LIVE AT HOME IN DONLEY COUNTY

The Farmers Union is inaugurating a "Live at Home" campaign among the Texas farmers. Peter Radford, President of the Union, in discussing the subject said: "There is no reason why a farmer should buy a dollar's worth of meat during the year, but from such information as I am able to obtain, the farmers of Texas buy $26,000,000 of pork and its products per annum, to say nothing of other kinds of meats and supplies purchased that should be raised on the farm. No farmer can afford to buy a thing he can raise, no matter how cheap it may be."

According to government estimates, the per capita consumption of pork and its products per annum is 100 pounds and the Federal Census Reports on hogs marketed and slaughtered in each county, give a reliable basis for production by counties.

The report shows Donley county produces 1,036,200 pounds of pork and consumes 523,400 pounds per annum.

The Farmers' Union is asking that the farmers reduce the cotton acreage and "plant" hogs, raise more corn, milo maize, build silos and feed and fatten livestock on the farm and live at home the year round.

Donley is one of the few Texas counties that produce enough pork for home consumption.

SCHOOL PROGRAM WAS EXCELLENT

The entertainment at the school auditorium Tuesday night by Miss Calloway and pupils was well attended and highly enjoyed. The play "Up To Freddie" was well rendered. Prof. Hufstetler made a nice speech in presenting a medal to Golden Masterson given by Miss Calloway for the best progress in music. Ima Moreman and Clara Jones were almost tied for second place. The proceeds of the entertainment amounted to about $20 and a part went toward fixing up the stage, which is now nicely arranged. The balance to the school library.

In the district court at Clarendon last week Dr. Brown of Vernon was tried for murder, and found not guilty. P. W. Cash and A. B. Cloninger were two Hedley men on the jury.

Miss Floy Simmons returned home Monday night from Lockney where she has been attending school. Her sister, Miss Mayme, entertained a crowd of young folks Tuesday in honor of Miss Floy's return.

BAPTIST LADIES AID

The Ladies Aid will meet at the Baptist church the second Monday afternoon at 2:30 p. m. Scripture reading, Matt. 23. Subject for discussion, The doctrine of Trinity. Select Reading, Miss Lela Waldron.

HEDLEY CITIZENS ROYALLY ENTERTAIN CONFERENCE

ALSO LET THEM KNOW HEDLEY IS SOME TOWN HERSELF

The Clarendon District Conference and Sunday School Institute held here from Friday to Monday evening was largely attended by both local and visiting people, and was a source of much inspiration.

Delegates began arriving Thursday evening and continued to come until the last day. And the visitors to our city during the conference numbered about 150. The Institute was held Friday led by Rev. Dodson of Memphis and many interesting talks were made.

The opening sermon of the Conference was preached Friday night by Rev. Pope of Shamrock.

Saturday morning Presiding Elder Story opened Conference with a splendid talk. Following the seating of delegates our townsman D. C. Moore in his happy and witty way captured the entire Conference in his opening address. It was certainly a treat and surpassed any welcome address ever delivered in Hedley. The Presiding Elder responded in the same manner.

Rev. Griswold of Childress preached a fine sermon Saturday morning and Rev. Dodson another good sermon that night. Saturday afternoon the Mission ladies gave an informal reception to all visitors in the basement and served punch.

Sunday morning Rev. Bowman of Wellington preached at the Presbyterian church and Rev. Young of Dallas at the M. E. church. That afternoon Rev. Palmer of Wheeler preached; then at night Rev. Eldridge of Wellington preached at the Presbyterian church and Dr. Slover of Clarendon College at the M. E. church. Rev. Riley of Clarendon College preached Monday morning.

Dinner and supper were served Sunday in the basement by a number of our people. McLean was chosen as the next place of meeting. From the many expressions of praise from the visitors we feel sure they were well pleased with the Conference and the treatment received at the hands of Hedley people.

In fact, Hedley has reason to feel proud of having entertained her guests so royally.

They were met at the train by autos and carried to the homes assigned them. Showing that not only were their homes open to them, but conveyances were also at their services.

There were homes left after all delegates had been assigned, and each and every citizen took it upon himself to see that they were properly entertained while in our midst. And the advertising Hedley did was not an inconsiderable amount. All found our town on the map and far better than they expected to find. Several were so favorably impressed that they are likely to move here and some go into business.

Hedley put herself on the map in still another way Sunday. Rev. Young of Dallas took subscriptions for the Southern Methodist University and the Conference people subscribed $2750, and $1400 of it was by the local people.

One thing the Informer is proud of and that is the way our people stand together and do their best to make anything a success that is attempted. The way they worked in entertaining the Conference goes to show that by all pulling together it is an easy matter to do big things and not make it a hard task for any. It makes one glad to live in such a community, and gives us inspiration toward working for the public good, and with better spirit we can watch Hedley grow.

RESOLUTIONS

Resolved, Firstly, that the heartfelt thanks of the Clarendon District Conference are hereby tendered to the pastor and people of Hedley for the magnificent Christian hospitality and abundant courtesy with which they have entertained us.

Resolved, Secondly, that we greatly appreciate the magnificent response given to the appeal for Southern Methodist University by the people of Hedley amounting to $1400, which is more than we had a right to expect since they had just built such a beautiful church.

Resolved, Thirdly, that we express our appreciation of the informal reception given to the Conference Saturday afternoon by the ladies of this church and the sumptuous dinner provided on Sunday.

Resolved, Fourthly, that we commend Brother Bryant for his systematic handling of the crowd of visitors and also for his untiring efforts for our comfort and pleasure.

Resolved, Fifthly, that we pray the blessings of God upon the people of Hedley and sincerely hope that we may meet everyone of them in our Father's home on high.

Respectfully submitted,
Resolution Committee.

