, and yet in those differences as much as in those perfect love and perfect union, there were striking resemblances, necessary points of contact.

There was no reason whatever why Enid Maitland should not love this man. The only possible check upon her feelings would have been her rather anomalous relation to Armstrong, but she reflected that she had promised him definitely nothing. When she had met him she had been heart whole, he had made some impression upon her fancy and might have made more with greater opportunity, but unfortunately for him, luckily for her, he had not enjoyed that privilege. She scarcely thought of him longer. She would not have been human if her mind had not dwelt upon the world beyond the skyline on the other side of the range. She knew how those who loved her must be suffering on account of her disappearance, but knowing herself safe and realizing that within a short time, when the spring came again, she would go back to them and that their mourning would be turned into joy by her arrival, she could not concern herself greatly over their present feelings and emotions; and besides, what would be the use of worrying over those things? There was metal more attractive for her thoughts close at hand. And she was too blissfully happy to entertain for more than a moment any sorrow.

She pictured often her return and never by any chance did she think of going back to civilization alone. The man she loved would be by her side, the church's blessing would make them one. To do her justice, in the simplicity and purity of her thoughts she never once thought of what the world might say about that long winter sojourn alone with this man. She was so conscious of her own innocence and of his delicate forbearance, she never once thought how humanity would raise its eyes and fairly cry upon her from the house tops. She did not realize that were she ever so pure and so innocent she could not now or ever reach the high position which Caesar, who was none too reputable himself, would fain have his wife enjoy!

CHAPTER XV.

The Man's Heart.

Now, love produces both happiness and unhappiness, but on the whole I think the happiness predominates, for love itself if it be true and high is its own reward. Love may feel itself unworthy and may shrink even from the unslighting of the shoe lace of the beloved, yet it joys in its own existence nevertheless. Of course its greatest satisfaction is in the return, but there is a sweetness even in the despair of the truly loving.

Enid Maitland, however, did not have to endure indifference, or fight against a passion which met with no response, for this man loved her with a love that was greater even than her own. The moon, in the trite aphorism, looks on many brooks, the brook sees no moon but the one above him in the heavens. In one sense his merit in winning her affection for himself from the hundreds of men she knew, was the greater; in many years he had only seen this one woman. Naturally she should be everything to him. She represented to him not only the woman but womankind. He had been a boy practically when he had buried himself in those mountains, and in all that time he had seen nobody like Enid Maitland. Every argument which had been exploited to show why she should love him could be turned about to account for his ed away, or which may be expressed from the soft petals by the hard circumstances of pain and sorrow until there is left nothing but the lingering perfume of the flower.

His body trembled if she laid a hand upon him, his soul thirsted for her; present or absent he conjured before his tortured brain the sweetness that inhabited her breast. He had been clearheaded enough in analyzing the past, he was neither clear-sighted nor coherent in thinking of the present. He worshiped her, he could have thrown himself upon his knees to her; if it would have added to her happiness, she could have killed him, smiling at her. Rode she in the Juggernaut car of the ancient idol, with his body, would he have hesitatingly paved the way and have been glad of the privilege. He longed to compass her with sweet observations. The world revenged itself upon him for his long neglect, it had summed up in this one woman all its charm, its beauty, its romance, and had thrust her into his very arms. His was one of those great passions which illuminate the records of the past. Paolo had not loved Francesca more.

Oh, yes, the woman knew he loved her. It was not in the power of mortal man no matter how iron his restraint, how absolute the imposition of his will, to keep his heart hidden, his passion undisclosed. No one could keep such things secret, his love for her cried aloud in a thousand ways, even his look when he dared to turn his eyes upon her was eloquent of his feeling. He never said a word, however, he held his lips at least fettered and bound for he believed that honor and its obligations weighed down the balance upon the contrary side to which his inclinations lay.

He was not worthy of this woman. In the first place all he had to offer her was a blood stained hand. That might have been overcome in his mind; but pride in his self punishment, his resolution to withdraw himself from man and woman until such time as God completed his expiation and signified his acceptance of the penitent by taking away his life, held him inexorably.

The dark face of his wife rose before him. He forced himself to think upon her, she had loved him, she had given him all that she could. He remembered how she had pleaded with him that he take her to that last and most dangerous of journeys, her devotion to him had been so great she could not let him go out of her sight a moment, he thought fatuously! And he killed her. In the queer turmoil of his brain he blessed himself for everything. He could not be false to his purpose, false to her memory, unworthy of the passion in which he believed she had held him and which he believed he had inspired.

If he had gone out in the world, after her death he might have forgotten most of these things, he might have lived them down. Safer clearer views would have come to him. His morbid self reproach and self consciousness would have been changed. But he had lived with them alone for five years and now there was no putting them aside. Honor and pride, the only things that may successfully fight against love, overcome him. He could not give way. He wanted, every time he was in her presence he longed to sweep her to his heart and crush her in his arms and bend her head back and press lips of fire on her lips.

But honor and pride, held him back. How long would they continue to exercise dominion over him? Would the time come when his passion rising like a sea would thunder upon these artificial embankments of his soul, beat them down and sweep them away?

At first the disparity between these situations, not so much upon account of family or of property—the treasures of the mountains, hidden since creation he had discovered and let lie—but because of the youth and position of the woman compared to his own maturer years, his desperate experience, and his social withdrawal had reinforced his determination to live and love without a sign. But he had long since got beyond this. Had he been free he would have taken her like a viking of old, if he had to pluck her from amid a thousand swords and carry her to a beggar's hut which love would have turned to a palace. And she would have come with him on the same conditions.

Name Saved Him.

A man brought before the court in Biddeford, Me., on a charge of vagrancy, when asked by the judge to give his name, answered, "David Go home." The judge contracted his brows. "Your last name again?" he asked. "Go home," was the reply. "All right, go ahead," said the judge, "that's a new one on me."

SPACE TO SELL NOT TO GIVE AWAY

The Milwaukee Free Press publishes the following editorial concerning the giving away of newspaper space, and it just about coincides with the situation in a good many towns and cities besides Milwaukee. The Free Press says:

Advertising publicity is what a newspaper has to sell. It is as much a commodity marked with a price as the wares in a grocery or dry goods store. Yet thousands of citizens who would not think of asking a merchant to give them so much as a necktie, have no compunction in asking that an advertisement be given them by a newspaper. The thought does not even enter their heads that every inch of space so given, in addition to providing them with the most valuable kind of service, actually costs the paper in editorial labor, in composition, in metal, in ink, in printing, etc., a very definite sum of money. The newspapers are liberal in giving of its space to further the cause of philanthropic, public and other institutions, enterprises and causes where the object is non-commercial and conducive to the public welfare.

In return it expects only appreciation—appreciation of the fact that the press is giving its most costly commodity, a service so valuable that the beneficiaries could not afford to buy it and without which their institution, enterprise, or cause could not exist, a service which is always made at a sacrifice to the news columns and at actual expense. Papers expect recognition of the fact that other forms of advertising such as in halls, public places, bill posters, etc., must have compensation with few exceptions. It is the newspapers that give their wares free for the sake of public good.

Yet in the vast majority of cases this generous service is blissfully taken for granted and the paper's liberality abused. That which is purely a favor is accepted as a matter of course, and what should be requests are couched as demands.

In connection with the above The Informer is frequently asked to give publicity to some form of business as an item of news when it is an advertisement pure and simple. The editor never goes to a business man or otherwise and say "You have more articles than you can dispose of this week, so give me this or that because I have been a good customer of yours." On the other hand they come to us and want free space because they think we have more space than can be filled that week. We have advertising space to sell—that's where we make our living. Any item of news, however, we want for publication, and appreciate any turned in to us.

THE KITCHEN CABINET

WHEN we have nothing else that we can do for the good of mankind, and are so poor that we have nothing else that we can give, we can always and everywhere give kindness. Kindly sympathy in another's interests, kindly judgment of his efforts, honest pity for his mistakes and failures, sincere pleasure in his successes—these are always in our power if we are not too self-enamored to bestow them, and these will do so much to fill the days with sunshine and the future with radiant hope.

APPLE DISHES.

There is no sauce quite like the green apple sauce, which is prepared as soon as the apples are large enough to cook. The skins are tender, and so we leave them unpeeled, and sweeten them just before taking off. Many like to put the sauce through a sieve, before serving.

Fried Apples.—When the Duchess apple is about half grown they begin to be good for frying. Core them without peeling, cut in half inch slices and fry in hot fat; sprinkle generously with sugar and add a shake of salt and paprika. Turn carefully with the pancake turner to keep them in shape, as an extra vegetable.

Apple pie is too well known, except to mention. There is none excels it. When well made and served with cheese it is a popular pie. Apple pie a la mode is simply apple pie served with a spoonful of ice cream on top.

Fried Apples and Onions.—This is a most appetizing dish for those who enjoy onions. Cut up the apples as for stewing. Slice a few onions, a third as many as of apples, or just one for flavor. Fry the onion in the hot fat, add the apples, removing the onion before it gets too brown, or adding some water to cook them all together. Season with salt, and if the apples are sour, a generous measure of sugar. Serve as a garnish for pork chops or a very good filling for a cake, and one which keeps its flavor, is the following: Grate a good-sized apple, add it to the well-beaten white of an egg and a cup of powdered sugar. Beat until stiff. This makes a pretty dessert served with a thin custard poured around it.

The ways of serving apple in dishes is legion. As salad, a combination of diced apple, celery, nuts and salad dressing makes a dish most welcome and refreshing.

Apple sauce cake is one in which a cup of sifted apple sauce takes the place of eggs. A most satisfactory cake to keep.