THANKS BY PASTOR

To the people of Hedley who took and promised to take delegates during the District Conference I wish, as pastor of the Methodist church, to express my greatest appreciation to you for your royal entertainment of the delegates, and I want to thank those who did not have any delegates, who agreed to take them just the same as those who had them, for it was necessary that I hold some homes in reserve in case others came.

I also wish to thank the auto owners who so kindly carried the delegates from the trains to the homes assigned them.

May the Great Father above reward you for your work done in the name of the Lord.

G. H. Bryant, Pastor.

SUPPOSE

Suppose the one-fourth of twenty was three, what would one-third of ten be?

If you can't solve this, write us for free solution, and then suppose again that you were one of our graduates who are leaving every week now for good positions, would your station in life be better or worse?

We sent two young lady graduates last week to Dallas, one as Bookkeeper, and one as Stenographer--both going to firms who were already using our graduates. Others were placed in good positions in Bowie, Fort Worth, Clarendon, Clinton, Okla., Stringtown, Okla., and other places. Does this not prove to you that we DO THINGS, while other colleges make promises? We have never yet had a graduate "turned down" on account of incompetency.

Our town has no negroes or saloons, and the best of private board and room can be had here at from $11 to $12.50 per calendar month. Every department of our college is supplied with electric fans for the comfort of students during the summer

MORE HEDLEY IMPROVEMENTS

And Hedley continues to grow. Can't keep a good town down. The following improvements were started this week:

Mrs. Dunn is having a nice residence built for rent on northeast corner of block on which J. W. Bond lives.

J. W. Reeves is building a dwelling which he is to occupy, on the acreage he bought of D. W. Williams.

R. H. Jones cut his store building in two and had Kerley & Latimer move them to lots in east part of town, and will fix them up for rental dwellings.

Watch Hedley grow.

CLARENDON PEOPLE GIVE SPLENDID PROGRAM HERE LAST EVE

Miss Randle could not fill her date here Thursday night, having been called to the bedside of her mother. The ladies not wanting to disappoint the public, secured Paul P. Steed, reader; A. L. Larson, violinist; Miss Marquis, accompanist, all of Clarendon to fill the date. Which they did to the satisfaction of a small but appreciative audience. Paul Steed is an excellent reader and is at home on the stage. A. L. Larson holds rank with leading violinists of Texas. Miss Marquis is the piano teacher at Clarendon College and as an accompanist there is no better.

Our objection to the money trust is that it doesn't trust us.

The auto is making this a happier world—except for pedestrians.

Common sense among the common people is essential to a republic.

However, as for hobbie skirted woman, how can she expect to "win in a walk?"

That Boston girl who has never been kissed is probably her own explanation.

Riceless weddings are the proper caper. This makes it more enjoyable to get married.

The world is divided into two classes—those who have automobiles and those who wish them.

BIDDING DEFIANCE TO RAIN FACE POWDER OPENLY USED

Waterproof Materials Light and Neat, and Keep Off the Too Insistent Moisture.

There are all sorts of waterproof goods. Some perform the functions allotted to them well, while others are only rain-proof in a light shower. It requires more than waterproof material to resist the gusts of rain which are blown against one in an open car. The very force of the rain seems to drive it through the thickest of stuffs. The best protection in such a storm is the good, old-fashioned sou'wester which the fishermen wear when the sea is in an angry mood. The modern interpretation of the oilskin of the fisherman is a fabric as light and as subtle as silk. It comes in fascinating browns and blues and purples, and is so light in weight that it can easily be slipped over the top coat. It is a very comforting thought to know that one of these coats, in its accompanying envelope, is stowed away in the motor for the unexpected storm. To accompany this coat, there is a cap which is almost a replica of the genuine sou'wester. This may be fastened so that the neck is well protected.

NEW SPRING DRESS

Dress of olive green broadcloth with silk waist in the same shade and yoke of white silk. The skirt shows the straight tailored lines with panel of tuck.

Strikingly New Acquisitions Are Provided for the Really Up-to-Date Toilet Table.

This is a period of paint, powder and perfume; society belle and "chorus lady" alike are frank about its use. Today we complete our toilette with a spray from an atomizer filled with Bacchanale; tomorrow we will adopt Cyclamen. The bouquet odors such as Ambre antique, Mimosa or Djei Kiss are preferred at present, but the popularity of a special perfume like the flowers from which it takes its fragrance, is short lived. Carolina White extract has eclipsed the extracts named for the other notable woman, namely, Mary Garden and Sarah Bernhardt. The violet odor is always popular. It is said Queen Mary of England never uses anything else in extract, toilet water, soap, sachet or bath salt. The rose, both the Jacqueminot and the white, is always well liked.

Gold-colored or Oriental powder as it is called is strikingly new. The violet, purple and bright vermilion tints have been seen before, but gold never. Color in rouge has deepened. The brunette rouge which is so much affected is almost a purple red. Powder pomponettes, consisting of tiny puffs of cotton spread with powder in the rose blanche or rochele shades, and are sealed in individual tissue envelopes. A hundred of these little jackets are arranged in a French wall-paper box.

The moist lip-stick is new. It is a vegetable compound and remains on the lips until removed, unlike the lip-stick of red cream which is soon absorbed.

Kitchen Aprons.

Aprons for wear in the kitchen should be all enveloping. They can be made of gingham, percale or white lawn, but however made they should completely cover the skirt, and should have a large bib. A ruffle about the bottom of the apron protects the hem of the dress, as it catches and wards off anything which is spilled or dropped.

Kitchen aprons need not be unattractive because they are big and serviceable. They can be made of white self-figured percale or madras, edged with blue or pink or any other color. A folded bias lawn band can be folded over the edges of the apron like a binding, or scalloping braid, which is sold in many colors and styles, can be stitched under a neatly turned hem.

Hot-Water Remedy.

Over-tired women who retire at night or lie down for a few minutes during the afternoon vainly seeking sleep, which refuses to come, should try the hot-water remedy. Simply bathe the face and temples, the wrists and behind the ears with water as hot as can be borne. This will often induce sleep.