TODAY is your day and mine, the only day we have, the day in which we play our part. What our part may signify in the great whole, we may not understand, but we are here to play it, and now is our time. This we know; it is a part of action, not winning. It is a part of love, not cynicism. It is for us to express love in terms of human helpfulness. This we know, for we have learned from sad experience that any other course of life leads toward weakness and misery. —David Starr Jordan.

WHAT TO HAVE FOR LUNCHEON.

As variety is the spice of life, we are always on the lookout for something new, or odd, or unusual in the eating line. There is no excuse for monotony in the summer months, when there are such good things from farm and garden.

Cheese Omelet.—Soak a cup of bread crumbs in two cupfuls of milk; add a pinch of soda, half a teaspoonful of salt, a pinch of cayenne and a teaspoonful of melted butter. Beat two eggs, add to the bread and milk and add a small cup of grated cheese. Bake in a hot oven until light brown. When one has a few pieces of leftover steak, cut in small pieces and add to a good-sized onion which has been fried in hot fat. Dredge the onion with flour before frying. Add a cup of tomatoes and sufficient water to keep from burning. Season with paprika and cook slowly two hours.

Golden Rod Eggs.—Prepare toast, cut in squares or circles. Cook a few eggs in the shell until hard; the number will depend upon the number to serve. Make a cup of rich white sauce by cooking together two tablespoonfuls each of butter and flour, adding the flour when the butter is bubbling hot. Then add a cup of milk or thin cream, a half teaspoonful of salt and a few dashes of paprika. Chop the whites of the eggs, add them to the sauce. Butter the toast and pour over the white sauce. Put the egg yolks through a ricer and sprinkle over the white sauce.

IF YOU and I, just you and I, should laugh instead of worry. If we should grow, just you and I, kinder and sweeter-hearted. Perhaps in some far-by-and-by a good time might be started; then what a happy world 't would be for you and I, for you and I.

WHAT TO DO WITH VEAL.

Veal, to be wholesome, should never be put on the market until six or eight weeks old. Younger meat is apt to produce serious disturbance in the digestive tract. Good veal may be told by its pinkish colored flesh and white fat. Veal should be thoroughly cooked, and being deficient in fat, pork or other fat should be supplied.

Veal Pie.—Cook until tender a portion of the leg or shoulder; cut the meat in bits, add a few slices of fat salt pork, add cream to cover. Season and put a cover of biscuits over the top and bake. A little onion adds to the flavor of this pie. Chicken pie may be pieced out very satisfactorily by cooking a piece of veal with the chicken. The flavor can hardly be distinguished from chicken.

Veal Birds.—Remove the bone and skin from thin slices of veal taken from the leg. Pound until a half-inch thick; cut in pieces an inch and a half by two and a half, each piece making a bird. Chop the trimmings of the meat, add a piece of fat salt pork, two or three small cubes of each piece or bird. Add equal parts of cracker crumbs moistened with egg, onion juice, lemon juice and seasoned with salt and pepper.

Spread this mixture over the pieces of meat, roll up and fasten with two tooth picks put in to resemble the legs of a bird. Brown in a little hot butter, cover with stock made from stewing the bones and bits of skin, and cook twenty minutes, or until tender. Serve with a white sauce poured around the birds.

The white sauce is made by covering the meat with cream after dredging well with flour.

Veal Loaf.—Put a knuckle of veal with a pound of the meat and one onion into boiling water and cook slowly until tender. Drain and chop the meat fine, season with salt and pepper. Garnish the bottom of the mold with hard cooked eggs, sliced, sprinkle with parsley and cover with a layer of the meat; repeat, then pour over the meat liquor reduced to a cupful. Press and chill.

I PRAY you, O excellent wife," says Emerson, "not to cumber yourself and me to get a rich dinner for this man or the woman who has alighted at our gate, nor yet a bed chamber made ready at too great a cost. These things, if they are curious in, they can get for a dollar at any village. But let this stranger, if he will, in your looks, in your accent and behavior, read your heart and earnestness, your thought and will, which he cannot buy at any price in any village or city; and which he may well travel fifty miles and dine sparsely and sleep hard in order to behold. Certainly let the board be spread and let the bed be dressed for the traveler; but let not the emphasis of hospitality lie in these things."

ICY DISHES.

During hot weather there is no more refreshing dessert or main course accompaniment than the ices and sherbets.

For a dinner of roast lamb, the following is excellent to accompany the meat:

Mint Sherbet.—Bruise the leaves of a bunch of fresh mint and pour over it in a large bowl a pint of boiling hot sugar syrup; add the juice of two lemons, the rind of one and a cup of shredded pineapple. Freeze. When half frozen, add the whites of two eggs beaten stiff. Freeze to the consistency of white snow.

Combination Sherbet.—For this one may use a cupful of two or three kinds of canned fruit juice, choosing those that blend well. A cup of raspberry juice from preserves and a cup of pineapple sirup is a good one to combine; add a teaspoonful of lemon juice and a pint of sirup made by boiling together five minutes a cup of sugar and a pint of water. When cold, add a teaspoonful of vanilla and mix all together. Freeze quite stiff and then add the white of an egg beaten stiff with a tablespoonful of powdered sugar.