A glassful of hot water with a lump of sugar and a few drops of lemon juice added is a favorite "soothing" drink of Frenchwomen, and helps to who sleep. It often takes the place of tea in the Frenchwoman's dietary.

Be American and Forget Royal Blood

By JAMES HAMMILL, Chicago

"Royal blood in my veins!" How nice it sounds! "I am descended from royalty!" Soothing to the senses of him who lulls himself into a state of blissful happiness over the thought of his great descent; for great, indeed, it is. To such as these the world moves backward, for do they not coddle themselves with the contemplation of their great, blue-blooded, royal ancestors? Personally, we should much dislike to admit the descent, for, comparing the conditions of now and then, physical and moral, we should rather rejoice over our ascent from anything royal of the middle ages.

Many crimes have been justified by the doctrine that "the king can do no wrong." I am glad to admit that so far as I know there is no royal lineage in my family. I claim no interest by descent in the mountebank splendor of some ancient clan or principality, which at best could furnish but a scant following for a Chicago alderman. If I should find an ancestor to have been ruler of one of the larger courts, the habits of the middle ages would make me loath to accept the distinction, diluted though it is by 1,000 intermarriages, unless a signed, sealed and acknowledged certificate of decent modern morality went with it in addition to the hallmark of quality.

While I repudiate any royal distinction, I do claim the royal blue blood of American citizenship, the grandest of all privileges, which places within our grasp opportunities so great that the pomp and circumstance of medieval royalty pale into insignificance beside it.

Read if you will the unexpurgated historical tales of the middle ages, which deal almost exclusively with intrigues, crimes and outrages of the titled classes, and tell us honestly why one of royal descent is proud of his lineage. Behold the profligacy of the French court, the most glittering and gorgeous that ever surrounded a throne! Should one be proud to feel the same vicious instincts in him through ancestral privilege?

I would rather trace my ancestry to the great unlettered, unvarnished, undeveloped plebeian stock, which contained the seed of future moral manhood and intelligence, unclouded by the diseased mentality of royalty, and feel that my children were marching onward and upward to that high goal which is negated by every pretense of royalty. The kings of today are those who come unheralded.

Be American, and, if your ancestry has been clouded by royal blood, forget it!

"Royal blood in my veins!" How nice it sounds! "I am descended from royalty!" Soothing to the senses of him who lulls himself into a state of blissful happiness over the thought of his great descent; for great, indeed, it is. To such as these the world moves backward, for do they not coddle themselves with the contemplation of their great, blue-blooded, royal ancestors? Personally, we should much dislike to admit the descent, for, comparing the conditions of now and then, physical and moral, we should rather rejoice over our ascent from anything royal of the middle ages.

GIRL SUFFERED TERRIBLY

At Regular Intervals—Says Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound completely cured her.

Adrian, Texas.—"I take pleasure in adding my testimonial to the great list and hope that it will be of interest to suffering women. For four years I suffered untold agonies at regular intervals. Such pains and cramps, severe chills and sickness at stomach, then finally hemorrhages until I would be nearly blind. I had five doctors and none of them could do more than relieve me for a time.

"I saw your advertisement in a paper and decided to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. I took seven boxes of it and used two bottles of the Sanative Wash, and I am completely cured of my trouble. When I began taking the Compound I only weighed ninety-six pounds and now I weigh one hundred and twenty-six pounds. If anyone wishes to address me in person I will cheerfully answer all letters, as I cannot speak too highly of the Pinkham remedies."—Miss JESSIE MARSH, Adrian, Texas.

Hundreds of such letters expressing gratitude for the good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has accomplished are constantly being received, proving the reliability of this grand old remedy. If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

Disproved the Charge.

It is a sharp emergency that can catch Pat, even when he is ignorant and ragged. An Irishman whose garments were in tatters was brought before a magistrate on the charge that he was a vagrant, with no visible means of support. Pat drew from the pocket of his torn coat a loaf of bread, the half of a dry codfish and several cold potatoes. These he spread upon the stand before him and coolly asked: "What do you think of them, yer honor? Shure, an' isn't them visible means of support?"

OFTEN SO.

Plumber Helps State Board of Health

By Herbert L. Owens, M. D., Chicago

The master plumber's article of recent date on the subject of having a member of his craft on the state board of health is well worthy of consideration by all medical men, as well as by the general public. There is today urgent need of the services of a practical sanitarian on our state board. The physicians who compose the state health body can cure disease and give advice as to its prevention. Here their capacity is unquestioned. But what real, practical knowledge have they, as members of a state health body, of the best methods of preventing disease through the medium of scientific schemes of sewage disposal and sanitary plumbing? Very little, I dare say.

The need, then, is this: A master plumber or a practical sanitary engineer should be a member of the state board of health and should give the doctors his advice as to ways and means of conserving the public health through the best system of sanitation as regards the water we drink and the proper disposal of waste matter.

In Ohio there is a state inspector of plumbing and he looks after the public health very well, indeed. In Illinois we have no state inspector of plumbing or any state supervision of matters concerning sanitary engineering. If we can't have a state inspector we should at least be allowed a master plumber on the state board of health. This would help matters a good deal.

Making Man More Humane to Horse

By Vernon Dudderidge, Chicago

Eventually, by the measured tread of progress, the horse will be no more—it will have outlived its usefulness and disappeared. Our noble friend has been attached to us so closely for years that he has become like us; he reflects our mental states, and that is why we do not like to see him ill treated.

We all have noticed animals who have been attached to persons of strong individuality, how they reflect their natures and become like them. There is that indescribable resemblance that makes us exclaim: "Well if that animal doesn't look like that man!"

It is well known that a man who owns and loves animals has a tender heart. There is something in his makeup that is lacking in the man who uses every ounce of the life energy in an animal for his own selfish ends and fumes and swears and frets when the animal falls in the street and even begrudges the time lost.