Nellie Maxwell.

Recognized an Omen.
Apropos of the new third party, Clifford Pinchot said in Chicago:

"I'll tell you a story that is a good omen. A Bull Moose booster was walking through a railroad station with a Bull Moose banner on his arm when a crowd of Scotch immigrants gathered about him.

"Fucks, what's that?" said an old lady. "There's naething like that in Peebles."

"That's a moose, ma'am," said the banner bearer.

"Hoots!" she cried. "That beastie a moose?" And then, turning to her friends, she said, "Laddies, if this is an American moose, what must the rats out here be like!"

A Correction.

"We want a standard bearer—" began the impassioned orator. "Pardon me," interrupted the energetic candidate. "We've got standard bearers enough. What we want is more men to constitute the rank and file of the procession."

SMILES

NICE OF HIM.

"Would you like to get a ticket to the convention?"

"Sure."
"Would you care to take your wife?"
"I'd be delighted to have a chance to do so. She has never seen a big convention."

"Have you any friends you'd care to take?"

"Say, old man, this is very nice of you. I don't want to impose on your good nature, but there are three or four people I'd like mighty well to take. How did you manage to get them?"

"How did I manage to get what?"

"The tickets. I understand one has to have a mighty strong pull to even get one."

"Oh, I haven't any. I merely asked whether you'd care to go and take your friends, if you could. . . . Well, seeing that you insist, I will take a cigar—yes."

She Is Sarcastic.

"Wife, I want you to summer at Chigger farm."

"How can I go anywhere for the summer? I have no clothes."

"That's just the point. You can wear old clothes at Chigger farm. Old clothes are the thing."

"Old clothes are the thing, eh? Then for once in my life I can make a splurge. If old clothes are the thing I'll take along seven trunks of the oldest duds in the state."

Another Hope Blasted.

"Life is just one blamed disappointment after another."

"What's the matter now?"

"I had all arrangements made for a trip through the Yellowstone Park."

"Can't you go?"

"Yes, but my wife's finally made up her mind that she will go along. She thought at first it would be too hard a trip for her."

FOR THE SEASON ONLY.

Lulu—You were engaged to that fellow over there last year, weren't you?"

Anna—Yes; and if he hadn't made a fool of himself and tried to renew the acquaintance last winter, he could be engaged to me again this summer.

Cowardly.
The city's clocks were striking. Just as they've often done. The city's clocks were striking. And all were striking one.

She's One.
"I'd like to get a little runabout if I could afford one."
"I know how you could get one for the asking."
"How?"
"Ask our next-door neighbor's daughter to marry you."

Can't Get Away.
"I see that Holder isn't one of your bank's most reliable and entirely trusted."
"Why so?"
"He's been at his desk thirty years. I notice that it's always the trusted and reliable that go away to Canada."
—Browning's Magazine.

Deliberately Avoided.
"Why didn't you have more harmony in your convention?"
"We were afraid," replied Senator Sorghum, "that we might be considered capable of entering into one of these 'gentlemen's agreements' that have fallen under so much popular suspicion."

Well, Hardly.
Bill—I see New Jersey's legislature recently provided for the appointment of three experts in each of the state's 21 counties, to exterminate mosquitoes.

Jill—But, I'll bet these same experts have not yet thrown away any of their window screens or screen doors.

Out of Sight.
"How do you like that lot you bought in Binglehurst?"
"I haven't seen it yet."
"Why, I thought you had been out there several times?"
"So I have, but the blamed thing is still under water."

Sort of Corporation Lawyer.
Willie—Was Jonah a high priced lawyer, pa?
Father—What a question! Why? Willie—it seems the whale couldn't retain him.

OFF THE TRACK.

To add to Bunkerton's discomfiture in losing his way, he has now been brought to a standstill by the absolute impassability of the highway, and his temper, already sorely tried, finally gave way.

"What kind of people are you up here in this rotten old state?" he cried, addressing an old countryman who stood close by, inspecting his stranded car with curious eyes.

"I dunno," said the old man. "Baout the same ez most folks, I call 'em."

"Do you call this blankety blank scar on the face of nature a road?" roared Bunkerton.

"Not ez I knows on," returned the old man. "This here hain't the pike; it's Mose Whibley's trout stream run dry. I wondered what ye was drivin' up it for." —Harper's Weekly.

A CHEERING EFFECT.

Dinks—Hot weather doesn't appear to affect the doctor as in former years.

Winks—No, his uncle died and left him stock in the ice trust.

A Rare Bird.
There lives a man in our town Whose like you seldom meet. The bright remarks his children make He never does repeat.

Not Reciprocated.
"How many children have you?"
"Three. Two grown up daughters and a son in college."
"How proud you must be of them."
"I am, but somehow or other I don't seem to be able to act so they can bring themselves to feel proud of me."