But the human race is reaching the point where it can no longer stand by and see the horse abused. When all cruelty to horses is done away with mankind will have climbed another step on the ladder of progress.

Let us speed the coming of that day until the whole race gets the idea. Then we shall all have a clear conscience, knowing that, although we treated our friend roughly at times during his long stay, yet he left us with a glad heart fully recompensed for his sufferings.

Mutual Benefits Gained by Saturday Holiday

By THEODORE P. GIBSON, Baltimore, Md.

We may try to find some good reason why more employers do not adopt such a worthy custom as the closing of business at noon on Saturday. Some employers perhaps say that when they furnish steady employment their employes should be satisfied. They may reason that the employes do not have to stand the brunt of carrying on the business, are not worried about the raising of money to meet the payroll and other expenses or rack their brains to find methods to meet competition successfully.

This is in a measure true, but it does not prove that their working the full day Saturday will relieve the employer of any of the burdens which are common to any business. I believe the cases are very rare, indeed, where it can be shown that any great loss is occasioned by closing at noon on Saturday.

On the contrary, it is plain that much can be gained in things essential to the welfare of the business. The granting of such little courtesies to employes promotes a spirit of respect, good will and a more intelligent interest in the business.

Surely the thousands of the most progressive business men who have shown an interest in the welfare of their employes by granting them this favor bear an eloquent testimony to the mutual benefits derived therefrom.

"The Memory Lingers"

JEALOUSY— ITS CAUSE AND CURE

RITA REESE, in the New York Press
The cause of jealousy—and the cure for jealousy! Which is a most timely subject for discussion, coming along in a season when green things are budding.

Not that one would deliberately class jealousy with the tender, wholesome, healthy green things of the field. Jealousy is a green that arises from a totally different source, and it is related to the tonic green things of the forest only as a brackish stream heavily coated with miasmatic green scum is—it just happened there!

For jealousy is a green scum, and it is miasmatic and it arises from a mind diseased, an imagination disordered—but where—you are asking, does the love come in?

The love that is supposed to go arm in arm with the green-eyed monster, Jealousy?

We—oh, I'm not so sure that jealousy is related even by a step connection of marriage to True Love.

Maybe he is. There are many poets who claim that there can be no true love without its dread contemporary, Jealousy.

Do you believe that? I don't. And this is the reason I am incredulous.

I believe in instinctive things, in intuitions and deep feelings, forebodings, if you will—warnings—maybe.

And if you've ever noticed little blue-eyed True Love when Jealousy turns the corner you must have remarked on how the Cupid baby was frightened. Nay, more than frightened. Literally scared to death!

True Love had a feeling that a rabbit or a vicious reptile was creeping over the grave that soon would be his. Love—that best kind of love, the real thing in love—doesn't hang around where Jealousy loafs. Not on your life. When green-eyed Jealousy comes in at the door—

Maybe you've heard it was Poverty—but, believe me, that isn't True Love. He never did flee from lack of gold. But when green-eyed Jealousy stalks in at the door Cupid and True Love scuttle out of the window or up the chimney—anywhere—anywhere to get out of the reach of the vicious intruder.

Each Man Kills the Thing He Loves. Jealousy comes of the desire to fill the frame—the frame that holds the life of the beloved. You would like for her to see only you. You are her love and because you love her with such a surpassing devotion you resent every interest, no matter how trivial it may be and how harmless, that would distract one instant her attention from you!

And you call that love! I call it selfishness carried to the ninth degree, and I challenge anyone to prove it otherwise.

"Each man kills the thing he loves," the poet sings. And most of them murder it by jealousy.

Jealousy is a survival of the ages when our lovers were cave men and we were women who had to be taken by stealth and cunning and brute strength. True enough there are those of us now who adore these same traits in our lovers when they come a-wooing. But once we are won we come to see the horror of having to live with a creature dominated by these same qualities.

Jealousy is a sinister and evil power and once it takes possession of a man's brain it is deadly. It drives out his reason and enthrones a demon which is itself, and it knows no sober moments, neither does it understand nor strive to comprehend anything that is normal or unrelated to its own egotistical self-importance.

There!—you see jealousy unveiled! Not as love, but as the something furthest removed from true affection.

A something which the ones who know tremble before as the most insidious enemy true love meets in the going to the heaven toward which all true lovers are journeying.

Since love, then, you are asking, is not related to jealousy; moreover, since jealousy is a menace to love, how shall you set about eliminating the dread monster from your life?

To be more specific, I will tell you about a man who has written to ask my advice. His case covers exactly the situation in many other cases.

He tells me that he married a girl who had been much admired and sought after. There were many rivals to him; several of these were richer and more prominent than he was. But he won out and married the girl and they were very happy for a while.

Then he grew suspicious. Not that there was really anything definite to base his suspicions on, but he knew that his wife had met some of her former admirers here and there, and he had observed that she was pleased with the meeting. That she seemed to enjoy seeing them.

Right here let me say the man gave himself away as a profoundly selfish person. Why shouldn't his wife enjoy meeting her old friends, whether they were men or women? Because she happened to be married to him, why should that kill all her interest in life outside of him?

Really Form of Insanity. That's the best word to use to describe Jealousy. It is evil and vicious and sinister—related as it is to darkness and distrust and ingrowing sus-icion. All jealousy is born of suspicion, and suspicion is related to lying—and once you get a thing down to that foundation there is no good left in it.

But Doubt—some one asks—isn't it human to doubt—to doubt everything—even Love.

Maybe it is, but the really big nature always in the end puts Doubt to rout.

Who never has suffered, he has lived but half.

Who never failed, he never strove or sought.

Who never wept is stranger to a laugh.

And he who never doubted never thought.

Ah, but doubt isn't related to the petty jealousy that is supposed to be an attendant on love. Doubt is bigger than Jealousy, and it is more honest. Jealousy is a despicable thing, because it slinks and attacks one from the rear. Doubt walks up and lands one a blow straight out from his shoulder and between the eyes. That's all right, the square way to fight, while Jealousy with a keen-pointed blade creeps up and plants his venomous weapon deep in the back of the one he would lay low.

What is the cause of jealousy? Distrust, to be sure—and lack of faith and too little love—

Yes, I knew you'd interrupt me to tell me I am mistaken. You think you are jealous because your love is such a great love. I say you are jealous because your love is such a pusillanimous little love!

Perfect love casteth out fear—and fear—even you wouldn't dare deny that fear is all twined around and mixed up with jealousy.

Jealousy is three-fourths fear. Fear that you can't hold the love of your beloved.

Fear that she will see some one who will appeal to her as you have never appealed.

Fear that she will give some of the love, the interest she now feels in you—to some one else.

Not necessarily a rival. No, indeed. I've seen a man get mad enough to murder every dog in Christendom because his wife happened to show her affection for a tiny toy dog.

You've seen manifestations of jealousy quite as petty and as ridiculous. And they call this love!

If we knew the real name of it I wonder if any of us would have the face to call it right out by its name. I rather think we wouldn't—and for this reason. It would show up too many members of the human race as being not far removed from the beasts of the field.

Jealousy Born of Suspicion.

This was the beginning. He goes on. It would seem idiotic if the beginning of jealousy were not always as trivial as the beloved's meeting old friends "and seeming to enjoy meeting them." Time passed on, the flame was kindled. He began to watch his wife. To keep a surveillance over his wife. To keep a surveillance that he even followed her one day when she was downtown. He had a feeling, engendered, he knew not by what, that she was going to meet one of the men who had loved her before she married him.

And she discovered him on her trail and was properly indignant and insulted by his lack of faith, and this was the beginning.

"What stage it has reached now," he writes, "I tremble to tell you. I am consumed with a mighty flame of jealousy that is burning my brain out; that sears my heart; that holds my soul in fee."

Strong words, but doubtless true, and I would say well deserved, if it were not borne upon me that the innocent woman in this case, as in all cases, is the chief sufferer.

There was in his case, please bear this in mind, not one scrap of evidence—only the suspicion. Jealousy is always suspicion—and more suspicion—and more suspicion!

A jealous man can't see straight; he can't talk straight, and for loving straight—well, what he calls his loving is the crookedest thing about him. There's no mental health in him, for his heart and brain are raging with a fever and—and—he calls this the fervor of love.

God help any poor wretch so deluded. Because I was sorry for the woman I tried to help him. He came to see me and we talked it over. I showed him, or thought I showed him, how groundless were his suspicions. Then he turned upon me and said jealousy was feeling, and knowing had nothing to do with it.

Then, I said, jealousy is a form of insanity and the sooner the law recognizes it as such, and any victim of it as a person too dangerous to be at large, the better for all concerned and for the general good of the community.

There is no reason one may use in reaching a jealous person. On the face of this is the truth that reason is the last thing he considers. Just as he refuses to consider evidence—all evidence except the crazy suspicions of his own inflamed mind, as evidence.

What can one do with a jealous person to cure him of his jealousy? Let us consider the matter. What can one do to reduce the fever of a mind inflamed?

The cure of a jealous person must begin with himself. If he really wants to be cured, just as the dipsomaniac holds in himself three-fourths of his own cure.

Only a little heart harbors jealousy. Bear that in mind. If you really love a man or a woman you trust that one any where, any time, with any one

SOME HELPS FOR THE LAND HUNGRY MAN

Milk flow may be kept up during dry seasons when pastures fail by the use of crops such as sorghum, millet, rye and other crops of this nature sown at short intervals earlier in the season.

(By W. J. SPILLMAN, Chief of United States Bureau of Farm Management.)

Near the larger cities it would probably be better to grow some of the more perishable truck crops and to keep one horse for marketing purposes, but in most country places the system as outlined here would be more satisfactory and would require only two horses.

In addition to four cows and two horses the owner of such a farm could keep one or two brood sows and fifty hens.

Assuming that the farmer understands his business and is on a soil and in a region adapted to the type of farming here outlined, it ought to be possible on such a farm to secure an income somewhat as follows: The five acres of potatoes ought to produce five hundred bushels at least, and if the man is a good potato grower the field can be made to average more than two hundred bushels.

One ought to average at least fifty cents a bushel for the potatoes. This would make $250 for this field. The three acres of cabbage ought to produce $300, and the two acres of onions ought to produce $300.

The onions require a good deal more work than the other crops, hence, the smaller acreage of them. After the farm is started the farmer must be guided by his experience, and it might prove wise to put the entire five acres in onions, provided labor is available.

If the four cows kept are good ones—and the farmer is not justified in keeping any other kind—one of them ought to furnish dairy produce for the family, and the other three, if properly managed, ought to produce seventy-five dollars worth of dairy products apiece a year, making two hundred and twenty-five dollars income from the dairy.

It ought to be possible to produce twelve pigs to sell at an average price of fifteen dollars each, making one hundred and eighty dollars from this source. The fifty hens ought to produce what eggs and poultry the farmer needs and furnish fifty dollars worth of material for sale. Adding these sums together gives us one thousand three hundred and five dollars as a possible income from such a system of farming.

From this income all the expenses of running the farm and of the family living must be paid; but with half an acre of garden, an acre and a half of orchard, and with all the potatoes, cabbage and onions the family can consume, with hogs for meat, and with the eggs and poultry the family living ought not to cost more than two or three hundred dollars for things bought.

The city man must not get the idea that he can start in a system of this kind without experience and make a success of it from the start. It will mean a lot of very hard work, hard living and hard study for two or three years, and of these three things study is the most important. On the other hand, the man who thoroughly understands his business can increase the income here estimated very materially.