In a Department Store.
"See here, my wife had a rib broken at your bargain counter just now."
"We will reset it, of course, in our surgical department," said the polite floorwalker. "And if you are contemplating any other operations, now is the time to take advantage of summer rates. We remove the appendix, for instance, for $19.99."

Marvelous.
"Quick! I want to show you something remarkable. Do you see that little woman across the lawn—the one with the pink gown?"
"Yes."
"Take a good look at her."
"She doesn't impress me as being remarkable in any way."
"Wait till I tell you about her. She isn't afraid that she has a cancer."

Talking for the Lungs.
Bill—The capacity of the normal and unrestricted lungs is said to be about 27.3 per cent. more than those which have been compressed by the corset.

Jill—That's strange, when you think how much more a woman gets out of her lungs than does a man.

Plenty of Poetry.
"There should be poetry in life."
"Well, we get it in street cars, on billboards, on soap wrappers, and on the breakfast food. What do you want?"

SURE THING.

She (quoting)—Death loves a shinning mark.

He—The doctor loves an easy mark.

The Grouch.
"Tis now the grouch with sneering air Decries the day because it's fair; And snarling at the cooling blast, Growls 'neath his breath, "It cannot last!"

Not Suited.
"I am afraid your friend will not care for a glass of water here."
"Why not, since he is thirsty?"
"Because this is soft water, and I understand he is a hard drinker."

The ONLOOKER

WILBUR D. NESBIT

AT THE GATES OF NIGHT

There are two gates that guard the Night:

The one where shadows creep, And lullabies come crooning low, Full-throated, soft and deep; Where twilight reaches forth her arms To all by Day oppressed, And lulls them into happiness, Serene upon her breast.

And from that gate, all dark and cool The night road stretches far, By palaces of sweet content, Where many dreamings are; Where blind may see, and dumb may speak,

And sad ones laugh and sing, Where hungered ones may drink and eat, The pauper be a king.

All through the Night the good road goes, O'er valley, plain and steep; Along its sides, in grandeur, rise The citadels of sleep. And many things there be that soothe And comfort us, and bless— But best of all, the blossom fair Of rich forgetfulness.

The other gate that guards the Night— The one that ends the way— Has trumpeters that loudly call Us forth into the day. And though we fear the foes of Day With bitterness and dread, We know that through the weary hours The first gate is ahead.

PECULIARITIES OF THE FAMOUS.

Queen Elizabeth wore a wig, but she seldom checked up on her grocery bills.

Marcus Aurelius was a successful author, but he never had his photograph taken with his index finger upon his cheek.

Marc Antony was a brilliant orator, but he never had to sit while the toastmaster took up half his time in the introduction.

Napoleon Bonaparte suffered from indigestion, but he took it out on his enemies and never told his symptoms to his friends.

Noah collected all the wild animals in the world, but he never made moving pictures of them and gave a refined and elevating Chautauqua lecture about the films.

Solomon was the wisest man of his time, but he never had a chance to tell anybody how to repair an automobile.

For Licking Them.
"Yes, sir," said the gentleman who had been reading up on hypnotism. "Yes, sir, it won't be long before the practice of mental science will have reached that point where the commander of an army can simply gaze at the opposing forces through his spy-glass, and will them into defeat."
"I presume," commented the mild-mannered person who was listening, "that he would use some sort of a 'lick telescope for that.'"

Eternal Problem Answered.

"If a ship," began the comedian with the rose-tinted beard, "is 100 feet long and 40 feet wide, and its masts are 100 feet high and the boat's in bowlegged, what does the capstan weigh?"

"It weighs the anchor," hoarsely shouted the audience, as it grabbed the benches to prevent itself rising en masse and doing violence to the thespians.

Took Slot Machine at Its Word.
A Kansas City woman recently took her two small daughters to make their first visit to her husband's people, living in a small Kansas town. Naturally she was anxious to make as favorable an impression as possible. So the two little people, on going on an errand to the depot, were cautioned to be on their very best behavior. To the mother's surprise, they returned vigorously chewing gum. As they had no money, she asked them where they got it.

"Oh," exclaimed the older one, "it said on the slot machine, 'Ask the agent for pennies,' so we did."

Accorded Full Title.
One of the New York representatives in congress tells of a social function in an assembly district political club on the East side, whereat the chairman of the entertainment committee acted as master of ceremonies.

The chairman was very busy introducing the newly-arrived members of the club to the guests, who included a number of municipal officers. The representative mentioned was presented in a way to halve his official honors with his wife, as "The Honorable and Mrs. Congressman Blank." Next came a couple who were not known to the master of ceremonies, but, after receiving the correct name in a whisper, he announced:

"Mr. and Mrs. Inspector of Hydrants, Faucets and Shopworks Casey." —Lippincott's.

IDEAS FOR HOME BUILDERS

BY WM. A. RADFORD.