One other very important consideration in connection with a farm of this kind: It is assumed that it is near enough to a town or city to permit the farmer when he is carrying his potatoes, cabbage and onions to market, to bring back with him on each trip a load of manure for use on the farm.

Where this can be done such a farm could be made highly fertile. The places to put manure in such a system would be just after the potatoes, just before either of the corn crops, and in the fall of the year manure could be put on the clover field which was used for pasture during the summer. This field should then be plowed late in the fall in preparation for potatoes the next year.

POISONS FOUND IN SOME PLANTS

Bundles of Oxalate Crystals Are Offensive to Rabbits and Snails.

(By MYRLE IRONS.)

The part played by the powerful chemical substances secreted in the various parts of many plants is imperfectly understood. Free prussic acid in some plants was the remarkable discovery made not long ago, and now Professor Peche has concluded that in the cherry laurel this poison is stored in various tissues as a reserve plant food. Other German biologists have been seeking to prove that various plant poisons give protection against enemies. Results have been obtained by Prof. W. Peyer tending to show that the various acids, oils, alkaloids, glucosides, and other chemicals of plants are poisonous or offensive to rabbits, snails, insects, and other creatures. In the pastures the plants yielding medicinal oils are avoided by both grazing and wild animals. The acid bearing plants such as are used for human food as salads, are poisonous to snails and slugs, and are protected nearly as effectually against rabbits. Beans, peas and lentils contain some unknown poison that causes rabbits and mice to refuse the seeds until the active principle has been removed by several washings. An acid product of seedling roots—such as maize, oats and rye—repels snails, as do hairy stalks and sticky surfaces, and plants having bundles of calcium oxalate crystals are offensive or poisonous not only to rabbits and snails but even to man.

Important Industry. Few people realize how many thousands of people are engaged in the raising of pigeons, both for the market and the show room. It is an important branch of the poultry industry, and is becoming more and more popular each year.

Profit in Pork. While pork can sometimes be made at a profit when corn is supplemented with nothing but a concentrated feed, still it is not wise to use concentrated supplements alone.

Profitable Crops. When clover can be grown at all, profitable crops can be grown, and the land kept up by clover and lime.

STRANGE FACTS ABOUT FLOWERS

Every Single Plant Has Some Peculiarity—Some of Them Can Be Seen.

Violets open at three or four a. m., closing about eleven or twelve; some wild roses about four and five a. m.; night shade, about six in the morning; buttercups and lilies are open by seven a. m. Early opens close at noon. Among others, the evening moth flowers open about six p. m. Cactus grandiflora begins opening at nine or ten in the evening, closing at midnight. The majority of flowers, however, are open from nine in the morning until six in the evening.

Wheat flowers last only about fifteen or twenty minutes—just long enough for their pollen to be carried by the passing wind—then their day is past. The hibiscus and calandrinia remain open for only three or four hours; but foxgloves last six days and some orchids from thirty to eighty days.

Every single flower we look at has some little peculiarity of its own. Some of them we can see, but not understand, even by thorough examination.

There are orchids which throw their insect visitors into a shower bath of water, so they have to get out, by reason of their wet wings, up a certain path, where they touch the pollen masses and stigma. There are other orchids which throw the pollen masses at the insect.

The yucca is a lily-like plant, resembling the aloe, and a particular sort of moth lives wholly upon it.

When the flower opens, this moth proceeds to knead up a ball of pollen and inside places an egg, then thrusts the ball down into the ovary of the flower.

There a grub develops from the egg and eats the pollen, and some of the pollen fertilizes the young seed. If yuccas died out the moth would be exterminated, and if the moths were destroyed no yuccas would ever set their seed.

Scraps for Poultry. Bran or middlings and beef scraps should be kept in receptacles to which the fowls have access at all times.

Good Combination. Good seed, good cultivation, good common sense are a pretty good combination if good crops are desired.

A HIDDEN DANGER

It is a duty of the kidneys to rid the blood of uric acid, an irritating poison that is constantly forming inside.

When the kidneys fail, uric acid causes rheumatic attacks, headaches, dizziness, gravel, urinary troubles, weak eyes, dropsy or heart disease.

Doan's Kidney Pills help the kidneys fight off uric acid—bringing new strength to weak kidneys and relief from backache and urinary ills.

A Montana Case

Mrs. E. J. Andrews, 121 Eighth Avenue, Great Falls, Mont., says: "My limbs, hands and feet became so swollen I couldn't stand. I was in agony with the pain. I was so reduced in weight my garments just hung on me, and I had given up in despair. Doan's Kidney Pills cured me completely, and over a year has elapsed without the slightest return of the trouble."

They cost the liver little activity by gentle methods, they do not scour; they do not grip; they do not weaken; but they do start all the secretions of the liver and stomach in a way that soon puts these organs in a healthy condition and corrects constipation. Munyon's Paw-Paw Pills are a tonic to the stomach, liver and nerves. RESINOL RELIEVED ITCHING INSTANTLY

And Completely Cured Skin Humors

If you have eczema or any other itching, burning skin trouble, the best evidence of what Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment can do for you is the word of one who was cured by them after weeks of suffering. Adolph Schoen, 742 Shepherd Ave., Brooklyn, writes:

Nov. 1, 1912.—"At first little red spots were seen on my arms and body, which I noticed were getting larger every day. They itched me so much that I scratched myself until I bled. There were times when I stood up all night and scratched. I was troubled about three weeks, during which time I used — which seemed to do me no good whatever. Then, finally, I thought of trying Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment. As soon as I applied Resinol Ointment I felt much relief. After using it a few times, I noticed the sore spots slowly fading away, and in about a month I was cured completely."

The soothing, healing balsams in Resinol Ointment and Resinol Soap, penetrate every tiny pore of the skin, clearing it of all impurities, driving away eczema, rashes, ringworm, psoriasis, and other eruptions, and making pimples and blackheads impossible. Prescribed by physicians for eighteen years. For free samples write to Dept. S-K, Resinol, Baltimore, Md. Every druggist sells Resinol Ointment (50c) and Resinol Soap (25c), or sent by parcel post on receipt of price.