Mr. William A. Radford will answer questions and give advice FREE OF COST on all subjects pertaining to the subject of building, for the readers of this paper. On account of his wide experience as Editor, Author and Manufacturer, he is, without doubt, the highest authority on all these subjects. Address all inquiries to William A. Radford, No. 178 West Jackson boulevard, Chicago, Ill., and only enclose two-cent stamp for reply.

The bungalow or single-story type of dwelling house has some special advantages and is coming into increasing favor. A cottage home of this type, 25 feet wide by 48 feet 6 inches long, is illustrated herewith. It is built without an attic, which saves expense in roof construction; and the low roof design fits the general style of the house better than a high roof could. It is a small affair when measured up against the ordinary house; but it contains more room and more conveniences than the orthodox five-room flat in a city, and is immensely superior when it comes to comfort.

A person never appreciates the value of a good cellar until he leaves a house that has one, and goes to live in a city flat where there is no cellar except an ice-box, and no room to store a pint of elder or a peck of potatoes. The house here shown is much better arranged than a flat, because you have light on all sides, and the bedrooms, as well as all other rooms, are light and airy—a great advantage in both comfort and health. "Be it ever so humble, there's no place like home," is a sentiment that applies in a general way to all small houses, but not especially to this one, because it is so attractive in appearance, so thoroughly well arranged, and so comfortable that the humble features are lost sight of entirely.

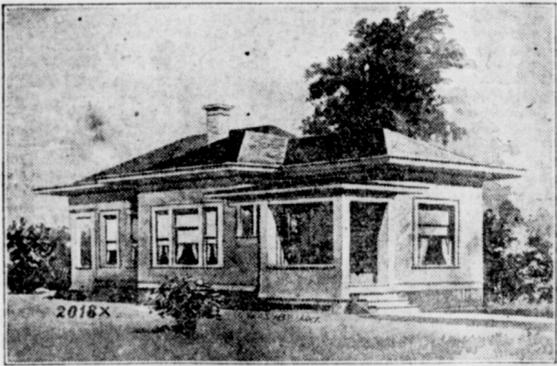

A good deal in a house depends on the layout or shape of the cellar. Many cellars are almost useless except to keep the house up away from the ground, to keep it dry, and to assist to some extent in keeping the lower floors warm. Some cellars are too dark and musty to be desirable, and a great many cellars are too contemptibly dirty for any purpose whatever. Much depends on the shape of the cellar to commence with, but more depends on the manner in which it is built and the care it afterwards re-

In building your own home, it pays to look after the building of the cellar. After the excavation is made, study out for yourself the peculiarities of soil, location and exposure. If the soil is inclined to dampness, have a course of 3-inch tile laid all around the bottom, outside of the wall, with an outlet at sufficient distance. The outlet may be simply a sink-hole filled with stone; but it must be lower than the cellar bottom, and give a good opportunity for any water that may accumulate to get away easily. If the ground is very damp, have another course of tile about two feet above or half-way towards the surface.

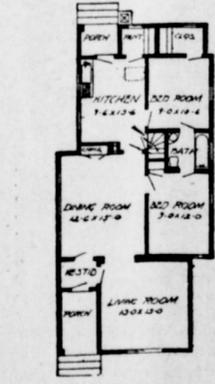

The use of cement mortar is a great preventive against dampness in the cellar, and the way the cellar floor is made has a great deal to do with it. You can make a cement bottom that is porous, or you can make it water-tight, just by the difference in the way the materials are mixed. It sometimes is desirable to have the back end of the cellar dry, and the front part somewhat moist for fruit and vegetables; but this depends upon what use you wish to make of the cellar.

Great changes have come in building small houses within a few years. Until recently the idea of hot and cold water and a bathroom in a house of this size was almost unheard of. In order to enjoy what are ordinarily called "modern conveniences," it was necessary to occupy a large house; but bathrooms, hot water in the kitchen and gas and electric lighting are growing more common all the time, and they are being installed in smaller houses every year. Because it is necessary or because a person prefers a small house, it is no longer necessary that they should do without the comforts of civilization. With the increase of small houses fitted with such luxuries, the health of the people has improved.

It is generally understood that cleanliness is a good thing for more reasons than one. Cleanliness, as long ago as Bible times, was recognized as one of the leading virtues; but the full benefits were not appreciated until the bacteriologists got to work with their microscopes and fercelves. All cellars should be dry; that is, there should be no perceptible dampness. When eatables are stored in a cellar, there should be no accumulation of mould. At the same time, a cellar should not be dusty dry. Generally, if a cellar is five feet underground, and the wall extends two or two and a half feet above grade, the cellar will be cool in summer, will not freeze in winter, and will be neither too dry nor too damp.

There are, however, local conditions which affect all cellars. Sometimes the ground is very damp, and in some places it is very dry. The site may be exposed to the north winds or southern sunshine, either of which will affect the general conditions and require attention when building. In a little house like this, the cellar becomes of more importance than where the house is larger, because you want the cellar for storage. It will be used for a great many purposes, where a cellar in a large house would be neglected.

reted out a whole lot of mischievous germs that were making human life miserable. Cleanliness cannot be maintained without hot water and a reasonably warm atmosphere. This is one reason why a furnace and running hot water are so valuable in a house.

These things do not necessarily cost a great deal more when you are building. There is a little additional expense, of course; but it is so small when weighed against the many benefits to be derived, that the extra cost is not worth considering. When you build, have all the modern improvements you can get your hands on. If you can't have electric light and gas at once, you can put in the pipes and wires. You can have hot water under pressure if you want it, and there is no excuse for not having a well-equipped bathroom. It is better to do without a parlor than to leave out the bathroom.

An Accepted Invitation.
The Austrian humorous writer of the nineteenth century, M. G. Saphir, was as ready with his tongue as with his pen, as the following anecdotes will show: Among his friends was a Mme. Lammel, who was renowned for her stinginess. Although she loved to have people of culture at her table, she would not open her purse enough to make that table attractive.

Once, after a particularly poor and scanty dinner, Mme. Lammel asked her guest:
"And when, my dear Saphir, would you dine with me again?"
Saphir heaved a hungry sigh. "At once."—Youth's Companion.

HARD FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

It's hard enough to keep house if in perfect health, but a woman who is weak, tired and suffering all of the time with an aching back has a heavy burden to carry. Any woman in this condition has good cause to suspect kidney trouble, especially if the kidney action seems disordered at all. Doan's Kidney Pills have cured thousands of women suffering in this way. It is the best recommended special kidney remedy.

Got His Answer.
When Oscar Wilde came to the United States to lecture on aesthetics in his highly aesthetic velvet costumes—and incidentally to prepare the public mind for the proper appreciation of Gilbert and Sullivan's "Patience," in which the aesthetic movement was held up to ridicule—he used to complain that America was very uninteresting since it had "no antiquities and no curiosities." But he ventured on this disparagement once too often, for in the course of his travels he uttered it to the American Girl, and she replied with the demure depravity of candid innocence that this was not quite a fair reproach, since "we shall have the antiquities in time, and we are already importing the curiosities."

Child's Fear of the Dark.
If mothers notice that the brains of their little ones conjure up uncanny sights and thoughts from the shadows of a room more or less dark, let the light burn brightly. To force a child to become accustomed to the darkness is a grave error, if its nervous system is so organized that this forcing is productive of a fright.

The nervous system of a child is a very susceptible organization and the deleterious impressions made upon it will often make their influence felt throughout its whole after life. If the child asks for a light under such circumstances do not refuse it.

Matter of Justice.
Where shall justice begin, with those who have power or with those who suffer wrong? If exact and ideal justice were done, the weak would make an effort to give to the strong all that is their due, and the strong would try to put their affairs in order so that no just cause of complaint should exist anywhere. The unhappy element in the relations of the strong and the weak is that both are thinking too much about exacting justice and not enough about doing that which is just and right. "Pay what thou owest" is the cry most often heard. "Give me that which is my due, then I will pay you what I owe."

Kind Man.
A local philanthropist ordered a fan for himself, a nice electric buzzer. He also took the key out of the door so that some of the air could go through the keyhole into the adjoining room, where there are eight perishing clerks.

Ideals.
"What is your idea of a perfect husband?"
"One with about a million, who would lose no time in making me a merry widow."

A woman can't feed a man so much taffy that it will spoil his appetite for it.

If your appetite is not what it should be perhaps Malaria is developing. It affects the whole system. OXIDINE will clear away the germs, rid you of Malaria and generally improve your condition.

There are lots of funny things to be seen in this world, and among them is a fat woman sitting on a little piano stool.

TO DRIVE OUT MALARIA AND BUILD UP THE SYSTEM
Take the Standard Giver's Taster's Chill Tonic. You know what you are taking. The formula is plainly printed on every bottle, showing it is simply Quinine and Iron in a tasteless form, and the most effective form. For grown people and children, 50 cents.

Even the man who is his own worst enemy is always ready to forgive himself.

Regular practicing physicians recommend and prescribe OXIDINE for Malaria, because it is a proven remedy by years of experience. Keep a bottle in the medicine chest and administer at first sign of Chills and Fever.

Some men are dumb because their wives never give them a chance to talk.

The Paxton Toilet Co. of Boston, Mass., will send a large trial box of Paxtine Antiseptic, a delightful cleansing and germicidal toilet preparation, to any woman, free, upon request.

Unmanageable.
She—Can you manage a typewriter?
He—No. I married one.

WILLING HE SHOULD GO FAR

One Man to Have Kid Transferred, but He May Have Had a Grouch.

"What do you think of this scheme of having the countries exchange children?" asked the Sewickley man.

"I don't think anything about it," said the Wilkinsburg man. "What is the idea?"

"An English family, for instance, exchanges children for a couple of years with a German family. References are first exchanged, and all sorts of things."