READ YOUR INSURANCE POLICY

The average understanding of a fire insurance policy is that in the event of the insured property being destroyed by fire, the insurance company promises to pay a certain agreed sum.

The fact to remember is, that it is a contract with conditions to be complied with on the part of the policy-holder, to preserve the legal obligation of the promise to pay. It is by no means the one sided affair so generally supposed; hence the importance of policy-holders understanding something of the nature of the contract.

I endeavor to give all my patrons the best service that close study and application of the basic principles of fire insurance will allow; but, we are all fallible and consequently liable to make mistakes, therefore it is a wise plan to read your policy over when it is first received, thereby materially assisting the agent in correcting the errors that may have been overlooked before it is too late.

Don't fail to see me for all kinds of fire, tornado, plate glass country business and crop insurance.

Yours for business,

GILFADDEN'S GOLDFISH

By AMELIA COWAN.

Gilfadden was hastening down the street toward the dock where he was to take his boat to cross the lake when he caught the glint of red gold in a shop window.

"Say!" he muttered to himself as he paused and watched a number of goldfish darting to and fro in the clear water. "That's just the thing for the porch at the cottage! Nice aquarium among the fern boxes—why didn't I think of it before?"

Gilfadden tramped into the store and when he emerged he was tenderly encircling with one arm a globular parcel. It was a large glass globe containing eight goldfish. The young person who had waited on him had large and melting eyes and her gaze had so bewildered Gilfadden that he accepted what she gave him with no question. She had murmured something about our best people never carrying a bowl of goldfish with a wooden handle, so he had meekly taken his slippery burden under his arm.

Everybody bumped into that extended elbow and whenever there came a bump there was a splash and some of the water in the bowl jumped out. The young person had explained that the top of the bowl must remain uncovered to give the fish air. When Gilfadden reached the dock so much water had splashed out that he hastened to the water cooler to replenish the supply.

"Hey!" called an elderly man with whiskers. "You'll kill 'em! Don't you know that's ice water, an' ice water isn't what goldfish like? Dip it up from the river!"

With the assistance of the elderly

the fat man. "And you whistle for that 50 cents, will you?"

He crawled under his covers and low rumblings of wrath continued to emerge. The boat was beginning to roll unevenly and Gilfadden prepared for bed, with one eye on the goldfish bowl. It got rougher and at each pitch water splashed out from the bowl. Sitting on the edge of his berth, Gilfadden took the bowl in his arms and cuddled it. By easing the roll he managed to keep most of the water inside the bowl. Once in a while there would be a particularly vicious roll and he would receive a splash of the liquid against his chest. When this happened and he said "Ouch!" the large man protested and threatened to call the steward and have Gilfadden put out as crazy.

All that wretched night Gilfadden clasped the bowl of goldfish to his bosom except when he periodically refilled it. When dawn came and he gazed at his swimming bed, Gilfadden decided that he might just as well have turned the goldfish out on the blankets and let them paddle happily around while he took a nap.

Red eyed, disheveled and miserable, Gilfadden disembarked and headed for his lunch. He slung in his suitcases and as he balanced himself and stepped in the involuntary contraction of his arm smashed the goldfish globe, already cracked from the adventure with the large man's feet. Gilfadden slumped down upon a seat and began tearing off the paper wrappings like mad. The water trickled all over his neat gray trousers.

"Save 'em!" he begged, weakly, of the staring launchman. "Get some water!" On the opened paper wrappings seven goldfish flopped half-heartedly and expired.

"Gee!" said the launchman, still staring. "Is that some new kind of belt?"

Gilfadden was too angry to reply.

Love is a cannibal that feeds on its own kind.

FIRST STATE BANK

GOOD JOKES

BLUE SKY PROMOTERS.

Blue sky promoters are men so optimistic where other people's money is concerned that they will promote not merely barren gold and silver mines, but the blue sky itself.

Postmaster General Hitchcock was talking about a blue sky promoter who had been convicted of fraud.

"This man's mine," he said, "reminded me in its scarcity of gold of the railway sandwich."

"There ain't no ham in this here sandwich," a man growled, seated on a high stool before the marble bar of an old-fashioned railway restaurant.

"Oh, you ain't come to the ham yet," the attendant answered easily.

"The man ate on a while longer. Then he growled again:

"There ain't no ham yet."

"Oh," said the attendant, "you've bit over it now."—New York Tribune.

A BARGAIN.

Procrastination.

A gentleman who had been in Chicago only three days, but who had been paying attention to a prominent Chicago belle, wanted to propose, but was afraid he would be thought too hasty. He delicately broached the subject as follows:

"If I were to speak to you of marriage, after having only made your acquaintance three days ago, what would you say to it?"

"Well, I should say never put off till tomorrow that which you should have done the day before yesterday."—Life.

AT THE MASQUERADE BALL.

"You have no idea how perfectly lovely you looked in your disguise!"

"Do you think so?"

"Yes, indeed! I was surprised when you unmasked!"

Maybe.

The man who minds his own affairs will never lack true friends. And maybe 'll climb the golden stairs when his life journey ends.

The Weary World.

"What's the matter with Nixon? He seems so sad."

"Family troubles."

"Why, just before he was spliced he told me his wife to be was the whole works."

"Yes, I know, but he's discovered that it takes a whole lot of winding to keep a woman like that going."—Woman's World.

Eternal Hope.

"Yes," said the energetic man, "I want the tariff reformed and reformed quick."

"What points do you object to in the tariff?"

"I don't know exactly. But I am sure it could be changed in a number of ways that would help my line of business."

Hearty Approval.

"So you approve of this votes for women parade?"

"I do," replied Mr. Growcher. "It will be the first function my wife has attended in years that did not keep me scared about what her costume was going to cost."

How It Sounded.

Bacon—I understand your wife speaks four languages?

Egbert—Yes; and it sounds sometimes as if she was trying to speak them all at once.

Athletic Motive.

"So you are going to be a suffragette?"

"Yes," replied young Mrs. Torkins.

"So that you can vote?"

"Not exactly. But, you know, marching in a parade must be splendid exercise."

Good Judgment.

"Why did you make such an ado over looking Wombat a quarter? A quarter isn't much to lose."

"I didn't want to establish a precedent."—Judge.

No, Not That.

Patience—Women seem to be doing everything that men do, nowadays.

Patrice—Nonsense! You never saw a man powdering his nose fifty times a day, did you?

Close Call.

"I had rather a close call last evening."

"That so?"

"Yes. Called on the Bromleys in their new flat and there were two other people there."

Cholly—Do you think I could win your sister?

Johnny—I dunno. But say, son, I'll crow me influence your way fer about 25 cents.

Not the Same.

When told he had a level head Jones wasn't pleased by that; in fact, the man who said it said Poor Jones's head was flat.

Mother Wins.

It was at the dinner table, and the hostess addressed her husband's brother:

"Do have another piece of pie, William?"

"Why, really, I've already had two; but it's so good I believe I will have another."

"He, he! Mother's a winner!" said little Frank, excitedly. "She said she'd bet you'd make a pig of your self."—Harper's Bazar.

Telling a Turkey's Age.

"Casey," said Pat, "how do you tell the age of a tu-urkey?"

"Oh, can always tell by the teeth," said Casey.

"By the teeth?" exclaimed Pat. "But a tu-urkey has no teeth."

"No," admitted Casey, "but O have."

Sure Tip.

Teacher—Is there anything you know of, children, which expands with the cold and contracts with the heat?

Class (in unison)—Yes'm, ice.

Long Myphen.

Patience—He's married that rich girl, and they've hyphenated their names.

Patrice—Oh, is that so? I heard he was going to make a dash for her.

Big Words.

Bacon—Was his speech original? Egbert—No.

"Where do you suppose he got it from?"

"Out of the directory, I guess."

Easy Way.

"So you got away from the constable when you were speeding. How did you manage it?"

"Simply threw dust in his eyes."

Worse Still.

"My father is so angry at our last escapade, that he's cut me."

"My father's done worse than that; he's cut my allowance."

The Exception.

"Are the men boarders allowed to smoke in that house?"

"No; the only one allowed to do that is the chimney."

POKER THOUGHTS.

"Benton, haven't you just joined The Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals?"

"Why?"

"Well, all last night you were talking of fattening the kitty."

You Will Observe.

He who learns in this old life To depend upon himself, Though he meet with troubles rife, Ere he quits acquires the pelf.

Encouraging.

Jack—Once more, Molly, will you marry me?

Molly—For the twelfth time this hour I tell you I will not.

Jack (of the navy)—Well, twelve knots an hour is not bad speed for a little craft like you.—London Tit Bits.

SHE TURNED GREENISH YELLOW

Her Sons, From Suggestion of Friend, Faved Way for Mother's Recovery.

Wilmington, Va.—In an interesting letter from this town, Mrs. Senora G. Seawell says: "I want to say that I cannot express the gratitude which I owe to Cardul, the woman's tonic. To me it was indeed a God-send.

Before I began taking Cardul, seemingly, my days were numbered, and my relatives and friends despaired of my life, and why not? I had always been so happy and cheerful, which changed quickly to misery and wretchedness. My complexion turned to a greenish yellow, I had no appetite, and, altogether, I was a wreck.

I had often seen Cardul advertised, and spoke of it to one of my friends. She told my boys, who sold Cardul, and next time they came home, they brought me a bottle. I had been suffering tortures for eight or more years. I commenced taking Cardul, and before I had used half of the first bottle, I felt like my old self again. I look so well now my friends tell me they don't believe anything would kill me. I certainly feel that I am a true friend of, and a living advertisement for, Cardul, the woman's tonic."

The above letter explains itself. If your health is low, and your strength is waning, take Cardul, the woman's tonic.

THE RIGHT SOAP FOR BABY'S SKIN

In the care of baby's skin and hair, Cuticura Soap is the mother's favorite. Not only is it unrivaled in purity and refreshing fragrance, but its gentle emollient properties are usually sufficient to allay minor irritations, remove redness, roughness and chafing, soothe the sensitive conditions, and promote skin and hair health generally. Assisted by Cuticura Ointment, it is most valuable in the treatment of eczema, rashes and other itching, burning infantile eruptions. Cuticura Soap wears to a wafer, often outlasting several cakes of ordinary soap and making its use most economical.

Cuticura Soap and Ointment sold throughout the world. Sample of each free, with 32-p. Skin Book. Address post-card "Cuticura, Dept. L, Boston." Adv.

THE REASON.

"Why are you going to church so early, Mildred?"

"To pray for my sweetheart."

"But I didn't know you had one."

"I haven't—that's why."

Thirteen Not Unlucky for Him. Dr. Nansen has good reason to regard thirteen as a lucky number. The crew of the Fram, in which he made the most successful of his expeditions, consisted of thirteen men, who all, after an absence of three years, returned to their homes in perfect safety. Dr. Nansen arrived back in Norway on Aug. 13, 1896, and on the same day the Fram emerged from her long drift on the ice into the open sea. Moreover, during the voyage, as the doctor records, "Kirk presented us with thirteen pups, a curious coincidence—thirteen pups born on Dec. 13, 1893, for thirteen men."

Going Half Way.

Rutgers Jewett, the literary adviser, was urging a young novelist to take up his residence in New York.

"Come to New York," he said, "and then, in every emergency, the publishers and magazine editors can turn to you."

"Men continually tell me," Mr. Jewett continued, "that things never come their way. I feel like shouting in reply:

"But why not try putting yourself in the right place?"