"I see."
"Thus both sets of children get a chance to learn another language and get acquainted with another country. It's quite a scheme."

"It's an elegant scheme," declared the Wilkinsburg man. "My neighbors have a kid that I would like to see exchanged with some family in Siberia."

Mother's Lingual Attainment.

The mother of a little boy in Kansas City, Kan., recites negro dialect stories charmingly. Her small son is quite proud of her accomplishment and frequently boasts of it. One day recently, when some of his playmates were venturing the achievements of their several mothers, the little boy braggingly remarked:

"My mother is smarter than any of yours; she can talk two languages."
"What are they?" demanded his companions.

"White and colored."

Job Not Satisfactory.

"I'm a self-made man," said the proud individual.

"Well, you are all right except as to your head," commented the listener.

"How's that?"

"The part you talk with is too big for the part you think with."

GROUND ITCH (THE CAUSE OF HOOKWORM) CURED

Also sweet sleep and quick relief from that itching, burning sensation by using Tetterine, a wonderful remedy for eczema, tetter, ground itch, erysipelas, dandruff and all other forms of skin diseases. It keeps the skin healthy. Mrs. Thomas Thompson of Clarksville, Ga., writes: "I suffered 15 years with tormenting eczema; had the best doctors to prescribe; but nothing did me any good until I got Tetterine. It cured me. I am so thankful." Thousands of others can testify to similar cures.

Tetterine at drugstores or by mail for 50c. by J. T. Shuptrine, Savannah, Ga.

When a woman is engaged they look at each other's virtue with magnifying glasses, which are thrown aside on their wedding day.

As a summer tonic there is no medicine that quite compares with OXIDINE. It not only builds up the system, but taken regularly, prevents Malaria. Regular or Tasteless formula at Drugists.

Even a homely man is apt to boast of how the women run after him.

The Other Way 'Round.

A good little story, long current in England, is now just gaining American circulation. It has for leading characters Rudyard Kipling and Dorothy Drew, Mr. Gladstone's little grandchild. Kipling was visiting Hawarden and, being fond of children, devoted himself to little Miss Dorothy until her anxious mother expressed the hope that the child had not been wearing the great author.

"Oh, no, mamma," spoke up Dorothy, before any one else had a chance to say anything, "but you have no idea how Mr. Kipling has been wearing me!"

BAD CASE OF HEMORRHOIDS

Okalona, Ark.—"I had a bad case of itching and burning piles, and tried many remedies without relief. I could not sleep nor rest at night. The affected parts were irritated, also inflamed, and my family physician said I would have to undergo an operation.

"I bathed good with Cuticura Soap in pure water about fifteen minutes, then I applied the Cuticura Ointment. I did this four times a day for two weeks, then three times a day for another week, and in the space of three weeks I was cured sound and well. One box of Cuticura Ointment with Cuticura Soap cured my case of piles of six years' standing. When I commenced to use the Cuticura Soap and the Cuticura Ointment, I only weighed one hundred and twenty-eight pounds. Now I weigh one hundred and eighty-eight pounds." (Signed) Floyd Welch, Dec. 11, 1911.

Many people think it strange that I am not broken down with hard work and the care of my family, but I tell them of my good friend, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and that there will be no backache and bearing down pains for them if they will take it as I have. I am scarcely ever without it in the house.

"I will say also that I think there is no better medicine to be found for young girls. My eldest daughter has taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for painful periods and irregularity, and it has helped her.

A Big Proposition to Feed the Army with the Robinson Circus

With the Yankee Robinson circus and Texas Bill Wild West there are two thousand five hundred meal to get every day. This enormous task is under the charge of Capt. W. A. Hundley, who has had twenty five year's experience with shows of greater character. He has breakfast for this army ready at seven in the morning, has lunch ready at noon and at five in the evening has dinner ready for the tired hungry people of the circus and Wild West. This establishment is then packed away and loaded on the cars and at seven o'clock next morning, over one hundred miles away, the captain is again serving breakfast to the big army. SOMETHING ABOUT THIS COUNTRY

The country surrounding Hedley is without question one of the most productive farming sections in the State. There has not been anything near a failure in crops the past two or three years when other parts of the country had almost total crop failures, this section has fine cotton and feed crops. This not being a feed farming country alone makes it more sure of producing some money crop each year.

Hedley is composed of live, entergetic and enterprising people who are wide awake to any thing that will help the town. We have a two-story brick school building of which a town of three thousand inhabitants might be proud; constructed at the cost $8,000; has its own system of water-works and being entirely sanitary. The Baptist, Methodist, Presbyterian and Christian churches are all well represented here. The Presbyterians have a nice church house, the church party Baptist are building a splendid church, and the Methodist are building a brick church with a basement. The town is strictly prohibition, having no saloons and wanting none. The following fraternal orders have good representation here: A. F. & A. M., I. O. O. F., W. O. W. and M. W. A.
